

我有一座冒险屋

我会修空调 著

慧阳中学

星出版社 NEW STAR PRESS

Information

Table of Contents URL: <https://boxnovel.com/novel/my-house-of-horrors/>

Description

The hearse with the weird odor slowed to a stop before the entrance. The sound of pebbles could be heard bouncing on the ceiling. There were footsteps coming from the corridor, and there seemed to be someone sawing next door. The door knob to the room rattled slightly, and the faucet in the bathroom kept dripping even though it had been screwed shut. There was a rubber ball that rolled on its own underneath the bed. Wet footsteps started to surface one after another on the floor.

At 3 am, Chen Ge held a cleaver in his hand as he hid beside the room heater. The call he was trying to make was finally answered. "Landlord, is this what you meant by 'the house can be a little crowded at night'?"

...

You're reading Chinese web Novel "My House of Horrors" on BOXNOVEL. Thanks!

Chapter 1

Chapter 1: Dying House of Horrors

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“This is the first time I’ve visited such an un-scary Haunted House.”

“The props are too fake; I didn’t feel scared. If anything, it all felt like a joke to me.”

...

“Materialists like ourselves naturally have nothing to be afraid of! Ghosts aren’t real!”

“I hate to say it, but I told you so. We should have stayed at the hostel; I was so close to gaining another level on my online game.”

A group of students grumbled with disappointment in front of Western Jiujiang City’s House of Horrors before they left on their motorbikes. Chen Ge, who held a stack of advertisement flyers for the Haunted House, shook his head despondently when he saw this.

The art of scaring was a skill, but with the introduction of scary movies, many modern-day citizens’ threshold for scares had been increased. A visit to the Haunted House was no different from a stroll in one’s own backyard.

“Boss!”

A clear female voice erupted from behind him. Chen Ge turned around and saw a slender ‘zombie’ in a nurse outfit running out of the Haunted House in a fit of anger.

“What’s wrong, Xiao Wan?” The zombie’s name was Xu Wan; she was one of the temporary actors hired by the Haunted House.

“Those few ruffians earlier, they tried to take advantage of me!” the girl hissed through gritted teeth, her fists gripped tight.

So, it is merely to complain...

“That’s horrible; they wouldn’t even leave a zombie in peace.” As the boss, naturally Chen Ge was on Xiao Wan's side. "Later, I'll have the amusement park manager to pull up the surveillance footage."

"There's no need for that. When I realized their intentions, my punch went flying straight at the boy's face." Xu Wan pointed at the bloodstain at the edge of her outfit and exclaimed rather proudly, "See, this isn't fake blood."

"Good, good, a girl should learn how to protect herself." Chen Ge wiped the cold sweat from his forehead. As he turned to look at the setting sun, he said, "I suppose it's time to call it a day. We probably won't have any more visitors, so help me go and tell everyone that we can get off work early today."

However, he realized the girl in zombie make-up didn't make an attempt to move away.

"Is there anything else?"

"Boss..." Xu Wan hesitated before pulling two letters out from her pocket slowly. "These are the resignation letters from Tao Ming and Xiao Wei. You've been a great boss to them, so they didn't have to the face to give these to you in person and had me pass them to you."

"They're quitting?" Chen Ge asked the obvious question as he accepted the letters, then he added, "Everyone has their own dream to chase, so be it. Xiao Wan, you can leave now if there's nothing else."

"Okay, I'll go remove the make-up first."

After the cute little zombie left, Chen Ge lit a cigarette silently. Half a year ago, when his parents mysteriously disappeared, the only thing they left him was this Haunted House. To keep their memory alive, Chen Ge had resigned from his day-job to focus on managing this Haunted House.

Alas, times were changing. Despite the niche genre, there was huge competition among Haunted Houses, and there were plenty of limitations as well. A scary scenario would lose its scare factor after the initial experience, but a constant update would require plenty of resources and money.

Starting from a few weeks ago, the Haunted House had been in the red; the income from the daily ticket sales barely covered the electricity and water expenses.

“I wonder how long I can hold on.”

After extinguishing the cigarette, when Chen Ge was prepared to return to the Haunted House, a middle-aged man wearing the uniform for New Century Park walked toward him. When he saw him, Chen Ge increased his pace like a mouse spotting a cat.

“You think you can pretend to have not seen me?” The middle-aged man clamped his hands on Chen Ge’s shoulders. “Today, we definitely need to talk it out. You’ve owed the rent and utilities for two months already. The top brass are breathing down my neck to pursue it, so pay up!”

“Uncle Xu, it’s not that I don’t want to pay you, but I really have nothing to pay you with. Can you please give me another month?”

“That’s what you told me last month!”

“I promise, this is definitely the last time!” Chen Ge patted his chest as he promised with sincerity.

“People have already moved on from Haunted Houses. Listen to me, it’s no use being this stubborn.” When the middle-aged man named Uncle Xu saw the letters in Chen Ge’s hand, the force on Chen Ge’s shoulders gradually lightened. “You’re so young; you can still begin anew with a different career, so why are you doing this to yourself?”

“Uncle Xu, I know you’re just looking out for me, but this Haunted House carries a different meaning for me. I guess I’m still unwilling to let the last memory of my parents go,” Chen Ge uttered in a lowered voice as if he was afraid that other people might hear him.

As the amusement park manager, the middle-aged man knew about the disappearance of Chen Ge’s parents. He didn’t answer immediately. After a few seconds, he sighed and said, “Fine, I can understand how you feel. I’ll try my best to talk to management for you and see if they can give you a few more weeks.”

“Thank you, Uncle Xu!”

“Don’t thank me so soon, you’d better make sure you can increase the ticket sales or the ending will just be the same.”

After sending the amusement park manager off, Chen Ge returned to the Haunted House and started his daily routine of checking the equipment, maintaining the items, and cleaning.

“The fake blood in the maintenance room is almost empty; I have to buy a new batch.

“If this corridor could be made slightly more slanted to the side, it’ll create a better blind spot to scare the visitors.

“Oh no, this puppet is broken already; I’ll have to repair it later.

“F*ck! What happened to the lightbulb I installed here last week? Who has stolen it?”

In the eyes of an outsider, he was the owner of a Haunted House, a young entrepreneur in a way, but only Chen Ge himself could understand the difficulty behind maintaining a Haunted House. Haunted Houses were a kind of entertainment. Caught within a scary environment, one’s physical and mental situation would be maintained at a heightened state, but when the stress was released, it would lead to a sense of relief and satisfaction; it was not unlike a massage in a way.

At the same time, most Haunted Houses were one-trick ponies. The most effective business method for a Haunted House was to have it be mobile so that it would constantly attract fresh batches of visitors. A Haunted House that was stuck at a certain location like Chen Ge’s had to have immense popularity to lure in the crowds, or else they wouldn’t be able to survive for long. The fact that he had managed to hold on for so long was already, in a way, a miracle.

Dragging the puppet that was ruined, Chen Ge entered the maintenance room. He had studied Toy Design in college, and the machinery and traps used in the Haunted House had been all personally designed and built by him. The maintenance process, which included sewing and repainting, was dry and repetitive.

“Still missing some fake blood. If I remember correctly, there’s still some stock in the attic.” The Haunted House was separated into three floors; the first and second floors were for haunted scenarios while the third was a storeroom.

After pushing open the wooden door, behind the haze of wood chips and dust, there were various kinds of materials and unwanted ingredients left behind by Chen Ge’s parents from when they had managed the Haunted House.

Unwilling to face the past, Chen Ge rarely came up to this place.

“Now that I think about it, it has almost been half a year already.”

Looking at the various equipment, Chen Ge was reminded of his childhood. At the time, his family had managed a mobile Haunted House, so he had gotten the chance to travel the country with his parents. When the two adults were busy, they would leave Chen Ge alone backstage to accompany the various ghosts, so Chen Ge's unnatural guts had been trained since he was young.

After all, when his friends of the same age were playing with blocks and puzzles, he was running around with a fake human head.

“These are all precious memories.”

Chen Ge wandered aimlessly before finding himself back at the wooden box that kept the few things that remained of his parents. Inside sat a black cell phone and a rough-looking doll. The doll was the first toy Chen Ge made when he was a child, but he had zero recollection of the phone. Both of these items had been found in an abandoned hospital in the countryside, and regarding why Chen Ge's parents would go there in the middle of the night, even the police couldn't give him an answer.

“Where are the two of you?” Chen Ge picked up the doll and pinched its chubby face. Then, with a sigh, he told himself, “I'd better go find that fake blood. If I cannot survive this off season, I really will have to bid this Haunted House farewell.”

Chen Ge was talking to himself, but when he said so, the black phone, which had been silent in the box, suddenly lit up with a dim, cold light.

“What's going on? Dark technology or supernatural phenomenon?” If this happened to someone else, that person probably would have raced out screaming bloody murder already, but in comparison, Chen Ge's reaction was much calmer. He picked up the phone and inspected it closer.

“This is weird. I've tried opening this phone more than a hundred times before, but it wouldn't work, so why did it open by itself today? This phone was found where my parents disappeared, so could it be that they know I'm in trouble and are contacting me to help?”

Chen Ge swiped the phone open, and on the front page with a black background, there was only one available app. It had the shape of a Haunted House as an icon.

“Wait... This looks so familiar, just like the front entrance of my own Haunted House!”

With a frown, Chen Ge clicked the app open, and a row of letters written in what appeared to be blood appeared on screen—Do you believe there are ghosts in this world?

Objectively speaking, this was a metaphysical philosophical question; for an engineering student like Chen Ge, it was practically unanswerable.

“There should be,” Chen Ge mumbled to himself, and a few seconds later, a new sentence appeared on screen.

“What you believe is the answer. From this moment on, you will officially take over as the new owner of the Haunted House. Of course, this is not something worth celebrating. Before the end of the tutorials, please heed my last advice: suicide is the most cowardice of behavior, and try your best to survive!”

“What and what? But this pompous way of speech does resemble that father of mine.”

Chen Ge clicked on the app again, and a new window appeared.

Western Jiujiang Haunted House

Status: Almost Closing

Good Reputation: Zero

Daily Visitor Number: Four

Monthly Visitor Number: Ten

My Team of Ghosts and Ghouls: None

My Item Storage: None

Unlocked Achievement: None

Current Available Scenarios [Set Pieces]:

– Night of the Living Dead – Horrible prop, untrained actors, the plot has no readable storyline or logic. Scream Factor: 0 Star

– Minghun [Nether World Marriage] – Couple torn apart in the living world, bound together forever in the nether world; sharing the same grave, pursuing happiness in death. Scream Factor: 0.5 Stars

Unlockable Scenarios:

– Murder by Midnight – A dangerous psychotic patient wandered about a fallen apartment. Scissors and mallets as hands, he is just wandering outside of your room. Scream Factor: 1 Star

– The Third Sick Hall – There are unexplainable noises coming out from this abandoned hospital building every night. As a newspaper reporter, you're tasked with getting to the bottom of this dark mystery. Scream Factor: 3 Stars

– The Haunted Hearse – Leaving with the hearse carrying the coffin, if you cannot escape within an hour, you'll stay forever inside the hearse. Scream Factor: 2 Stars Daily Mission: Complete Daily Missions provided by the Haunted House to unlock more scary scenarios. The rewards correspond to the difficulty of the mission.

Haunted House Expansion Conditions: Monthly Visitor Numbers over 100. Good Reputation over 60 percent. (After 3 expansions, the Haunted House will upgrade to The Shivering Maze.)

Haunted Wheel of Misfortune (Expend Fright Points generated by visitors of the Haunted House to spin the Wheel): The Decree of Life and Death is never the decision of man; fortune and misfortune are only an inch apart. We have both Spirit Fruits to increase your life span as well as hatred-filled Baleful Specters!

Other functions: Yet to be unlocked

Chapter 2

Chapter 2: A Curious Daily Mission

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The app with the Haunted House icon looked similar to many popular management mobile games; however, instead of managing a hotel, aquarium, or pet store, it was to manage a haunted house.

Chen Ge stared at the screen, and a single question was on his mind. Why would the phone left behind by my parents have this curious app on it?

...

He looked through the interface of the app, and all the information on it matched the conditions of his actual Haunted House like the daily visitor numbers and available scenarios. This gave Chen Ge a weird sensation, as if the Haunted House managed in-game was no different from the one he was managing in real life.

They were both down on their luck and facing closure; there were simply too many similarities between them.

“Could it be that this game is built using my Haunted House as its basis? Then does this mean that if there’re changes in the game, it’ll also happen in real life?” Chen Ge muttered.

Chen Ge continued to read; the current scenario of the Haunted House, Night of the Living Dead, was brutally criticized. Even the Minghun scenario that got onto the papers before only managed to get a 0.5-star rating.

“If Minghun only gets 0.5 star, I shudder to imagine how scary those unlockable scenarios are.” He tried to click on the options, and when he did, a window appeared on screen, telling him that he needed to finish a certain number of daily missions before he would be able to unlock the scenarios.

“Looks like the daily missions are the key to this; it is only by completing daily missions that I’ll be able to unlock the haunted scenarios. By unlocking more scenarios, I’ll be able to attract more customers and, consequently, expand the Haunted House.” Chen Ge was an avid player of mobile games, so he soon grasped the rules of the game—the rate of completion for daily missions was going to influence the development of the Haunted House.

After clicking on Daily Missions, three options surfaced:

Easy Mission: There are three main elements to the design of a good Haunted House—Story, Scenario, and Mood. A Haunted House without a story is a Haunted House without a soul, please complete the background story to the two scenarios, Night of the Living Dead and Minghun.

Normal Mission: Fix all the mannequins inside the Haunted House before midnight.

Nightmare Mission: I know you’re still not wholly convinced about the existence of ghost in the world; in that case, how about a little game? The truth will be revealed when you open your eyes.

Daily Missions will refresh every day at midnight. User can only apply for one mission each day, and the reward corresponds to the difficulty of the mission.

(Beware! The more difficult the mission, the more dangerous it’ll be, so please choose carefully!)

After looking through the mission details, Chen Ge gasped with surprise. “The missions in the game have to be completed in real life? Isn’t this the perfect proof that this game can influence real life?”

To test this speculation, he decided to pick a mission. Since the reward was given according to difficulty and he could only pick one each day, for the sake of the biggest reward, he had to pick the most difficult mission. However, the warning attached to the end of the missions did make Chen Ge worry.

“This is hard to choose. The description for the Nightmare Mission is so vague; it just speaks of a trap. Why don’t I start with a Normal Mission? Fixing all the props will be difficult but not impossible.”

Chen Ge was a man of action, after he had made the decision, he started to move. He grabbed his toolbox and a bucket of unopened fake blood and started to inspect all the mannequins around the Haunted House.

Night had fallen. To save electricity, Chen Ge didn't even leave the lights in the corridors open. Squeezing a flashlight in his armpit, Chen Ge twisted through the large Haunted House, fixing all the mannequins that needed his attention.

If there were any outsiders who saw this, they would probably be so spooked that they would call the cops directly.

"I really didn't expect so many mannequins will require maintenance; I should not have slacked off earlier!"

At 11:45 pm, Chen Ge received the mission completion alert on his phone. "You've completed the Normal Mission. Paying attention to details will contribute to the perfect scary atmosphere. Congratulations, you've gained the mission reward—Background Music, Black Friday."

"Wait, wasn't Black Friday a banned song in foreign countries? According to rumors, it has the uncanny ability to instill suicidal tendencies in its listeners, and the original score was lost a long time ago." Chen Ge discovered the picture of a CD in his item storage. "What kind of mission reward is this, don't tell me this is all some kind of prank?"

He clicked on the CD image, and a melody that he had not heard of started playing beside his ears. The melody spoke of darkness, melancholy, and loneliness. Chen Ge felt the world around him falling away, and he had landed himself in a long corridor with no end in sight.

When the song ended, Chen Ge's back was drenched in cold sweat. He was thankful he didn't choose to have the song on repeat or else he really didn't think he would have been able to escape the influence of the music on his own.

"F*ck, this is real! This should be the original track!" After completing the game mission, he really did acquire a reward that he could use in real life. This gave Chen Ge a ray of hope. He stopped the music and saved it carefully. After dealing with everything, Chen Ge returned to the break room to rest.

Lying in bed, even though he was tired, he didn't feel at all sleepy. After all, the things that he had experienced that day required a bit of time to digest.

Without knowing it, it soon passed midnight, and Chen Ge was still staring aimlessly at the ceiling.

“Can’t sleep at all!” The man who was bored out of his mind pulled out the black phone. “Midnight has passed, so there should be a new set of Daily Missions, right?”

He opened the app, and as he expected, there were some changes on the Daily Missions screen.

Easy Mission: If you want to provide the visitors a scary experience, then first you have to pay notice to the rhythm and tempo of their experience in the Haunted House. Setting off the scare too early might cause the visitors to lose their interest, so I suggest you install some sound detectors or surveillance cameras in the Haunted House to keep track of your visitors’ progress.

Normal Mission: A single hand cannot clap; a good Haunted House requires a good team to run it. Recruit more talents to aid in your journey.

Nightmare Mission: I know you’re still not wholly convinced about the existence of ghost in the world; in that case, how about a little game? The truth will be revealed when you open your eyes.

Daily Missions will refresh every day at midnight. User can only apply for one mission each day, and the reward corresponds to the difficulty of the mission.

(Beware! The more difficult the mission, the more dangerous it’ll be, so please choose carefully!)

The three new Daily Missions put some kinks in Chen Ge’s plan.

The easy mission was to install new surveillance devices in the Haunted House; this could be done with money, but the issue was... Chen Ge’s budget was currently limited.

The normal mission also wasn’t that easy for Chen Ge. His two senior workers, who had been through thick and thin with him, had just resigned. Even if he went to set up a recruitment ad right this moment, it would require days to complete the training. When the new employee could help at the Haunted House, the place probably would have closed already.

Since the easy mission and normal mission were impossible, Chen Ge’s eyes settled on the last Daily Mission.

“Since the harder the mission, the better the reward, shall I give this Nightmare Mission a try?”

Chapter 3

Chapter 3: Nightmare Mission

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“I know you’re still not wholly convinced about the existence of ghost in the world; in that case, how about a little game? The truth will be revealed when you open your eyes.”

As mentioned earlier, the description of the Nightmare Mission was incredibly vague; it did, however, give off a creepy vibe.

...

“Looking at the introduction, it should involve some kind of game, but how can playing a game be a Nightmare Mission?”

To finish the Normal Mission, Chen Ge had worked non-stop for several hours. He had barely managed to finish fixing all the mannequins. As he toyed with the phone, Chen Ge’s sense of curiosity was aroused. “Shall I try it out?”

The moment the thought appeared, it grew and expanded like vines invading every corner of his mind.

“Nightmare Missions give the best reward, and since I can’t accomplish the Easy and Normal Missions provided today, this is my best bet.”

The Haunted House would close if he was unable to survive this off season. Chen Ge knew how precarious his situation was. It was a pure stroke of luck that he had stumbled upon this ray of hope, so of course, he wouldn’t let any opportunities pass by easily.

“So be it. After all, eventually, I’ll have to apply for a Nightmare Mission, so why not now?” Sitting up in bed, Chen Ge clicked on the last mission.

“Are you sure you wish to accept the Nightmare Mission? After acceptance, unknown circumstances might occur.”

“Yes.”

The phone flashed, and the real mission details surfaced.

“It requires plenty of courage, incredible luck, and a bit of help to see the hidden world. The game we’re playing is called ‘Another You in the Mirror’. Enter the bathroom alone at 2:04 am, close the door, and turn off the lights. Face the mirror and light a candle between yourself and it. Then, close your eyes and focus; you can then begin by slowly chanting your name.

“Anything can happen in the dark; perhaps there will be an unfamiliar face that appears in the mirror, or there might be a pair of eyes lurking in the corner watching you, or blood might drip from the ceiling or walls. No matter what happens, all you must do is make sure that you stay silent and stand before the mirror quietly.

“After half an hour, the mission will be auto-completed, provided that you do not open your eyes no matter what happens in that half-hour.”

After reading the mission introduction, Chen Ge’s heart twinged with fear. “Could there really be a world hidden from normal eyes?”

It was still some time before the allocated 2:04 am. Instead of moving to the bathroom, Chen Ge started doing his research online. Chen Ge did manage to find some extra information on this supposed game, and they were all ghost stories. Some said they were cursed after they played this game, while others mentioned missing friends or family members, convinced that they were pulled into the mirror world.

“Every single one of these sounds so authentic.” The more he read, the more interested Chen Ge became. He was, after all, the operator of a Haunted House; his daily exercise was to come up with new ways to scare people, within a safe environment of course. As he read up on the information to this game, he felt as if a new world was opening before his eyes.

“It’s weirdly exciting to play a scary game in the middle of the night inside a Haunted House!”

He checked the battery level of his phone; he felt like recording this momentous occasion.

“Later, I’ll put the whole thing on recording; if it is as scary as these people say, then perhaps I can add a new scenario to the Haunted House!”

He scoured the room for a candle and lighter. When the clock struck 2am, he carried the prepared objects and moved toward the bathroom on the first floor of the Haunted House.

The reason he carried out this ‘game’ at the first floor’s toilet was also a calculated decision on Chen Ge’s part. If anything dangerous did occur during the process, at least he could jump directly out the window to save himself. The Haunted House was eerily quiet at night. A young man who refused to turn on the lights to save electricity entered the cramped and narrow toilet with a flashlight and candle.

“A dark and claustrophobic environment is the best at evoking the feeling of fear within a person’s heart. The toilet is usually the place that has the most yin energy within the building. Mirrors and cisterns, these items couldn’t have been more mundane, but these everyday items can often be used to increase psychological pressure. The person behind this game is very clever; they know how to make use of the weakness often found within the human heart, and consequently, they are able to create a scary atmosphere with the simplest of objects and conditions.” Chen Ge found this a perfect opportunity to improve his craft.

“Real terror actually doesn’t need expensive set-ups. It only needs to highlight and heighten the sense of anxiety inherent in the human heart.” Chen Ge took a deep breath and put his phone on record. “I don’t know what kind of effect this game will bring, but if anything happens to me, I hope the person who finds this phone will preserve this video because it is a key, a valuable key to unlocking the many layers of deceit.”

Then, Chen Ge placed the phone beside the cistern. He adjusted the angle until the camera could capture his person and the mirror opposite him.

“It’s 2:01 am already, three more minutes.”

The wait for death was scarier than death itself. The silence of the toilet amplified all sorts of noises or echoes in the room. As the seconds ticked by, Chen Ge’s heart started to race.

He looked at the time on the phone. When the minute hand pointed at the four, he switched off the flashlight and lit up the candle. Following the instructions, he placed it between the mirror and himself.

The dancing flame became the only source of light in the dark. It flickered and twirled between the real world and the mirrored world. It acted perhaps like some kind of guidance light, pointing the way for whatever existed in the mirror.

Chen Ge looked at his reflection in the mirror, and he felt strangely weirded out. “Has the game started.”

He lowered his head and closed his eyes before starting to mumble his name softly.

“Chen Ge, Chen Ge, Chen Ge...”

Repetition of one’s name would put a psychological distance between it and oneself. Eventually, even one’s name would sound strange to one’s ears. This theory was similar to how after looking at a particular Chinese character repeatedly, one would end up forgetting how to write it when asked.

To prevent that psychological effect from befalling himself, every time Chen Ge chanted his name, he would leave a three seconds space. This way, he was also counting down the time.

After all, the condition for a successful mission was to keep his eyes closed for half an hour no matter the distraction.

Standing in front of a mirror and playing a game that involves only a candle at 2 am inside a Haunted House alone... If I was not doing this myself, even I wouldn’t believe someone would willingly do something this dumb. Chen Ge continued to chant his name as the various random thoughts entered his mind.

This game is filled with psychological terror; the most difficult part is not facing those supposed ghosts or legends but stopping your mind from straying and forming scary scenarios to scare yourself. As long as you don’t open your eyes, everything should be fine.

However, that was easier said than done, because ten minutes after the game started, something did happen.

Chapter 4

Chapter 4: Surprise Reward

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

It seemed that the toilet's windows were not closed because Chen Ge could feel a cold draft enter the room. It was like an invisible hand was brushing past his face.

The door of the toilet cubicles creaked as they were moved by the wind. The water that had gathered at the corner of the ceiling fell onto the floor, causing the insects to scatter. The sound made Chen Ge feel like they were crawling all over his skin.

...

All sorts of noises were amplified by the general silence, which would have heightened the sense of anxiety in most people, but not Chen Ge, who had been trained to have a strong heart since he was young and had a slightly slower than normal sense of perception.

He cleared his mind of thought to focus on counting down the time.

About twenty minutes had passed, and for some reason, Chen Ge could sense the temperature of the room dropping like someone had placed several blocks of solid ice around him, causing him to shiver involuntarily.

Calm yourself! Don't overthink it and scare yourself! There's only ten minutes left; Chen Ge, you can do this! There was a curious draft flowing beside his ear like something was circling him. He gripped his hands so tightly that the veins on their backs were protruding, but his body seemed to have petrified into immobile stone.

"Chen Ge, Chen Ge, Chen Ge..."

He continued to mumble to himself. At only five minutes left, Chen Ge could tell the flickering light of the candle had died off, and there seemed to be another presence in the dark calling his name.

Echo? Impossible!

“Chen Ge...” The voice seemed to be summoning him, and it felt urgent like it had something crucial to tell him.

The voice seems to be coming from outside the door, shall I go to take a look? However, very soon, Chen Ge rejected this thought from his mind. The rules were explicit; he was required to stand before the mirror and not do anything else.

He continued the count-down in his heart, and the voice beside his ear started to warp. He was now certain that there was someone else calling his name, and that person was standing outside the toilet door.

The person sounds so urgent, but I'm the one playing this game, so why do they sound so damn hurried? This is obvious a trap, such a cheater. Chen Ge turned his lips down with disapproval. The set-up and atmosphere are not bad, but alas, the scare tactic is too straightforward and simple.

During the final three minutes, there was a shrill noise coming from the toilet door like someone was scratching their nails against it or gnawing their teeth on it. The door creaked subtly like it was about to open at any moment.

1,798 seconds, 1,799 seconds, 1,800 seconds! The half an hour limit was up; all the noises disappeared at once, and silence reigned once more.

To prevent miscalculation, Chen Ge did not open his eyes immediately. He counted for an extra three hundred before he took a step back, placed both his hands over his chest, and fluttered his eyes open.

The candle in the toilet had been extinguished, and the place was dark. For some reason, Chen Ge felt like something had shifted. He turned on the flashlight, and when light appeared once more in the cramped area, he was stunned.

The mirror before him was filled with cracks, and several images of himself stared back at him. It looked extremely hallucinogenic, but the thing that gave him a bigger scare was the appearance of a broken doll in front of the mirror!

The eyes that were made from buttons were shining, and the patchwork body was filled with cotton. The doll was not by any means new, but it held a special meaning for Chen Ge; it was his very first creation and something left at the scene of his parents' disappearance.

The doll was leaning against the mirror like it was trying to stop the thing in the mirror from coming out.

“Wait, but the toilet door was already locked, how did you come in? Through the window? No wait, the bigger issue is how you moved on your own!” Chen Ge felt like his world was falling apart; he needed some time to process the situation. The man and the doll were locked in this stare for about three minutes before Chen Ge felt more like himself again. He moved his cold fingers and slowly moved toward the doll.

For some reason, it felt like the button eyes of the doll seemed to be following him. Chen Ge’s lips twitched involuntarily as he looked at this doll of his. He gave the doll a wide berth to pick the phone next to it. “Thankfully, I was clever enough to prepare for this.”

The phone had finished recording. Chen Ge made a second copy before starting to look through the video.

The video quality was not that great. The single candle fire danced in the darkness, and while the Chen Ge in front of the mirror looked rather cautious, the Chen Ge in the mirror seemed weirdly at ease.

The first ten minutes were fine, but things started to turn weird at the eleven-minute mark.

The sound of the wind wasn’t captured by the phone, but one could see the cubicle door moving in the video.

Then the video was interrupted by white noise. It was a video that was at most a bit curious, but for some reason, it was weirdly scary. Perhaps this was humanity’s inherent fear of darkness and the unknown.

As the video continued to play, Chen Ge’s face turned increasingly pale. He remembered clearly that he had not moved when his eyes were closed, but on the video, he saw his body slowly leaning forward like he was trying to lean into the mirror.

At the twenty-five-minute mark, his upper body was already at a seventy-degree angle, and the tip of his nose almost touching the surface of the mirror.

Several seconds later, without any warning, spidery cracks started to form on the mirror. It caused even Chen Ge’s heart to skip a beat. Then, the most unbelievable thing happened. The Chen Ge in the mirror's expression changed. He grinned wickedly as he slammed crazily against the mirror!

Right at that minute, the candle went out and the video ended.

Due to the camera angle, the video did not show any scene relating to the doll, and Chen Ge himself had no idea what really went down in that last five minutes.

"From the looks of things, the thing in the mirror wanted to get out, but it was stopped by this doll? In that case, the doll saved me?" Chen Ge picked the doll up from the counter and asked in a serious tone, "Can you understand me? Do you know what happened to my parents?"

Naturally, the doll did not answer, but its button eyes seemed to glow in the dark.

He cradled the doll in his arms and turned to look at the toilet door. Afraid of going out, he shrunk underneath one of the windows and pulled out his phone. The mission success message was waiting for him.

"It has to be said that you're incredibly lucky. Congratulations for completing the Nightmare Mission! Obtained Mission Reward—Elementary Skill: Mortician's Make-up.

"Mortician's Make-up: I hope you will treat this talent with the respect it deserves. Unlike beauty make-up, a mortician only deals with the make-up of the dead. Your hands breathe life into death visages, bringing them everlasting beauty.

"First Nightmare Mission completed, unlocked the title: Newcomer at Nightmare Town. Obtained additional reward: Unlocked the Trial Mission for the 1 Star scenario, Murder by Midnight! Completion of this Trial Mission will add this scenario to your Haunted House!"

Looking at the messages on screen, Chen Ge thought to himself, the success of a Haunted House had plenty to do with a good make-up artist. Be it actors or props, they needed a make-up artist to make them come to life, a good make-up artist can easily create authentic effect to add to the overall scare factor.

Chapter 5

Chapter 5: 25 Minutes and 14 Seconds!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Skill and talent? Looks like the reward for Nightmare Mission is different in the sense that the reward is directly beneficial to myself!”

Making a mental note of this important point, Chen Ge’s heart burned with anticipation. He had seen the existence of the other world, the world of terror, fear, darkness, and danger. Perhaps that world was where his parents had gone, but based on his current power, keeping himself safe was a big enough issue, let alone looking for them. Thankfully, with the black phone by his side, there was still a chance.

...

“In any case, that is still quite far in the future. The thing I need to focus on is to stabilize the Haunted House business and survive this imminent financial crisis.” He pulled out his phone. “That was close; something disastrous could have happened. This shows that Nightmare Missions aren’t so easily completed. Then again, there’s no reason for me to go about this alone; in an information age like ours, help can be reached at the tip of one’s fingers.”

He logged into a few famous national supernatural forums and uploaded the original video.

A few seconds later, his video was dubbed, ‘Who is that in the mirror?’

It was rapidly viewed and shared. Perhaps people were so bored of the usual host of gossip and news that they wanted to switch it up. The popularity of the video shot up like an arrow; every time Chen Ge refreshed the page, there would be at least ten new comments.

“25:14. You all can thank me later.”

“Has the uploader lost his mind? Who would do something like this in the middle of the night?”

“Why did the cracks appear on the mirror on their own? Also, what was that thing that knocked into the mirror near the end there?”

“The cracks are mostly caused by temperature manipulation inside the room.”

“No, you guys are all wrong, in Daoism, mirrors are items of pure yin energy. I suggest the video’s title be changed from ‘Who is that in the mirror?’ to ‘The Ghost in the mirror!’”

“Jesus Christ, who dares do something this crazy so late at night? I’m impressed by the uploader’s bravery.”

“This video has definitely been tampered with; if not, take down my ID, I’ll stand on my hand and eat shit!”

“Am I the only one who noticed this? The profile of the uploader is the owner of a Haunted House in Western Jiujiang. Don’t get all wrapped up over this; this is nothing more than a fabricated advertisement.”

Chen Ge’s inbox instantly filled with private messages. Some came with questions, others with suspicion, but Chen Ge ignored them all. He knew his video was real; he didn’t think he owed any of these people any explanation. Those in the know would realize its authenticity, and as for those who just wanted to undermine him, why should he waste his time on them?

Looking at the video’s meteoric rise in popularity, Chen Ge realized with a start that this was actually not a bad opportunity. He spliced the original video, only taking the last 14 seconds, and uploaded it to the nation’s biggest video-sharing app.

Amid the videos that showcased food, dances, or singing, his haunted video was definitely one of a kind!

In just less than ten seconds, people had started to fall for his trap. Unlike the users on supernatural forums who went searching for stuff like this, these random users started leaving inflammatory comments under the video from being scared for no reason.

Sadly, on the internet, conflict and controversy bring in more viewers than praise does, so the wave of online censure only brought in more viewers. Scrolling through the comments, Chen Ge could practically sense the hatred and anger directed his way. He shrugged it off with a laugh.

To be fair, he did understand why these people reacted the way they did. Most of them were probably preparing for bed, all wrapped up in their blankets, and were probably just looking through some light-hearted videos in preparation to settle down for the night. This scary video of a man wreathed in candlelight had the complete opposite effect than what they were hoping for.

The “best” feature of the video was that it was only 14 seconds, so before they realized what was happening, the scare had already happened. The mirror shattered, and the thing appeared like it was trying to rush out of the mirror and then through the phone screen itself!

This was truly a masterful set-up!

Based on how lively the comment section is, the popularity of this video looks like it's not going to drop any time soon... This means that everyone likes my video, yes? A certain someone asked a shameless and rhetorical question. The number of followers has already increased by a hundred. If I don't make use of this opportunity to advertise the Haunted House, then I'll feel I've disappointed all of my new fans and followers!

Chen Ge edited the title of the video and attached the address of the Haunted House at the user info section. He even added in brackets: A Completely Not -Scary Haunted House.

Chen Ge was satisfied with his updated user page. He remained seated under the window to look through the stream of messages and eventually fell asleep.

...

Chen Ge was woken up by the sunlight that fell on his face. He stretched his tired body and stood up from the corner of the toilet.

“It’s 8.30 am already?” He dusted his clothes and pocketed both the doll and the phone before leaving the toilet.

He noticed there were obvious scratch marks on the edges of the wooden toilet door, like it had been munched on by rodents.

“Just what was the thing outside the door last night?” Looking at this, Chen Ge suddenly felt thankful he did not move from the mirror last night and go out to take a look.

“Nightmare Missions might cause unexpected circumstances. I need to be more careful in the future.” Since there was not any discernible change to the Haunted House, Chen Ge shrugged it off and prepared to welcome a new day.

The New Century Park opened at 9 am. At 8.45 am, a slender and lithe figure that was disproportionate to her chest size ran toward him carrying a backpack.

“Boss!” The girl radiated an aura of youthfulness. Her exquisite features practically glowed in the sun. Her skin was taut and supple like fresh apricot that one could not help but wish to take a bite of.

“Xiao Wan, your timing is perfect. I’ve just added a new background track to our song database. Listen to it and tell me what you think.” Before Chen Ge could finish his sentence, Xu Wan gripped his hand tightly. On reflex, he asked, “What are you doing?”

“I just saw a big crowd gathered at the entrance of the park! They’re discussing the Haunted House! We have people coming here just to experience the Haunted House!” Xu Wan exclaimed excitedly. “Boss, we seem to have plenty of customers waiting!”

“Shouldn’t that be expected? Is this your first time at the park?” Chen Ge pretended to be unaffected. He pulled out his phone to look at the video sharing app. His current number of followers had broken through five hundred, and the popularity of his video had reached the top ten of the app. He scanned through the comments, and unlike other comment sections which were filled with XOXO or ‘<3’s, his was filled with endless reprimands, rebukes, and threats. Some of them even said that they had prepared the knife to slay Chen Ge and that they were on the way to his address.

“Er, this seems to have gotten slightly out of hand.” Chen Ge coughed awkwardly before dragging Xu Wan with him into the Haunted House. “We have fifteen more minutes to the official opening time of the park. Since we’re the only two left protecting this Haunted House, be prepared for the imminent war!”

Chapter 6

Chapter 6: Beauty Make-up

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge's Haunted House currently only had two available scenarios, Night of the Living Dead and Minghun.

The Night of the Living Dead was heavily criticized by the black phone. Chen Ge thought about it as objectively as he could, and he had to admit there were many flaws with that scenario. Furthermore, to complete the scenario, he had to have at least three workers.

...

"Xiao Wan, our main theme today will be Minghun. Later, after I'm done setting up the background music, remember to put on your earphones when you work. Also, I'll be doing your make-up today."

"Boss, you know how to do make-up?" Xiao Wan laughed half-mockingly at him. "Fine, but I'll do it myself if you screw it up."

"Don't worry, I'll make you look so beautiful that you'll take their breath away."

They walked into the make-up room. Chen Ge set Xiao Wan down before the mirror and used the ball of his palm to slowly massage her face.

"Activating elementary skill—Mortician's Make-up."

Looking at the youthful girl in the mirror, many memories that Chen Ge felt did not belong to him suddenly appeared in his mind. It was a chaotic mess. There was not only knowledge about color-matching and other make-up skills but also human anatomy, physiology, bone structure, and the study of death.

"Boss, are you sure you know how to do make-up?" Thirty seconds had passed. Xu Wan sat before the mirror, feeling the unfamiliar temperature of the hand on her face. Looking at the reflection of her face, which her boss was fussing over, her heart started to race, and she felt weirdly shy for some reason.

“A good make-up artist will come up with different styles according to the face shape of his client. And Xiao Wan, I have to say, you have a pretty good base already.” There were literally no dirty thoughts on Chen Ge’s mind. After he activated the Mortician’s Make-up skill, Xu Wan had already become a ‘corpse’ in his mind.

“Hammer, shaver, scalpel, needle and thread, formaldehyde, alcohol... sigh, I’m missing all these things. Looks like I’ll have to settle with the most basic make-up,” Chen Ge mumbled to himself, scaring Xu Wan quite a bit. The girl could not understand why her boss would require so many scary instruments for a simple Haunted House make-up. She was feeling slightly spooked, but since she did not feel like it was appropriate to say no to her boss, all she could do was glance at the progress through her half-shut eyes and pray for the best possible outcome.

“The foundation is too bland, and the blush too bright. Also, where’s the lipstick?” Chen Ge continued to grumble, and he even started to blend colors. The familiarity and expertise of his movements did not match his appearance of a geek who should not have known any of these things.

Xu Wan herself was baffled by what was happening before her. Color-matching without the aid of online guides or books, this is some high-level make-up skill!

“Boss, I don’t think you should be so hard on yourself. After all, the lighting in the Haunted House is so dim; the visitors wouldn’t be able to see anything.”

“Shush and stop moving,” Chen Ge cut her off and helped her apply the eye-shadow that he had just blended. It was just several strokes of eyeshadow, but it contributed a drastic change to Xu Wan’s personality; it added an air of mystery and frostiness to her.

Xu Wan’s natural instinct was to mock her boss, but when she saw her reflection in the mirror, her tiny mouth fell open.

“A blush of just Cherry Red will be too simple, lacks layering, but when combined with some of this purple, it’ll be so different. They blend perfectly like they’re meant for each other,” Chen Ge explained like a make-up guru as he used the brush to blend the two blushes on the back of his palm.

“Boss, what are you doing?”

“Our Haunted House’s blush is too gaudy in the hopes of creating a striking visual effect, but that’s pushing it a bit too far, so I’m toning it down by first applying and spreading it on my hand.” Chen Ge’s action was gentle, and minutes later, the blush did become smoother to the eyes, and there was even a brightening effect to it.

Now, Xu Wan’s mouth formed a perfect O. “Boss, you’re amazing! Where did you learn all this?”

“There’s plenty more of my talent you haven’t seen yet; make-up and beauty tricks are just things I explore in my free time,” Chen Ge explained with a smile. He was in quite a great mood because he now had actual proof that the phone app really could affect the real world.

In just ten minutes, Chen Ge finished Xu Wan’s make-up. “Now, take a look, what do you think?”

The person in the mirror seemed to have walked out of a water painting. She was a quintessential eastern beauty, but there was simply something off about her.

Xu Wan could not help but stand up and twirl in front of the mirror. Her expression changed from utter shock to fascination before ending with a shudder.

“Boss, I’ve never looked so beautiful in my life, is this person really me?”

“Of course, it is.”

“But...” She reached out hesitantly toward the mirror. “How come it feels like I’m looking at a dead person?”

Xu Wan’s observation also made Chen Ge suck in a cold breath. The purpose of a mortician’s make-up was bringing out the beauty of the dead, so naturally Chen Ge’s make-up was not meant for the living.

“Don’t worry about it, the amusement park is opening soon, so quickly go change into your clothes and stand by at the second floor Minghun scenario. Remember to put on your Bluetooth earpiece and listen to my direction.” Chen Ge tactfully moved the topic away and shoved Xu Wan off to her work. He used the little remaining time he had left to work on the puppets and mannequins in the Minghun scenario set piece. With the aid of Mortician’s Make-up, all of the mannequins looked creepily alive.

“I suppose that’s all for now, I’ll recolor them when I have time.” Chen Ge packed up his toolbox and rushed downstairs. Before he reached the entrance, he could already hear the chatter of the visitors.

“You’re also here to seek revenge from the immoral bastard?”

“Yes! The creep caused me to drop my phone, and it broke, so what do you think?”

“You people are still lucky. My pants were already on the ground when this thing popped up! I was so scared; the scream left my throat before I could help it. Thinking something happened to me, my parents rushed into my room. So, with not a shred of fabric on me and a roll of toilet paper in my hand, you can imagine how awkward it was...”

...

Listening to the visitors’ complaints, Chen Ge tried to stop himself from laughing. He took a deep breath and put on a serious countenance before pushing the entrance open.

“Welcome to my humble House of Horrors.”

Chen Ge’s lips curled upward when he saw the long line of customers.

“Xiao Chen, your place is already packed so early in the morning? Not bad.” The worker who was fixing the carousel gasped with surprise. As he was about to wander over to greet Chen Ge, he realized how curious these visitors were looking. They did not look like the normal happy park goers.

“It’s okay; I’m just glad for the support.” Chen Ge shrugged as he pulled the gate open.

“Who said we’re here to support you? Shameless!”

“We’re here to resolve debts, not to play!”

“Is he the real deal? You’re the one who uploaded video last night? Where’s my knife? Hand me my knife!”

The visitors were so ‘passionate’ that it was total chaos, but Chen Ge spoke over them. “Since you’re already here, why don’t you come in for an experience? The best way to counter fear is to find a more intense stimulation—fight poison with poison so to speak—to desensitize yourself to the fear. Indeed, it is my fault for not giving more warning for yesterday's video, and for that, I apologize, so how about this? All the tickets into the Haunted House will be fifty percent off today. Don't miss out on such a wonderful discount!"

Chapter 7

Chapter 7: Minghun

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Fight poison with poison? Do you think we’re that easily fooled?”

“Bro, just give me some money to fix my phone display and I’ll leave.”

...

“You think you can make this go away with a discounted ticket? No way!”

After several minutes of arguing, there were still no visitors who showed any intention of entering the Haunted House. They stayed firmly outside the gate as if the entrance was a line of minefields. They were so terrified that even Chen Ge could not help but sigh. “No one dares to come in just to give it a try? My Haunted House is not even scary; if you don’t believe me, feel free to check the online reviews.”

As he said so, some in the crowd really did do that.

“Indeed, all the reviews say the place is not scary.”

“The only good thing about it is apparently they hire a pretty lady to play the ghost.”

“Then, shall we give it a try?”

Yet another long wait later, finally someone stepped forward. “Bunch of cowards, this is just a Haunted House, how scary can it be? I’ve seen plenty of human carcasses; do you think I’ll be afraid of this?”

The person who stepped forth was a bushy-browed young man with a crew cut. He looked rather unassuming.

“Bro, stop joking with us. Even bluffing has a limit to it.”

“Just how old are you? Yet you want us to believe you’ve seen real human carcasses?”

“We’re all scaredy-cats here, so why are you lying to us?”

Just as the voices of derision gathered, a rather soft but firm voice cut through the cacophony. “He’s not lying. Facing human carcasses is indeed a daily business for people like us.”

The crowd turned toward the voice, and they saw a tall, slender woman in a sun hat and a white dress walking over from the park entrance. Her facial expression was cold, and it was as if she carried a personal air-conditioner with her because the temperature around her felt rather low.

“Senior!” The young man bounced like a rabbit toward the woman, attempting to help her with her bag, but he was deterred by a wintry glare from the woman. He stood where he was, all flustered with an awkward yet polite smile on his face.

“Wait, did you just call her senior? You two are still students?” Chen Ge’s attention was also drawn to these two young people.

“We’re Forensic Science students from Jiujiang Medical University. My name is He San, and this is my senior, Gao Ru Xue.” The young man smiled at Chen Ge. “The video you uploaded last night has been shared on our school’s forum, and my senior decided to pay this place a visit after watching it.”

“That unapproachable beauty is a forensic doctor?”

“Although, her presence does match her profession nicely.”

“Miss, how about we be friends...”

The male visitors started to crowd around the woman. Acting as her guardian, He San merely smiled and said, “I don’t think you all understand what you’re getting into. The other morning, my senior cut open some toads or rats, but right after washing her hands, she happily sauntered over to the canteen to have braised meat completely unaffected; when she passed the lab late last night and saw the bodies soaked in formaldehyde, she yawned and greeted them nicely. Listen to my advice and measure yourself. The number of men she has operated on is probably higher than the number of girls any one of you have held the hand of.”

This unique introduction had achieved the result he wanted; instantly, a two-meter radius emptied around the woman.

Chen Ge also felt a mounting headache upon hearing the young man's introduction. It was not easy for him to finally finish the Nightmare Mission and receive the reward, but the first challenger his updated Haunted House received was a pair of forensic science students. Since their degree was in forensic science, naturally, they would have a fear threshold higher than most!

"Can we go in now?" The woman strode impatiently to stand before Chen Ge. She was already tall, but in her heels, she was practically on the same level as Chen Ge.

"The original ticket price is twenty, so with the fifty percent discount, it'll be ten. Before we go in, I would like to provide the Haunted House's background and a warning." Chen Ge remembered the tips provided by the black phone. One of the three important features of a Haunted House was its plot and background. It would help the visitors get into the mood.

"First, an introduction. Even though many online reviews say my Haunted House is not scary, as a responsible proprietor, I wish to divulge to both of you some facts. The ground we're on was the largest mass grave in Jiujiang city fifty years ago. Thirty years ago, due to city planning, they flattened the graves and built the Jiujiang City Hospital on the site. What happened next you can easily find out on the internet. The hospital was forced to close down due to the frequent occurrence of many incidents that could not be explained, and my Haunted House is a remodeled hospital building that was behind. It still hides many secrets that concern the ill-fated hospital."

After that, Chen Ge pointed at the warning sign beside the main entrance. "No entry to visitors with a heart condition or vascular disease. Visitors above twelve and below sixteen have to be accompanied at all times by their parents or guardians. If there are no questions, please follow me."

Chen Ge pulled open the black heavy drapes, closed the rusted gate, and led He San as well as Gao Ru Xue down the dark corridor.

"Since they cannot share the same room in life, they'll share the same grave in death. This is a local urban legend that has been passed down for many generations.

"Ping Jianghou wished to set up a Minghun for her son who unfortunately passed away too soon. Therefore, she invited a fortune teller to take a look at her son's life and fortune map before finally pinpointing a girl as the perfect candidate to accompany his son in death.

“However, the girl already had someone else in her heart. To make her submit, Ping Jianghou killed her lover by shoving him into a lake and threatened the girl’s parents’ lives.

“Finally, to protect her parents, the girl agreed to marry a dead man.

“Red and white candles stood side by side, a wedding coupled with a death. After the girl was sealed in the coffin and buried alive, many weird things started to happen to the Ping household.

“The statues of bronze chicks started to bleed, and the paper dolls burned for the dead were found blinking. And every midnight, a woman could be seen wandering the halls.

“The scenario that you’ll be experiencing this time is called Minghun. The set is completely open; you can go anywhere you wish, but you need to locate the correct exit in less than fifteen minutes. If you wish to surrender, stand under any of the available cameras and scream for help; I’ll fetch you.” Chen Ge stopped at the second-floor entrance and bowed. “Enjoy.”

“That sounds interesting, but if you think that’s enough to scare me, you’re sorely mistaken,” He San rambled shamelessly while he hid behind his senior. His lips said he was not afraid, but his feet seemed screw shut to the ground, unwilling to move.

In comparison, Gao Ru Xue was more collected. She entered the scenario wordlessly.

“Senior, wait for me!”

After the two visitors entered, Chen Ge locked the front door entrance and called Xu Wan. “Xiao Wan, our guests have entered, be prepared. Also remember to put your earpieces in.”

After giving all the necessary orders, Chen Ge returned to the main control room. This small room was where he could see the different cameras and where he could control all of the set-ups.

“I really didn’t think I will be using this music so soon since it does sound a bit dark, but since they’re not normal visitors, I have no choice!” Chen Ge turned on the audio system and put the Black Friday music on repeat.

With everything in place, he sat before the monitor watching He San and Gao Ru Xue closely. If anything weird happened to them, he would rush in to save them immediately.

Chapter 8

Chapter 8: Black Friday

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Xiao San, this is a perfect opportunity for you to brush up on your traditional Chinese architecture knowledge. This is an almost perfect reconstruction of a traditional Siheyuan ¹. There are three layers of entrance: Dao Zuo Wu ², the Main House, the Ear Houses ³, Chao Shou Corridor ⁴, Chui Hua Men ⁵, East and West Houses, the Back House, Ru Yi Door ⁶, and so on. I’m impressed by the attention to detail; it really does feel like you’ve travelled back in time.” Gao Ru Xue walked through the set pieces, stopping occasionally to study the details.

“Senior, we’re inside a Haunted House, not on a study trip, do you mind?” Their footsteps echoed through the empty courtyard in which paper money was fluttering. It was as if He San was in a different dimension compared to Gao Ru Xue. He turned back every few seconds, afraid that something might jump out at him from the dark corners. “We’d better find the exit as soon as possible; this place makes me jumpy.”

...

“Since we’re already here, of course, we have to savor the experience. Remember, we’re customers, don’t let the Haunted House toy with you.”

“But don’t you remember the boss warned that we have to find the exit in less than fifteen minutes? Based on the evil look of that guy, I’m sure he has something scary planned if we are unable to escape in fifteen minutes!” He San tried to urge Gao Ru Xue, but the latter was not at all affected.

“There are only so many tactics that a Haunted House can employ. At worst, they’ll have the workers dress up as ghosts to chase us around. Xiao San, you deal with dead bodies every day, don’t tell me that you’ve suddenly decided to be afraid of ghosts?” As Gao Ru Xue wandered down the Hugging Corridor, she pushed open the door to the Left Ear House.

The set piece of Minghun was typical of an old Beijing Siheyuan. The Main House was the living building for the elderlies and the head of the house; the East and West Houses were for the sons and daughters, while the Ear Houses were for the servants and maids.

As the door was pushed open, the tables and chairs in the room tumbled over. The pillows on the bed were shredded, causing cotton fluff to float up into the air. A white hanging cloth swayed right in the middle of room.

“Senior, I’ll guard the door, be careful inside...” Before He San could finish, he was dragged into the room by Gao Ru Xue. His body froze, and his face blanched watching the white cloth sway in the windless room.

“Interesting, the cloth is at least 1.5 meters off the ground; this height is not enough to cause strangulation from hanging. The tumbled chairs and tables, as well as the signs of struggle on the floor... the Haunted House is trying to create the illusion that this was a forced suicide. But the Ear Houses were meant for the maids. This means that the specter refused to spare even those who are unrelated to her death. She’s hell-bent on torturing those in this house to their death.” Behind Gao Ru Xue’s clear analysis, there was a hint of excitement. “The design of this Haunted House is quite impressive; there might still be other hidden secrets that we haven’t discovered yet.”

She walked around the room and yanked off the faded bed cover. Lying underneath it was a paper doll.

“A paper doll lying in a living person’s bed?” Gao Ru Xue tossed the doll to the side and bent down to flip the mattress over. There was nothing underneath.

“The greater the anticipation, the greater the disappointment... looks like I’ve overestimated this Haunted House. Let’s go, the exit is not in this room.” She shrugged before walking out. He San, who had been left alone in the living room, had his teeth chattering. Perhaps it was the angle, but he swore he saw the paper doll, which was lying on the floor, wink at him.

“The statues of bronze chicks started to bleed, and the paper dolls burned for the dead were found blinking... Senior, wait for me!”

As the door to the Ear House closed, the white cloth in the room stopped swaying.

“Can you be a little quieter, why are you screaming left and right? Stop acting like such a little girl, man up!” Gao Ru Xue rolled her eyes at He San as she waited for him to catch up.

“I’m not scared, but this place seriously makes me feel uncomfortable, and the longer we stay here, the stronger that feeling becomes. Don’t you feel like something is amplifying our deepest fear?”

He San’s words hit the nail on the head. Gao Ru Xue thought about it, and she also realized that something was off. The most important quality of a forensic doctor was the ability to stay calm no matter the situation, but when she was scolding He San earlier, her composure was shattered; this hadn’t happened to her before.

“Could it be that I too am feeling afraid? But why should I be afraid? Everything here is obviously fake!” A crack started to form on Gao Ru Xue’s internal defense. Neither of them could figure out the source of their fear. With the combined effect of suspicion and psychological terror, the seed of fear had started to grow in their hearts.

“Say, do you think there is really something or someone inhabiting this place? After all, the boss did say this place is built on top of a mass grave and is a remodeled abandoned hospital...”

“Shush! Our university’s morgue is even scarier than this! You’re a forensic doctor; how is it that you’re so easily scared?” Even though Gao Ru Xue said that she was not afraid, it was noticeable that the speed of her speech had increased. She looked around her. The old house, the mourning hall, dead trees, the paper money, they were all set pieces; they weren’t scary. “So, what is it that I’m afraid of?”

The two were so distracted by their environment that they did not notice the background music that was on repeat. This banned song called Black Friday had slowly but surely snuck its way into their hearts, evoking their sense of fear.

“Xiao San, how long have we been in here already?”

“I have no idea, but I have a feeling we won’t be able to escape in fifteen minutes!”

“Don’t fret, give me some time to think about this,” Gao Ru Xue said as she wandered down the corridor. “This Haunted House is not that scary; it’s because the boss has been giving us negative psychological suggestions. Ever since we entered the Haunted House, he has been stressing points like, mass grave, live burial, ghosts, and stuff. That is a classic method to weaken our hearts. However, the most cunning part of this man is, even though he has set up a time limit, he did not say what will happen if we fail. This creates a natural pressure on ourselves, causing our minds to fill in the blank with the scariest speculation.”

“Then, what do you think we should do now? This Haunted House feels a bit different from others.” He San was an honest boy; he would do what his senior ask him to do.

“You’re not wrong there; a normal Haunted House hires actors to dress up as ghosts or uses plenty of set-ups to paint gory scenes to scare us, but this Haunted House doesn’t do that. He has prepared the set beforehand and allows us to wander about it freely. Without guidance and a set plot, there’s no telling what will happen.”

“I understand what you mean; the scariest is the unknown.” He San nodded.

“That explanation is as good as any.” Gao Ru Xue frowned imperceptibly. “Come on, let’s move on to the next room.”

The Ear House was attached to the Main House. After pushing open the wooden door, it revealed a room filled with mourning outfits and a painted coffin sitting right in the middle of the room.

The red coffin had a big “喜” character, cut out from white paper pasted in the middle of it. Standing in two neat rows beside it were plenty of paper mannequins.

Each of them had a name written on their back, and they all wore thin make-up on their faces. Their eyes seemed to glow as the door was pushed open, and they appeared to be quietly staring at the two figures standing at the door.

Chapter 9

Chapter 9: Scared to Tears

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Senior, how come I feel like these paper mannequins are looking at us?” He San grabbed hold of the wooden door, refusing to step into the room. “I’m not kidding! Something must be wrong with them! Could it be that they’re all living people playing dress-up? F*ck, I have a feeling they’re all going to move soon enough!”

The paper mannequins that had been touched up by Chen Ge using Mortician’s Make-up had something weird about them. They were obviously inanimate objects, but there was a certain liveliness to them.

...

Gao Ru Xue glared angrily at He San. She thought to herself, Why did I bring him with me today? Fear is contagious; I was not so afraid to begin with, but because of him, even I feel slightly affected.

“Do you mind keeping your opinions to yourself? If you give anymore useless observations like that, I’m just going to leave you here.”

She was the first to step into the room to take a cursory look around. The windows in the Main House were just decorative; they did not lead outside.

“Senior, let’s go. This building is heavy with Yin energy, and the place is sealed. The exit is definitely not here.”

“The owner of this Haunted House is a master manipulator who knows how human psychology works, so we have to act the complete opposite of how a normal people would. A place like this that does not seem to harbor the exit is exactly where we need to examine closer.” Gao Ru Xue walked around the room, sending up wafts of air that caused some of the paper mannequins that had toppled to the floor to scrape unnaturally.

He San’s heart was at his throat, still standing outside the door. “But there’s no hiding place in this room; you can see every surface. Where can the exit possibly be hidden?"

"No hiding place? Who told you that?" Gao Ru Xue stopped at the middle of the room, raised her fair leg to step on the red coffin. "Come help me, we're opening this coffin!"

"Open that thing?" He San's white lips were quivering. "Isn't that a bit too disrespectful?"

"You plan to spend the rest of your life in this Haunted House?" Under constant urging from Gao Ru Xue, He San moved inch by inch deeper into the room. He made sure to stay far away from the paper mannequins. He bent over to grab one side of the coffin's lid.

"On the count of three, pull!"

"Okay."

"One, two..."

"Dong!" Gao Ru Xue was only half way through the countdown when there was a loud noise in the room.

"What was that?" He San's soul practically jumped out of his skin.

"Shush!" Gao Ru Xue put her finger to her lips to have him quiet down. She looked around before her gaze eventually fell on the red coffin before her. "The sound seems to have come from inside the coffin."

When she said so, color drained from He San's face. His Adam's apple trembled unevenly, and his hands, which were holding the coffin lid, were shaking like he was holding a hot iron brand. "Senior, I beg of you, there's nothing here, can we go now?"

"Calm down, the sound only occurred when we planned to open the lid, don't you think that's very strange?"

"Senior, the coffin just made a sound; that's a hell of a lot more than strange!" He San's fear was greatly amplified by Black Friday; at that moment, he just wanted to leave as soon as possible.

"Think about it, there are only two reason that a coffin could make a sound. One, there's a worker hiding in it waiting to scare us when we open the coffin. Two, there's a hidden machine set-up inside it and activating it will cause some changes to this Minghun scenario. So, no matter which possibility it is, this coffin is crucial to this scenario. If we wish to escape, we have to open this coffin.” Gao Ru Xue slapped the lid twice, adding, “Don’t hesitate, just pull it open.”

“Even though I have no idea what you just said, it did sound quite logical.”

He San and Gao Ru Xue applied their strength at the same time, and the heavy coffin lid started to slide. When the coffin was a quarter of the way open, the ancient-looking coffin suddenly exploded with a loud bang without warning.

Innumerable paper mannequins and paper money shot out from within the coffin, and a strange woman’s laugh filled the room. At that moment, the Main House door started to close on its own!

“Let’s go before it’s too late!” He San did not hesitate. He was close to the entrance, and in his hurry to escape, he had forgotten completely about his senior. He dashed to the door in several steps, but before he could jump through the door, the face of a woman flew in front of him!

It was a death visage that was pale, exquisite, and breathtakingly beautiful!

“F*ck!” He San’s first reaction was to raise his arm to punch at the face. However, the owner of said face seemed to have predicted his reaction because it easily swiveled away from his assault.

“Ghost! Help!” He San collapsed to the floor and half-crawled, half-ran in a random direction.

“He San! Don’t sprint around aimlessly!” Gao Ru Xue yelled at the top of her lungs when she saw a red shadow follow He San into the building he chose to hide in.

“The side houses are for the sons and daughters. This is bad; the place He San has gone into was the living area for the specter before she died!” Gao Ru Xue rushed outward, but she realized the door had locked. She banged on the wooden door cursing, “Divide and conquer? Isn’t this just a Haunted House attraction? Is it really necessary to do such a sick thing?”

The coffin had broken in pieces, and the paper mannequins littered the floor. Gao Ru Xue, who was trapped, had completely lost her collected composure. She punched and kicked at the door and finally got it to open one minute later.

However, in that one minute, everything outside the Main House seemed to have changed.

“Xiao San? He San!” Gao Ru Xue shouted twice, but there was no answer. Other than the eerie background music, there was only the shuffling sound of paper money brushing against each other as her reply.

What's going on? The Haunted House is only so big, so it is impossible for He San not to have heard me, or did some accident befall him? For a reason Gao Ru Xue couldn't explain, an image of a crime scene flashed across her mind. She trailed down the corridor and found her way to the West House by tracing her memory. Xiao San ran in this direction earlier.

As the old wooden door creaked open, the celebratory calligraphy written on white paper fluttered to the ground. Gao Ru Xue stepped into the room. The room was decorated as a newlywed room, but instead of red, the color of celebration, all the decorations were white, the Chinese funereal color. It was creepy to say the least.

Where has he run off to? The atmosphere in the room was off. The only light source was the white lantern hanging outside the door. Gao Ru Xue stepped slowly forward as cold drafts blew in from behind her. Her exposed skin was chilled like there were small invisible hands in the air caressing her skin.

The paper money crunched under her feet, and occasionally, she would kick something hard that she could not tell the identity of because it was too dark. She gritted her teeth and powered on.

Gao Ru Xue pulled the drapes in the room open to let some of the light in. The place was empty other than a bed that was covered underneath a mosquito net as well as a set of bronze mirrors that sat facing each other next to the wall.

I saw He San run into this room with my own two eyes. Only one or two minutes have passed since then, so he could not have disappeared so soon? Unless... the exit is in this room and He San accidentally stumbled across it?

Gao Ru Xue took a deep breath before deciding to perform a closer examination of the room. However, as she took the first step, she heard a second set of footsteps falling closely behind hers.

“Who’s behind me?”

She whipped around, but she only saw a bronze mirror and her reflection in the mirror itself.

Chapter 10

Chapter 10: Mirror Mirror

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Phew, scared myself for no reason. Gao Ru Xue's chest rose unevenly as her heart beat at an impossible speed. It had been such a long time since she had acted such a fool.

The creepy music continued to play. Using the weak light, she could see the pupils of her reflection in the mirror start to shrink. In the mirror, the mosquito net behind her was opening on its own! The face of a paper mannequin showed itself, and from the reflection in the mirror, she could clearly see that it was smiling at her.

...

"Who's there?" A human being's normal go-to reaction during extreme fear was anger and aggression. Gao Ru Xue turned around, but there was nothing there. She ran toward the mosquito net to yank it open to take a look at what was really behind it. However, the design of the net was more complicated than she expected; it had many different layers, and the netting was connected to the bed itself. Instead of untangling the net, Gao Ru Xue got herself stuck in the netting instead.

Right then, she could hear footsteps coming from inside the room.

I'm not moving, so whose footsteps are those? The disappearance of her junior combined with the effect of Black Friday had completely shattered Gao Ru Xue's psychology defense. The sound of the unknown footsteps was the last straw that ultimately broke the camel's back.

Her legs turned to jelly, and she found herself unable to move. Fear was like an uncaged animal, tearing at her sense of rationality. Gao Ru Xue yanked on the netting, trying her best to untangle herself from it, but it was to no avail. The sound of footsteps became suspiciously close.

Impossible! The room is only so big, if someone was coming near, I'd definitely be able to see it! Her heart was a chaotic mess, to the extent that even the simple decorations inside the room were sending chills down her spine.

The white lantern outside the window swayed in the wind, causing the light in the room to dim. Her reflection in the bronze mirror started to blur. Gao Ru Xue's pupils shook because she realized the reflection in the mirror was no longer herself but a strange woman in a wedding dress!

In more ways than one, the woman's appearance seemed like she was dressed to kill. Her beauty had an ethereal quality to it; it was frighteningly captivating, like looking at a recently unearthed piece of art.

Staring at the woman in the mirror, Gao Ru Xue's lips quivered, and fear appeared on her face for the first time.

From her experience dealing with so many autopsies, she was familiar with the feeling the woman in the mirror was giving her; this was the face of a dead person!

The Haunted House is hiding a real dead body! Just as this thought entered her mind, fear swallowed her like a giant wave. She tried her best to run away from the bronze mirror, and as she staggered back, she knocked into something.

At the same time, the sound of footsteps stopped, and Gao Ru Xue's mind went completely blank in that moment. Having lost the ability to think, she turned instinctively to look behind her.

Meeting her gaze was a woman in dead man's make-up and wedding dress. She smiled at her.

"Ahh!" The piercing scream shattered the quietness of the Haunted House; it could be heard even outside the building itself. With her arms still entangled in the netting, Gao Ru Xue's legs finally gave, and she collapsed to the ground.

The suppressed fear manifested as tears, which fell uncontrollably. Her eyes were screwed shut, and her mouth was slightly open. The woman started to dry heave.

"Xiao Wan, quickly bring her out!"

"Okay." The female ghost standing before Gao Ru Xue removed her Bluetooth earpieces that were hidden under her hair and squatted down to say, “The experience ends here. Please catch your breath, I’ll lead you out now.”

Ten seconds later, the exit to the Minghun scenario was pushed open. Chen Ge rushed over in a hurry and asked, “There’s only one? Where’s the other one?”

He rushed over in a hurry because he could not locate He San on the surveillance cameras.

“That coward fainted when he ran into the room and saw the two mirrors. I was afraid that he might influence the experience of the next visitor, so I dragged him to hide him under the bed...”

“Fainted?” Chen Ge also did not know how to respond. “Safety’s first, if this happens again in the future, inform me immediately!”

“Yes, Boss.” After leaving Xu Wan to look after Gao Ru Xue, Chen Ge went into the room to pull He San out from behind the bed. The young man was completely unconscious like he was greatly traumatized.

*Sh*t, I have to bring him to somewhere open-air first!* Chen Ge carried He San and ran toward the entrance of the Haunted House. He peeled back the heavy drapes and kicked the gate open. “Clear some space please!”

Chen Ge placed He San at the entrance of the Haunted House, and he started to massage the young man and place ice packs over his forehead, trying to rouse him. This development had stunned the visitors that still had not left the park.

“Jesus Christ, what happened in there?”

“Visit the Haunted House until he fainted, this is first time I’ve seen something like this.”

“He was scared until he fainted, right? So why would the online reviews say this place is not scary?”

“F*ck, I’m starting to have chills...”

Not long after that, Xu Wan came out carrying Gao Ru Xue. The woman was a complete contrast from the person who walked in. The new Gao Ru Xue’s hair was a mess, her face was blanched, and her gait was weak. There were still tears drying on her face.

“This is a completely different person!”

“What did she experience in there?”

“But why should they be afraid? Aren’t they forensic students?”

Xu Wan placed Gao Ru Xue on the steps and passed her a bottle of water. The woman was still recovering from the experience, as evidenced by her hands that were shaking as she held the bottle.

“Don’t crowd around them, they need air!” Chen Ge also felt a headache coming. It was normal for Gao Ru Xue to be shedding frightened tears, but what about this young man? Why would he suddenly faint? Why didn’t he admit that he was easily scared? What was with men and their pride?

The commotion caused more and more visitors to gather at the Haunted House. This attracted the attention of the park manager, who rushed over on his electronic bike.

“Xiao Chen! What is going on here? Why is there a fainted visitor on the ground?” asked Uncle Xu as he jumped down from his bike and pushed through the crowd.

“I have no idea; maybe it’s the heat...” Even Chen Ge did not feel convinced by his answer.

“A hot flash in this kind of weather?” Uncle Xu rushed over to pick up He San and place him on his bike. “Regardless, we have to send him to the medical room first!”

Several minutes later, perhaps it was the massage or the noise from the crowds, He San started to rouse. His eyelashes fluttered and sat up from the bike. His eyes were bloodshot, and his mouth kept on mumbling, “Mirror, Mirror...”

“Son, keep calm!”

“Look, doesn’t he look possessed?”

After a few more minutes in the sun, He San finally became more like himself. He scratched the back of his head and blushed with shame when he realized the whole crowd was staring at him.

“Are you feeling better? Why did you faint inside the Haunted House?” Uncle Xu in the park uniform passed a bottle of water to He San.

“I actually cannot recall for sure what had happened. I was so scared and ran into the first door that I saw. There was a bronze mirror on the wall, and I remembered someone calling my name, but I can’t remember what happened after that,” He San said with a face filled with confusion. “Perhaps it’s something set up by the Haunted House?”

“There’s a scenario related to a mirror inside the Haunted House?”
Uncle Xu turned toward Chen Ge, who was not looking so good.

Chapter 11

Chapter 11: How Do You Sleep at Night?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

When He San mentioned that his fainting had to do with mirror, Chen Ge's heart skipped a beat. He was instantly reminded of the game from the previous night and how the thing inside the mirror had been stopped from escaping by the doll.

From the look of it, the creature still had not left, hiding the mirrors of the Haunted House.

...

"Boss, is this a new thing just added to the Haunted House? How come I've not heard of it before?" Xu Wan also wandered over, pulling the gaze of the crowd along with her. Chen Ge was caught in an awkward position; he could not just confess that there was an actual ghost living inside the Haunted House, could he? If he did that, the Haunted House would be forced into closure, but more than that, he would be dragged to the mental hospital.

"I guess you can say that. It's related to the short video I uploaded last night, but I don't recommend playing this game without professional guidance." Chen Ge patted He San lightly on his shoulder. "If you do not take my advice, you might end up in the same state as this young man. Alright, who still wishes to visit the Haunted House? Don't worry, there are bound to be accidents in a Haunted House; that's what makes it interesting, yes?"

"Interesting my backside! A man fainted! It's a Haunted House visit, so why should we put our lives on the line?"

"He's right! I'll forget about my broken phone as long as you don't post any more weird ass videos in the middle of the night."

"Thanks, but no thanks!"

As Chen Ge extended the invitation, the crowd stepped away from him in unison. He laughed awkwardly. "Why are you all acting like that? My Haunted House is really not that scary."

“Bro, we have two forensic science students who deal with dead bodies every day here; one is in tears, and the other fainted. Now, you’re telling us your Haunted House is not scary? Who are you lying to? How can you lie without batting an eye?”

“That’s right, have some morals!”

The comments from the crowd stumped Chen Ge. Initially, when the Haunted House was supposedly not scary, no one wanted to visit because, apparently, it was too boring. Now, when it was finally scary, it seemed to have overshoot the effect he wanted. “But you came from all over the country just to stand at the entrance and watch? Guts can be trained; an occasional scare here and there will be able to increase your heart rate, thus improving your blood circulation.”

“Even if you give us money, we’re not going into that place. And improve blood circulation some more, you might as well say your Haunted House can cure cancer.” The man who had his phone broken retorted before turning to leave.

However, right then, a middle-aged uncle standing beside him suddenly raised his voice to say, “Boss, give me a ticket!”

His voice was firm like he had come to this decision after much contemplation.

“F*ck, there really are thrill-seekers everywhere.”

“Uncle, don’t be rash. Other Haunted Houses take your money, but his Haunted House takes your life!”

“Uncle, you’ve impressed me with your courage! Go on, don’t worry, you can leave your wife and your daughter with me!”

The uncle looked to be over forty, and his head was balding. He walked out from the crowd and gave Chen Ge ten dollars. “One ticket please.”

“You’re doing this alone?” Even Chen Ge was impressed by this middle-aged man. He dared to do this after witnessing what had happened earlier?

After taking the money, Chen Ge gave the uncle his ticket. He was about to go through his introductions when the uncle took the ticket and walked off in the other direction from the Haunted House’s gate.

“Uncle, the door is right this way...”

“I know.” The uncle did not turn back and continued to walk to a rather photogenic spot. He pulled out his phone to mess with the camera angle until he managed to encapsulate most of the Haunted House building in the frame. He snapped two pictures before posting them to his Facebook. “The weather today is perfect for a day-out. I personally recommend this Western Jiujiang City’s House of Horrors. It scared the bejesus out of me when I visited the place, highly recommended.”

The crowd could not help but roll their eyes. All you did was stay at the entrance for about twenty minutes and purchase a ticket, you call that visiting the place?

Before the crowd could say anything, the uncle already got likes and replies from his social circle.

Xiao Li from Human Resources responded, “Brother Zhang, you’re scared of even the common rat but you dared to visit a Haunted House today? My man, nice job!”

“This means that the Haunted House isn’t that scary if Ol’ Zhang dares to visit it (wicked grin),” replied Wang Da You.

“Dinner is served, come home soon!!!” Ol’ Ball and Chain’s response was relatively off-topic.

Precious Daughter, Wang Jing, laughed. “LOL, Dad, we’re all very familiar with the type of courage you have, so stop with the hapless struggle.”

The balding uncle didn’t mind the comments but replied with a mischievous smile, “Feel free to visit this place on your own. Since you all claim to be braver than I am, I’m sure none of you will be afraid to take up this challenge, right?”

This series of actions had stunned the crowd.

“Uncle, how cunning you are! To prove that you’re not a scaredy-cat, you’re entrapping your very own wife and daughter...” The man who had broken his phone stood beside the uncle and saw the whole process. Then, he rushed toward Chen Ge and demanded, “Give me a ticket as well!”

Chen Ge had no explanation to this development, but since he was operating a business, he could not say no to his customers. After passing the young man his ticket, he saw the young man operate his broken phone to snap a picture and upload it onto Instagram with the caption, “God, what did I do? I realize I’m easily scared, who can come to hold my hands as we challenge this Haunted House together?”

Reading through the many comments that appeared under his photo, the young man had a devilish smile on his face.

“Give me one ticket too.”

“Me too!”

“Fifty percent off, you say? Then give me two!”

There was no visitor inside the Haunted House, but the tickets in Chen Ge’s hands quickly disappeared. In just a few minutes, about half the stack was gone. The crowd slowly dispersed, and Chen Ge started to happily count the day’s earning.

“Boss, the tickets we sold this morning are more than the total tickets we have sold in the whole month.” Xu Wan squatted down beside Chen Ge, and the excitement in her eyes could not be suppressed.

“We merely got lucky today, to make sure we have a constant stream of visitors, we have to improve on our content first.” Chen Ge placed the cash inside his pocket and turned to head back inside the Haunted House. It was then that he realized, his ‘victims’ of the day, Gao Ru Xue and He San, still hadn’t left the scene.

“Are you two feeling any better?” Chen Ge walked toward them with an offering of mineral water. After all, they were crucial to him having such good sales that day.

“Yes, thank you, and sorry for the trouble,” He San, who sat on the steps, uttered awkwardly.

Beside him, the color still had not returned to Gao Ru Xue’s face yet. Her gaze wandered between Chen Ge and Xu Wan before she said, “I have two questions I want to ask, may I?”

“Sure.” Chen Ge nodded readily.

“Number one, inside the West House, I swore I saw this girl’s face in the mirror, so how could she suddenly appear behind me?” Gao Ru Xue intended to get to the bottom of the truth. She had a hard time coming to terms with that fact that she had been so scared that she cried.

“You think that’s a normal mirror, but it’s actually not. It’s actually a triangular pillar with mirrors on each side, but the two other sides are normally hidden behind the wall. It can be moved with a slight push. The exit to the Minghun scenario is actually behind the mirror. Regarding the woman you saw in the mirror, it was merely a picture that was pasted at particular angle. Using lighting effects, the other mirror, and optical illusions, it creates the illusion that you’re looking at a real person. Xiao Wan was actually hiding behind the mirror. The sound of footsteps you heard was merely a sound effect.”

Gao Ru Xue nodded after listening to Chen Ge’s explanation. “Alright, the second question.”

She pointed at Xu Wan. “This lady is obviously alive, but how come, looking at her, I have this feeling that I’m looking at a dead body?”

Chapter 12

Chapter 12: Wheel of Misfortune

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Due to her field of study, the time Gao Ru Xue spent in the company of dead bodies was far greater than the time she spent around living human beings. She was not good at social events, but that did not bother her much because she felt more comfortable in the presence of dead bodies after all.

“Our Haunted House employs a special make-up technique, and that, combined with the unique environment of the Haunted House, creates nothing more than an illusion in your mind.” The Mortician’s Make-up as well as Black Friday were something that he could not attempt to explain even if he tried to. Therefore, he answered the question broadly and quickly moved the conversation away. “If there are no more questions, I’ll need to get back to work. Thank you for visiting us today.”

...

After saying goodbye to the two students, Chen Ge ordered Xu Wan to go clear up the props in the Minghun scenario while he returned to the main control room alone.

What really happened to He San was known to Chen Ge alone; the creature in the mirror hadn’t left and was still hiding inside the Haunted House.

Letting it stay will only create more problems for me in the future. This was his first time dealing with a Nightmare Mission, so he had not expected that it would have such complicated repercussions. After turning off the background music, Chen Ge pulled out the surveillance camera to focus on the few minutes after He San entered the West House. After flipping through the videos captured from multiple angles, he soon discovered something.

It was at 24 minutes and 11 seconds past 9 o’ clock that He San ran into the West House. He was running about like a headless chicken.

At 24 minutes and 14 seconds, when his eyes fell on the bronze mirror, a very curious image appeared on screen. The originally frantic He San became suspiciously calm after he saw the mirror. He stood before the mirror completely immobile. Chen Ge would have thought the video had stopped if not for the ticking time frame on screen.

At 24 minutes and 17 seconds, He San suddenly raised his left hand and started to walk slowly toward the mirror. It looked like someone or something was dragging him toward the mirror!

At 24 minutes and 20 seconds, Xu Wan, wearing a wedding dress, ran into the room from the open door. By then, He San's upper body was almost touching the mirror, and there was a flash of something in the mirror that was captured by the camera. Right after that, He San fainted to the ground.

It was Xiao Wan's arrival that interrupted the creature's plan? Chen Ge played the video on loop. Plenty of stuff happened in those ten seconds. He rubbed his temples, but he could not come up with a good solution.

Until I can come up with a more permanent solution, it looks like the only thing I can do now is cover up all the mirrors in this Haunted House. Chen Ge wandered back to the Props Room to grab several black clothes before returning to the Minghun set.

"Boss, why are you here? Just leave the cleaning up to me." Xu Wan saw Chen Ge while she was picking up the paper mannequins and paper money to put them back into coffin.

"I came to inform you of something. Temporarily, stop using all the props and scares related to mirrors in the Haunted House. Also, when you're working, make sure to stay away from mirrors." Chen Ge carried the black cloth as he helped Xu Wan close the fake coffin.

Xu Wan was baffled by Chen Ge's orders, but she didn't ask. After fixing all the props in the Main House, Chen Ge entered the West House alone.

The white lantern cast its weak light into the room. He stood at the spot where He San fainted and stared quietly at the bronze mirror.

"Someone lives inside the mirror? Could there really be another world inside the mirror?" Chen Ge touched the icy surface of the glass and stared at his own reflection for a long time. He could not pinpoint it, but he felt like something was off. When I handed He San the bottle of water earlier, he used his right hand to take it, which means that he's not left-handed. However, in the video, he raised his left-hand. Why would he do something that is opposite of his usual habit? Was he taken control of by the thing in the mirror?

Chen Ge placed his left hand on the mirror, which aligned perfectly with his mirrored right hand. After all, everything is inverted inside the mirror.

After covering the mirror with a black cloth, Chen Ge pulled out the black phone. This is where it all started; the creature appeared because of this phone. Therefore, it makes sense that if I wish to vanquish it, I'll need the help of this phone.

He opened the app with the Haunted House icon and soon noticed some changes to the interface. The Daily Visitor Number and Monthly Visitor Number had each increase by two.

Under the window for unlockable scenarios, a Trial Mission had just become available. After clicking on it, the message said that after finishing the mission, the scenario that it corresponded to would be unlocked.

The design of this game seems fair enough. Completing a mission will earn me a reward, and the level of the reward directly corresponds to the difficulty of the mission. If I wish to expand this place further and deal with the thing inside the mirror, I'll need to continue finishing these missions.

He could only do one Daily Mission each day, so Chen Ge's eyes naturally wandered toward the Trial Mission.

"Murder by Midnight—A dangerous psychotic patient wandered about a fallen apartment. Scissors and mallets as hands, he is just wandering outside of your room.

"Mission Venue: Western Countryside's Ping An Apartments.

"Mission Requirement: Reach the Mission Venue before 23:00 today. Look for the party responsible for the murder and survive until dawn.

"Mission Hints: He hides among the crowd like a wolf among a group of sheep. His kind exterior hides a sickened heart.

"Do you wish to accept this mission? Warning: Trial Missions are only available for 24 hours. If they are not accepted within these 24 hours, the scenario will never be unlocked.”

Chen Ge still had some reservations initially, but he decided to accept it after reading the last sentence.

Let come what may. Things are finally looking up for the Haunted House; I can't give up on any opportunity that will make it better.

After accepting the mission, he scrolled down. The Haunted Wheel of Misfortune had been activated without him knowing. Chen Ge clicked on it out of curiosity, and a line of words appeared on screen.

“The Decree of Life and Death is never the decision of man; fortune and misfortune are only one inch apart. We have both Spirit Fruits to increase your life span as well as hatred-filled Baleful Specters!

“Activating the Wheel after collecting the visitor’s scream for the first time. You’ve been given a free spin for the first activation. (A scream will be collected when it is over seventy decibels. After collecting one hundred screams, they can be traded for a chance to spin the Wheel of Misfortune.)”

One hundred screams for one spin? Chen Ge frowned reading this detail. This wheel is horrible on so many levels. The condition for activating it is already so difficult, but the result is still randomized? If the result is a baleful specter, then wouldn't it have been a complete waste?

Chen Ge looked at the box that said he had one spin left, and he felt like pressing it. This feeling was similar to when one saw a message appear on one’s phone; it might just have been an advertisement, but one felt compelled to open it.

I mean, what can possibly go wrong? Chen Ge told himself, and as his finger tapped the screen lightly, the wheel started to turn.

As long as it's not a Baleful Specter, I'm fine with anything!

Chapter 13

Chapter 13: Blessing or Curse?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge looked at the screen with superhuman focus. The wheel gradually slowed until the needle stopped at one of the results.

“Lucky Spin completed, congratulations for having won a Rare Special Item: Cursed Love Letter (Chance of Winning: 3/1000!) ”

...

“Her eyes exposed, cheeks white as ash, the moment she fell off the building, she became the taboo of the school. In red dancing shoes and a blood-dyed uniform, even her name became something that was only uttered in frantic whispers. People pretended that she didn’t exist, until one day, someone started receiving her love letters again.

“Getting a Baleful Spirit on your first Lucky Spin, unlocked Rare Title: The Specters’ Favored.

“The Specters’ Favored: When you equip this title, there’s a chance you might receive help from the specters.”

Looking at the information on screen, Chen Ge felt like his head was spinning. Cursed Love Letter? A 3/1000 chance of winning it? The Specters’ Favored? Before resolving the matter with the creature in the mirror, now I’m blessed with another one? I don’t even know whether I should consider myself lucky or unlucky.

He regretted cursing himself before activating the lucky spin. Chen Ge, get a grip of yourself! This is not the worst yet; drawing a Baleful Specter doesn’t mean it’ll appear instantly. Perhaps there is still time to salvage this, maybe I should go light an incense at the nearby temple.

He pocketed his phone, and his fingers brushed up against something papery in his pocket. He lowered his head and was shocked to see a yellowed letter poking out of his pocket. With a bad feeling settling in his stomach, Chen Ge pulled out the letter carefully, and there was only a single, simple sentence written on it that was braided using hair: “I like you.”

*What the f*ck! Please, tell me what you like about me, and I'll change from this moment on!*

The handwriting on the paper had a nice curve to it; it would look quite nice if not for the fact that it was braided from hair.

Chen Ge stood in the West House, holding the letter in his hands. He mumbled to himself, "Who would have thought the first love letter I've ever received in my life would be something like this..."

"Boss! What are you grumbling to yourself in here?" Xiao Wan came in from behind him after she was done fixing all the stuff in the Main House.

"It's nothing; I'm just thinking. If someone knows his life will end soon, is it right for him to give up on materialistic pursuit to focus on leaving some good deeds in this world?" Chen Ge raised his head to look at Xiao Wan in dead man's make-up. "For example, to do his best to help produce the human race's next generation."

Chen Ge was obviously just rambling, but Xu Wan looked at him as if in deep thought, and her face turned serious with contemplation.

"Xiao Wan, don't tell me you're thinking about saying yes? Thanks, but I'm not ready yet. Then again, we've worked with each other for a long time already, and we do make a great team. I guess if you insist, I suppose I wouldn't have said no..." For some reason, Chen Ge felt weirdly nervous.

"No, Boss, it's not that. I'm just curious how you managed to have two shadows following you." Xu Wan pointed behind Chen Ge. "Is this some new thing you've invented?"

"Two shadows?" Chen Ge whipped his head around and saw two shadows, one big and one small, encroaching upon him before finally melding into one. "What the f*ck!"

He yanked Xu Wan out of the Haunted House immediately.

Chen Ge finally relaxed when he felt the sun on his skin. He did not give Xu Wan any explanation as he collapsed onto the steps.

"Boss, you've been acting very out of sorts lately, is it because of the financial pressure?" Xu Wan sat down beside Chen Ge. "Don't worry, I'm sure everything will be fine. By the way, what do you want to have for lunch? I'll go buy something for you."

Listening to Xu Wan's words of comfort, Chen Ge also did not know how to answer. He forced a smile and said, "I'll just have the same as you, but before you go out, remember to remove your make-up, lest you scare the canteen workers."

"Understood."

After Xu Wan left, Chen Ge pulled out the love letter again. I saw the two shadows joining together with my own eyes; if this is a sign that I've been haunted by the specter, does it mean that it's hiding in my shadow?

Chen Ge looked at his shadow unblinkingly. With The Specters' Favored title, I have a chance to earn the aid from the specters, so in way, winning a Baleful Specter might not be as bad as I thought.

At least that was what Chen Ge told himself on the surface. He knew internally, the reason a Baleful Specter was called a Baleful Specter was because they died with great anguish. They radiated sin and curses. If he was slightly careless, he might easily end up dead in a ditch somewhere.

After lunch, Chen Ge stood in front of the Haunted House, handing out flyers. There were quite a number of park visitors, but none wanted to enter the Haunted House.

Bored out of his mind, Chen Ge opened his video sharing app page and realized there had been a few new private messages. Deleting the trolls and advertisement, Chen Ge personally replied the remaining messages. Soon, he came across a message from He San.

The honest-looking young man surreptitiously came to contact Chen Ge, telling him his school's forum had been exploding. After they found out that his Haunted House had played such a big prank on the beauty of their course, many students had stated the desire to level the Haunted House. Someone had started a thread to form the warring party, and it had more than a handful of volunteers already.

"It's nice to be young," Chen Ge commented with upturned lips. In his mind, however, there was already a vision of hormonal youths quivering in a group trapped inside his Haunted House.

"After completing the Trial Mission, I'll have them try it out to see how scary the 1-star scenario really is."

The thought of the Trial Mission made Chen Ge turn serious. He only had a one-time chance to complete this mission. If he failed, the chance of unlocking that scenario would forever be lost. He looked through the phone to memorize all the available information.

Knowing one's enemy is winning half the battle. Therefore, the first thing Chen Ge did after confirming the mission venue was to look up everything he could about the place on the internet.

“Jiujiang City Western Countryside's Ping An Apartments.”

Keying in the name of the location came up with nothing initially. After flipping through the front few pages, Chen Ge finally found something related to this apartment listed on a secondhand house sale website.

It was a complaint saying that the seller had the intention of obscuring the truth. In reality, this apartment was a literal haunted house. After peeling off the fresh coat of paint, there were signs of dried blood, and every night, the apartment would be filled with the disgusting smell of decay.

No one answered the complaint, and it was soon swamped by other more interesting threads. Chen Ge looked at the time of posting, and it was nine months ago.

Staying overnight at a haunted house and having to look for a hidden murderer... Sigh, this is a bit harder than I thought. Chen Ge had studied toy design; he was a complete amateur when it came investigation and self-defense. The hard part is not staying at the haunted house but what if the murderer is just living next door to me and jumps at me at night?

Chapter 14

Chapter 14: Missing Persons Notice

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

At 4.30 pm, Chen Ge stood alone in the Haunted House's props room. He studied the roomful of items as if deep in thought.

What do you need to prepare to spend a night with a murderer?

...

Identity card, phone, charger, lighter, penknife, multi-uses hammer...

Right, mustn't forget this doll as well. Chen Ge shoved the doll that appeared before the mirror the previous night into his bag, and after confirming he had everything he needed, he pulled the zipper of the bag close and left the room.

"Xiao Wan, you can get off work early today. Remember to lock the door when you leave; I have something to attend to do, so I'll go first."

"Boss, it's only 5 pm. Are you going on a trip or something?"

"I've left the key on the table in the props room, see you tomorrow morning."

Noticing Chen Ge's attempt at changing the subject, Xu Wan helplessly replied, "Okay."

However, as Chen Ge turned around, the girl dropped the Haunted House flyers and shot toward the props room in a trail of smoke.

"This girl..." The evening wind ruffled the flyers that were left on the table. Chen Ge shook his head and picked up a pebble to place over them as he sighed. Hopefully she won't be seeing me on the morning news.

Underneath his calm surface, Chen Ge's heart was a chaotic mess. The Nightmare Mission from the night before had opened a whole new world to him and made him realize there was a certain level of danger to the missions dispensed by the black phone.

Trial Mission has to be more difficult than Daily Mission; I have to be more careful tonight.

Before the night fell, Chen Ge rode his bicycle to head toward Ping An Apartments. The Mission Information only gave the name of the location. To locate the place, Chen Ge used Google Maps and the information from the online complaint released nine months ago. Even so, he still exhausted two hours before he reached his destination.

Are there even people who want to live a place that is so barren and isolated?

The road leading to the apartment building was winding and overgrown with wild brushes. There was a noticeable lack of street lighting, and through the tree branches, Chen Ge could catch glimpses of a gray-colored building.

On the way there, Chen Ge asked as many people as he could, but most of them hadn't heard of Ping An Apartments. In the end, it was a senior who was about sixty years old that pointed him down the correct road and added a little friendly advice. He told Chen Ge that the place was haunted and cursed, so most would give it a wide berth even in daylight.

Chen Ge did not know how to answer. If not for the sake of the black phone's mission, who would voluntarily go spend a night at a place like that?

It's now 6.50 pm, and the mission states that I have to be there by 11 pm. This means that I still have time to have a quick look around. Following the winding road, Chen Ge entered deep into the forest. After travelling for quite some time, he finally saw the legendary cursed house.

The yard was surrounded by a tall grey wall, and there was only one exit. Even though the gate that opened on both sides was rusty with age, there was a brand-new lock on it.

Weird, the lock is so new, but the gate looks old, but wait, what's this? There was a piece of white paper stuck to the iron bars of the gate. Chen Ge assumed it was a flyer, but when he pointed his flashlight at it, he realized it was a missing person's notice.

“Zhang Qing, Female, 27 years old, 157 cm tall, on the thin side. There is a beauty mark beneath her right eye. She likes to wear red clothes. If you have any information, please contact Mr. Wang.

Monetary rewards will be provided!"

The notice came with this Mr. Wang's contact number and address. The thing that caught Chen Ge's attention was that the address listed on the notice was the address of this cursed apartment.

"This sure is weird." Chen Ge's ghost sense was tingling. He pulled out his phone to snap a picture of the notice before entering the compound. The place was bigger than he had expected. The main building had three floors, and there were two buildings that looked like a storeroom and a water pump room next to it.

Based on the peeling of its paint, I believe this place is at least twenty to thirty years old already. However, the place was not as unkempt as one might have assumed it to be. The place was clean, there was no litter, and even the lawn was carefully mown.

After he placed his bicycle in the lawn, Chen Ge walked into the main building with his backpack. "Hello, is anyone there?"

The long corridor was shadowy. About ten seconds later, the door closest to the stairs opened up a sliver.

"Good afternoon." Chen Ge walked toward the door, but the person behind it did not seem particularly hospitable since the door stopped after opening just a sliver. The lights in the room were not on, and Chen Ge could just about make out the shape of a woman behind the door. Her eyes were bloodshot, like she was fond of sleeping late. It made her look extremely tired.

"I wish to ask how much it will cost me to spend a night here," Chen Ge said in a tone that was as kind and soft as he could. However, to his bafflement, the only answer he got was a giggle, and the door slammed in his face.

"Huh?" Before he understood what just happened, he heard footsteps coming from the second floor. The only voice-activated light that was installed at the corner of the corridor lit up, and a limping middle-aged man was coming down.

He seemed to have overheard Chen Ge because the first thing he said was, "You want to stay at my place? How long do you plan to stay?"

"You're the landlord?" Chen Ge walked over. "I just wish to stay for one night?"

“Just one night?” The limping man gave Chen Ge a once-over like he was trying to read his mind. “Fine, give me your ID, and the payment is made at the second floor.”

Chen Ge was about to follow the man upstairs when there a loud sound came from outside. It sounded like someone had swung the iron gate open. Hearing this, the limping man frowned, and his features twisted with displeasure. He stopped moving, and Chen Ge had no choice but to wait as well. Not long after that, in walked another middle-aged man who looked awfully tired. He was wearing old, tattered clothes and was holding a stack of papers in his hand.

“Wang Qi, how many times I’ve told you, your girlfriend is not here? If you insist on being this stubborn, I’ll have to call the police!” The limping man stood in the middle of the stairs to block the path.

The other man ignored him and continued upstairs with his head lowered.

“Hey, I’m talking to you!” The limping man kicked, causing the unprepared middle-aged man to knock into the wall. The stack of papers slipped from his hands and fluttered all over the staircase. One of them happened to land beside Chen Ge’s feet.

It’s the same as the missing person’s notice that I saw outside, Chen Ge thought to himself as he narrowed his eyes. He silently picked it up before continuing to follow the drama that was happening before him.

The middle-aged man did not retaliate against the limping man’s attack. He crawled up slowly from the ground and carried on to wordlessly pick up the notices that littered the ground. He reminded Chen Ge of a lumbering, lifeless zombie.

“Don’t mind him, the man’s crazy.” The limping man waved at Chen Ge, ushering him to come upstairs. It seemed like he had given up on the middle-aged man.

Crazy? When Chen Ge passed the middle-aged man, he surreptitiously glanced at him. The mission information did mention a psycho, so could this be him?

Chapter 15

Chapter 15: Landlord

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge's first impression of Wang Qi was 'weary, torpid, and weak'. As they brushed past each other, Chen Ge handed the other man back the notice he had picked up earlier, and Wang Qi thanked him with a wavering voice. This was the first time Chen Ge had heard the man speak. It sounded gravelly, which gave Chen Ge some trouble in understanding him.

"You're welcome," Chen Ge responded with a smile before he turned to follow the limping man up the stairs.

...

The second floor was even more dilapidated than the first floor. The place was dark and humid, the corners were filled with uncleaned spider webs, and the walls looked like they had been slashed with knives. The limping man led Chen Ge to the very end of the long corridor. He opened the last room before coming out with a long chain of keys. "One night is fifty dollars, take a pick of any room you like on this floor."

"50 dollars? That's too expensive!"

"My apartment is the only place to stay within several kilometers; you should be thankful I only charge you fifty." When the man was talking, his eyes kept unconsciously moving to look behind him like he was checking out something.

"Fine, but why must I stay on the second floor, is the room on first or third floor not available?"

"Why do you have no many damn questions? They're off the limits, that's why!" The limping man grabbed the fifty away from Chen Ge and shoved a random key in his hand. "The room number is written on the key, go look for it yourself."

Then, he rushed back into the room. The moment the door closed, Chen Ge could hear the muffled croak of an old man coming from inside the room, like the sound one would make when one had food stuck in one's throat. Frowning with suspicion, Chen Ge placed his palm on the door, saying, "Wait a minute."

"What now?" the limping man asked with annoyance.

Chen Ge glanced through the slight opening of the door. The space within looked small. Other than the limping man that stood at the door, there was an old man reclining in a wheelchair that was facing away from the door. He was probably the source of the noise Chen Ge heard earlier.

"I'm rather thirsty, does your establishment provide a vending machine or things like that?"

"No!"

"Man, is this how you treat your customer..."

The door slammed in his face, leaving Chen Ge in the corridor with a heavier suspicion brewing in his heart.

For a normal apartment building, the reception is normally at the front door, but for this building, the reception is not only on the second floor but at the very end of the second-floor corridor. Looking at the key in his hand, many questions appeared in his mind. Why are the first and third floors off limits? And who is the old man living with the landlord?

The number 208 was written on the key, and coincidentally enough, the room was just next to the landlord's.

Regardless, let me go put down my stuff first. After two hours of travelling, Chen Ge was indeed more than a bit tired. As he opened the door, the smell of mildew hit him in the nose. The room had probably been vacant for a long time because the place was covered with dust, and the bed was overgrown with some mysterious looking fungus. It felt strange under Chen Ge's touch.

Is this bed even usable? Before Chen Ge even placed his backpack down, he heard a loud crash coming from next door. It sounded like a plate had fallen and shattered. Chen Ge closed the door and stuck his ear to the wall, trying to eavesdrop. Soon enough, the sound of the limping man cursing came. In his anger, he let out several foreign curses, and based on his accent, the man sounded like he was not a local.

The old man mumbled weakly in reply. The limping man continued scolding for several minutes before he stopped, but what happened next confused Chen Ge. The volume of the television was increased.

What's going on? What is he doing? Why did he increase the television's volume? Chen Ge tried to listen for more clues, but all he could hear was the television. He soon gave up. So be it. In any case, I should be more worried about myself; I doubt I'll be able to get any sleep tonight.

Chen Ge placed his backpack on the table and took out the penknife, placing it in his pocket. The online complaint mentioned the existence of blood stains behind the paint and the presence of a horrible smell at night. However, I've searched all the information available on Ping An Apartments online, and there was no mention of any murders that happened here.

Then again, there had to be some kind of secret hidden at Ping An Apartments for it to have been selected as the mission venue by the black phone. He pulled out the multi-purpose hammer to knock and inspect every corner of the room; he came up with nothing. This was a very normal guest room; other than the sorry state it was in, there was nothing out of ordinary about it.

Since the landlord only allowed me to pick a room on the second floor, this means that the rooms on the second floor are mostly fine, or else he wouldn't have opened it up for rent. Therefore, to get to the bottom of this, I have to go take a look on the first or third floor. The Trial Mission was supposed to start at 11 pm. There were still three hours until then. Chen Ge did not want to waste time. He put the hammer away and slunk toward the door.

With his hand on the doorknob, he pushed it open. However, he stopped half-way. His palm started to sweat, and a chill ran down his spin.

The limping man was standing just outside his door; God only knew how long for!

The man also did not expect that Chen Ge would suddenly open the door. Both parties on either side of the door were equally shocked.

"Landlord, why are you standing at my door?" Chen Ge narrowed his eyes at the man; the more time he spent with the limping man, the uneasier he felt.

"Didn't you say you were thirsty? I came to give you this." The limping man placed the warm water bottle in his hands by Chen Ge's door, and his expression was as unnatural as it could be.

"Thank you." Chen Ge did not point out how weird he was acting and pulled the bottle into the room. "Is there anything else?"

"No, that's all. Do rest early." The limping man glanced inside the room and added as if to himself, "The corridors are not fitted with lights, so they're very dark at night; you'd better stay in your room after the sun sets."

He turned to leave. Chen Ge sighed in relief when the door next to him closed.

This landlord is easily angered and socially inept. Even though he has a limp, that doesn't mean that he's physically weak. He managed to shove the man earlier to the ground with just one kick; if anything, he should be quite powerful.

Chen Ge wasn't a particularly good sleuth; the only thing he could do was try to fit the situation at the apartments into the plot of all the past murder mysteries he had seen. *Born with a disability might have caused him to be bullied from a young age, and that corrupted his innocence. That could easily evolve into a mental sickness. F*ck, it sounds like he's the perfect candidate for a crazed murderer!*

Chen Ge put the bottle away, and a pressing question came into his mind. If the landlord is the murderer, then doesn't this mean I'm going to have to spend the whole night next to a murderer?

This thought made Chen Ge's skin crawl. Who knew, the man might spend the whole night standing outside his door, waiting to entrap him! To make matters worse, since he was the landlord, he had access to the space keys, which enable him to enter any room as he wished!

Chapter 16

Chapter 16: Don't Spend Your Night Here

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

"I shouldn't get ahead of myself. The landlord is suspicious, but that doesn't mean he's really the murderer." Chen Ge scratched his head and said to himself, "Perhaps I should talk to some of the tenants for more details."

Since Chen Ge arrived at the apartment, he had seen four different individuals: the woman hiding behind the door; Wang Qi, the person who pasted those missing person notices all over the place; the recalcitrant landlord; and the old man in the wheelchair.

...

"The old man stays with the landlord, so speaking to him is out of the question. The lady on the first floor weirds me out, so the only remaining candidate is Wang Qi. He should know some things about this apartment." Chen Ge placed the bottle in the room, locked the door behind him and went downstairs.

The voice-activated light came on, giving Chen Ge enough light to see Wang Qi hugging the stack of notices, walking down the corridor. He slipped a notice under each door, regardless of whether they were occupied or not. This naturally attracted Chen Ge's attention. Normally, missing person notices were posted at places with high traffic, but this man personally focused on these apartments, which seemed quite deserted.

Chen Ge followed behind Wang Qi quietly. It was not until Wang Qi finished slipping the last notice under the door that he said, "Brother, I can understand your feeling of having a loved one vanish, but you should stay strong and not do this kind of meaningless action to torture yourself."

Wang Qi slowly turned around upon hearing Chen Ge's voice. His clouded pupils seemed unable to find a point to focus on.

"Understand? None of you will ever understand how I feel, nor have I asked for your understanding..."

Chen Ge did not waste time going down this rabbit hole with him. He grabbed his phone and searched for the police report he made when his parents disappeared several months ago. "I'm not lying to you. My parents suddenly disappeared half a year ago, and at the beginning, I was feeling down in the dumps, too."

Looking at the picture saved in the phone, Wang Qi was silent for a long time before he said, "I empathize with your situation, but our circumstances are different. My fiancé will return; I can feel that she hasn't gone far."

"Do you mind telling me your story? Considering we're somewhat in the same boat, perhaps I can help you," Chen Ge said. Weirdly enough, he found himself meaning what he said.

Wang Qi hesitated. Perhaps recalling that Chen Ge had helped him pick up his notice earlier, his gaze that fell on Chen Ge softened. "Thank you, but you won't be able to help me. You're a nice young man, so listen to my advice, run away while you still can. Don't try to spend a night here!"

"I've already paid. You'll have to give me a more convincing reason if you want me to pack up and leave." Chen Ge's purpose there was to complete the Trial Mission. If he surrendered, he would lose the opportunity to unlock the Murder by Midnight scenario forever.

"Is your life more important or your money?" Wang Qi looked about them, and after making sure there was no peeping eyes, he lowered his voice to say, "Everyone here knows there have been murders in this building before."

"I've heard a thing or two about that, but I failed to find any information on it on the internet; I suspect that's merely a rumor," Chen Ge replied.

"Previously, this building was called Fu An Apartments; it was after the incident that the name changed to Ping An Apartments. The murders were big news at the time, and until now, they haven't been solved. The will of the dead hasn't been appeased, so they appear at their place of death every day at midnight," Wang Qi said. It sounded like he really believed it.

"You still believe ghost stories like that at an age like ours?" Chen Ge smiled awkwardly. Internally, he was incredibly nervous because he knew better than anyone how real the other world was. If possible, he really did not want to have any more encounters with these spirits.

“Initially, I did not believe it either... that is until the day my fiancé disappeared around this area.” Wang Qi pulled on his hair out of frustration, his fatigue plain as day.

“Why would your fiancé come to a place like this in the first place?” Chen Ge was intrigued. The thing that happened to this Wang Qi’s fiancé was curiously similar to what happened to his parents.

“To be honest, I don’t really know. In fact, I had not even heard of this apartment before her disappearance. I got the place’s name from the police; they told me it was at this place that all clues were lost.” Wang Qi’s hands relaxed, and several strands of hair hung listlessly between his fingers. “I’ve run out of ideas, and that’s why I moved in here.”

“Then, have you discovered anything?”

Wang Qi’s lips fell open, but before he could say anything, he suddenly stopped himself. Instead, he reached into his pocket to pull out his phone to type something on it.

“My fiancé has been kidnapped by the people who live here!”

Chen Ge was dumbfounded reading the typed message; he had not expected this development. “Brother, a kidnapping and a disappearance are two very different thing.”

Wang Qi shushed Chen Ge, telling him to be quiet. He turned his back toward the corridor and flipped his phone over to show Chen Ge. Chen Ge saw the messages in the phone inbox, and his eyes slowly widened with shock.

There was a message from Wang Qi’s fiancé in his phone!

The content was simple, it only had two words—‘Save me!’ However, the most spine-chilling discovery was the message was sent at 2 am last night.

“Someone who should have disappeared sent you a SOS message in the middle of the night?” After the initial shock, Chen Ge quickly calmed down. “Then, why didn’t you go to the police with this message? Obviously, your fiancé is still alive.”

“You might not believe me when I tell you this, but I receive this message from my fiancé every night after midnight. The content is always the same, but the key point is every time after I wake up, the message will have miraculously disappeared like it never really happened.” Wang Qi pointed at his bloodshot eyes. “To preserve this message, I haven’t closed my eyes for 24 hours already.”

“The message will disappear once you fall asleep?” This was the first time Chen Ge had heard something as curious as that.

“I know you think I’m crazy, but everything I’ve said is the truth.” Wang Qi leaned against the wall for support as he pocketed his phone. “More inexplicable things have happened to me. For example, my fiancé’s stuff curiously appears in my room without warning; it’s like she’s reminding me to go look for her.”

When Wang Qi said the last sentence, Chen Ge’s eyelids twitched. Based on his experience from the past few days, Wang Qi’s fiancé had not disappeared but befallen an accident and transformed into a ghost. She was haunting Wang Qi; that was the only logical explanation, provided the man had not been lying to him.

“My fiancé disappeared around this apartment building, and my life has been changed by this apartment building. Listen to me, this place is cursed. It’s the home of many evil ghosts and specters. Misfortune befalls those who get too close, so leave when you still can.” It seemed that Wang Qi had not uttered so many words at one go in a very long time, for his face was stark-white as if the conversation had taken a great toll out on him.

Chapter 17

Chapter 17: Fu An Apartments

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

From a stranger's perspective, Wang Qi might have appeared to be too insistent in chasing the newcomer away. Therefore, Chen Ge did not promise the man anything; if anything, after listening to Wang Qi's story, he had a sneaking suspicion that the man was hiding something.

"I've told you everything I know, and there's still time to leave. When the clock strikes twelve, the apartment will turn into something else." After saying that, Wang Qi brushed the dust away from his clothes and turned to leave.

...

It was not until Wang Qi's shadow disappeared among the darkness of the night that Chen Ge came to. His original intention was to obtain more information from the tenants about the building, but now, he ended up with more question than answers.

That man sure is a curious character, but I can't tell whether he's crazy or not. Recalling Wang Qi's pair of cloudy eyes that had not focused once throughout their conversation, Chen Ge felt uncomfortable. The pain and tiredness in the man's eyes could not be faked. But it does seem like he loves his fiancé dearly.

As Chen Ge went back to his room, he paused when he passed the woman's room on the first floor. He hesitated before knocking on the room.

"Hey, fresh blood!" The woman's room door remained unmoved, but to Chen Ge's surprise, the door to the room directly opposite from hers fell open. A lanky man was leaning against the open door. He looked to be in his thirties, and the man's appearance was very unkempt. His beard was almost joined to his hair, and the back of his hand had a tattoo of a peony.

"And you are?" Chen Ge turned around with alarm.

"The man who was spreading the missing person notice around is not even a tenant of this building; there's something wrong about him up here." The thin man pointed at his temple. "Don't believe a word out that comes out of his mouth, and try not to get too close to him."

It was the first time Chen Ge had seen this man, and even though the man's appearance left much to be desired, the man's mannerisms were the most normal of all the characters he had met at the apartment.

"The man's actions sure are weird, but perhaps that is because he was too devastated from the loss of his fiancé."

"Did he tell you his fiancé disappeared around this apartment?"

"Yes."

"Did he tell you he receive that information from the police and that's why he has been searching for her here?"

"Yes."

The man chuckled mirthlessly before saying, "I've lived here for nine months already, and I've seen no trace of the police coming here. The mad man is lying to you; I'm sure you don't believe his talk of ghosts, right?"

He pulled out a cigarette to dangle on his lips. "There are no ghosts in this world! At most, it's someone pretending to be a ghost. In any case, it's getting late, so you'd better return to your room."

Chen Ge thanked the man and turned to leave. As he wandered up the steps, he thought to himself, Obviously, one of them is lying, but which is it?

Lost in his thoughts, Chen Ge did not realize he had walked up to the third floor. The faded number was printed on the corner of the wall, and the voice-activated light above his head flickered on and off. Chen Ge looked down the long corridor and realized this whole floor was in a state of complete disrepair. The floor was thick with grime, and there were signs of burning everywhere. The coating of the wall was peeling off like skin, and underneath it were lines that looked like thick cuts.

Why have they left the third floor unfixed? Not enough budget, or is there a more sinister reason?

The voice-activated light soon went off, and Chen Ge was submerged in a world of darkness. Due to his work at the Haunted House, Chen

Ge was used to working in the darkness. The sudden blindness did not unhinge him. He pulled out his phone and was about to turn the flashlight on when he spotted a shadow dash past the darkened corridor.

“Who’s there?” The flashlight on the phone lit up the third floor, but the shadow was nowhere to be seen. Chen Ge was about to investigate further when he heard footsteps coming up from further down the stairs.

It’s the landlord? If he was spotted by the easily-irked landlord loitering on third floor, he might get chased off the premises. Chen Ge thought about it, pocketed his phone, and stealthily retreated down to the second floor.

When he turned the corner on the stairwell, Chen Ge saw a rotund and short man coming out of a room on the second floor, holding a basin. The man was humming a happy tune, but when he saw Chen Ge, his face fell, and he immediately ran away from the scene.

What is the meaning of that? Do I look that scary? After returning to his room, Chen Ge lay in bed, hugging his backpack. It feels like there’s no normal individual in this apartment; every single one of them could be the party responsible for the murders.

When those words rolled off his tongue, Chen Ge suddenly sat up in bed. Wait a minute, the mission told me to find the party responsible for the murders, but the term ‘party’ can be both singular and plural! In that case, could there be more than one murderer? After all, if there is more than one murder, the chances of multiple murderers will drastically increase. I need to get more information on that case from years ago.

Chen Ge pulled out his phone. His conversation with Wang Qi was not for nothing. He now had the important information that before it was called Ping An Apartments, this place was called Fu An Apartments.

He keyed in Jiujiang Fu An Apartments in the search box, and several pages later, numerous spine-chilling headlines jumped out at him.

“A family of four brutally murdered! The murderer has disappeared into thin air?”

“Accident or homicide? The truth of the fire that razed Fu An Apartments.”

“Case within a case, bodies hidden inside the building unearthed!”

Reading through the information on Fu An Apartments, Chen Ge felt his skin chilled. This was not fiction; they happened in real life, and he was currently living at the crime scene.

Five years ago, a neighbor saw the smog rising from Fu An Apartments, so he called the fire brigade. The firefighters soon put out the fire and started to investigate the source of the fire as well as gauge the extent of damage.

Initially, they thought this was going to be another accidental fire case, but as the investigation continued, more curious evidence started to surface.

The cement walls were cracked, the surface of cracked window was small, and the smog blackened the ceiling; these were all signs that the temperature of the fire was high, and it spread very fast.

There were several possible initial locations found at the building, and they were all far apart from each other, quintessential of an arson case.

Therefore, the nature of the investigation changed. After the police stepped in, they soon discovered four burnt bodies among the ruin of the fire. They believed these were the bodies of the family of four who operated the rental apartment.

This case created quite a buzz at the time. The police tried their best to solve the case, but the fire had destroyed most of the evidence. They combed the place but could not locate the evidence of a fifth person much, less catch the culprit.

The apartment was sealed for a whole year, after which ownership of the estate was passed on to the owner's father, and it was then that Fu An Apartments changed to Ping An Apartments.

The family of four was burned to the death, and the culprit still hasn't been caught. No wonder people say this place is haunted. After knowing more about the case, Chen Ge felt slightly more grounded because at least he knew what he was dealing with.

A curious detail on the reports stuck out at him. The articles all confirm that at the time of passing, the owner was already 41 years old. The apartment was later passed on to his father, and theoretically and logically speaking, the real current owner of this place should be in his 60s or 70s already.

Chapter 18

Chapter 18: Livestream

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

There was only one person who fit the criteria: the old man sharing the room with the ‘landlord’.

This is weird; according to the news articles, the owner should be an old man, but the landlord who received me is at most middle-aged. Chen Ge stood up to press his ear to the wall. The television on the other side of the wall was still blaring. Currently, it was playing some random commercial.

...

Normally, wouldn't the viewer switch the channel during commercials? But they've been watching the commercials for several minutes already. Chen Ge tried to lean closer into the wall. Perhaps, I've missed something.

He cleared his mind and tried to rearrange all the clues he had so far. After I entered the room, I heard the sound of a plate shattering next door. Then, the landlord started to curse and scold the old man. It continued until the volume of the television was raised. Since the old man was incapacitated, it had to be the landlord who increased the television volume, but the question is, why?

Chen Ge narrowed his eyes as a speculation appeared in his mind. Is the landlord ill-treating the old man? The television noise is to cover up the sound of assault?

The more he thought about it, the more possible it sounded in his mind. The shattering plate occurred the moment I moved in; isn't that too much of a coincidence? Could that have been an SOS signal from the old man? After all, it was merely a broken plate; there's no reason for the landlord to get so angered. Perhaps, he was afraid that the sound might have attracted my unwanted attention!

But why should he be afraid? And why would the old man call for help?

Suddenly, another detail that seemed unimportant to Chen Ge earlier entered in his mind. When the landlord was scolding the old man, he let slip several foreign curses.

The family that passed away were all locals, but this landlord is not from Jiujiang; he shouldn't be blood-related to the old man or his family.

Normally speaking, the man wouldn't leave his assets to be taken care of by a stranger, unless... the limping man has taken over this place and is holding the old man captive! If that's really the case, either he's a caretaker who got too greedy or he's the actual murderer!

Either way, it did not bode well for Chen Ge.

Chen Ge's fists tightened. That also explains why he was eavesdropping at my door earlier; he wanted to find out how much I've learned!

Chen Ge's forehead was sweaty from all the thinking. After all, he wasn't a real detective; all he had were references to plots that he had seen on television before.

What should I do now? Rush directly into the room next door to whack the landlord until he faints? No, that's too rash; if my speculation is wrong, that'll land me in hot water. With the mallet in his hand and the penknife stuck in his pocket, Chen Ge paced around the room.

Give the landlord a test to confirm his identity? No, that's too risky, what if I tip my hand too soon? After all, he might have other accomplices, and I'm here all alone. If I'm targeted, my life will be in danger. Furthermore, I don't really have any real proof; everything is just speculation. Also, I'm pretty sure the main purpose I'm here is to find the murderer from four years ago, so maybe I should focus on that instead.

Chen Ge was caught in a conundrum. Suddenly, the television next door was switched off, and the place became eerily quiet.

What's going on? He opened the door slightly and lowered himself to the ground. He peeked out at the door next to him. There was no light coming out from underneath the door.

Sleeping at 8 pm? Chen Ge crawled to the landlord's room door holding the mallet. In an out of body moment, he realized how suspicious he must have looked then. He turned around to make sure no one was watching him before pocketing the mallet and crawling back to his room.

Then again, my speculation might not be a hundred percent accurate, if only I had a professional to help me with the analysis. Chen Ge lay in bed and pulled out his phone. In his contact list, other than Xu Wan, he had not spoken to many of the others before.

Jesus Christ, I sure am loyal.

Chen Ge thought about it. Among the people that he knew, the only person who was slightly related to investigation was the young man who had fainted inside his Haunted House—He San.

In any case, a medical student should be better at logic and analysis than I am. He entered the video-sharing app and realized he had about twenty private messages. He clicked open a random one and saw it was a personal message from a studio that was based on the website. The person expressed interest in having him join the team.

Is this person some kind of talent scout? Chen Ge did not have time to deal with that right then. He scrolled through the many messages to look for He San's ID and tossed the invitation out of his mind.

However, several minutes later, the studio sent him another message.

"You there? We've seen your video; it has plenty of potential.

"We were wondering if you would like to cooperate with us.

"We can contact the top streamers of our platform on your behalf to help increase your popularity and exposure.

"Doing this alone is going to be very difficult; after all, most streamers on the net rely on teams and networking.

"This is a very good offer, so do consider it.

"You there?"

The endless pop-ups annoyed Chen Ge. He was busy trying to survive a night in the apartment that housed a murderer who had killed four individuals in cold blood four years ago, and these people were busy trying to sell him their service? He finally replied, "AFK."

"Young man, you sure are funny. Give our studio serious consideration; you don't need to do anything beyond adding our studio's logo to your videos. In return, we will provide you with better exposure to help you gain viewership."

"I'm sorry, but I'm currently not interested in something like that." Chen Ge felt his reply was polite already; if this was someone else, they probably would have cursed the person out before blacklisting the studio.

“Your short video has the possibility to go viral, but you have to understand that it is just a possibility. A platform like this has an average of 1,000,000 uploads each day, and you’re just one of the more lucky ones. Nowadays, people are in for fast-food entertainment; they don’t have the patience to wait. Every moment, there are fresh and more exciting things to pull their attention away. If you don’t carefully manage your business, your video will soon be submerged by a sea of fresh attractions.”

“Talk about it later, I’m currently busy with something important.”
Chen Ge finally found He San’s ID.

“What is more important than earning money? If you are still hesitating, perhaps we can have some other form of cooperation. For example, we’re more than willing to offer good money to buy your content and video-shooting technique.”

Chen Ge was irked, so he blacklisted the individual and messaged He San.

To his surprise, He San replied within a few seconds. “Boss, I’ve been waiting for you to release a new video!”

“Wait a minute, I have a more important question to ask you.” After getting He San’s phone number, he called the young man and explained the whole situation to him in a whispered tone.

Chapter 19

Chapter 19: Rising Popularity

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Afraid that the landlord next door might overhear him, Chen Ge lowered his voice to a whisper, which created an unintended tense atmosphere. After he was done, on the other end of the phone, He San was stunned. This honest young man who just came to the city from the countryside to attend medical school did not expect his first conversation with an online friend to be so freaking exciting.

“You’re currently at that cursed apartment?”

...

“Yes.”

“And the landlord next door might be the killer from several years ago?”

“Yes.”

“Wait a minute, this is too much for me to process at once, let me think about it first.”

This created an interesting contrast between the situations on both side of the phone; one was wrapped in his warm blanket, chewing on KFC, watching some online videos, while the other was caught in a haunted apartment, heavy with gloom and anguish.

“Boss, I still think you should report this to the police. Granted, you don’t have any actual proof, but compared to the offense of making a fake report, your life is more important.”

He San was merely looking out for him, but Chen Ge had his own consideration. This Murder by Midnight was a mission given to him by the black phone. He had to stay there overnight for the mission to be a success. Interference from the police would most likely ruin his mission. Since it involved the unlocking of a new scenario, surrendering just like that felt like a great waste. “It’s still not yet time to involve the police.”

“Mainly, it’s your safety that you should be concerned about... Boss, how about this?” He San paused before adding, “Turn on your phone’s GPS triangulation and try to keep your phone on throughout the night. I’ll pay attention to the sounds from your side, and if there’s anything weird, I’ll call the police immediately.”

That was not a bad idea. Chen Ge looked at his phone. He still had not exited the video-sharing app, and there was an advertisement for a Mukbang stream going on.

Suddenly an idea came into Chen Ge’s mind. “Why don’t I open a livestream at the haunted apartment? If anything dangerous happens to me, the viewers will be able to help me alert the police, and the recording of the livestream will be the best evidence. Of course, I hope for everything to go well, and with this method, I’ll be able to attract more viewers to my page and thus advertise my Haunted House.”

The short video from last night had brought Chen Ge about 1,000 new followers and consequently the number of visitors at his Haunted House the next day had doubled. This was a workable method. Furthermore, the ultimate goal of him entering the haunted apartment was to earn the mission reward to improve his Haunted House. If starting a livestream was able to ensure his safety while he was conducting his mission as well as increase his popularity and viewership, then why not?

“Even though I don’t have the budget to advertise my stuff all over the place, I can rely on livestreams and short videos to attract people’s attention.”

What Chen Ge was lacking in were platform, channels, and experience; in terms of content, he was not at all worried. Even though the personnel from the studio earlier was annoying, they were right. Modern entertainment was about instant gratification. What could be more exciting and intense than an overnight stay at a haunted apartment and a possible tussle with a crazed murderer?

Viewership followed content, and compared to other streamers, Chen Ge had a unique leg-up. All of his content and the stuff that he experienced was all real; there was no plot or script, and even he had no idea what might happen next. In a way, the livestream was merely a recording of him completing the mission dispensed by the black phone.

“He San, I’m ending the call. Come directly to my livestream, the stream's ID will be similar to the ID on my personal page.”

After hanging up, Chen Ge turned on his phone's triangulation system and set 991 as his quick dial. After everything was done, he selected the livestream option on the video-sharing app.

Videos nowadays were normally only several ten seconds long, meaning they were hard to monetize. Therefore, to improve fan loyalty and more directly monetize follower numbers, most streams would livestream when they were not preparing to release a new video.

Since short videos were easily shared, they could be used to attract the attention of random viewers. Then, with livestreams, those viewers could be turned into followers if the steamer's content was interesting enough. Incidentally, Chen Ge had stumbled across the most correct way of establishing one's online brand.

“Overnight at a haunted house! Your host, an intrepid explorer! Exposing the parts of the world that are normally hidden from sight!” Chen Ge used several exclamation marks in his title to separate his livestream from others.

To be honest though, he need not have done that. The livestream function attached to the video-sharing app was ultimately different from a streaming website. The categorization was limited and mostly involved talking to scantily-dressed girls. Chen Ge's livestream was like a pile of cow dung amid a bed of roses; it was incredibly hard for him to not get noticed.

After opening the livestream, his fans that followed him would be notified, and similarly, there would be an announcement at his profile page.

In less than few seconds, the first batch of viewers arrived.

He San was the first to message. “Boss, you're serious? You're really going to livestream this?”

Death to all Men posted, “You're the creep who uploaded that video yesterday night? Good, because I'm here to claim your life!”

“F*ck! Sis, what happened to you? Calm down, maybe we can talk this out.”

“Creep host, subbed,” posted I'm a Little Green Worm.

“Any subs know what the content of this stream is?”

“Do you not know how to read? The title is right there!”

The moment Chen Ge began the livestream, those who were waiting for his video showed themselves, and the viewership of his room slowly climbed.

“Guys, I think there’s a misunderstanding.” Chen Ge put his mallet away and turned to the camera seriously. “The video from last night wasn’t a joke; I experienced it myself. You can go look for the full video on supernatural forums if you do not believe me. The footage has not been tempered; the thing in the mirror is real. I know that is hard to believe, but if you follow me, I’ll unveil the hidden side of this world to you little by little.”

“Hello, 001, I’m sorry, but what is the number for mental hospital? I believe I’ve found a runaway patient.”

“I do love the way you bullsh*t.”

“Lee Ming! I know you’re watching livestream, go buy some supper for me. Fried noodles, no chili, thanks!”

“Fu San Mental Hospital Room 31, subbing to the host! In support of our friend finding a new job!”

Several notices appeared on screen, and all of them showed disbelief at Chen Ge’s promise. The man wasn’t fazed. “I don’t mind if you think I’m crazy because you’ll soon see how wrong you all are.”

The viewership continued to climb. Chen Ge turned to look at the night sky that was darkening. He lit a cigarette and started explaining the bloody history of Fu An Apartments to his viewers.

Chapter 20

Chapter 20: Crime Scene

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

A mysterious fire, a disappeared killer, Chen Ge realized he had a talent for storytelling. He managed to summarize the many news articles he had read and combined them with his own hypotheses, creating a believable and intriguing tale for his viewers.

“That is what has happened. To search for inspiration for my Haunted House, I decided to stay overnight at this cursed apartment, but I came across a startling discovery: every single tenant of this apartment has something off about them, and I suspect that the murderer from years ago is masquerading as one of them!” Chen Ge snuffed his cigarette off and turned to address the camera.

...

“Interesting, so a real life murder mystery. Anyone have a brilliant idea as to who the real killer is?”

I’m a Little Green Worm mocked, “Host, you sure know how to bullsh*t, but we’re not that gullible!”

“Jiujiang City’s Fu An Apartments, I just looked it up on the internet; the host doesn’t seem like he’s lying.”

He San showed some support. “I believe the host.”

However, I’m a Little Green Worm was not easily convinced. “Even if the host isn’t lying about the case, how do we know that he is currently at the cursed apartment? As he said earlier, the place was burned down. But take a good look at the room he’s room. The wall is clean and painted, and all the furniture looks useable albeit a little bit old; does this look like a cursed apartment to any of you?”

“I won’t lie to you guys about that. You want proof? Easy.” Chen Ge moved the make-up counter away and pulled his penknife. He scratched away a small corner of the paint on the wall. “The name of a building can be changed, and the place can be refurnished and repainted, but certain things cannot be removed or hidden.”

He removed the freshest layer of wall paint to reveal the brickwork underneath, which was charred black. "This is evidence that this place was the crime scene of the fire."

"No, I'm interested in why you would bring a mallet and a knife to stay at a hostel... for self-defense?" Death to all Man raised an obvious concern.

"Host is ruining the wall for no reason. One minute of silence for the poor landlord."

"How much did you pay for a room like this? It doesn't even have a television."

Looking at the chat log, Chen Ge could not help but sigh. "Guys, can you not focus on the irrelevant points? How about some respect? I'm putting my life on the line to do this livestream for you!"

Death to All Man donated one dollar. "One-dollar donation as sign of respect."

Chen Ge was helpless dealing with the online trolls, but at least they didn't leave him. "Fine, let's get back to business. I've met six different individuals since I arrived at this apartment. The first person I met was a woman who might have a little mental problem; when I arrived, she smiled wickedly at me unprompted. This unhinged me slightly, but since I have had no further interaction with this woman, there's nothing else I can say..."

Chen Ge introduced all of the tenants to his viewers, and when he was done, he added his own analysis. "In terms of motive, the landlord is definitely the most suspicious, but his movement speed is hindered due to his limp. So, viewed from this perspective, the tattoo guy on first floor and the fat man on second floor have the greatest possibility of being the killer. Of course, one can't ignore the woman and the seemingly weak Wang Qi."

"Basically, you've come up with nothing," Death to All Man surmised. "Based on your analysis, I've further suspicion that the real killer is the old man in the wheelchair; after all, he stood to gain the most from the fire."

"That might not be that implausible. After all, the old man might be incapacitated now, but that doesn't mean that he was the same four years ago. Furthermore, the crime we're talking about is a fire; that doesn't require physical prowess, so the old man is a valid suspect."

“Also, have you considered the possibility of the old man faking his disability? Oftentimes, the most unlikely one is the killer.”

“Actually, I have more suspicion toward the woman on the first floor. She smiled at the host, meaning she wanted to communicate something to the host. Host, can you still remember the curve of the woman’s lips and the degree to which her mouth was open when she smiled at you? I’ll help you analyze it from the perspective of psychology.”

“I can’t...”

As the interest of the viewers rose, so did the popularity of his livestream. Chen Ge looked at the busy chat log and sighed internally. He thought to himself, These people are hopeless. Looks like I’ll have to go out to look for more clues before I can come to any conclusion.

He placed his phone before him, adding, “I did try to look around the building before starting the livestream. I discovered while most of the apartment’s first and second floor has been fixed up, parts of the third floor have been left as they were four years ago. In a little bit, I will go up to conduct a closer examination; hopefully, we’ll be able to come up with some useful clues.”

“The place is kept like it was four years ago? That’s kinda... sick.”

“The ghosts of the families have been lingering because the case hasn’t been solved?”

“Investigating a haunted apartment at night? The host sure is insane!”

“Of course, the host is the operator of a Haunted House after all! Let me tell you, last time a bunch of us visited his Haunted House to demand reparation for his scary video, but we got our backsides handed to us instead. Two of the bravest among our group went in; one came out crying inconsolably, and the other fainted on the spot.”

“Wait, what happened to them? And what about those who are not as brave?”

“Have you lost your mind? Do you think the rest of us entered his Haunted House after we saw what happen?”

“That... You’re right.”

“LOL!” commented He San.

The chat had completely derailed, but Chen Ge didn't mind it that much. He pocketed his penknife, and with one hand holding the phone, the other holding the mallet, he walked to his room door.

Learning from his previous lesson, Chen Ge squatted down to look at the shadows underneath the door and confirmed that there was no one standing on the other side, before lightly pushing the door open.

After he closed and locked the door, Chen Ge yanked one of his hairs out to stick it into the keyhole. This way, if someone entered his room when he was not there, he would know because the hair would have been pushed further into the keyhole.

After everything was prepared, Chen Ge walked to the stairwell.

His steps were light to not activate the light. The light on his phone guiding his every step. As he climbed up the stairs, the walls on each side became noticeably darker in color, and there was an indescribable smell in the air.

When he reached the third floor, Chen Ge turned on the flashlight function on his phone. He leaned against the wall and focused.

When he first accidentally walked up to the third floor, he had noticed a dark shadow flash before him. The shape of the shadow had looked like a human.

Be it a ghost or a man, I have to be careful. The flashlight revealed to Chen Ge the crime scene from four years ago. Looking at the scratch marks that seemed to embed themselves into the wall, Chen Ge's grip around the mallet tightened.

Ping An Apartments had a unique architectural style. It only had one staircase, and it was on the right side of the building, giving the impression that the corridor leading to the left side was suspiciously long.

As he walked down the corridor, he felt a chilliness tingle his spine. Even with his back to the wall, Chen Ge felt weirdly exposed.

If the starting point of the fire was the third floor, then all this wouldn't have been preserved, so the killer probably didn't come up to the third floor at the time.

Chen Ge continued down the darkened corridor. The doors on his either side had been warped by fire, exposing singed and ruined rooms.

Navigating the trash that littered the floor, Chen Ge scurried into the closest room that he could get into.

Chapter 21

Chapter 21: Party of More Than One?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The small room had a leak in the ceiling, and the windows were barred, causing damp to seep into the walls and a festering smell from the heavy moldy to fill the room. It was uncomfortable. Chen Ge walked into the room to take a closer look at the wooden planks that barred the windows. They looked surprisingly unworn, suggesting they were a recent addition.

This is just a common guest room. The ruined furniture had been removed, and the room was barren; there was basically nothing in sight. Then again, years have passed. Even if there was evidence, it wouldn't have been preserved for so long.

...

Chen Ge exited the room and continued down the darkened corridor. Most of the rooms were empty. The corridor was choked full of trash and abandoned paraphernalia, making it difficult for him to navigate.

A person's trash can often reflect their lifestyle and attitude; perhaps this litter will provide the clues that I need.

After setting a new goal, Chen Ge trudged through the rubbish in spite of the disgusting smell. About one hour later, he did come up with some interesting findings.

Why are there toy dolls? There are no children among the people I have seen, so who do these belong to? Chen Ge spent another hour sifting through the trash, and he ended up with four ragdolls. Submerged underneath the sea of trash, the four ragdolls would not have captured Chen Ge's attention if not for the fact he was a toy design major.

The four dolls had probably been left there for quite some time already, because they were covered with dirty stains, and mold had infested certain parts. The toys were so fragile that if Chen Ge was not careful, he could easily pull out clumps of dirty wool.

Chen Ge studied them closely and realized even though the dolls were all of different types, they came from the same manufacturer.

Could it be that the toys were left behind by the ex-tenants of Ping An Apartments? However, Chen Ge very soon vetoed this possibility. The low possibility of a family with children moving into a run-down apartment like this aside, even if there was one, it was unlikely for one family to own four dolls at the same time; after all, they came from the same manufacturer. Furthermore, based on the design and stylings, these were manufactured several years ago.

The toy market updated constantly. Before he took over the Haunted House, Chen Ge had worked at a toy company, so he did know a thing or two about the toy market.

If these weren't left behind by the new tenants, then it's possible they belonged to the original tenants of Fu An Apartments, Chen Ge speculated. The original owner of the apartment had two daughters, so if I'm not mistaken, these should belong to them.

However, if that was true, another question needed answering. This place was almost completely ruined by the fire, so how did these four dolls survive?

Is it a coincidence or... did someone purposely keep them at a place that would be safe from the fire? Chen Ge felt like he was on the right track. The only person who could that... is the killer themselves! But why would the killer risk their life to protect these four dolls? Are these items of importance to them?

The zipper on the back of the doll was all rusted, so Chen Ge tore open the fabric directly. Among the cotton, he discovered a card. It fit perfectly inside his palm. It was a love letter. The action was so cheesy that Chen Ge cringed on the person's behalf. Sticking love letter inside a doll? Goodness, that sure is cheesy!

If this was the murderer, then he was definitely a shy and reserved man. He did not have the courage to confess in person, so he gifted the girl the doll, hoping that she would discover the secret that was hidden within.

Compelled by curiosity, Chen Ge tore open another two dolls. Each of them contained a card, and the content was almost similar to the first one.

However, when he tore open the last doll, a chill ran down his spine.

Instead of a love letter, the cotton was filled with shredded pieces of paper, and if placed together, they all read—GO TO HELL!

Confession of love for some reason turned into curses. What happened in between, Chen Ge had no way of telling.

These should all have been left behind by the killer, so they are crucial evidence. He picked out several paper pieces and shoved them in his pocket. As he was about to walk deeper into the house, the voice-activated light at the staircase suddenly came on!

*Sh*t! Someone's coming!* Desperate to escape, Chen Ge turned off the flashlight on his phone, grabbed the dolls, and ran into the guest room that was closest to him. Holding his breath, Chen Ge hid behind the door and looked out at what was happening through the crack between the door and its frame.

The sound of footsteps became clearer, and the conversation between a male and a female floated up the stairs.

"We have to move that thing out soon; we can't delay anymore."

"The new tenant has been up to the third floor already. Thankfully, he turned back at the staircase or else he would have spotted me."

"I know, there have been more and more new people coming here recently; we have to deal with that thing as soon as we can."

"Agreed."

"Inform everyone, and tell them to be prepared. We'll dig it out tonight and bury it up the hills."

The person was carrying an old-fashioned oil lamp, and with the light's help, Chen Ge managed to see that the two people talking were the landlord and the woman from the first floor.

Why would they come up to the third floor in the middle of the night?

Chen Ge pushed himself against the wall to ensure they would not see him.

Not long after that, the tattoo guy and the fat man whom he had seen earlier all came up the stairs. They were all wrapped up in black clothes and carried equipment like wires, a gunny sack, and cleavers.

What are they up to?

The small group stood in the corridor, and it felt like they were in the middle of an argument.

The fat man, who was walking at the back, had his head drooped while he groused, “Do we really have to do this? If we dig it out, our fingerprints will easily get left behind; things will be incredibly hard to explain then.”

“And you think it’s easy to explain now?” The landlord glared at the fat man. “Stop complaining and start moving.”

“I think we should call the cops.” The fat man stood where he was.

The tattoo guy walked over to grip the man’s collar, hissing into his face, “Have you lost your mind? Do you want to die so badly? If we involve the police, we’ll be their prime suspects! During the investigation, your hit-and-run and our illegal occupation of the old man’s property will all be exposed!”

“Honey, calm down.” The woman walked over to place her hand on the tattoo guy’s arm. “We’re all in the same boat, so instead of turning on each other, we’d better get moving.”

“None of us have a clean record, and it was not easy for us to finally find ourselves a comfortable lair. If any of you dare get any other ideas, you’d better watch out.” The landlord tossed the iron hammer in his hands to the fat man. “You go and take the first crack.”

“Me?” Sweat covered the fat man’s forehead immediately. His face blanched as he dragged the mallet across the floor.

As he continued to observe, the more Chen Ge felt something was wrong. What are they planning to dig up?

The fat man walked to the deepest part of the staircase. He moved the trash to the side and, under the other tenants’ careful scrutiny, parted the curtain that was originally hidden behind the mountain of trash.

It was a fortified cement wall, and embedded inside the wall was a female body that was facing away from the group.

Chapter 22

Chapter 22: Murder by Midnight

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge clamped his mouth to prevent himself from making a noise. When he saw the body, he immediately messaged He San. "Call the police now!"

There was no light in the staircase, and a door stood between them and Chen Ge, so the viewers had no idea what was happening. Then again, Chen Ge had no time for them at a moment like that. He leaned closer to the crack, with nary the courage to even blink.

...

The body is hidden inside the wall, and that's what they're trying to dig up, Chen Ge thought to himself. He did not dare make any sudden movement. He was in a very vulnerable position; the few tenants were only several steps away from him. They would have spotted him if they turned around to walk into the room he was hiding in.

"Are you playing with sand at the beach? Put some muscle into it!" The landlord cursed as he walked over to the body. He laid the gunny sack open on the ground and squatted down to clear away the cement around the body. Probably afraid that they might wake up the other tenants, their movements were light and didn't make any sound.

The wall was pried open, and the cement dust fell all over the place. Everyone was sweating profusely, but it was unclear whether it was a nervous sweat or sweat from the manual labor. They shared the work, but since this was the first time they had done something like this, everyone was still feeling a bit weirded out, which slowed down their progress considerably.

Ten minutes later, they finally managed to extricate the body from the wall and placed it inside the gunny sack.

"Fatty, you stay back to clean up the mess; the rest of us will take her up the hill to bury her." The landlord passed the hammer over as he gave the orders.

"I'm coming with you!" the rotund man said immediately. This whole exercise had drained him both physically and mentally; he didn't have the guts to be left all alone in the dark.

"Would you man up a little?" The landlord turned to say to the only woman of the group, "Then, Juan Er, you stay back to accompany him; we'll meet up at the same place later up on the hill."

Then he went down the stairs carrying the gunny sack with the tattooed man.

His footsteps were alternatively heavy and light on account of his limp. When he passed the room Chen Ge was hiding in, he suddenly stopped.

"Why is there so much cotton on the floor?"

Chen Ge's heart was at his throat when he heard that question from the landlord. When he tore the dolls open, some shredded cotton and paper pieces had inadvertently fallen on the floor. At the time, it had been too dark for him to notice them, and now, it was too late for him to retrieve it.

"It's probably just rubbish. We'll deal with it later, this thing is heavy; let's deal with the more important matter first," The tattooed guy who was behind him, urged. The landlord nodded, and the two continued on down the corridor and the stairs.

"Fatty, don't just stand there, start working." The woman and the fat man worked together to pick up all the trash and wiped away the blood stains that were left on the tools. Several minutes later, they also went down the stairs hauling a hug sack.

Their footsteps gradually disappeared. It was not until the third floor became totally quiet that Chen Ge dared to breathe. He was cautious as he leaned to look through the crack. The corridor was dark and empty. Everyone had left.

*F*ck! That scared the crap out of me.*

He waited for another three minutes. When he was sure they were not coming back, Chen Ge inched out from behind the door and walked out on tip-toes. To prevent discovery, he did not use his the phone. He placed his hand on the wall and slowly found his way forward.

Based on their conversation, yes, those people aren't totally innocent, but the female body in the wall doesn't seem like it has anything to do with them.

If anything, they were a certain kind of unlucky. After seizing the old man's property, they were left with a body in the wall to be dealt with. The first reaction for any normal individual under such circumstances would have been to call the police, but since they each had a crime they were hiding from, they could not do that. In the end, they had no choice but to help the real murderer keep this a secret, and now they even had to help the murderer bury the evidence.

No wonder the landlord reminded me multiple times to not wander around the building after dark.

After Chen Ge's eyes got used to the darkness, his speed increased. He could not wait to get out of the building. Chen Ge decided to give up on his backpack and directly went down to the first floor.

*F*ck!*

The front door was locked, meaning he was trapped inside the building.

These people still remembered to lock the door even when they were going out to bury a body? A twinge of fear curled up within Chen Ge's heart. The windows on the first floor are all fixed with anti-theft netting, and the ones on the third floor are all barred with wooden planks, so my only route of escape is through the windows on the second floor.

The longer he stayed inside the apartment, the more anxious he felt. Chen Ge clutched the mallet in his hand as he returned to the second floor. The corridor looked ominous in the dark like the gaping maw of a monster.

This is too quiet. Chen Ge's room was next to the landlord's, which was at the deepest end of the corridor. He was tense, afraid that any of the room door would suddenly open. Holding his breath, Chen Ge slid silently down the corridor to his room.

Thankfully, there were no surprises. If I tie the bedspread together, it should be long enough for me to jump out the window and reach the first floor. Chen Ge found his key and used his phone's torch to locate the keyhole. As he was about to stick the key in, his hand froze.

Where is the hair that I stuck in the keyhole?

His hair stood on end and fear swamped Chen Ge on all side. His limbs were frozen solid.

Someone has gone inside my room! They know I'm not in my room!

Chen Ge's breathing turned rapid; he felt like there was a piece of ice stuck in his lung.

When did they get in? After digging up the body? Or when they saw the cotton on the floor? In reality, the answer was not that important. Chen Ge took several steps back, and he gradually calmed down, staring at the closed door of his room. I can't go into the room; they're probably waiting inside to ambush me!

Chen Ge got used to the situation fast enough thanks to his powerful heart. He had to get out of that place as fast as he could or else he would be in mortal danger. Chen Ge did not make any noise as he took further steps back. He knew clearly, other than the windows on the second floor, there was no other exit out of the apartment.

Making as little noise as he could, Chen Ge retreated to the right most corner of the corridor, this was the place was the farthest from his room.

These tenants are far more dangerous than I expected. Whether I'll be able to survive tonight or not all depends on this gamble! Chen Ge gritted his teeth and raised his mallet to knock heavily on the door lock of the most right-hand side room.

The curious silence of Ping An Apartments was shattered. Chen Ge slammed on the lock like he was crazy. Following the loud bangs, the individuals that he had no interest of seeing at all appeared.

The door to room 208, the room that Chen Ge had rented, was shoved open. The tattooed guy and the landlord rushed out of it brandishing an iron hammer and a cleaver. They dashed at Chen Ge with scary expressions!

Please open!

The lock finally snapped under pressure, and without hesitation, Chen Ge kicked the room door open!

Chapter 23

Chapter 23: Real Killer

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The door slammed heavily on the wall as Chen Ge dashed into the room and yanked the window open.

*F*ck! It's so high!* Standing at the window, the drop was at least a three to four meters. Hasty footsteps echoed louder and louder, meaning the landlord and the tattooed guy were closing in on him.

...

Chen Ge did not have the luxury of time. He jumped out of the window, grabbing the sill by the ledge as one of his legs found purchase on the first-floor window's anti-theft steel netting.

"He must have seen us move the body!"

"We mustn't let him get away!"

The landlord's ugly mug appeared at the door. Flashing the cleaver in the air, he hissed, "You think you can escape?"

Chen Ge did not dare hesitate and let go instantly. His arms were scratched, and his clothes were torn by the netting as he slid down the wall. Chen Ge rolled as he landed to reduce the impact. As he straightened himself, he grabbed the mallet off the floor and ran toward the gate.

"Quick, grab him!" the landlord roared as he lobbed the cleaver at Chen Ge. Chen Ge felt something fly past him. Looking at the cleaver that was stuck deep into the grass, he shivered in fear.

If I fall into the hands of these people, they'll definitely kill me!

The apartment's front door swung open then, and the fat man and the woman, who had been waiting on the first floor, gave chase after him, each holding hedge clippers in their hands.

"Bunch of crazies!" Chen Ge ran as fast as he could. He shot like an arrow to the gate. Stepping on the newly changed lock, he climbed up the rusted gate. The apartment building was surrounded by a rather dense forest. In the dark, with no light, he could not even see where he was going. However, with the bunch of homicidal crazies chasing after him, Chen Ge had no choice but to brave the possibility of getting lost and head into the forest.

As he ran through the brush, the ray of flashlights occasionally cut through the darkness, and the cursing of the landlord and the tattooed guy came from behind him. Chen Ge did not even dare turn around; he only had one thought on his mind—escape!

His clothes were torn by the twigs and branches; his body was covered in mud and leaves. After fifteen minutes of full speed running, Chen Ge believed he had finally managed to outrun the landlord's group.

He half-squatted inside a bush and saw the dim light that lit up some place far away. His fingers snuck into the fresh soil, and he gasped greedily for air.

That was way too close! When he was trapped inside the apartment, if he had made one wrong move, he would have died.

Jesus, the difficulty of this Trial Mission is too damn high! The mission dispensed by the black phone liked to toy with his life, and the worst thing was... this was happening to him in real life.

Temporarily shaking off the landlord's group did not mean that he was safe. Chen Ge shrank into the bush, and he was still afraid that when he turned, he would suddenly see the landlord's group behind him with clippers and cleavers.

When his heart rate returned to normal, Chen Ge slowly extricated himself from the bush. The sign of the flashlights had completely disappeared. The forest was quiet; even the birds were not singing.

Which direction is out? Chen Ge had to admit he was completely lost. Should I hide in here until dawn?

Chen Ge pulled out his phone and realized the livestream was still going on. The screen had been black for more than one hour already. The chat log was filled with question marks. Even the more experienced viewers had no idea what was going on inside this curious livestream.

He did not waste time to explain himself. He glanced at the time and was about to click open the message that had come from He San when he suddenly heard the sound of leaves crunching coming from behind him.

Chen Ge immediately stuck his phone back into his pocket, lest the light from the screen exposed him. Clutching the mallet tightly, he was so nervous that even his palms were sweating, and he stared in the direction where the sound had come from.

Not long after that, a ray of dim light cut through the darkness.

Just as Chen Ge was about to use his mallet, a familiar voice asked, "Is someone there? Who is it?"

Wang Qi? Didn't he leave the apartment a long ago? Why is he here at the middle of the night? Chen Ge thought to himself. Even though Chen Ge was curious, he understood curiosity killed the cat, so he stayed where he was.

Was I mistaken? Impossible... Wang Qi waved his flashlight around and paced around the area.

I mustn't let him see me; this person's problem is even bigger than the tenants of Ping An Apartments. Chen Ge did not show himself; instead, he retreated further away from Wang Qi.

After moving for a while, Chen Ge realized the hill was becoming steeper. He seemed to have gone the wrong direction and wandered around to the other side of the hill.

After exiting a thick bush, a secluded estate appeared before him. Surrounded by trees sat a very simple looking wooden house. There was a wooden sign tacked to the door, and as he wandered closer, he saw it read: 'Fire is a very dangerous thing in the forest, so be careful when using flames. Saving the environment starts with you, do not litter.'

This looks like a resting house for the forest rangers. He tried pushing the door, and it was not locked. As it creaked open, a weird smell drifted out from within.

What is it? He did not dare turn on the flashlight on his phone, only using the brightness of his screen.

The wooden house was small, but it was filled with various everyday items; it looked more like a landfill site.

Chen Ge sniffed the air and walked toward the source of the weird smell. It was a bed. He flipped the wooden mattress up, and underneath, he saw clothes that had gone moldy.

A hoarder? The discovery was even weirder than he had predicted. All the clothes were for a female, and they appeared worn and unwashed. Chen Ge pulled several articles of clothing out and realized they were of the same size; this meant that they probably all belonged to the same person.

The mud stuck to the clothes hasn't even dried yet, meaning they have been worn recently?

With the Mortician's Make-up skill, Chen Ge had gained a thorough understanding of human anatomy. As he used his fingers to measure the size of the clothes, the image of the female body that was embedded in the wall appeared in his mind.

The size matches perfectly; these clothes probably belonged to the woman inside the wall!

But why would a dead woman's clothes be hidden inside this wooden house? And why had they been worn several days ago?

Chen Ge's heart started to race. He placed the clothes on the floor and realized there were some paper notes stuck to some of them. He picked them up for a closer look and realized they were all filled with proclamations like 'I love you.'

This handwriting... Chen Ge pulled out the notes from the dolls. Under close examination, the two looked ninety percent similar.

The dolls were from five years ago, and these female clothes were obviously dumped here only several weeks ago. There are years apart between them, so why do they share so many similarities?

Same handwriting, same love notes: could the culprit for both cases have been the same person?

Chen Ge picked up the clothes to throw them back under the bed. It was then that a phone with pink case fell from one of the pockets.

A phone?

Chen Ge picked it up. He realized that the phone was on the messages page; whoever was using the phone had been writing a message.

Save me?

A chill ran down Chen Ge's spine. He exited the page and looked through the message history. All of them were the same, and they only had two words—Save me!

Chapter 24

Chapter 24: I Caught the Killer!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge looked through the sent dates of all the messages, and they were all one day apart and sent at midnight. This matched perfectly with what Wang Qi said, but it was also the detail that made Chen Ge shiver in terror.

How could a body frozen inside a wall send a message punctually every night?

...

Supernatural activity? If this was truly the work of a powerful specter, how was that group of tenants, who had disturbed the body, still alive?

Something is wrong. Chen Ge lined up all the clues, and a thought dawned upon him. The person who has been sending Wang Qi messages every night is the killer of his fiancé, as well as the real killer responsible for the arson years ago.

And I think I know that person is, Chen Ge thought, standing inside the wooden house. Wang Qi is thought a mad person by every tenant in the apartment, and the landlord chases him out every time he sees him. But more than that, he is the only person I saw tonight who isn't a tenant at the apartment. In spite of that, he appears often enough within the vicinity of the apartment; this means that his actual place of accommodation must be very close to the apartment.

But the question is, when I was arguing with the landlord about the rental, he told me confidently that there is no other place to live within several thousand meters. In other words, Wang Qi couldn't be living at another nearby apartment or hotel. In that case, this wooden house is probably where he lives when he's not out spreading those notices.

If he's the resident of this wooden house, then many things can be explained. The pitiable man who wanders about every day, asking about his missing fiancé, is probably his own fiancé's killer!

Chen Ge had a hard time believing that he had chatted so amiably with a cold-blooded murderer and even attempted to share his sad history with the man. His swallowed deeply, and it was then that he felt fear. This madman must have been through some trauma to have the need to collect the dead woman's clothes and even use the woman's phone to message himself every night. Perhaps there's another personality that lives inside his body that comes out to take over his body after he falls asleep.

The more he thought about it, the more uneasy Chen Ge became. He looked through the phone to try to come up with more clues. This phone should be covered with his fingerprints, so it is an important piece of evidence; I have to take good care of it.

As Chen Ge looked at the screen, perhaps it was the nervousness or perhaps it was something else, he saw a girl's figure appear on screen. She looked to be eighteen or nineteen and was wearing a blood-dyed school uniform.

He rubbed his eyes to attempt to take a closer look when he felt a chill run up the back of his neck like something was brushing its hand along it; this made Chen Ge jump and turn back to look!

The air in the wooden house froze, and Chen Ge's heart almost jumped out of its cage when he saw what was behind him. The door of the wooden house had been opened silently, and standing about two meters behind him was Wang Qi with his eyes bloodshot, raising an axe slowly up in the air.

Time seemed to have stopped as the two men looked at each other, neither daring to move.

"So close..." Wang Qi's voice was completely different from before; it seemed like the madness that was suppressed earlier had been unleashed. Chen Ge did not say anything in return, but his grip on the mallet tightened. He was feeling rather grateful toward the specter. If she had not shown up to warn him, his head would have been rolling on the floor.

"Such a waste." Wang Qi took a step forward, and Chen Ge immediately held his mallet up in a guarded manner. "Relax, you've seen the stuff inside the phone?"

Chen Ge did not know what the madman was up to, so he did not dare let his guard down.

“Actually, if you think about it, I haven’t really lied to you.” The lethargy that Chen Ge saw earlier had completely disappeared. If anything, Wang Qi seemed to be in a very excited state. It felt like Chen Ge was dealing with a different person compared to the one he talked to that afternoon. “When you first talked to me when you entered the apartment, I already told you my fiancé was hidden inside the apartment, did I not? See, I haven’t lied to you, have I?”

He used the blunt end of the axe to pick up the clothes his fiancé once wore. “After all, it was me who personally sealed her up inside the wall.”

Then Wang Qi’s tone turned; his emotions raged like he was reminded of a traumatic event. He used the axe to split the clothes in two. “I did nothing wrong; she’s the one who made the mistake. She wanted to leave, so what could I do but try my best to make her stay?”

Wang Qi blocked the door with the axe swaying in his hand. As he stared at the chopped fabric, he said, “I didn’t want to do it; you understand, right? I didn’t mean it...”

Regardless of what Wang Qi said, it was an undeniable fact that he had murdered more than one victim, so Chen Ge paid no heed to his explanation. With the mallet in his hand, Chen Ge slipped the dead woman’s phone into his pocket. He zeroed in on the door, trying to find an opening to escape.

“I’m a hated individual; everyone around me says so. No, even if they don’t vocalize it, I know that’s what they think; I can feel it.” Wang Qi seemed to have totally lost his mind. His mental state was fractured, and he seemed to have a habit of talking to himself. It was as if he had walked into a mental maze and could not find a way out.

As Wang Qi was talking, Chen Ge slowly adjusted the angle that he was standing. He simulated different escape scenarios in his mind, like using something else to distract the madman’s attention, but those ideas were removed from his mind because the wooden house was ultimately too small for something like that.

Wang Qi’s voice became shriller as he continued, a veritable sign that he was breaking down.

The longer he stayed there, the greater the danger it was for Chen Ge. He decided to make a move soon and stopped focusing on running simulations. Every muscle in his body tensed. Wang Qi sounded like he was on the verge of lose control as the axe flailed dangerously in the air. Chen Ge caught an opening. He sprinted and knocked into Wang Qi with great momentum!

One should not underestimate a cornered rabbit. This was probably the bravest decision Chen Ge had ever made in the past twenty years. When facing off against a serial killer, he acted even more rashly than the killer!

In the dark, Wang Qi's reaction was one beat slower than Chen Ge's. He was unable to avoid Chen Ge's mallet, which was flying at his head.

Bang!

The mallet connected with skin and skull. Chen Ge felt something sticky on his hand, but he did not relax and launched another kick at Wang Qi's stomach. When the man doubled over, Chen Ge blasted out the door!

Chen Ge immediately raced into the forest. This time, he did manage to catch the direction he was running in. The trees became sparser and the ground smoother. However, he still had not escaped from danger. He knew someone was chasing after him; the wavering light and the sound of the branches being snapped was the best proof.

Chen Ge did not dare to even stop to take a breather. It was not until he saw the cement road that the sound behind him slowly disappeared.

"Those people should have left already." Chen Ge ran several hundred meters down the cement road before he heard the sound of police siren. He looked down the horizon and saw car lights coming down the road.

"I'm saved!" He jumped up and down in the middle of the road. "It was me who called the police! I caught the killer from four years ago!"

Chapter 25

Chapter 25: Unlocking a New Scenario

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Sitting on the wooden table were several used cotton swabs, a bottle of mineral water, and an unopened bun.

The young officer sitting across the table put down his recorder and took out his phone to show Chen Ge a picture on it. “Is he the man you saw?”

...

Chen Ge took a look at the picture of several men walking out of a building together. The tallest among them had a tattoo of a peony on the back of his hand.

“Yes, that’s him!”

“Peony represents wealth in Chinese culture and is a common tattoo among gamblers. This man’s name is Zhang Peng; he’s a gambler who is currently running from a debt of several hundred thousand RMB. He’s involved in crimes like robbery and mugging.” The officer continued flipping through the pictures. “Now, take a look at this.”

This time, it was a picture that looked like it was taken from a traffic camera. After multiple zoom-ins, Chen Ge finally got a clear view of the driver. Sitting in the driver’s seat was a frantic looking fat man; he looked around ninety percent similar to the fat man Chen Ge saw in the apartment.

“Looks familiar.”

“With your description, we matched it to our traffic records database. The name of the driver in the picture is Feng Chunlei, an out-of-city man. He was responsible for a hit-and-run and driving under influence.” The young officer put aside his phone and rearranged the information laid before him. “I believe I’ve taken all the information I need from you, Mr. Chen, but temporarily, you cannot leave. In a minute, the people from the Main City’s investigation team will need to get a more thorough statement from you. Hopefully, you’ll be willing to cooperate with the investigation; after all, you're our only witness."

"Of course." Chen Ge leaned down in bed, and his emotions began to calm down. Several hours ago, Western Jiujiang City's police station had received a call saying there was a murder going on at Ping An Apartments. The police mobilized immediately. They ran into Chen Ge on their way to Ping An Apartments. After some initial questions, the police separated into two teams.

One went to follow Chen Ge back to the wooden house to detain Wang Qi, and the other went into the forest to capture Ping An Apartments' tenants. When Chen Ge returned to the wooden house, there was only a pool of blood on the floor; Wang Qi had already disappeared.

After seeing the fresh blood and the large amount of clothing in the wooden house, they finally believed Chen Ge. They immediately called for the station's help to send more people to seal the mountain.

Chen Ge, as the key witness, was given airtight protection. Initially, the police wanted to send him to the station, but to complete the mission given by the black phone, Chen Ge insisted on staying. He told the police there was more evidence inside Ping An Apartments and insisted on having his statement taken at Ping An Apartments.

So, with four officers, two inside and two outside the door protecting him, Chen Ge lay down in bed, waiting for the mission time to pass.

The door was pushed open at 3 am. A middle-aged officer in his forties walked in. He removed his police cap and grabbed the bottle off the table to take several big gulps.

"Uncle Sanbao, that's mine." Chen Ge sat up in bed when he saw the man. The officer's full name was Lee Sanbao, the deputy head of Western Jiujiang City's police station. Coincidentally, he was also the officer responsible for Chen Ge's parents' disappearance case. At the time, it was this Uncle Sanbao who had helped Chen Ge walk out from his depression.

"You cheeky little thing, haven't I told you to not refer to me as your Uncle Sanbao? It's Superintendent Lee or Inspector Lee." Lee Sanbao put down the water bottle and scolded him with an irrepressible smile on his face. "I'll let it slide this time since you've done a wonderful good deed this time."

Chen Ge stood up to ask, “They’ve caught the man?”

“Of course, don’t underestimate the people from the investigation team. They have not only captured Wang Qi but also the other people from the apartment. The only one missing is Zhang Peng.”

“That’s great news!”

“They’ve even found Wang Qi’s fiancé’s body; it’s being looked over by our forensic expert as we speak. In any case, if you have any questions, you’d better ask them now because I’ll need to leave to deal with other things soon.” The only reason Inspector Lee was there was to give Chen Ge the good news.

“Both Zhang Peng and Feng Chunlei are escaped criminals, but what about the other two?” Chen Ge did not hesitate and pose the question on his mind.

“The woman is Zhang Peng’s wife. At most, she’ll be guilty of harboring a fugitive. The landlord, though, is a bit more complicated. He was originally a care-taker but got too greedy and cooperated with the rest to seize the senior’s property. However, he did not torture the senior. At least, we couldn’t see any obvious wounds on the senior,” Inspector Lee answered as he put his cap back on. “Why would you ask about that?”

“Just curious.” Chen Ge listened to He San and flashed an honest smile. “Although, I hear that aiding the police in capturing fugitives entitles one to some rewards, yes?”

“The banner and badge will be sent to you through mail when the case is closed, goodbye.”

“F*ck, wait!”

The young officer who saw this laughed and said, “Inspector Lee is just playing with you. If Wang Qi is confirmed to be the arsonist from four years ago, then the reward money that you could get is about 30,000 RMB. However, the reward will be given by the local government’s treasury and not the law enforcement. Furthermore, the senior once offered 5,000 RMB as reward for any information relating to his family’s death.”

“So, there’s really a monetary reward?” Chen Ge’s lips curved into a smile when money was mentioned. “I asked only for fun. Of course, the reason I did this was not for the money. To be able to contribute to the preservation of peace within this wonderful city of ours is the absolute honor.”

The young officer smiled and did not comment. He went back to his post of guarding the door.

Later, after Chen Ge was questioned by the investigation team, the officers volunteered to send him home. However, to complete the mission, Chen Ge gave multiple excuses. He refused to budge from the apartment building. Either he needed to get his stuff from Room 408 or he wanted to follow the officer up to the third floor to see the crime scene for himself. In any case, he stayed there until 6 am. It was not until the Mission Completed notice appeared on the black phone that he was willing to leave in the police car.

Looking at the scenery that flew past him, Chen Ge did not feel at all tired. He snuck out the black phone quietly and started to look through the mission reward.

“Player managed to reach the Mission Location on time, successfully found the party responsible for the murder, and survived until dawn. Trial Mission, Murder by Midnight, successful! A new scenario has been unlocked. Player can manipulate the props inside the set freely using the interface available on the phone!

“Trial Mission’s completion rate more than Ninety percent. Congratulations for unlocking this mission’s hidden item—Wang Qi’s Missing Person Notice.

“Wang Qi’s Missing Person Notice (11 Malice Points): Every day I search for the love that I killed. I killed her again and again, but she always manages to find me. Every morning, when I open my eyes, her stuff will appear in bed with me. I’ve already sealed her inside the wall, but she seemed to have snuck inside my heart.”

Chapter 26

Chapter 26: Boss, You're on TV

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Finishing the mission with a completion rate more than ninety percent will get me an additional reward? When Chen Ge realized he had managed to unlock the hidden item, he was admittedly quite excited, but that excitement soon dissipated when he read the item description. Wang Qi's Missing Person Notice? Is the black phone mistaken or something? This feels more like a curse than a reward!

After he finished reading the description, a new question popped up in his mind. Although... what are these Malice Points?

...

Based on the wording, it seemed to refer to the quantification of Wang Qi's malice.

A living human being has no use for something like this, so does it mean that it's not meant to be used by a living individual?

Chen Ge turned to look at the shadow trailing behind him and shook his head to loosen the thought from his mind.

The police car arrived at New Century Park at around 7 am. Chen Ge asked the guard for the spare key to the Haunted House. He was so exhausted after such an eventful night. When he reached the staff breakroom, he felt like his whole skeleton was about to shatter.

He pulled out his phone and realized it had already died. The livestream, naturally, had already ended. He connected it to the charger and switched it on.

The pedometer that came with his phone stated that he had ran for upwards of ten thousand steps that night. He was currently at the top of his friend list, and Xiao Wan even liked this particular achievement of his.

Looks like I need to find some time to go training. As long as I can run faster than others, everything should be fine.

Chen Ge tapped through his phone to look for He San's number. He sent a message in case his call woke up He San, who might have been sleeping. However, the young man called less than three seconds after the message was sent.

"My word! Boss, you're still alive?" He San's voice was so loud that Chen Ge felt a headache coming.

"Did you wish for me to die so badly? Also, be a little bit quieter or you're going to wake your roommates."

"Who's sleeping? We were all watching your livestream, and we've been waiting to hear from you!"

Honestly, Chen Ge was quite touched when he heard this. He was about to ask He San to thank his friends for the support when he heard He San say, "After the livestream cut off, they all said you're definitely dead and insisted on betting on it. Thank you, Boss, you've helped pay for my meals for the rest of the week."

"So ,my life is just worth several meals. Actually, you don't need to share this joy with me, really..." Chen Ge was speechless facing this overly honest young man.

"In any case, Boss, thank God you're still alive! I was so afraid to see you end up in our labs. Did you know on our course the lecturer will snap the picture of the victim at his time of death so that we'll have a better idea of what a fresh corpse looks like..."

"That's more than enough information." Chen Ge rubbed his temple and could feel his brain throbbing. "One of major reasons I managed to survive is thanks to you, so if there's a chance, I'll also treat you to a meal."

After hanging up, Chen Ge clicked open his personal page on the video-sharing app and was surprised to discover his follower number had increased by more than 3,000 people.

Damn! Even a black screen can get me followers? He turned to look at his private message inbox. It was bursting with messages, but the majority of them were asking, "Host, are you still alive?"

These people, it seems like they couldn't wait for me to die!

When Chen Ge realized the advertisement for his Haunted House was still there, and his livestream room and personal account page had not been blocked, he sighed in relief. He tossed the phone to the side, buried his face in the pillow, and stretched lazily in bed.

It's time to power down. I believe I deserve a day off, time for bed.

After removing his clothes and closing his eyes, Chen Ge soon fell asleep.

The sun rose, announcing the arrival of a new day. Sunlight filtered into the room, gilding the edge of the bed in gold.

Bang!

The gate of the Haunted House was thrown open, and rushed footsteps came up the stairs. A key was pushed into the lock, and the staff breakroom was rudely pushed open.

The bed shook violently like there was an earthquake!

Chen Ge was so spooked that he sprung up in bed. Before he could say anything, he saw something wave before his eyes, and then a shrill and excited voice entered his ears.

“Boss, you’re on television!”

Two seconds later, Chen Ge finally returned to reality. Looking at Xiao Wan, who sat beside his pillow, and smelling the fresh scent that drifted from her hair, Chen Ge silently picked up the comforter to cover his exposed upper body before saying, “Slow down, what about me?”

“This is the first time someone I know in real life has been on television! Even though your face has been mosaicked, I could still recognize that it was you easily!”

“Mosaic?” Chen Ge still had not caught up to what Xu Wan was saying.

“Look.” Xu Wan passed her phone to Chen Ge. “This is a snippet of the video I took from the internet. During the Jiujiang Morning News segment, there was a last-minute story.”

Chen Ge clicked play, and the image on the screen showed Ping An Apartments.

“Justice always prevails! There has been a recent development to the arson that killed a family of four at Fu An Apartments four years ago.

Thanks to the aid of a kind citizen, law enforcement has managed to detain the real culprit to answer for his crimes!”

Following that was a simple interview attached with a picture of Chen Ge leaving the scene with a police officer. However, Chen Ge’s face was heavily pixelated. There was a caption explaining that because one of the fugitives was still on the run, the identity of the kind citizen temporarily would not be revealed to protect said citizen’s safety.

“Boss, that person is you, right? The clothes are the same as the ones you were wearing yesterday!”

“Do you mind letting me put on some clothes first?” Chen Ge shook his head slightly. After getting into his clothes, Chen Ge quickly explained everything that had happened at Ping An Apartments last night to Xu Wan. However, he did not reveal the real reason he was there; instead, he said that he was there to seek new inspiration to add to the Haunted House.

After listening to his story, Xu Wan’s expression had a huge change. “Boss, I’m sure you’re tired then. Please take your much-needed rest, leave the visitors to me.”

She said that out of kindness, but the moment Chen Ge heard that there were visitors, he felt instantly energized. “How many are there?”

“More than yesterday.”

“Then, what are we waiting for? Help me get up!”

Chen Ge had Xu Wan go wait at the entrance, and he rushed to the toilet to wash his face. Then, he pulled out the black phone to click open the Murder by Midnight scenario.

“Murder by Midnight (Scream Factor 1 Star): This scenario has been completed. Feel free to go up to the third floor to take a look.

“Warning: The Haunted House is running out of internal space. New scenarios shall not be unlockable until further expansion!”

Chen Ge initially thought he had to prepare many things, but he realized he had underestimated the black phone. When was the scenario set up?

After putting on his shoes, Chen Ge raced up to the third floor and pushed the door open. The world beyond the door had completely changed.

The space stuffed with unwanted props had disappeared, and what awaited him was a long corridor that was dripping with an eerie air. The newly unlocked scenario was huge; it took up more than half of the third floor as well as parts of space from the second floor's Minghun and the first floor's Night of the Living Dead.

So, there are now three floors in total. First and second being the appetizer, and the scariest on the third. How come it became so similar to Ping An Apartments?

Chapter 27

Chapter 27: New Item

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge went in to familiarize himself with the new set. The structure and layout were similar to Ping An Apartments; the place was living and breathing anxiety and pain. There were more than ten traps, and many rooms were connected to each other through hidden doors. Other than that, there were a few nasty hidden gems.

This place feels authentic, and it's perfect for an escape the room type of game; I'll have the visitors try it out in a minute.

...

Standing there, the memories from last night reappeared in Chen Ge's mind, and he shivered. He had the most authentic of experience. Due to the limitation of time, Chen Ge only took a cursory look-around before walking downstairs; after all, the customers were waiting.

Before he even reached the front door, Chen Ge could hear Xu Wan. "Please be patient, I'm sure Boss is coming. In the meantime, you can give the other attractions at the park a try."

"Gal, is your boss really inside the Haunted House? We saw his livestream last night; he was being chased by more than ten people through the woods! Did he really manage to escape such a dreadful situation?"

"You're kidding? I was also one of the viewers; the host was trapped inside the apartment by a bunch of crazies, and they were closing in on him. I really find it hard to believe that he would be able to escape a trap like that."

"Are you sure we were watching the same livestream? Last night, other than sounds, there was only a black screen, how the hell did all of you manage to come up with so much information?"

"Regardless, we're here to see him; if not his living self, his dead body will suffice!"

The sound of discussion had gotten so loud that it attracted the attention of Uncle Xu. Looking at the size of the crowd, he was feeling both glad and worried. Since a particular point in time, this Haunted House that felt like it was crumbling suddenly became New Century Park's main attraction. Many people would start lining up early in the morning.

Normally, that was definitely good news, but whenever he listened to the words that came out of the visitors' lips, his heart crunched with worry. This cannot be allowed to continue. When I see Xiao Chen next, I'll need to have a talk with him. The young man is definitely hardworking, but I must not let him stray down the dark path!

The gate swung open, and Chen Ge walked out from the Haunted House. "Sorry for making all of you wait. The Haunted House is now open. Ticket price is 20 RMB; children are not allowed."

The crowd became silent instantly. A few of his viewers rushed over to his side to bombard him with questions about last night. Chen Ge got his five minutes of fame. After that, order returned to the crowd, and they entered the Haunted House one after another.

After the lesson from the previous time, Chen Ge did not dare put Black Friday on loop. Instead, he shuffled it into a long list of sound effects, allowing it to play at random. Chen Ge helped Xiao Wan with her make-up and had her stalk the people in the Minghun scenario while he stayed at the entrance to sell tickets.

The number of visitors is slowly climbing, and the reputation has increased a lot. If this continues, I'll reach the criteria to expand the Haunted House in a few days.

Chen Ge took out the black phone to see how far he was from the target number of visitors he needed to unlock the expansion as well as to take a look at the refreshed daily mission.

Easy Mission: If you want to provide the visitors a scary experience, then first you have to pay notice to the rhythm and tempo of their experience in the Haunted House. Setting off the scare too early might cause the visitors to lose their interest, so it is suggested that you install some sound detectors or surveillance cameras in the Haunted House to keep track of your visitors' progress.

Normal Mission: The key to a good scare is the element of surprise. For example, put up the scary source opposite from the spot that normally captures the visitors' eyes. Inspect the Haunted House to see whether all the props fit this criterion.

Nightmare Mission: There are weird sounds coming from the bathroom every midnight. If you want to know why, follow my directions.

Daily Missions will refresh every day at midnight. User can only apply for one mission each day, and the reward corresponds to the difficulty of the mission.

(Beware! The more difficult the mission, the more dangerous it'll be, so please choose carefully!)

After taking a quick glance at the Daily Missions, Chen Ge first rejected the Nightmare Mission. After two sleepless nights, what he needed more than anything was rest. Furthermore, he already had one Mirror Monster to deal with; he really did not think he could deal with two monsters at the same time.

The rewards from Nightmare Missions are most applicable directly to myself, giving me some kind of skill, but the reward is proportional to the risk, so temporarily, that's ruled out. The Easy Mission requires a certain amount of money; at least until the monetary reward from capturing Wang Qi arrives, completing that sounds impossible.

Chen Ge considered the options and came to the conclusion that the Normal Mission was the one best available. Setting up the scares opposite from the focal point, this is not such a bad idea. Applying it into my Haunted House will definitely bring more 'surprises' to the visitors.

After accepting the Normal Mission, Chen Ge leaned against the entrance as he kept up the channel of communication with Xu Wan.

Noon arrived soon after, and the crowd gradually dissipated. Chen Ge called for Xu Wan to come out and told her to go for her lunch break as he went back to the Minghun set alone. He had personally designed this scenario and had put much thought into each scare. Since he had accepted the Normal Mission, he spent the whole afternoon while Xu Wan was away on updating and improving the set.

Normally, when the visitors entered the Haunted House, they would be mentally prepared, so it would not be easy to scare them then. Therefore, he needed something to distract their attention to make them think that something was about to jump out at them from that direction. While their attention was fully occupied by the fake scare, the real scare would assault them from a completely unexpected direction.

This Normal Mission was far easier than Chen Ge expected. In just a few hours, he received the alert on the black phone that he had finished the mission.

“You’ve completed the Normal Mission. There is more than one way to scare a person; the element of surprise is the key to a good scare. Congratulations, you have gained the mission reward—Doctor Skull-Cracker’s Uniform!

“Doctor Skull-Cracker’s Uniform (Item- Attire): Clark has worked at the mental hospital for over twenty years. Constant exposure to mental patients slowly distorted his view on life. One day, he decided to end everything once and for all. He believed the source of madness had seeped into his patients’ brains, so the only solution was to crack their skulls open to remove the source directly! All in the name of saving his patients!”

After Black Friday, Chen Ge had received another item. He clicked on the app, and the black phone told him the item had been placed inside the props room.

The timing is just perfect. If I combine this with the Murder by Midnight scenario, it should create a wonderful arrangement.

Several ideas cropped up in Chen Ge’s mind. He grabbed a pen and paper to write them down when his phone rang.

“He San?” Chen Ge answered the call. “What’s up?”

“Boss, do you still remember what I told you last time?” He San kept his voice lowered, as if afraid that someone might hear him. “About how the seniors in our faculty have formed a warring party to take revenge for Senior Gao Ru Xue after you scared her to her tears last time? They’re already on their way! Boss, you’d better be prepared!”

Chapter 28

Chapter 28: Different From What You Told Us

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“They’re coming right now?” Chen Ge actually did not mind He San’s seniors at all.

“I’m risking my life by giving you this information; the seniors are planning to shoot a funny video inside your Haunted House and put it on the internet to make Senior Gao laugh. I hope you won’t be angry; after all, our course only has five classes and, in total, only seven girls. The one you made cried was the prettiest of them all, so Boss, take care!” He San heard coming footsteps, so he quickly hung up.

...

Want to shoot a funny video at my Haunted House? Chen Ge put his phone away, and a wicked grin appeared on his face. They say medical students have bigger guts than most. They’ll be the perfect guinea pigs to try out my new scenario, and we’ll see who’s laughing then.

After lunch break, Chen Ge went downstairs to open the gate. The visitors who missed the chance to visit the Haunted House in the morning all rushed over. Some of them purposely came to pay the place a visit after watching Chen Ge’s videos and livestream online, some of them were dragged there by families or friends, while the rest were merely curious. Since the line for this attraction was so long, it had to be for something fun, right?

“Ticket price is 20 RMB. For the best effect, we suggest going in with a group of three.” Chen Ge maintained the order as he communicated with Xu Wan. Both of them were busy beyond belief. Time flew, and when it was 3 pm, seven fashionable youths entered the New Century Park. They made a beeline for the Haunted House like they were on a mission.

Each of them had different personality, and they did not talk much among themselves. They stood in the line for the Haunted House quietly, making the atmosphere become weirdly serious. Several minutes later, when the earlier group of visitors came out holding each other for support, the tallest among them walked toward Chen

Ge.

“Boss, six tickets.” His voice was deep and gravelly.

Chen Ge raised his head to look at the young man and glanced at the group behind him. “But there are seven of you.”

“This one is just responsible for bringing us here.” The tall youth yanked He San to the front.

“Boss, I won’t be going in.” He San was traumatized by his earlier experience in the Haunted House. After smiling at Chen Ge, he hurriedly squirreled back to the crowd.

“Since you’re already here, how can I leave you all alone standing outside? Here, this is on the house.” Chen Ge passed the tall youth seven tickets. “All of you are from Jiujiang Medical University, right? Nice to make your acquaintance.”

Chen Ge’s kindness and enthusiasm made the few medical students feel rather embarrassed.

“He San, since the boss has gifted you the ticket, it’ll be wrong if you refuse his kindness.” The tall youth passed everyone their ticket, but what they did next confused the other visitors. They did not enter the Haunted House directly and seemed to congregate outside it for some kind of tactical meeting.

“He San and myself will be a group; Monkey and Lao Zhao will be a group; Lao Song, Xiao Hui, and Shi Ling, you three will be the last group. Everyone has memorized the tactics that were posted on the forum before we departed, right?”

“Yes. It’s all memorized.”

“The layout of the set has been drawn out by He San already, and we’re familiar with every trick the place has to offer. Be prepared and show no trace of fear, we mustn’t bring shame to Jiujiang Medical University!”

“Understood!”

“Alright, from now on, put yourself into the correct mental state and bring that adrenaline up! Increase the breathing rate—imagine that you’re going skydiving or bungee-jumping—and make your every cell come alive!”

“Indeed, be fierce, be tough! You’re fiercer than the fiercest of ghosts! You’re not afraid of anything!”

“Do you still remember the oath we made when we joined the university?”

“A straight heart leads a right path! Jiujiang Medical University, Speaker of the Living and the Dead!”

“Alright, let’s go!”

The speech was so inspiring that even the other visitors could not help but clap and cheer. Even Chen Ge was internally impressed.

He San and the tall youth departed from the group and said, “The two of us will lead the way, wait for our good news.”

The two stepped toward Chen Ge with fire and spirit.

“Just the two of you?”

“Your rules only allow a maximum of three people in one group, don’t they?”

“Oh, that’s the rule for the Minghun scenario. Don’t mind that little detail, all seven of you can come in all at once; I wouldn’t want the rest of you to waste your time waiting for others.” Chen Ge led the group into the Haunted House that felt like it was colder than the temperature outside. “First, all of you need to sign the disclaimer agreement on the table, waiving away your right to sue the Haunted House for any and all injuries, supposed or otherwise, before I can allow you to continue.”

“Wait, this wasn’t here last time.” He San wandered over to the table.

“That’s because you were my first customer to faint inside the attraction.” Chen Ge smiled kindly at the group of students. “I believe He San will have already briefed all of you on the history of this place, so I won’t go into the details. All I want to give you is just a reminder and warning.”

Chen Ge slowly pulled his smile away. He pulled out his phone to search for the morning news. “The case at Ping An Apartments four years ago was finally solved, but there is still a killer on the loose. Of course, this has nothing to do with us, but when I came to work this morning, the door of the Haunted House was left open like someone had wandered in. Ping An Apartments and New Century Park are both on the western side of town; hopefully, it's just me overthinking."

In a few words, Chen Ge managed to plant the seed of doubt. He did not need to convince He San's group that was the truth; he merely needed to implant the suggestion in their mind. After all, one's imagination could always conjure up things that were scarier than reality.

After signing the agreement, Chen Ge led them up to the third floor and slowly pushed the door to the Murder by Midnight scenario open.

A cold draft picked up from somewhere. Along the dark corridors, it felt like eyes were peeping at them from the half-open doors. The corridor led down to an endless staircase, and maze-like turns and corners. The ceiling was charred, and everywhere they turned, they could see scratches, like someone had desperately tried clawing their way out.

The fire of the group was half stifled the moment they saw this. Every single one of them froze on the spot, and they turned to look at He San in unison.

"Where's the Siheyuan?"

"This is different from what you told us."

"I was training with weights the whole night to lift the coffin lid."

The eyes on He San almost made him cry. The honest young man could only turn to Chen Ge for help, but the latter ignored him. "The theme of this scenario is called Murder by Midnight. Please do not take any pictures, and violators will be personally responsible for the possible consequences. The exit is hidden within the set, and the time limit is twenty minutes. If you wish to surrender, just yell at the camera, and I will come get you."

After all of them entered the corridor, Chen Ge smiled at them and said in parting, "Enjoy."

Chapter 29

Chapter 29: Xiao Wan, Doctor Skull-cracker

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The door to the Murder by Midnight scenario closed with a click, and the crisp sound was like a shackle that tightened itself around the group of medical students' hearts.

"He San, based on your previous experience, what do you think our best course of action is?"

...

"Find the exit as soon as possible!"

...

After locking the door, Chen Ge immediately gave Xiao Wan a call to tell her to meet him in the props room.

"Boss, what's the hurry? The visitors are already inside the building, aren't they?" Xu Wan, with her dead person make-up and the ghost bride's attire from the Minghun setting, was quite scary running about the building.

"I've built a new scenario on the third floor; it's called Murder by Midnight. The group of medical students should be the perfect test subjects for the new scenario." Chen Ge pushed open the door and used the black phone to search for the things that he needed.

"But shouldn't the new scenario be inspected by the park management first before it can be used?" Xu Wan followed after him, holding the traditional skirt above her ankles lest she tripped on it. "Boss, what are you looking for anyway?"

"The uniform that I personally made for you."

"Uniform?"

At the deepest corner of the room, Chen Ge spotted a familiar wooden box. He did not expect this box that had once housed the doll and the black phone would suddenly materialize in the room. Chen Ge walked to the box and peered in. Sitting at the bottom were a weird-looking hammer, a blood-soaked robe, and a yellowed missing person notice.

“Found it.” Chen Ge pulled the robe up. Surprisingly, the robe that looked like a normal doctor’s garb was incredibly heavy. That was probably due to the iron chains that were sewn into the fabric. The chains were carved with human faces in various degrees of torment.

“Boss, this is the uniform you made for me?” Xu Wan involuntarily took several steps back because she could smell the blood that seemed to radiate from the outfit. “Can I not wear it?”

“Extras at Haunted House are actors, Xiao Wan. Think of the lessons your teachers at drama school once taught you. An actor has to be able to familiarize themselves with any and all roles.” Chen Ge spread the robe out, and a faux-human skin mask fell out from between the folds. Chen Ge also did not know such a thing came with the outfit. He bent over to pick it up, and with just a quick glance, he shivered with chills.

The mask was made from parts of male faces sewn together. It was rough-looking, but that only added to its scare factor.

“Boss, don’t tell me I have to wear that as well.” Xu Wan had already retreated to the door.

“Just try it on, please. I want to see how it looks as a whole. I’ll be the ghost next time, okay? Pretty please...” Chen Ge begged, but his tone sounded like the devil in fairy tales luring common man to sin.

“Fine... I’ll try it on.” Xu Wan finally relented. After accepting the skin mask and the garb, she took off the ghost bride attire in front of Chen Ge and changed into her new uniform. She did not seem to mind that Chen Ge was standing right there. “Boss, honestly, your definition of uniform might need to be updated.”

The moment Xu Wan curled the chains around her body and put on the blood-soaked garb and the skin mask, a subtle change seemed to occur to her entire personality. A sense of cruelty, madness, and wickedness seemed to come over her.

“Not bad.” Chen Ge did not dare let Xu Wan near the mirror, afraid that she might scare herself. “Come, carry this with you.”

Chen Ge grabbed the weird-looking hammer from the box. The hammer was about forty centimeters long. Its handle looked like a human spine. At the end, there was a hook that could connect it to the chain inside the robe, and on both sides of the hammer head, there were needles used for bloodletting. “It’s hollow so not heavy, but if you feel it’s too troublesome to run with it, you can drag it across the floor.”

Xu Wan had already surrendered to Chen Ge’s weird ideas. All she did was nod and accepted the hammer.

“Place your phone inside your outer pocket and make sure your earpiece is working. Keep the channel open, and if there are no questions, it’s time for us to start.”

“Us? Boss, you’re entering the scenario as well?” Xu Wan turned to glance at Chen Ge. Her mellifluous voice coming out of the skin mask had a particularly chilling effect.

“Of course. Come on, let’s get a move on. The visitors are probably bored waiting for us.”

Chen Ge had Xu Wan enter the Murder by Midnight scenario while he returned to the main control room. In just several minutes, he found the shadows of the seven students on screen. Those seven were bigger cowards than Gao Ru Xue. Judging from the expressions on their faces, it was clear that they were nervous.

After so long, they’re still wandering around the entrance? Looks like I’ll need to give them a little push.

Chen Ge first switched the music to Black Friday before calling Xu Wan.

“Xiao Wan, this new scenario is huge; it not only involves the third floor but also parts of the first and second floor. There are staircases at the left and right end of the scenario, so don’t wonder about aimlessly or you’ll get lost. Now, listen to my orders carefully.”

“Understood.”

After ending communication with Xu Wan, Chen Ge applied some make-up to himself before entering the Murder by Midnight scenario through the workers’ passageway. With the black phone, he could control the more than ten props and traps around the set freely. With this little convenience alone, the playability of Murder by Midnight was far greater than Minghun and Night of the Living Dead.

In the darkened floor, the bathtub in one of the rooms was pushed aside. After Chen Ge crawled out from it, he returned everything back to its original state.

“Xiao Wan, they’re probably around Room 207. You go standby at the left staircase and await my next order.” After that, Chen Ge let his eyes get used to the darkness before he used the right staircase to get up to the third floor.

The group of medical students still had no idea that ‘danger’ was approaching. They were still looking through the random props carefully, hoping to discover some useful clues.

“Other than the general dimness and low temperature, this Haunted House doesn’t seem that scary, are we acting a bit too cautiously?” Monkey was the smallest and chattiest of the group. “Brother Feng, I think we should split into two groups. That way, the search will go much faster. The progress will be too slow if we continue to stick together like this.”

The tall youth was the Brother Feng whom Monkey referred to. After realizing all of their preparation had been nothing but a waste after entering the Murder by Midnight scenario, he was admittedly a bit unsettled. However, as time passed, he slowly realized the place was not as scary as he imagined. “That’s not a bad idea. Alright then, Monkey and Lao Song, the two of you take the two girls with you as you look through the rooms on the left; the three of us will search the rooms on the right.”

“We should have done that a long time ago. I don’t understand what are you guys acting so scared for! This place is like a park compared to our school’s morgue.” The one who spoke up was a girl, one of the few who had her hair dyed among the group. Different from Gao Ru Xue, she had a little make-up on her face, and she looked more like an adult than a student.

“Sister Hui, Brother Feng, we mustn’t let our guard down; I still think we should stick together.” He San hid among the crowd with a perpetual pout. “The boss of this Haunted House cannot be understood with normal logic. None of you have seen his livestream, but he’s a madman with absolutely no regard for his life!”

Chapter 30

Chapter 30: The Eighth Person

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

He San tried his best to convince them, but his seniors were unfazed. They all believed that He San was exaggerating to hide his cowardice. After all, seeing is believing. They had been inside the Haunted House for a few minutes already, and there was nothing particularly scary about the place... yet.

“Xiao San, if you’re that afraid, you can hide behind your big sister.” The girl called Sister Hui took the frontline and walked into the room next to them alone. “All the decor is the same; staying in bed watching crime drama would have been more interesting.”

...

“Then, we’ll separate according to the grouping mentioned earlier.” Monkey chased after Sister Hui adding, “Let’s find that exit soon, I’m getting bored.”

Lao Song and a quiet girl by the name of Shi Ling also made to follow, leaving He San, Brother Feng, and Lao Zhao in the corridor.

“Honestly, I’m quite disappointed.” Lao Zhao was a rotund fellow with skin that was fairer than most girls’. He was physically unhealthy to the point where he would start to sweat after taking few steps.

“Save your breath, and let’s start moving.” With a wave, Brother Feng moved forward with Lao Zhao following behind.

He San was soon left all alone in the corridor. He was the only one who maintained a state of high alert. Something bad is bound to happen.

After taking two steps, he stopped. Wait, the background music seems to have changed, but why does it sound so familiar?

Before he could focus on the sound, a crisp sound entered his ears. He tried to focus on it, but it quickly disappeared. The source of the sound seemed to come from further down the corridor.

Someone is chasing after us? He San did not dare stay to find out and hurried to catch up to his seniors. Black Friday marked the real beginning of the Murder by Midnight scenario. The light in the space dimmed, the stuff that littered the corridors started to move on its own, and the sound of clinking chains came up from the staircases.

“I’ve found something!” Sister Hui, who was in front, walked out of a room with a ragdoll in her hand. “Look at this, this doll was sitting right in the middle of the room.”

“Senior, please don’t randomly move the stuff in the Haunted House. Last time, the trap was activated after we moved the coffin.” He San was relaying his experience, but no one paid him any attention. Ignored by all, he could only stand quietly at the outermost circle of the group, watching his senior walk down the figurative and literal dark path.

“There has to be something important about this doll. Could it be some kind of clue that it was sitting in the middle of the room?” Monkey held the doll up to the dim light. The doll looked like a little girl about five or six years old. She had no eyes, and her body was burnt. “No eyes should represent darkness, and the burnt body represents the fire of hell?”

“Or could it be murder by arson?” Brother Feng pressed the doll with his hand. “There’s something other than cotton inside; it’s something solid. Open it and see.”

Monkey pulled down the zipper that was on the back of the doll. The doll was filled with shredded paper. He took out a random piece and the handwriting was scrawled and difficult to read, not unlike the handwriting of a child.

“What does it say?”

Monkey, who was the only one who had read the paper, had his face overcast with gloom. He placed the paper in his palm and showed it to the group; there were only six words on it—All of you have to die!

“All the pieces say the same thing.”

“How deep is the hatred to do something like this?”

“Quickly put it back, it’s making me uncomfortable.” Shi Ling, who had been quiet, seemed to be creeped out by the doll. She merely glanced at it before retreating several steps back.

“It’s just a doll, nothing to be afraid of, probably just a decoration used by the Haunted House.” Monkey pushed the paper back into the doll’s body and flung the doll to the side, allowing it to fall to a random corner of the corridor. “Let’s move onto the next room.”

However, the quiver in his voice betrayed the anxiety that he was feeling within.

“Wait a minute.” Xiao Hui raised her left hand, which was holding a crumpled piece of paper. “Other than the doll, I also found this in the room earlier. Take a look, I believe it’s a diary entry of some sort.”

“Let me see.” Lao Zhao grabbed the piece of paper and started to read. “I feel like there’s another person hiding in the house. I wonder if he is hiding under the bed or inside the cupboard. I’ve told this to Mommy, Daddy, and my big sister, but they were too concerned with some other thing to pay me any attention. When the night fell, Daddy inspected all the doors and windows to make sure they were all locked before going to bed. I don’t know why they’re so afraid of the things outside when there’s a person hiding inside the house.”

“F*ck! What is this?” Lao Zhao stopped reading halfway and shoved the paper back to Xiao Hui. “This is all designed to disturb us; we mustn’t fall for the trap.”

“I’m impressed by the attention to detail, but alas, that won’t be enough to scare me.” Xiao Hui placed the paper back where she found it before the group moved on to the next room. None of them realized the doll that they dropped on the floor suddenly twitched.

“Let’s stop wasting time and find the exit.” After searching five rooms, they came up with nothing and ended at the right most end of the corridor.

“This floor is huge; there wouldn’t be enough time for us to finish searching it within the time limit, so I feel like the chances of the exit being on the third floor are slim. If I were the Haunted House proprietor, I wouldn’t have set up the entrance and the exit on the same floor,” Brother Feng analyzed logically.

“Are we going to split into groups again?”

“No! If we’re not on the same floor, it’ll just make it easier for us to be divided and conquered!” He San added, but the group decided in unison to ignore him.

“We’ve been in here for more than ten minutes already, but nothing has happened. Yes, the atmosphere is not bad, but it’s still far from being scary. I agree to separate into groups.” Lao Zhao wiped the sweat from his forehead before continuing. “Don’t forget our real purpose here. We have to leave the exit within the designated time to gain back the face that our university has lost!”

“You’re right! We’ll split up according to the original plan.”

Just as the discussion was about to be concluded, He San finally stepped forth to say, “Will you guys please listen to me?”

He walked to the middle of the group and pointed down the corridor. “Starting from a few minutes ago, I’ve been hearing some weird sound coming from the staircase; something is following behind us!”

With this reminder from He San, the group did start to notice the sound of the chains that was getting clearer and clearer.

“The boss already said this scenario is called Murder by Midnight, so in that case, there has to be a murderer.” Lao Zhao patted He San on his shoulder, saying, “Don’t overthink it. The murderer has to be a character portrayed by the Haunted House worker, and since it’s only an actor, what is there to be afraid of? Am I right?”

The group laughed, thinking He San was being overly sensitive.

“Don’t worry, your seniors are here to protect you, don’t be afraid.” Lao Zhao pulled out his phone, adding, “By the way, didn’t we decide to shoot a short video inside the Haunted House and post it on the boss’ account page to make fun of him? I feel like this location is not bad. Everyone, remember to look at the camera.”

He tilted the camera around to look for an angle that could capture everyone. His eyes glanced at the screen, and when he was about to say something, an indescribable chill crawled up from the bottom of his feet to the top of his head!

His fat body shook, and he threw his phone away with a trembling hand.

“Fatty! Have you lost your mind?”

“What are you doing? You scared me!”

Lao Zhao did not speak. His eyes scanned everyone there, and with scattering teeth, he said, “Count it yourself, including me, why are there eight of us?”

Chapter 31

Chapter 31: Who Is He?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Eight?”

“Stop kidding!”

...

Lao Zhao’s words made everyone’s heart skip a beat. The light in the Murder by Midnight scenario was exceptionally weak. The group looked at each other, their bodies frozen.

“Where’s the eighth person?”

“Stop panicking!” Brother Feng ordered as he pulled out his phone. As he was about to turn it on, the sound of chains from the other end of the corridor suddenly turned rapid.

“Someone is coming!”

As Brother Feng unlocked his phone, a bloodied monster turned the corner. The timing was perfect as if the monster already knew where they were.

“What is that?”

Underneath the blood-soaked doctor’s coat were chains that dragged themselves across the floor. The monster’s head was lowered, and the hammer in ‘his’ hand was dripping with blood. Everyone started to worry, and only Brother Feng managed to keep his cool. Ignoring Chen Ge’s earlier warning, he turned on the flashlight inside the Haunted House.

A ray of light shot through the long corridor, shining on the monster. The light attracted the monster’s attention who turned ‘his’ head and glared at them through the curtain of long hair.

At that moment, the group of medical students had their hairs stand on end. The monster had a face that was sewn together with the features of several males. The stitches on the mask observable even through the distance!

The monster seemed to be ultra-sensitive to light because when the light hit 'him', 'he' went berserk and started to charge down the corridor, waving the hammer crazily in the air!

The chains knocked into the walls as the heavy footsteps echoed across the thin corridor. As the madman approached, it was unknown who was the first to move, but it created a domino effect, and the group of students scattered to run for their lives.

Some hid inside the nearest room, others rushed down the stairs to hide on the second floor, while some shot down directly to the first floor.

Everyone was spooked by the sudden appearance of the monster, and the approaching footsteps and clinking chains deeply unsettled them. Fight or flight was a natural human response to threats, and when the brain sensed this was a fight that they could not win, they naturally chose to escape and run.

Xiao Hui was the one closest to the stairs. When the monster rushed at them, she was a bit at a loss, and the man beside her suddenly turned and ran down the stairs. Her brain frizzled by fear, she did not think twice and ran after the man. At the time, her instinct was merely to run away from the monster.

The phone was left in a forsaken corner. The calmness of the group of students was completely shattered, and screams tore through the corridor. The group dispersed like a flock of spooked chickens.

When Xiao Hui followed the man before her to the first floor, the screaming from the third floor had not ceased. Then came a halting tempo to the sound of the chains, which sounded like the monster was coming down the stairs!

Xiao Hui increased her pace and did not dare turn back. She kept close to the man in front of her, afraid that she might be left stranded. The creepy music and endless screams caused fear to breed within Xiao Hui's heart. The bigger the fear, the greater the need for company.

She chased after the shadow before her like her life depended on it. The shadow had become a rock for her to rely on inside the darkened Haunted House.

No matter what happens, at least we'll be able to look after each other. Xiao Hui did not dare imagine what would happen if she was abandoned all alone inside the Haunted House. To prevent that from happening, she picked up pace again and reached out to grab the shirt of the person in front of her.

The sound of chains drew closer. Xiao Hui was led by the person to the first floor, where he ran into one of the rooms to hide.

A dead-end? Xiao Hui paused at the door while she saw the man jumped into the only furniture in the room, a cupboard to hide. At this juncture, Xiao Hui only had two options left: run on her own or hide inside the cupboard alongside the man.

The sound of the chains dragging on the floor came closer, and she decided on the latter option. Once the cupboard door was closed, it seemed like she had entered a different world, one that was filled with darkness and silence. The only thing that made her feel safe was at least she had a companion with her.

The make-up on her face had already been ruined. Holding her breath, Xiao Hui leaned toward the crack to try to take a look outside.

She saw the chains glint in the dark. The doctor stopped at the door. 'He' used the hammer to knock on the door before walking into the room.

Xiao Hui's heart was racing at an impossible pace. She bit on her finger and shrank deeper into the cupboard, her heart praying softly, Please don't come any closer, please don't come any closer.

Her prayers were answered because the doctor only took a look around before 'he' left. Xiao Hui sighed in relief and lightly shook the arm of the person beside her. "The monster doesn't seem to have spotted us. We'll wait for a little longer, and then we'll go meet up with the rest."

Only Xiao Hui's voice could be heard echoing inside the cramped cupboard. She waited for a response, but there was no answer. She frowned, feeling something was wrong as she turned to look at the man.

The man hiding inside the cupboard with her had an average frame, neither thin nor fat.

Definitely not Monkey or Lao Zhao: Brother Feng is taller than this, and

He San is smaller. Xiao Hui called out cautiously, “Lao Song?”

There was still no answer. Xiao Hui’s heart cracked with tension. Wait a minute, Lao Zhao did say there was an eighth member among us...

Xiao Hui’s blood started to chill, and her breath caught in her throat. Xiao Hui slowly pulled out the phone in her pocket. She turned her phone to the side, its cold light flashing. In the sealed compartment, a deathly white and completely unfamiliar face was staring right back at her.

The phone slipped from her fingers, and after two seconds of absolute silence, an ear-splitting scream escaped from within the cupboard!

Xiao Hui scooted back in an attempt to escape, but the cupboard was only so big. In her desperation, the back of her head knocked against the cupboard wall, and perhaps from the pain or perhaps due to the shock, this fashionable girl collapsed to the floor of the cupboard with her head lolling to the side, appearing as if she was about to die in a few minutes.

“Didn’t I already warn you guys not to use your phones inside my Haunted House?” Chen Ge pushed the cupboard door open, picked up the phone from inside the cupboard, and shoved it inside Xiao Hui’s pocket. Then he used his own to contact Xu Wan. “Xiao Wan, temporarily make them stay away from the first floor.”

After giving the order, he carried Xiao Hui into the bathroom. He opened the trap door in the bathtub and carried Xiao Hui out of the scenario using the worker’s passageway.

We’re definitely lacking in physical help.

After placing a piece of warm towel on Xiao Hui’s forehead, Chen Ge returned to the scenario.

One down, six to go. Chen Ge closed the passageway and called Xu Wan on her phone. “Xiao Wan, where are you now?”

“There’s someone hiding on the second floor in the first room on the left from the staircase. I’ll go to force him out, and you’ll be able to ambush him with a ‘surprise’ from the right exit.”

“Xiao Wan, you’ve been corrupted.”

“Boss, you have no right to say that; this is all thanks to you.”

Chapter 32

Chapter 32: Dolls, Dolls, Dolls

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Monkey was stranded alone on the second floor, his eyes and ears staying alert to his surroundings. He had himself cooped up in the corner where he could get a good view of the staircase, so no matter which direction the murderer came from, he would be able to escape as fast as possible.

The lights in the scenario seemed to have gotten dimmer, and the eerie music toyed with his heart. Monkey pinched himself to focus and took a deep breath. As a medical student, he knew pain and oxygen were the best elements to make one calm down rapidly.

...

Monkey went through what happened earlier in his mind. The timing of the monster's appearance is just too weird. He rushed at us right after Lao Zhao pointed out there was an eighth character hidden among us; that is too much of a coincidence.

Everyone lost their cool when Lao Zhao made that stupid discovery. If Brother Feng was allowed to use his phone and looked through us carefully, the eighth person would have been readily exposed. That was our first mistake. After the monster rushed at us, if we stood our ground and didn't rush off like a bunch of headless chicken, we would have been fine. That was our second mistake.

Monkey sighed slightly. Yes, the monster rushing at us was scary, but it should not have been enough to make us all run off like that. It all started when that first person ran. His action ruined our thoughts, so if I'm not mistaken, that first runner was the eighth person. Earlier, I heard Xiao Hui's scream; she was the second to run and was closest to the mystery man, so this supports my hypothesis.

Monkey laughed self-deprecatingly. Then again, guessing it right and not being scared were too different thing. After all, being stranded all alone in this creepy Haunted House did still cause chills to rise up his spine. The monster and the eighth person were working together, using psychological pressure to instill fear in us. If I'm not mistaken, their plan has always been to split us apart and then take us down one by one. Does the proprietor need to rely on such wicked psychological techniques just to scare someone?

Monkey was a brilliant student, but he was as big a coward as He San. In school, he did not dare enter the morgue unless accompanied. I need to relay this information to Brother Feng and the others as soon as possible.

He took out his phone to call Brother Feng, and when he saw the stuff that was reflected in the shining surface of his phone, he trembled all over. Why is this ragdoll sitting on the stairs? Didn't I leave it on the third floor earlier?

Monkey did not dare utilize the flashlight function, lest he attracted the unwanted attention of the monster. He turned his phone display toward the wall, and he saw a tattered ragdoll was lying against it.

Did someone accidentally kick it downstairs in the earlier commotion? This was the only valid explanation Monkey could come up with. The ragdoll was filled with paper pieces and not mechanical parts, so it could not have been remote-controlled. It's quite scary lying there like that.

Other than its slightly worn state, there was not anything particularly scary about the doll, but as Monkey stared at it, he had this suspicious feeling that it was alive. Monkey could not understand it either, but for some reason, he saw a young girl looking pleadingly at him when he looked at the doll.

I must be hallucinating. Either way, I have to leave this Haunted House as soon as possible if I want to keep my sanity. Monkey called Brother Feng, and a ringing sound came from the third floor.

He's still up on the third floor? Or did he lose his phone like Lao Zhao did? The ringing sound of the phone weirdly enough made the Haunted House feel creepier. Monkey did not hang up but shoved his phone into his pocket and slowly climbed up the stairs to the third floor. Hiding on the staircase, he looked down the corridor, and as he expected, Brother Feng's phone was left ringing on the floor.

Both Brother Feng and Lao Zhao have left their phones; I'll have to try someone else. Standing alone at the third-floor staircase, watching the doors on either side of the corridor swing open and shut due to the draft, Monkey was feeling weak in his knees.

He scrolled down his contact list rapidly to look for other people's contact number when his phone vibrated and rang.

*F*ck! What now!* It was a call from one of the group members. Shi Ling? Why did she call me? Or is she also stranded alone like I am?

Like most young men, Monkey puffed his chest up with courage when he was interacting with a member of the opposite sex. "Shi Ling, did you get lost from everyone else? Where are you now? I'll come get you."

"I'm trapped inside a room on the third floor; I didn't catch the room number, but please come and get me. This Haunted House is all sorts of wrong!" Shi Ling was normally a quiet and reserved girl. To be able to make her talk in such a drastic and hurried tone, something traumatic must have happened to her. She sounded like she was on the brink of tears.

"Slow down, how did you get trapped? None of the rooms have locks," Monkey explained as he walked down the corridor, trying to locate the room Shi Ling was in through the sound of her voice.

"I also don't know. After I ran in to hide, I was unable to open it anymore! And this room is different from others; there are two dolls sitting right in the middle of the room, side by side!"

"Sitting?" The mention of dolls made Monkey's hair rise. If he did not see another doll in his life ever again, he would be satisfied.

"Please come and get me!" Shi Ling's voice turned shrill. From the sound of it, her sanity was fraying.

"I'll be there in a moment! Just get as far away from the dolls as you can for now and listen to what He San said earlier, do not touch anything in the room, I suspect those dolls..." Monkey halted mid-sentence because he suddenly realized that there was a ragdoll blocking his path, lying on the floor about half a meter away from his feet.

Resisting the urge to scream and toss the phone at the doll, Monkey took cautious steps toward it.

Long hair with an expression of guilt and self-reparation, different from the doll on the staircase. This one looks much mature in age. After he thought that, Monkey's eyes widened. What on Earth... how did I manage to read so many emotions from a mere doll? Is this fear talking? Or are the dolls too authentic? For some reason, I feel like they're like human beings with real emotions.

In any case, now is not the time to think about that. As long as the doll before me is not the one I saw on the stairs, then everything is fine. At least this proves that the dolls don't know how to move on their own. Things aren't as bad as I imagine. Focus, the most crucial mission now is to rescue Shi Ling.

Monkey shook his head violently, trying to steady his mind. He cheered himself on. I'm merely scaring myself. If the doll from the staircase was indeed following me, she would not have appeared in front of me, right? She should be behind me. This is merely a trick by the boss; there's no need to be afraid.

To convince himself, Monkey turned to look behind him. See, there's nothing...

Monkey's eyes zeroed in on a spot about one meter behind him, and the rest of his sentence was forcefully cut off. There it was, a ragdoll lying quietly on the floor.

Chapter 33

Chapter 33: Correct Usage of the Missing Person Notice

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

If not for the fact he could barely control his limbs anymore, Monkey would probably have smacked himself on his lips. He swore to never curse himself inside a Haunted House anymore.

Separated from his group, stranded with no help, standing in the middle of a darkened corridor, chased by a crazed murderer that could appear at any moment, and haunted by dolls that would be there wherever he turned to look... this kind of hellish Haunted House experience made Monkey's breathing unsteady. "Why did it appear here? When did it follow me? How can it move?"

...

His brain was swamped with endless questions, his composure was brutally shattered, and his hands that held the phone were shaking violently.

"Monkey, where are you? Please come save me! I feel like the dolls in the room are looking at me! I swear to God, they are!" A maddened voice screamed through the phone; Shi Ling's situation was not looking so good either.

"Sister, I'll save you, but who is going to save me?" Monkey instinctively took a step back from the source of danger. He felt like something was tugging at his ankle, he turned to look at the doll that was originally a distance away from him was lying beside his shoe.

The black hair felt weirdly authentic, and the burned face was turned upwards. The facial features were completely ruined, but it gave a peculiar feeling. It's smiling!

Monkey could not explain why this thought would appear in his mind, and honestly, he did not to understand why; the things that he had experienced in the past ten minutes were about to break his sanity.

He bit on his lips and nudged his feet, trying to leave. Perhaps it was fear or perhaps he had been standing for far too long, but the muscles on his calves shrank, and a shot of pain tore through his heart. *F*ck! Cramps!*

Monkey toppled to the ground. He had given up on his dignity. Clutching his legs, he screamed, “Is someone there? I quit! I quit! Help me, please!”

Chen Ge and Xu Wan were stuck on the first floor at the time, hauling Lao Song, who was scared dumb, out of the scenario through the workers’ passageway when they heard the blood-curdling scream from the third floor. Safety was their first priority, so neither of them dared dawdle and ran up to the third floor.

After they entered the corridor, Chen Ge saw Monkey rolling on the floor. He had Xiao Wan retreat, and he walked over to the young man with his flashlight on. “Are you alright?”

“I quit! I quit forever, please let me go.”

One could say that Monkey was a changed man. Chen Ge did not promise anything but squatted down to press on Monkey’s knees. “Exert force and try to straighten your knees.”

As he helped Monkey ease his pain, Chen Ge glanced around the area; he was confused. Neither Xiao Wan nor myself were even close to this place, so why did this fella get so scared?

Other than the two ragdolls on the floor, there was nothing out of place. Thus, Chen Ge asked, “Brother, what spooked you so?”

“Do you even need to ask?” Monkey’s eyes were red, and like a scorned woman, he grumbled, “These two ragdolls were chasing after me; you were controlling them, weren’t you? You sick bastard!”

“These two ragdolls were chasing after you?” Chen Ge paused. He did not tell Monkey the truth lest he scarred the young man’s mind forever. “In any case, let me get you out first.”

“Wait, there’s another person trapped on this floor. She’s gone almost mad, please save her as well.” Monkey took out his phone to contact Shi Ling. When Monkey was not paying attention, Chen Ge picked up both of the dolls and held them in his palm. The dolls were small and could not be called exquisite; they were more like hand-made dolls produced in children’s arts and crafts classes.

These two managed to scare an adult until his leg cramped up? Chen Ge used his finger to poke one of the dolls' faces. For some reason, he managed to feel a sense of reluctance from the doll at having her cheek poked but being powerless to stop it. Interesting...

Following Shi Ling's scream for help, Chen Ge and Monkey managed to locate the room she was trapped in and opened the door from the outside.

"Don't be scared, we'll get you out now."

The girl paid Chen Ge no heed. She was quivering at the corner of the room, her lips quivering as she stammered senselessly, "The dolls are looking at me! No matter where I hide, their eyes keep following me!"

"More dolls?" Chen Ge looked toward the center of the room where two slightly larger dolls lay side by side.

"They were sitting up earlier, I swear!" Shi Ling's teary eyes were filled with fear.

"I know, they're all... parts of the Haunted House's tricks." Chen Ge tried consoling the girl before walking to the dolls. One of them had a sewn beard while the other was wearing an apron over her normal clothes.

Based on these details, these two should be the father and mother. He placed the dolls he had picked up earlier on the floor, and the four did look like a family.

This matches the number of victims at Ping An Apartments arson perfectly, and this Murder by Midnight scenario is inspired by Ping An Apartments, so could these four dolls actually represent the actual victims?

As that thought entered Chen Ge's mind, he felt the black phone in his pocket vibrate. He pulled it out to take a look; there was new message.

"Specters' Favored. Congratulations for triggering the sole Hidden Mission inside the Murder by Midnight scenario! The spirits still have some unfinished business in the mortal world. Help them fulfil their wish, and they would become helpful allies."

Sole Hidden Mission? The scenario unlocked by the black phone comes with Hidden Missions? This was a huge discovery for Chen Ge The unfinished business of the spirits from Ping An Apartments had to do with Wang Qi. Detaining him so that he would be punished by the law should resolve that business already, no?

Chen Ge held Shi Ling and Monkey as he led them downstairs, but his mind was contemplating the Hidden Mission. After they exited the workers' passageway, Chen Ge did not return to the scenario immediately but rushed to the Props Room alone. He picked out Wang Qi's missing person notice from the bottom of the box.

This thing could be useful to the victims. With an idea in his mind, Chen Ge returned to the room on the third floor where Shi Ling had been trapped in earlier.

As he crossed the threshold, Chen Ge spotted something weird.

The three dolls that represented the parents and elder sister were lying flatly on the floor, but the smallest doll was lying with her face down near the door like she was in the middle of escaping. Chen Ge picked the doll up, and upon closer inspection, he had this curious sensation that the doll was playing dead, afraid of being discovered. For some reason, instead of feeling scared, he found it quite cute and charming. The victims' spirits are probably inside these dolls.

Closing the door behind him, Chen Ge sat down at the middle of the room.

"In that case, perhaps we can have a little talk."

Chapter 34

Chapter 34: Goodwill

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge sat alone in the dark room, talking to himself, while the four dolls sat before him. The scene was weird to say the least. Thankfully, there was no one else there to observe.

“I don’t know how or why you’ve appeared inside my Haunted House, and I’m not sure how to refer to any of you, but there’s one thing I can guarantee—I mean none of you any harm.”

...

Chen Ge’s voice echoed in the room. Looking at the four dolls before him, a contradictory feeling rose in his heart. On one hand he wished there was a response to confirm his suspicion, but on the other, he was afraid that the dolls would suddenly move to do something dangerous.

Several seconds later, Chen Ge felt like he was overthinking and decided to switch his way of thinking. “The Murder by Midnight scenario is based off of the arson four years ago at Fu An Apartments, and the four of you should be the victims of that case.”

Probably hitting a sore spot, Chen Ge could feel the temperature in the room dropping. The door was suddenly locked behind him, and the furniture around him rattled slightly.

“But the case has been solved! The madman who ruined your lives and hurt you has been captured and is awaiting the law’s judgement!” Chen Ge was slightly unhinged by this sudden development. He pulled out his phone to find the morning news on the internet. “Look, see, it’s on the news, and the person who caught him is me!”

Chen Ge knew the four dolls’ unfinished business had plenty to do with Wang Qi, so he wanted to use the video as proof that he was the one who had captured him to placate the dolls, but it was not working as well as he planned.

The atmosphere in the room turned increasingly chilly. Chen Ge was panicking, but he had no better idea; the inability to communicate between the two parties was his biggest hurdle. The lack of results unsettled Chen Ge, but he did not plan to give up so easily. This Haunted House was everything he had. If he allowed the dolls free reign of the place, there would be too many unknown elements; if some huge accidents happened in the future, he would lose everything.

“Calm down! I’m here to help!” The dolls were not paying Chen Ge any attention. No matter how loud he screamed, it was pointless.

“I guess this is my final option.” Chen Ge pulled out Wang Qi’s missing person notice from his pocket. The yellowed piece of paper was dirtied with some blood stains, but beyond that, there was nothing particularly special about it. However, weirdly enough, when Chen Ge pulled out the notice, the noisiness in the room settled, and the atmosphere was not as intense as before. It was as if the hands that were strangling his neck were slowly relaxing.

“All you wanted was this?” The effect of the notice was better than Chen Ge expected. He placed the paper in the middle of the four dolls, and when the dolls’ bodies touched the yellowed paper, the missing person notice started to struggle like it was fluttering in a raging wind.

The scene that happened before his eyes were definitely inexplicable. The room did not have any draft, but the notice and the four dolls were swaying like crazy. Chen Ge studied this closely. Several minutes later, a human face seemed to appear on the missing person notice; it looked suspiciously like Wang Qi. Before Chen Ge could take a closer look, the notice was torn apart. The pieces snuck into all four of the dolls’ bodies, and the room returned to its usual quietness.

“That’s all?”

The black phone in his pocket vibrated. Chen Ge took it out to find a new message.

“You’ve completed the Hidden Mission inside the Murder by Midnight scenario! Increase the affection of specters by one. Obtained the goodwill of the victims’ lingering spirits from Ping An Apartment. They will help you clean up all the trash every day to keep the Murder by Midnight scenario at its peak.”

Looking at the message on the phone, Chen Ge stood where he was for a long time before he said to no one in particular, “And that completes the sole Hidden Mission?”

His mind tried to collate all the information he had gathered so far. Finishing a Trial Mission with a completion rate higher than ninety percent will reward me a Hidden Item, and the Hidden Item will be the key to completing the scenario's Hidden Mission! In other words, if I want to have complete mastery of the unlocked scenarios of the Haunted House in the future, I'll need to finish the respective Trial Mission with a more than ninety percent completion rate.

Thinking back, if he had just survived the night at Ping An Apartment without being a busybody, he would have completed the Trial Mission as well, but he wouldn't have gotten the Hidden Item.

This thing is evil. This kind of set-up is just asking the player to walk into as many traps as he can. Chen Ge searched through the black phone, attempting to figure out more information. The first thing he clicked was the 'My Team of Ghosts and Ghouls' tab, and to his disappointment, it was still empty.

The mission notice states that I've gained the goodwill of the victims' lingering spirit from Ping An Apartment, but there's no update to the window. Is it because they haven't agreed to help me completely or can lingering spirits not be counted as ghosts nor ghouls, so they don't show up on the list?

Chen Ge had no clue. He clicked into the 'My Item Storage' and realized Wang Qi's Missing Person Notice was still there, but the Malice Points attached to it were now zero.

What are these Malice Points? And why did the lingering spirits tear it up to feed on it?

The door to the hidden world was slowly opening. Chen Ge had no clue whether this information was useful or not, but he committed it all to memory. He rubbed the sweat on his forehead and stood up from the floor. Even though I couldn't communicate with the lingering spirits, they'll help up clean up the scenario. Conclusively speaking, it's still more advantages than disadvantages.

Maintaining the scenario was a troublesome and tiring thing, and the appearance of the lingering spirits saved Chen Ge plenty of time, money, and effort. Looking at the four dolls on the floor, the last vestige of fear in Chen Ge's heart slowly disappeared. Hiring the ghosts to help out at my Haunted House isn't such a ridiculous idea after all.

He walked to the door and turned around with concern. The dolls that represented the parents and the sister were sitting where they were, but the smallest doll was collapsed on the floor, leaning on her side. She was acting secretively, like she was preparing to sneak out again.

Chen Ge sighed, looking at this, and he realized not all ghosts in the world were evil and cruel. For example, this smallest doll was like a kitten that was curious about the world, easily intrigued but a coward at her core.

“Little girl, stop running about. Be careful or you’ll get stepped on.”

Chen Ge left after that. After helping the lingering spirits from Ping An Apartments with their wish, he had a deeper understanding of the black phone. The unlockable scenarios on the phone probably aren’t just to help me scare people. Each scenario has its own story and plot with its own reason and development. In a way, unlocking the scenarios is helping these homeless souls find a place to call home.

After turning off the flashlight, Chen Ge walked down the darkened corridor alone. After he was far enough gone, ensuring no human or ghost could hear him anymore, his lips curved involuntarily upwards to reveal a foxlike grin. “These are natural experts at scaring people, and they don’t need salary, won’t complain about tiredness, or act out of emotions; they are the perfect employees!”

With a bright future awaiting him, Chen Ge felt reenergized and was ready to scare the shit out of his hapless victims.

“It has dragged on for too long already; it’s time to end this. There are three people left inside the Haunted House, let me think... Who shall be my first victim?”

Chapter 35

Chapter 35: Shattered Mirror

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Why is it suddenly so quiet?” He San turned to look at Lao Zhao.
“Shall we go take a look?”

“If our enemies don’t move, we don’t move. We’ll go out when we hear screams and start the investigation in the opposite direction; this way we’ll avoid the scary traps,” Lao Zhao said shamelessly.

...

“Isn’t that selling out our classmates?”

“No, that is appreciating their noble sacrifice. We’ll be using the time they give us to find the exit and achieve victory.” Lao Zhao was as round as a ball. He stood behind He San, but the young man’s small figure could barely cover up half of Lao Zhao’s body.

“Then, how long should we hide in here? What if we’re the only two left in the Haunted House?” He San turned to look at his senior behind him. For some reason, he felt his senior was merely using him as a human shield.

“We’ve checked all the rooms on the second floor and most of the rooms on the third floor, so the exit has to be on the first floor. In other words, we’re inches away from victory.” Lao Zhao patted He San encouragingly on his shoulder. “Chin up, don’t give up now when we’re at the gate of victory.”

“Even at a time like this, you’re still calm enough to feed me such crap?” He San pouted. He had many grievances to voice, but he did not know how to. He was supposed to only lead his seniors to New Century Park, so why was he there inside the Haunted House?

“Don’t be so pessimistic.” Lao Zhao counted on his fingers. “We heard Monkey and Xiao Hui’s screams earlier, so both of them have probably been led out of this place already. Minus the eighth person, we still have five students from our school inside this Haunted House. The probability of the murderer hunting us is two in five, which is smaller than three in five, so don't worry. We'll only need to wait."

"Alright, we'll do it your way." Squatting at the door, He San leaned to peer out the crack. He felt like there was an additional something in the darkened corridor. He rubbed his eyes and took a closer look in the same direction. There was a worn ragdoll lying on the floor.

What's wrong with my eyes? Was there a doll on the floor to begin with? But that's impossible. During the ten minutes I've hiding here, I've kept my eyes on the corridor outside. He San slapped himself lightly on the cheeks before turning to look out of the crack again. The doll was still there, but it had moved closer to the door.

It can move on its own? Am I imagining things from nervousness? He San shook his head before peering out the crack again.

This time, the doll had disappeared.

This is weird...

...

At the first floor's workers' passageway, Chen Ge put on the Doctor Skull-cracker's garb after he had Xu Wan leave to take care of the few students outside. He was going to catch the rest personally.

Wearing the blood-soaked doctor's coat, curling the iron chains that were carved with human faces on his body, gripping the hammer, and putting on the human skin mask, be it from height or presence, Chen Ge's Doctor Skull-cracker was more intimidating than Xiao Wan's.

These youths want to fight an extended battle with me? The chains clinked viciously with his every step. It might have sounded eerie, but the greatest weakness was that it would give his location away. Chen Ge roamed the scenario for about five minutes but could not find anyone.

"Boss, I can't spot them on the cameras. They should be hiding inside the many rooms; you'll need to check them one by one." Xu Wan's voice came into his ear. "Speaking of which, I suggest we install surveillance camera in every corner of the Haunted House. Now, with only cameras on the intersecting corridors, there are too many blind spots."

"We'll think about that when we have the money." Chen Ge used his mallet to push the door of each room open. When he reached a corner on the second floor, he spotted a doll leaning against one of the doors.

“Little girl, why are you here, leaning against this room door for no reason?” Chen Ge scratched his chin with the mallet, and the truth soon dawned on him. “I know, you’re telling me there’s someone hiding inside this room, right?”

Pretending like he did not notice anything, Chen Ge walked away from the door. When he was about ten meters away, Chen Ge picked up the chains that dragged along the floor and leaned against wall to silently move toward the door.

Utilizing the blind spot, he half-squatted and peered in through the crack of the door.

...

Inside the room, He San and Lao Zhao were squeezed behind the door with their palms over their mouths.

“The sound of chains has disappeared; the murderer should have wandered off already.” Lao Zhao’s face was pale beyond belief, but he made sure his tone sounded calm to maintain his dignity as the senior. “Actually, I’m not one bit scared. Based on my analysis, since the murderer just came up from the first floor, he won’t be returning to it anytime soon; this is our chance!”

He used plenty of energy to push himself off the floor. “Now is the perfect time for us to go to the first floor. We’ll be able to avoid the killer and achieve victory. Xiao San, you take a look out the door. If the murderer has wandered off already, we’ll move out instantly.”

He San felt like Lao Zhao was making some sense. He did not argue and leaned against the door to look out the crack. He felt something like warm breath blowing on his face. What He San saw this time was different from before. There was no darkened corridor or creepy doll but bloodshot eyes staring back at him from the other side of the crack!

“What the f*ck!”

He San felt like his soul almost left his body. He collapsed to the floor dramatically and shuffled away from the door. This spooked Lao Zhao as well. “What? What did you see?”

The answer that Lao Zhao got was the door knob being twisted open.

The old door was slowly pushed open, and a bloodied shadow radiating evil and resentment hovered at the door. Seeing this, Lao Zhao kept retreating even though his back was already firmly pressed to the wall.

“You shouldn’t lean so hard against the wall, what if there’s someone inside it?” Chen Ge silently poked his hand into the pocket and pressed the prop option that was available on the black phone.

Lao Zhao was so scared that his fatty body was shaking all over. Before he understood what Chen Ge meant by that sentence, something suddenly poked into his back. He turned to look back over his shoulder instinctively, and the wallpaper behind him had opened on both sides to reveal an expressionless woman who was embedded inside the wall!

His brain went blank, and something akin to his breath left Lao Zhao’s body. He fell to the floor butt-first, and his eyes rolled back in his head.

“Your experience is now officially over, let me get you out.” As Chen Ge said so, there was suddenly the sound of a mirror shattering coming from the third floor, which was closely followed by Brother Feng’s scream.

“Sh*t!” Chen Ge called for Xiao Wan to come get He San and Lao Zhao while he raced upstairs. Following the voice, Chen Ge found Brother Feng inside one of the rooms, waving a wooden chair before him like he was in the middle of fighting some unknown force.

He pulled down his mask and waited until Brother Feng tired himself out and slid to the floor before he walked into the room.

“What happened?” Chen Ge gingerly pulled the wooden chair away from Brother Feng and tossed it to the side. Brother Feng was in a highly unstable state. His eyes were filled with such fear that Chen Ge worried the young man was going into shock. “Did you come across some weird things?”

Chapter 36

Chapter 36: Danger

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Several seconds later, after Brother Feng caught his breath, he raised his finger and pointed toward the toilet weakly. "Mirror..."

The word, which could not have been more common, caused Chen Ge's expression to shift. After placing Brother Feng on the bed, he walked into the toilet. The mirror on the wall had been shattered, and the glass pieces littered the floor.

...

Earlier, after He San's fainting incident, Chen Ge had used black cloth to cover up all the mirrors in the Haunted House. There had been no accident since then, and with the unlocking of a new scenario, he should have been more alert, but he had not been. He was partly responsible for this accident.

For any entertainment establishment, once it was labelled with the rumor of being a safety hazard, business would definitely be difficult, and Chen Ge was acutely aware of that scary fact. He picked up one of the pieces of the floor, and looking at his reflection inside it, he promised, "I need to deal with this thing as soon as possible!"

Like human beings, ghosts also had the separation of good and evil. The monster in the mirror was definitely evil; Chen Ge was sure of that. It was naturally aggressive and was probably hiding some horrible secret. He San's fainting spell and Brother Feng's incident raised the alarm within Chen Ge, making him feel pressured.

Covering the mirrors with black cloth was not a permanent solution. The thing inside the mirror was fast becoming a blockage for the Haunted House's expansion. Other than the broken mirror, there was nothing else out of place inside the toilet. Chen Ge took a cursory look of the room before leaving.

With the hammer in his grip, he sat down beside Brother Feng. "Do you mind telling what happened earlier?"

After a few minutes of rest, Brother Feng's breathing finally stabilized; however, his face was still startlingly pale. "I don't think I'll be to explain it."

"No worries, just tell me whatever you remember." Chen Ge studied Brother Feng quietly. This young man was different from He San, who fainted directly; his mental tolerance was obviously higher than He San's, an observation supported by the fact that at least he showed resistance.

Brother Feng tried to sit up in bed, the fear still circling in his eyes. "At the time, I was chased by one of your workers, so I ran into this room to hide. Initially, everything was fine, but later, I started to hear someone calling my name."

"Someone was calling your actual name?"

"It's not that; it's more like I felt like I was being summoned." Brother Feng scratched his head. "The source of the sound was inside this room, and it took me a long time before I was able to find the source."

At this point, the fear in his eyes deepened. "The voice came from the mirror inside the toilet. It was saying something, but I couldn't really understand it. All I know is it had something to do with me."

"And then?" Chen Ge memorized every word that came out of Brother Feng's lips; this would be valuable information when he dealt with the mirror monster.

"And then I stood in front of the mirror, trying to understand what was really happening. I tried to remove the mirror from the wall, but when my hands touched it, the voice beside my ears suddenly picked up. My consciousness started to waver, and for some reason, the reflection of myself in the mirror started to shift." Brother Feng's eyes kept glancing at the toilet, afraid that some monster might jump out of it at any moment. "I stood in front of the mirror, but the reflection in the mirror wasn't me. Normally, I would be afraid, but what happened next still sends shivers down my spine when I think of it."

"What happened?"

Brother Feng said seriously, "At the time, I didn't feel any fear or apprehension. It was like everything couldn't have been more normal. I started to lean toward the mirror, and when my face was close to the surface, I could see the face of the other me also leaning close. The face that stared at me was mine, but for some reason, it felt very unfamiliar. If you want me to point out why, I can't really tell you, but it's just a feeling that the face that stared back at me wasn't mine. Out of the corner of my eyes, I could see my hands rising even though my brain didn't register such a command. My hands pressed against the surface of the mirror like I was trying to crawl into it or... that's not right, it felt more like I was trapped inside the mirror, and I was trying to crawl out of it."

During the Nightmare Mission, Chen Ge had gone through the same thing. Looking through the recording on his video, his body was indeed slowly leaning against the mirror. "Then, how did you remove yourself from this situation?"

"It's also thanks to the mirror." This answer surprised Chen Ge. "At the time, it really felt like my body was no longer under my control until I saw a ragdoll lying behind me through the reflection inside the mirror."

"A ragdoll?"

"Yes, similar to the dolls I saw lying around the other rooms. It's the size of an open palm and had a sewn beard on its face." Brother Feng used his hands to measure out the size for Chen Ge. "The sudden appearance of the doll caused my brain to scream with alarm, and fear spread through my body like wildfire. There was only one thought on my mind then—escape. However, the body refused to listen to my command; the mind and the body started fighting."

Brother Feng described it in a placid tone, but Chen Ge could imagine how dangerous it was.

"After that, I heard He San's scream coming up from the second floor. That seemed to do the trick and break the spell." The fear in Brother Feng's eyes had dissipated slightly. "I was so scared that my first instinct was to grab the nearest wooden chair to swing at the mirror. Your Haunted House is so scary and atmospheric that I completely forgot I was inside a park attraction."

At this point, Brother Feng suddenly remembered something and smiled apologetically at Chen Ge. "Everything I told you is the truth; there's no exaggeration or anything. I will pay the replacement fee for the mirror in full."

"That won't be necessary; I'm just glad that you're safe." Chen Ge stood up, and his eyes wandered about the room. "By the way, where is the doll that you saw now?"

Brother Feng hesitated before answering. "I seem to remember kicking it under the bed. That's also part of your props, right? I'm sorry."

Chen Ge squatted down and pulled out the doll with a dusty footprint on it out from under the bed. He patted the dust off its body and said, "You should thank this doll; it was he who saved you."

"The doll saved me? If you say so... Thank you, so can I go now?" Brother Feng inched subconsciously backward, and his face paled considerably. He could feel the odd presence surrounding this Haunted House's proprietor, but since Chen Ge did come to save him, he forced out a polite thank you.

"If I told you that everything that you experienced earlier wasn't part of the Haunted House's props or special effects and was all real, would you believe me?"

Wearing the blood-soaked outfit, cradling the tattered doll, Chen Ge tilted his head to the side as he posed this question to the young man.

The poor Brother Feng, who was about 190 centimeters tall, was curled up like a little girl at the corner of the bed and answered with a tone laced with helplessness, "I don't know, you tell me, should I believe it or not?"

Chapter 37

Chapter 37: Expansion

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Brother Feng curled up even more. Looking at Chen Ge, who stood in the middle of the room, he could envision the man killing people and cutting up body parts just to add to the authenticity of his Haunted House. He started to fear for his life.

“Look at you, all serious. I’m just kidding.” Chen Ge was quite disappointed. He asked that question because he spotted something unique in Brother Feng. With a little push from the doll, Brother Feng managed to break free from the mirror monster’s control and even fought back. His constitution was stronger than most and could have been a valuable ally.

...

This was what Chen Ge admired about the young man. If possible, Chen Ge wished to befriend him and asked for his help to deal with supernatural events like the spirit inside the mirror. That was Chen Ge’s intention, alas Brother Feng was far too distraught to catch the hidden meaning.

Looks like I can only depend on myself, Chen Ge thought to himself as he locked the door to the Murder by Midnight scenario. When he helped Brother Feng go down the stairs, the black phone in his pocket vibrated. Chen Ge jumped from shock. He quickly pulled out the phone afraid that it might be some bad news.

“Number of Monthly Visitors surpassed 100. Reputation is now 60 percent positive. Congratulations for fulfilling the rules for expansion!

“Warning: Each expansion of the Haunted House will award you with a mysterious reward (After three expansions, the Haunted House will upgrade to a Maze of Terror)!”

I can expand so soon? Expansion was a good thing, but temporarily, that was not part of Chen Ge’s plan. The most crucial thing was still removing the stuff inside the mirror.

After exiting the Haunted House, the sun shone gloriously on the steps. The students from Jiujiang Medical University were collectively collapsed in front of the Haunted House. They were either holding their heads in their palms or hugging their legs. Some had tears staining their make-up while others looked aimlessly up at the sky. The occasional twitching on their faces was the only sign that they were still alive for some.

Chen Ge felt a sense of déjà vu. However, the devastation this time was much greater than before. In just a mere forty minutes, the group of spirited youths had experienced such a drastic change; it was near miraculous.

The surrounding visitors were mumbling and pointing among themselves, but Chen Ge did not think too much of it. After all, if it wasn't exciting, how could it be called a House of Horrors?

He dropped Brother Feng to the ground, completing the collection; the whole 'happy family' was finally together again.

"Xiao Chen! Come here." The gathering crowd once again attracted Uncle Xu's attention. The middle-aged man had on an expression that said 'what am I going to do with you' when he saw Chen Ge. "Explain yourself, what is it this time? You already scared someone until he fainted last time, and this time you toppled seven in one go! Are you that insistent on getting our park on the headlines?"

Chen Ge's eyes darted around, and he coughed drily. "They came to experience the Haunted House, and what I did was present to them the best service, so how is this my fault? Furthermore, I can promise I had zero physical contact with them, which you can check on the security footage. Everything is all within the required rules of operating a Haunted House."

"Stop acting dumb. If that's the case, how do you explain the bump on the back of her head?" Uncle Xu surreptitiously pointed at the back of Xiao Hui's head, afraid that he might accidentally scare the poor girl, and he kept his voice to a whisper.

"Uncle Xu, I swear, I'm completely innocent on that count. I was running ahead, and she pulled on my shirt as she ran behind me. I crawled into the cupboard to hide, and she wanted to follow me. All I did was lie there quietly; it was she who turned on the flashlight to shine on me. It almost blinded my eyes, but before I could say anything, she knocked herself on the wall of the cupboard. See, I'm also a victim here.” Chen Ge described the ‘truth’ with only a slight variation.

“In other words, you’re the one who has suffered?”

“Isn’t that obvious?”

“Stop treating this like such a joke. Be more careful and attentive in future, and make sure this doesn’t happen again,” Uncle Xu advised him with a sigh. “What if you cause an accident? Or your client happens to be someone unreasonable? It’ll greatly influence your Haunted House’s future.”

“I know, I know. Is there any more kind advice?” Chen Ge didn’t directly retort, but he grumbled internally, If there is really someone unreasonable, I’ll just give them the love letter. We’ll see who’s more unreasonable then.

Uncle Xu stared at Chen Ge and knew perfectly well that his words would not be heeded. He sighed to himself and continued several seconds later. “Xiao Chen, I know it’s not required for you to listen to me, but certain things have to be said now that your parents are no longer here.”

“I’m listening.”

“This morning, Xu Wan said you were on television, claiming that the key witness who helped solve the arson case four years ago is you.” Uncle Xu did not look one bit happy.

“Yes.”

“Why would you go to a haunted house late at night? Do you know how dangerous that is? Those are murderers!” Uncle Xu did not leave Chen Ge any openings to counter. “If you’re in need of money, there are many other methods rather than going for this reward money. I can help you cover the utility bills you owe the park management for now. You’re still young, be careful not to stray from the righteous path.”

“Don’t worry, Uncle Xu, I know what I’m doing.”

“I hope so. In that case, if there’s nothing else, I’ll be leaving. Quickly get those people off the floor. It reflects badly on the park letting them lie like that on the floor.” As Uncle Xu turned to leave, Chen Ge stopped him. “What’s wrong?”

“Uncle Xu, I really do have a favor to ask,” Chen Ge said shyly. “Can you please lend me 5,000 RMB? I plan to install cameras in every corner of the Haunted House. I’ll pay you back when the reward money arrives.”

After He San and Brother Feng’s ‘accidents’, Chen Ge was indeed worried. There were too many blind spots inside the Haunted House.

“You still want to invest in the Haunted House?” Uncle Xu stopped moving. “Xiao Chen, I can lend you the money, but I’ll be honest with you, this park of ours is on its last legs; investing here is no different from throwing money into the sea.”

He led Chen Ge to a shaded area before explaining, “This park has been around for eleven years already; its main attractions are all outdated. Nowadays, people want virtual reality, fashion, and creativity; we’re none of those things. To put it simply, we’re at the edge of being filtered out. Other than the Haunted House, the number of visitors for every single attraction in the park is on a steady decline.”

“I know that.” Chen Ge had already planned to work on his Haunted House, and increasing security was a definite first step.

“What do you know?” Uncle Xu turned off the walkie-talkie. “Eastern Jiujiang’s Virtual Reality Futuristic Carnival is close to its completion date. It will be one of the few fourth-gen amusement parks we have in this country. When it’s open, it’ll naturally become the go-to attraction of the city. Tell me, how are we going to compete with that? Now, every member of the park from the highest management to the lowest cleaners are slowing down as they figure out a way out for themselves. You’re the only one left dumb enough to keep charging ahead.”

Chapter 38

Chapter 38: Underground Parking Lot

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Uncle Xu was sincerely looking out for Chen Ge, so he did not hide anything; he laid out everything on the table. “Now, do you still want to invest in the Haunted House?”

“I’m still willing to give it a try. After all, that new park isn’t completed yet, so we still have a chance.” Chen Ge’s secret weapon was the black phone, but of course, he could not tell anyone that.

...

“You’re such a bright kid normally, so why are you so stubborn when it comes to crucial matters? Do you not see the eroding flow of time? I’ve worked here for ten years already, so I also wish for this place to stay, but we have to surrender to reality.”

Uncle Xu pointed at the few attractions that were already foreclosed around them. “Do you know why they are all closed? Not because they did not pass the safety inspection as the rumors say, but because once they’re turned on, they start to burn money. Having one or two visitors is not enough to break even. Imagine, when New Century Park was open, the place was crowded, our parking lot was not enough to support the crowd, so we had to rent the parking space from the nearby shops. The situation only got better after the new underground parking lot was built. But in the last three years, even during the height of holiday fever, the underground parking lot has never been needed. In fact, the number of visitors has been constantly dropping, and we’ve reached a new low this year.”

“Uncle Xu, wait a minute, you said the underground parking lot hasn’t been needed since three years ago, meaning the parking lot hasn’t been used since then? Does this mean it’s currently abandoned?” Chen Ge had a glow in his eyes that made Uncle Xu uncomfortable.

“Yes, when New Century Park was first open, there were cars and people everywhere. You would need to line up for at least two hours for any attraction. That was the time of our prime; alas, we’re now slowly being forgotten by the city.” Thinking about the past, Uncle Xu could not help but sigh. “However, that’s nothing to be sad about; after all, we were lucky enough to once enjoy a time of glory, right?”

“Uncle Xu, if one wished to rent the park’s underground parking lot, how much would it cost?”

“Huh?” Uncle Xu was confused by Chen Ge’s sudden question. “Why would you ask that?”

A plan was forming in Chen Ge’s mind. Now, he had found the ideal space to expand his Haunted House. “I want to reuse the parking lot. According to what you said, it’s currently in a half-abandoned state, so why not let me use it?”

“Have you lost your mind? Why do you want to rent that place? To rear bats?” Uncle Xu really feared that this young man had lost his mind.

Since the park management would eventually catch on to what he was doing, Chen Ge did not consider lying about it. “I want to expand the Haunted House. With my current financial situation, the underground parking lot is perfect. The rent won’t be that high, and the underground environment is a perfect match for a Haunted House.”

“Kid, what’s wrong with you today? A three-story Haunted House is not enough for you to worry about? Do you know how large the underground parking lot is? Even if the management is willing to rent it to you, when you finish setting up the place, the park will already be closed.” Uncle Xu shrugged. “Don’t be stupid, you had better focus on your work.”

“Uncle Xu, I’m serious.”

“Do you think I’m joking with you?” After switching the walkie-talkie back on, Uncle Xu wandered back to the crowd. When he was several steps away, he turned back to tell Chen Ge, “I’ll give you the 5,000 tomorrow morning, but make sure you keep your feet firmly on solid ground, stop imagining the impossible.”

“I know.” Chen Ge followed behind Uncle Xu. Looking at the crowd that had gathered in front of his Haunted House, he pouted. “In any case, I don’t feel like the number of visitors has decreased. After all, my Haunted House has always enjoyed a zero visitor rate before this.”

After squeezing through the crowd, Chen Ge stood beside the group of students and said, “Rested enough already? If you don’t get up soon, these people are going to think I did some immoral things to all of you.”

“Give me a few more minutes, your Haunted House needs some time to digest.”

“What are you looking at, I’m not afraid. I merely sprained my ankle when I was in there, so that’s why I can’t get up now.”

“Everyone looks like a killer to me now, what am I to do?”

“Stop being so stubborn, we lost to his Haunted House this time,” Monkey said as he climbed down the steps. He waved the five stars review he just submitted on the Haunted House on his phone before Chen Ge and stood before the man saying, “But don’t think that’s the end of this. We’re not going to surrender so easily.”

“Meaning you all plan to come back tomorrow?”

“If not for the fact we have exams tomorrow, do you think would really be afraid of the challenge?” Monkey sounded rather brave... if only his pale lips could stop quivering and his legs could stop shaking.

“Either way, my doors are always open for business should any of you want to come again.” Chen Ge was close to treating the students from Jiujiang Medical University as his lucky charm.

“I will not be coming back again. You’ll have to drag my dead body here if you want me to come back here.” He San looked gloomily at Chen Ge. It looked like the young man was truly scarred by the bloodshot eye in the crack of the door.

“Junior, be careful what you wish for.” Xiao Hui stood up with help from He San. She glared at Chen Ge. “You’re the first man who has made me cry to the point that my make-up is all ruined; I’ll definitely remember you.”

Noticing the bump on the back of Xiao Hui’s head, he did not have the heart to fight back, so he merely smiled. The group of medical students headed toward the entrance of the park, holding each other for support. When Chen Ge thought they had left, Brother Feng came running back to him alone. With a complicated expression, he told Chen Ge, “I’ve been thinking about your question. I am still unable to believe that they’re real, if anything, it’s probably explainable using theories related to psychological trauma and stimulus.”

Chen Ge knew what he was referring to. “Perhaps, by the way, I haven’t gotten your full name.”

“It’s He Feng, I’m older than most of them and will be starting my residency in a few days.”

“Pleased to make your acquaintance, hopefully we’ll meet again soon.”

After they exchanged phone numbers, Chen Ge returned to the Haunted House. He closed the gates and placed a sign saying ‘Temporarily Closed for Maintenance’ on it.

“Boss, there’re still many visitors waiting outside. Why are we closing?”

“There’s a little problem, so we’ll call it a day. Do you mind explaining it to the customers?” Chen Ge took off the Doctor Skull-cracker outfit and went back to the Props room to cut up some black clothes before he headed back up the Murder by Midnight scenario.

He started covering all the mirrors, but there were too many rooms, and he soon ran out of cloth. This scenario is too big. Before the cameras are ready, I cannot risk the visitors’ lives by having them up here; it’s too dangerous.

After locking up the door to the Murder by Midnight scenario, Chen Ge returned downstairs. The visitors outside the Haunted House had mostly left. Only one or two visitors still remained.

“Xiao Wan, you can remove your make-up. It’s time to go home.”

After saying goodbye to Xiao Wan, Chen Ge returned to the staff breakroom. He hadn’t had a real rest since the day before, so he fell asleep the moment his head hit the pillow.

Chapter 39

Chapter 39: The Sound from the Third Floor

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

With the arrival of night, silence fell over the Haunted House like a blanket.

Suddenly, a weird sound like someone was sawing something shattered the peaceful quiet. In the staff breakroom, Chen Ge's eyes slowly peeled open. He glanced at the phone—it was 1:10 am.

...

He turned to bury his head under the pillow, but the weird sound kept drilling itself into his ears.

Am I dreaming? Who is making all that noise?

Every single prop in the Haunted House was hand-made or upgraded by Chen Ge, so he knew that no prop in the building would make a sawing sound. After only six hours of sleep, Chen Ge was still feeling a bit blurry. He pinched the inside of his leg hard to wake himself up before putting on his clothes and grabbing an iron hammer out of the nearby toolbox.

He switched on the flashlight and pushed the door of the breakroom open. The Haunted House at midnight was many times scarier than it was during daytime. Chen Ge leaned against the door, not in a hurry to go out.

Can't be a burglar, would any sane person choose to rob a Haunted House near midnight? Can't be the rats either, the sound of their chewing wouldn't be so loud and clear. After vetoing these two normal possibilities, Chen Ge's mind wandered toward the not-so-normal possibility. Could it be that the monster has escaped from the mirror?

Due to a lack of cloth, not all the mirrors on the third floor's Murder by Midnight scenario were covered up. He stared down the darkened hallway and retreated back into the breakroom. He only dared wander out after grabbing the doll his parents left behind for him. The sound came from above, so Chen Ge followed the sound up the stairs before stopping at the door to the Murder by Midnight scenario.

As I expected, it's coming from here, but now it's unclear whether the source is the lingering spirits from Ping An Apartments or the mirror monster. Chen Ge hesitated at the door. Honestly, he too was not that willing to enter a scary scenario so late at night.

However, allowing himself to be tortured by the sawing sound was not a valid solution either. Chen Ge gripped the hammer in his hand and said in his heart, I have The Specters' Favored title and have received the goodwill from the residents of Ping An Apartment's lingering spirits. Therefore, even if it is the thing from inside the mirror, it won't be able to do me much harm.

He was reminded of what happened to He San. It was Xiao Wan's sudden appearance that ruined the thing's plan, so in a way, the monster probably was not as powerful as he made it out to be.

I have to go in. After all, I'll need to deal with it eventually. The more I know about it, the greater the confidence I'll have in dealing with it. Chen Ge calmed himself down. He told himself, he was not afraid of the monster itself but rather the unknown it represented.

After pushing open the door, a faded smell of mold drifted into Chen Ge's nose; this place was getting closer to the actual environment of Ping An Apartments by the hour. The room doors on both sides of the corridor were half-closed. Chen Ge held the phone in one hand while the other grabbed hold of the hammer.

The sound of sawing intensified, a sign that Chen Ge was getting close to the truth. He walked through the entire third floor before stopping at the door that he was sure the sawing sound was coming from. The room door was closed, and as Chen Ge placed his palm over the doorknob, the icy feeling of steel jolted him awake. His muscles tensed as he shoved the door open.

"Who's in here?" Chen Ge yelled as he dashed into the room with the iron hammer raised high. He saw a well-built dark shadow half-squatting inside the toilet. It looked suspiciously like He Feng!

The black shadow did not expect the interruption; it dropped what it was holding and jumped inside the mirror and disappeared.

"Stop right there!" Chen Ge screamed as he waved the hammer. It only made contact with air. The toilet was now empty like everything that he had just seen was an illusion.

That shadow can't be He Feng! Why would it have a similar build to He Feng? Standing before the mirror, Chen Ge looked at his reflection, and he felt weirdly uncomfortable. This monster is mimicking He Feng? But why would it do that?

The appearance of the black shadow brought many questions, but it also answered two for Chen Ge. One, the mirror monster had now gained the ability to leave the mirror; two, it could morph into the person who once looked inside the mirror.

This thing is more dangerous than I thought.

The sawing sound that echoed through the building had finally stopped. Chen Ge squatted down to examine what the black shadow had dropped earlier. Four ragdolls and several sharp mirror pieces were littered on the rough-hewn cement floor.

Chen Ge held the dolls in his palms. The dolls that represented the mother and two sisters were fine, other than the normal dust and mud that covered their bodies. However, the doll that represented the father had its neck almost sawn off, and there were cuts all over its body.

Why is the father doll the only one that's injured?

However, Chen Ge soon realized why. The father doll helped He Feng escape from the monster's clutches, so this was an act of vengeance.

It seems like the four lingering spirits aren't strong enough to stop the monster inside the mirror, so they could only allow themselves to be bullied by it.

Chen Ge had no idea about the situation of the other world, so he could only come up with the explanation from all his previous observations. The victims have no attack methods other than scaring people. The mirror monster is at least one level higher than the lingering spirits of the victims, but it runs whenever it is around humans. This means that the monster's physical combat ability is rather weak as well; its main method of attack is psychological, manipulating people's internal weakness to create an illusion and then take control of them.

Combining He San and He Feng's experience as well as what happened earlier, Chen Ge came up with this hypothesis. The mirror monster was troublesome, but if Chen Ge could face it in person, then most of its power would be void. Therefore, if Chen Ge manage to lure the monster out of the protection of the mirror, everything would be easy.

I need to figure out a plan. If possible I wish to take care of it tonight so that I'll be able to use this scenario tomorrow.

Chen Ge was cool and collected. The monster inside the mirror was acting more and more wantonly, so if he did not deal with it soon, he would not be able to operate the Haunted House peacefully.

Chen Ge hugged the four dolls in his arms as he left the Murder by Midnight scenario. He locked the door behind him before going to the Props Room. As he sewed the cuts back up, he tried to come up with a plan.

The creature is highly aggressive and seems to have a curious interest in live humans. So the simplest way of luring it out of the mirror is to use a live human as bait. Chen Ge was a master seamstress because he patched up most of the injuries in just a few minutes.

But the real question is, after I've lured it out, how do I kill it? Rumors say that ghosts are all afraid of salt and garlic, but must I risk my life to try out such hearsay?

Chen Ge thought about it before deciding to log into the supernatural forums to ask the experts.

Chapter 40

Chapter 40: New Nightmare Mission

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After logging in, Chen Ge noticed his username had changed into a purple color. Clicking on his account profile, he realized it was because the thirty-minute video that he had posted the other day had been shared, viewed, recommended, and commented at least several thousand times already. With a cursory glance, Chen Ge found nothing useful; most of them were there simply due to curiosity.

Who knows, perhaps this might work, maybe there are experts hiding on the internet? Chen Ge started writing a new thread to provide more information about the mirror monster and used the special power afforded Purple Accounts to open a bounty thread.

...

“After playing the game on the video, I realized I’m now being haunted by the creature inside the mirror! Asking for help on how to remove this threat!”

The replies came pouring in mere seconds later.

” OP ¹ , you’re still alive?”

“A black dog’s blood is the best solution, or rear a cock, legend says all the bad stuff are afraid of cocks.”

“OP, listen to me and call this number. Tell them you need help, you can thank me later.”

“Ghosts are nothing but memories that were left behind in the physical world. Killing it will only earn you bad karma. Kindness goes a long way.”

“OP, have you tried reasoning with it? Education is the best solution!”

“If there’s something strange in your neighborhood, who you gonna call? Ghostbusters!

“If there’s something weird and it don’t look good, who you gonna call? Ghostbusters!”

“Mix yellow bean, white rice, and Indian ink together. Soak them in salt water for fifteen minutes. Spread them on the ground to watch them grow into powerful bean warriors.”

“I once saw a video that described the story of a man who was also haunted by a female ghost. To deal with her, he bought a gun, and when the female ghost returned that night, the man shot himself and later dragged the ghost into the bedroom to...”

“OP, serious though, listen to me, this method will definitely work! Go find an iron sword, preferably one that has tasted blood before. Ghosts are nothing but special magnetic energy, and such a sword will be able to harm them!”

Chen Ge scrolled through the comments, and only the iron sword seemed somewhat plausible; the others were merely trolling or impossible to accomplish. He also knew about the traditional legends regarding the exorcism power of a black dog’s blood and cocks, but where was he going to find such things in the middle of the night?

After leaving the forum, Chen Ge tossed his phone to the side, spacing out as he sat in his chair. Combating the mirror monster meant putting his life on the line; he definitely could not rely on these half-baked online suggestions.

After a roundabout detour, Chen Ge pulled out the black phone again. He knew he had to rely on the black phone because it was the only thing that was trustworthy. However, the black phone operated on the Law of Equivalent Exchange; to gain something, something of equal value had to be lost.

After several days of trial and error, Chen Ge had gained some understanding regarding the hidden laws of the black phone, such as its mission reward structure. Easy and Normal Missions rewarded items that would supplement the operation of the Haunted House; only Nightmare Missions would provide rewards that were directly beneficial to Chen Ge, like special powers.

In other words, to deal with the creature inside the mirror, completing Easy and Normal Missions were pointless; he needed the reward from the Nightmare Mission. However, Chen Ge was hesitant because he knew how dangerous Nightmare Mission; he could easily attract another dangerous specter on top of the mirror monster.

What should I do? Take the stakes or wait a little while longer?

It was then the Chen Ge realized it was already a new day, meaning the Daily Missions had been refreshed.

Easy Mission: If you want to provide the visitors a scary experience, then first you have to pay notice to the rhythm and tempo of their experience in the Haunted House. Setting off the scare too early might cause the visitors to lose their interest, so it is suggested that you install some sound detectors or surveillance cameras in the Haunted House to keep track of your visitors' progress.

Normal Mission: You've achieved the criteria to enable the first expansion of the Haunted House. Search for a suitable location soon! Due to the current space limitation, you are unable to perform any Trial Missions to unlock scenarios!

Nightmare Mission: There are weird sounds coming from the bathroom every midnight. If you want to know why, follow my directions.

Daily Missions will refresh every day at midnight. User can only apply for one mission each day, and the reward corresponds to the difficulty of the mission.

(Beware! The more difficult the mission, the more dangerous it'll be, so please choose carefully!)

Chen Ge read the mission descriptions. Since he temporarily could not complete the Normal Mission, he skipped it. Thus, he was left with the choice of the Easy Mission or Nightmare Mission.

When Uncle Xu gets me the money tomorrow morning, it should take less than a day to purchase all the necessary surveillance, but it'll take more than that to install it all. According to the description, the Nightmare Mission is related to the bathroom... it sounds creepy.

Chen Ge was caught between a rock and a hard place. He was not confident that he could finish the Easy Mission, and even if he did, the reward would not be that great. However, the Nightmare Mission was too dangerous; after all, it all started inside the bathroom.

He sat mired in his thoughts inside the Props Room. Before he came to a decision, the sound of sawing came again, this time, more distracting than before. Chen Ge tilted his head back and was sure that the source was again the third floor.

I've already carried out all four of the dolls, what else is it cutting? Chen Ge found the creature increasingly irksome. After putting the sewn dolls back into his pocket, he rushed up the stairs to the third floor holding his trusty hammer. When he arrived at the entrance to the Murder by Midnight scenario, he was shocked by what he saw.

There were mirror pieces lying around the entrance, and there were scratch marks on the wooden door.

The creature has been clawing at the door! What is it up to?

Chen Ge's back was covered with cold sweat. He could imagine a monster holding the mirror pieces while running around the building when he was asleep. He would never allow such a dangerous existence to live under the same roof as him!

Normally a nice guy, Chen Ge had sour expression at that moment. He locked the door to the Murder by Midnight scenario behind him and walked down the corridor, gripping the hammer. He stalked into every room to shatter every mirror he could find on the third floor. The sound of glass shattering echoed through the night. Chen Ge felt more like himself when he reached the end of the third-floor corridor.

During the first Nightmare Mission, the creature was held back by the doll who sat before the mirror. When it was attacking He San, it had to retreat when Xiao Wan strode into the room. However, after assaulting He Feng, it gained the ability to leave the mirror! It's growing, and it's growing fast!

Chen Ge knew he could not wait anymore. His Haunted House was finally on its way back, and he could not allow it to be ruined by an unknown creature.

After leaving the scenario and locking the door once more, Chen Ge switched on the black phone to accept the Nightmare Mission with a do or die determination. Hopefully the reward for this mission will be powerful enough.

"Are you sure you wish to accept the Nightmare Mission? After acceptance, unknown circumstances might occur."

"Yes."

The screen glowed, and the actual Nightmare Mission description started to surface.

Chapter 41

Chapter 41: Hold Your Breath

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“The Specters’ Favored, your courage is admirable. The Nightmare Mission this time is both a test and a reward!

“The name of the game is ‘Deep Water’. It can allow you to bypass the line between the living and the dead, giving you the opportunity to see those who have unfortunately passed away.

...

“Mission Requirement: Enter the bathroom alone at 3:30 am. Lock the door and turn off the lights. Fill up the tub with water and light a candle by the side before lying in it. The period between 3:30 and 3:40 am is the time of a day when Yin energy is most concentrated; it is also when the Yin and Yang cycle of the day converge. What you need to do is hold your breath at 3:44 am and submerge yourself under water, thinking about the name of the person you wish to meet the most.

“When time enters the twilight period between darkness and light, you’ll be able to see them at the edge of living and dead.

“Mission will be accomplished if you see said individual(s). If you do not, the mission will be automatically completed after holding your breath for sixty seconds.”

Chen Ge had a complicated feeling after reading the mission description. Compared to the first Nightmare Mission, this mission seemed a lot simpler. Closing one’s eyes for thirty minutes in a scary environment required superhuman courage and staunch constitution, but holding one’s breath for sixty seconds seemed doable for most.

However, it was exactly because it was doable by most that he was worried. This was a Nightmare Mission; it could not be that simple.

Similar to the previous Nightmare Mission, the location is the bathroom, but the difference is that I’m required to sink myself inside the bathtub and hold my breath for sixty seconds.

He carefully studied every single step of the mission. Including the preparation time, at most, the mission would require fifteen minutes, what scary thing could possibly happen in such a short amount of time?

Chen Ge was interested not only because the mission looked simpler but also due to a line among the mission description: “allow you to bypass the line between the living and the dead, giving you the opportunity to see those who have unfortunately passed away.”

Different from most, Chen Ge became calmer during periods of duress. He sat in his chair, contemplating the possibilities. His parents had disappeared in an abandoned countryside hospital, leaving behind nothing but a doll and the black phone. The black phone was activated when he was about to give up on the Haunted House. During the first Nightmare Mission, the doll became the thing that saved his life. So, the question worth pondering was, could the doll and the black phone have been purposely left behind by his parents to act as clues to their whereabouts?

If that was true, then this second Nightmare Mission would be additionally interesting.

Perhaps, they're trying to contact me through this method to provide me with more information?

Of course, this was merely Chen Ge's speculation. To be perfectly honest, even if the Nightmare Mission was not a plan set up by his parents, Chen Ge would carry on with this mission.

Allow you to bypass the line between the living and the dead, giving you the opportunity to see those who have unfortunately passed away.

For Chen Ge, this was a chance to confirm once and for all whether his parents were still alive or not. If he did not see his parents, then it meant that they were merely missing and still alive. If he did see them, then it would validate Chen Ge's first speculation; his parents left the black phone behind for a purpose, probably as a channel to siphon information to him. Perhaps the black phone even contained his parents' actual last words.

Looks like I have no choice.

Chen Ge glanced at his watch. It was already 2:55 am; thirty-five minutes until the starting time of the mission. I've wasted too much time shattering those mirrors on the third floor; I've got to hurry.

The mission requirement was for him to lie in a bathtub filled with water, but the only bathroom with a bathtub was inside the Murder by Midnight scenario. One of the doors of the workers' passageway was connected to a bathroom with a bathtub. It was the trap door Chen Ge had been using to enter the scenario and to shuttle He San's group out of the scenario.

There are only thirty-five minutes left. There isn't enough time to go look for a hotel with a bathtub, so it looks like I'll need to do this within the mirror monster's territory.

Since the decision had been made, Chen Ge no longer hesitated. He carried the four dolls with him and exited the Haunted House in the middle of the night to head toward the park's canteen to grab two cleavers.

Even though these haven't been used to slaughter pigs or sheep before, I did see the workers use them to prepare chicken and fish. I suppose you can consider them blades that have tasted blood before.

Chen Ge placed the blades beside his nose to take a sniff. Instead of the expectant smell of bloodshed, all he could smell was the heavy scent of green chilies and onions, which caused his eyes to water.

After returning to the Haunted House, Chen Ge ran between the fake bathroom and the toilet, carrying buckets of water. When it was ten minutes to the start of the mission, he finally managed to fill up the tub.

Everything is ready; it's time to start.

The Murder by Midnight scenario's front door was closed, and Chen Ge entered the bathroom from the workers' passageway. As demanded by the black phone, he was inside the bathroom alone. The mirror inside the bathroom had already been shattered by Chen Ge. The pieces made scrunching noises as his footsteps shuffled over them.

It was quite noisy transporting the water, so the mirror monster should know about my presence by now, but that doesn't matter; I only need to hold my breath for one minute, and everything will be fine.

From Chen Ge's perspective, the mission was weird but not that dangerous.

He locked the bathroom's door from within and rested the doll left behind by his parents against the door. Then, he placed the four ragdolls that represented the lingering spirits of Ping An Apartments' victims around the bathtub.

"Everyone, I'll be depending on your help later. Please help me fight for that one minute!"

Similar to before, he switched on his phone's recording camera and placed it on a suitable table to start the recording. However, the place was so dark that the screen was almost black, except for a fuzzy human-shaped shadow.

At the three-minute mark, Chen Ge removed the contents from his pockets and placed them on the counter. Following the black phone's instructions, he lit a candle and stuck it to the bathtub's rim. The dancing candlelight became the sole source of light in the room. Glancing downwards, Chen Ge saw his faces reflected in the many mirror pieces that littered the floor.

He removed his shirt and took a step toward the bathroom. Ripples could be seen breaking the water's surface. The bathtub was shallow, but due to the dim lighting, Chen Ge found himself unable to see the bottom. Touching the water with his fingers, a chill ran up his arm and spread through his body, causing him to shiver.

This mission sure is freaky.

After taking one last look at the time, Chen Ge stepped into the tub while holding the two cleavers. As he sat down, the water overflowed, drenching the mirror pieces.

*F*ck, it's cold...*

Chen Ge could feel his body temperature dropping; even his heart rate had slowed. The bathroom was quiet except for the dripping sound of water that fell down from the edge of the bathtub.

Just one minute, after this one minute, I'll have the reward, and the most important question on my mind will be answered!

Chen Ge breathed in and out to control his heart rate, waiting for 3:44 am to arrive.

Chapter 42

Chapter 42: Sixty Seconds

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Inside the darkened bathroom, Chen Ge sat alone inside the bathtub. He breathed in and out, circulating the air inside his lungs. The time noted on the black phone was precisely 3:42 am. He only had one chance, so he had to be careful.

The room was quiet, and he could not hear anything from outside the corridor; the monster from the mirror did not seem to be around.

...

Time ticked by. Chen Ge put the electronic watch he had brought purposely for this occasion on his side. When the digits changed to 3:43, he trained his focus and opened his mouth wide to slowly take in his breath.

As the candlelight flickered, Chen Ge slowly submerged his body into the water. His eyes were glued to the electronic watch; he had never been so focused in his life before. When the digit changed again, Chen Ge slipped underneath the water surface without hesitation.

It was finally 3:44 am!

The icy water flooded him from all sides. Submerging oneself in a bathtub filled with water in the middle of the night, the experience was unique to say the least.

The water numbed the senses, and it felt like there was nothing but darkness and oneself slowly falling into the abyss; there was complete silence other than the pounding of one's heart inside one's ears. The icy water pulled every sensory receptor in one's body taut.

Lying inside the bathtub, Chen Ge abandoned all thoughts as he listened to his heartbeat and started the countdown.

Sixty seconds, I only need to hold on for sixty seconds.

This was the first time he had done something like this as well. The surface of the water seemed to merge with the darkness. The candlelight, which felt like it was going out, drifted away from Chen Ge like he was slowly falling into the ocean.

One, two...

After the initial ten seconds, time seemed to have slowed down. The sound of water attempted to swallow even his heartbeat. All he could see was darkness. Chen Ge repeated his parents' names in his heart and held his pose with both his hands holding the cleavers and allowing his body to be carried along by the flow of the water.

The oxygen in his lungs was fast depleting. Chen Ge was starting to feel uncomfortable, like something heavy was pressing down on his body.

Fifteen, sixteen...

Every time his heart pumped, it exhausted the oxygen inside his lungs. As his heart slowed, so did the time; every second felt like an eternity. The feeling of discomfort intensified. It felt like a pair of hands was pressing down on his neck, slowly tightening around it.

Chen Ge opened his eyes, but underneath the water, he was unable to see anything. It felt like he had travelled to another world and was trapped in it. Three or four seconds later, his face turned startlingly white.

How long has it been? Should be over soon, right?

Suddenly, there was a violent ripple that crossed the surface, and a weird sound crossed through the heavy silence. The sound seemed to come from the outside corridor. Chen Ge had no idea how he managed to hear it so clearly... perhaps it was something done on purpose to distract his focus.

Footsteps? Someone is walking outside the corridor?

His heartbeat, which had slowed, started to race, and his body tensed involuntarily. That is probably the mirror monster. Hopefully the dolls will be able to hold it off for another thirty seconds for me to finish the mission!

His brain slowed to a crawl, and a buzzing sound appeared in his ears. Chen Ge was not doing so well, and the footsteps from the corridor only made it worse. He tried his best to focus and continued to repeat his parents' names internally as he returned to counting his heartbeat.

Twenty-eight, twenty-nine...

Chen Ge was unable to tell whether it was the water that had distorted the sound, but he swore the footsteps had begun to speed up, as if the opposite party was desperately trying to get into the bathroom.

Several seconds later, Chen Ge felt like a heavy piece of boulder was falling on top of his chest. The blood vessels on his neck started to pop. His limbs were going weak with cold. His brain was slowing down, and only Chen Ge's determination was making him hold on.

BANG! BANG! BANG!

Something slammed into the bathroom door without warning. Chen Ge felt like his heart was in a vice; the thing outside the door had lost its patience!

The opponent gave up after slamming the door a few more times. Perhaps it was the doll behind the door that had saved Chen Ge again. Silence returned to the room. Everything reverted to normal, or as normal as it could have been considering the circumstances. Normally, Chen Ge could easily hold his breath for a minute, but the footsteps from the corridor and the slamming on the doors had broken his composure. The degree of oxygen exhaustion increased when an animal was in distress.

He knew he was reaching his limit. The last wisp of oxygen inside his lungs had been depleted. Every second was torment.

Thirty-nine, forty...

When he counted to forty, Chen Ge's brain started to shut down. He had lost the ability to even keep the countdown going. If he allowed the little focus that he had left to waver, Chen Ge was sure he would drown. The sense of asphyxiation blotted out his thoughts, and all that remained in his head were his childhood memories with his parents.

A vein was pulsing weakly on Chen Ge's neck, and his hands that held the cleavers started to relax. He felt himself drifting toward the edge of death, and it was not until then that he truly understood the meaning of that sentence inside the mission description.

"It can allow you to bypass the line between the living and the dead, giving you the opportunity to see those who have unfortunately passed away."

What it really meant was, as night changed into day, those on the brink of death could peer into the other world!

Chen Ge stared unblinkingly at the surface of the water. His pupils were dilated, and it felt like he was pulling away from the surface. However, he could not see anything or anyone other than darkness, a darkness that was so quiet and yet filled with so much despair.

The feeling of one's lungs being squeezed by an invisible hand was a sensation that could not be put into words.

No, if I stay down here any longer, I really will die in this bathtub.

He believed he had survived half a minute already, and the people that Chen Ge wanted to see had not appeared. He had given up hope, or rather, he was glad that his parents did not appear; this meant that they were still alive.

His arms touched the cold surface of the bathtub's bottom. Using the last vestige of rationality, Chen Ge decided it was time to give up. His arms increased in strength to push himself out of the water when Chen Ge felt something was wrong!

Something was pressing down on his head, stopping him from coming up to the surface. His dilated pupils focused to one point as Chen Ge looked up, but there was nothing there!

The dolls had sealed the door and the area surrounding the bathtub; the mirror monster should not have been able to come in, so who was behind this?

More veins started to pop on Chen Ge's neck; his face was pretty much lifeless. At the very last minute, he used the last trace of energy in his body to grip the cleaver and wave it above his head.

The extended period of oxygen deprivation had pushed his body and spirit to their limits; like a string pulled taut, they could snap at any moment.

The cleaver cut through the surface, causing the water to splash all around. Chen Ge felt like he made contact with something, and he heard a crisp snap beside his ears before the mysterious force above his head suddenly disappeared.

Without hindrance, Chen Ge sat up in the bathtub immediately, gasping for air as he broke the surface!

Chapter 43

Chapter 43: Mission Complete

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chilling water slid down Chen Ge's hair. He was reeling from the fact that he had come so close to death. His chest was pumping unevenly, his lips turning from pale to purple, his hands still gripping the cleavers.

He felt more collected two minutes later, and the light-headedness dissolved. Wiping the water droplets from his face, Chen Ge stood up unsteadily from the bathtub. With the weak light of the candle, he could see that nothing had changed inside the bathroom.

...

I swear I managed to cut something earlier; there was that snap too.

Chen Ge looked around him and saw a cut left on the edge of the tub.

Did I accidentally cut the tub? That shouldn't be it; there was definitely someone holding my head down in the water earlier, and the cleaver should have cut that person.

Desperate to know the truth, Chen Ge climbed out of the tub to grab the phone that was still recording. He stopped the recording and replayed it from the start.

At 3:30 am, I sat inside the bathtub, and nothing happened on screen until 3:43 am.

Chen Ge leaned against the wall as his eyes glued themselves to the screen. At 3:44 am, he lay down in the tub, causing the water to overflow.

Looking at it from another perspective, this does look rather creepy.

When he was doing this in person, Chen Ge did not feel like it was all that odd, but looking at it through the camera's lens, there was something chillingly bizarre about this.

Chen Ge glanced at the time stamp. For the initial twenty seconds after he submerged himself, everything was normal inside the bathroom. There was the occasional sound of water dripping.

Ten seconds later, Chen Ge frowned. The video that was playing on screen was showing a different reality than he remembered!

Based on his memory, by then, the footsteps should have been heard from the corridor, but it was absolutely peaceful on the screen. The audio did not pick up anything weird, definitely no sound of footsteps. Five seconds later, the door slamming that Chen Ge remembered clearly also did not show up on-screen. All that was captured on the video was the darkened surface of the water and the dancing candlelight.

The footsteps and door slamming were all parts of my hallucination?

When fifty seconds had passed, the originally peaceful water surface was disturbed by a copious amount of air bubbles. It was obvious that the Chen Ge in the video was close to his limits. However, right then, something happened on the screen that made chills crawl all over Chen Ge's body.

There was a piece of shattered mirror the size of a palm lying beside the bathtub. Its surface started to cloud over like it had been swallowed by a dark fog. Eventually, a black shadow slowly extended itself from it. It leaned against the tub; the scene was definitely supernatural. Based on its build and features, it looked like He Feng.

The number of air bubbles started to increase, and the video was about to reach its climax. In the video, Chen Ge's body and mind were tested to their limits already, and he was about to give up. Chen Ge could see himself inside the tub moving upwards.

However, just as his head was about to break the surface, the black shadow beside the tub suddenly reached out with both of its hands to press on his head!

The shock caused water to stream into Chen Ge's nostrils, choking the man alive. Chen Ge struggled vehemently as the cleavers in his hands waved frantically above. The black shadow flickered like an image on an old television. The cleavers affected him but only slightly.

At the most crucial moment, the ragdolls that were placed around the bathtub started to teeter like they were being blown by winds. The smallest among them tipped over and used its body to block the palm-sized mirror piece completely.

The black shadow's body started to blur. It was then that Chen Ge's cleaver inadvertently made contact with its head, and the shadow disappeared. The cleaver flew out of Chen Ge's grasp, and before it landed on the floor, it scratched the edge of the bathtub, leaving a light mark. Almost at the same time, Chen Ge burst through the water surface.

The video ended then. After knowing the truth, the desire within Chen Ge's heart to demolish that creature intensified. The thing has to be vanquished!

Chen Ge saved the video and picked up the ragdoll that was lying on top of the mirror. The small girl's back had been cut by the sharp edge of the mirror, and her body was drenched.

They're both existence from the other side, but their personalities are completely different. Some of them are just in it for the scare, and they're good at heart, while others harbor nothing but malice.

Chen Ge dried his body and put on his clothes. He placed all the dolls inside his pocket, and it was then that he felt better.

Shattering the mirrors is useless. It can still crawl out of the mirror, so how am I supposed to deal with a creature like this? The thing can appear and disappear at will and can't be found; I'm at a natural disadvantage dealing with things like this.

Chen Ge picked up the palm-sized mirror out of curiosity, but he was shocked to realize the water droplets on it seemed to be moving with a will of their own. They trailed across the surface forming a number —3.

Is this a taunt from the monster? Three, representing He San, He Feng, and myself? Or will it kill me within three days?

Chen Ge had no clue what the number meant, but he was certain it wouldn't be anything good. Then again, do you really think I am afraid of you? One of these days, I'll yank you out of the mirror and put you out in the sun to scorch you alive!

Chen Ge came up with the worst curse he could think of. He had come so close to dying earlier.

After taking another deep breath, Chen Ge went to pick up the black phone. He did not have much anticipation, but when he saw the message that appeared on screen, his eyes lit up.

“The Specters’ Favored, you managed to hold your breath for 62 seconds. Congratulations for completing the Nightmare Mission! Obtain the mission reward—Yin Yang Vision.

“Yin Yang Vision: See through the line that blurs between the two worlds. Use the Yang body to observe the Yin presence (A great upgrade to one’s vision, other function currently unknown).

“Notice: You have completed two Nightmare Daily Missions. After completing the third Nightmare Mission, it will randomly unlock the Trial Mission for one of the scenarios!

“Completed three consecutive missions with more than a 95 percent completion rate, unlocking new feature—My Friends from the Other Side [Affection Status]!”

After reading through the series of messages, Chen Ge did not know what he should feel. The requirement of the Nightmare Mission was for him to hold his breath for sixty seconds. Due to the outside disturbance, he had already planned to surrender at around fifty or so seconds, and he would have failed the mission. However, the desire of the mirror monster to kill him had forced him to hold on for an additional few seconds, allowing him to complete the mission with a very close success.

In a way, the appearance of the mirror monster was a blessing in disguise, because in the end, the result was positive.

Chen Ge went through the black phone and realized how crucial this Nightmare Mission was. If he had failed the mission, not only would he not have earned the mission reward, the unlocking of the new scenario would have been delayed, and most importantly, the new function of the phone would not have been unlocked.

Compelled by curiosity, Chen Ge clicked the new tab open. The interface changed, and five unfamiliar names appeared on screen.

Chapter 44

Chapter 44: Reviews

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Current Affection Levels:

“Qin Guoheng (Lingering Spirit): Unfamiliar (You two can’t be considered friends; he was helping you out of kindness)

...

“Du Ruoshui (Lingering Spirit): Unfamiliar

“Qin Munan (Lingering Spirit): Unfamiliar

“Qin Xiaoxiao (Baleful Specter): Slightly Favorable Opinion (You’ve managed to attract her attention. To her, you are slightly closer than a stranger)

“Zhang Ya (Red Specter): Crazy About You (You are a unique presence to her; she likes you, but only after you’re dead)

“To increase the affection level, you could expose them to the screams of visitors that are wealthy with negative feelings, gift them presents that contain Malice Points, or complete their Bloody Heart Mission.

“When the affection level reaches a certain point, they will selectively listen to your orders.

“Warning: Only specters with deep malice and a dark history will be able to provide you with a Bloody Heart Mission. Completing the mission will greatly increase the affection level and will give you the power to get them to help you complete something that isn’t against their will!”

The new feature gave Chen Ge a deeper understanding of his ‘friends’. He removed the smallest doll from his pocket. This doll did not look that much different from the other dolls, at least physically, but the phone app had set her apart. She was the sole baleful specter among the family of lingering spirits.

Something like you can be considered a baleful spirit?

Chen Ge poked Xiaoxiao's cheek with his finger. Xiaoxiao, who was raised into the air, seemed to be a bit angry; she gave Chen Ge the impression of a little kitten who hadn't been weaned from milk, gnashing her teeth in a show of aggression!

I suppose this is an accidental discovery.

If Qin Xiaoxiao was the kind and gentle presence among the baleful specter, then Zhang Ya was the complete opposite. In fact, this was the first time Chen Ge had come across the term 'Red Specter'.

What exactly is the difference between a normal Baleful Specter and a Red Specter?

Chen Ge tried to click on Zhang Ya's name, and the screen changed to reveal a blood-red interface.

"Are you sure you want to accept Zhang Ya's Bloody Heart Mission? Warning! This mission contains a certain level of danger!"

The blood red interface caused cold sweat to appear all over Chen Ge's forehead. But the phone says only specters with exceptionally deep malice and a dark history will be able to provide me with a Bloody Heart Mission. Am I that lucky? To be able to win such a 'prize' from my first draw?

Actually, that was not the end of Chen Ge's thoughts on the matter. He thought to himself, If that's the case, I'd rather give up on such luck!

However, afraid of how Zhang Ya might have reacted if she heard it, he kept it to himself.

Crazy about me, but only after I'm dead? If that's not twisted, I don't know what is!

After exiting the app, the fear brought on by the mirror monster had completely disappeared. Compared to the 'prize' he had gotten from the Wheel of Misfortune, the shadow inside the mirror was nothing. However, this did not mean that Chen Ge would let it go. In contrast, Chen Ge had made it a threat that had to be removed no matter what. Only by removing it would the Haunted House be safe.

Unlocking 'My Friends from the Other Side' provided Chen Ge with more options. From how he saw it, this feature was to set up the foundation for the Haunted House's spectral workers. As more features of the game got released, Chen Ge's interest in it increased.

After gaining an understanding of the new feature, Chen Ge turned to inspect his second reward—Yin Yang Vision.

The reward from Nightmare Missions would provide him with a personal upgrade. Chen Ge tried to look into the distance, but other than the ability to see slightly clearer in the dark, this Yin Yang Vision did not seem to have any other uses.

Perhaps this power requires a special environment to trigger just like Mortician's Make-up.

Chen Ge picked up a random mirror fragment from the floor and put it before his face. Physically speaking, there was not any noticeable change to his pair of eyes; they were similar to before.

From the description, Yin Yang Vision should grant me the ability to see stuff that normal people wouldn't be able to see, but...

Chen Ge raised Xiaoxiao to his eyes, but he saw nothing but a normal ragdoll. Am I using it wrong, or is there a specific method to using the power?

Chen Ge came up with nothing after some more trials, so he decided to put it on the backburner for now. Working his limbs, which had gone numb, Chen Ge stretched inside the bathroom. Then, he sat down inside the bathroom to edit his latest video.

I've suffered so much. I wouldn't be able to face myself in the morning if I didn't share it with the world.

He uploaded the original video onto the supernatural forum. It was 4 am, so Chen Ge didn't expect any responses. However, the moment the new video was released, there was already a new comment.

"Hello, is this a game to attract ghosts? Lying inside the bathroom at midnight will call out the spirits?"

Chen Ge glanced at the first comment and was shocked to realize it came from the forum moderator. He contemplated it for a while before adding the game rules and descriptions under the video and editing the name of the video to 'Why would someone voluntarily drown himself in his bathtub at home?'

Two minutes later, the comment floodgate had been opened. Chen Ge's account had garnered quite a following already on the forum. In fact, some of the users who were already asleep were woken up by their friends just to take a look at the video.

“Lying inside a filled bathtub at 3.30 am alone... Even with the lights on, I wouldn’t dare do that.”

“This new video seems to be even more supernatural than the previous one!”

“What the f*ck is the shadow squatting beside the bathtub?”

“Did you hear anything or see anything out of the ordinary under the water? Boss, please reply!”

“The bathroom is the place with the heaviest Yin energy of the entire building, and the bathtub is a sort of hollow where Yin energy normally gathers. In Feng Shui, we call this ‘洼(wa)’. OP dares to play such a crazy game at a place like this, no wonder he stumbled across dirty stuff.”

“To linger at the line between life and death as the night changes into day... probably only a madman could come up with an idea like this, and only a madman would follow through with it.”

There were a few informational replies on the forum. Chen Ge gave them a cursory read, and similar to before, he did not reply. Instead, he logged out to start editing the video footage.

He cut out his final struggle at the end of the video, and the product he ended up with was 63 seconds long. For short videos, the best were those that were shorter but had more shock value.

However, Chen Ge went against the grain this time. He uploaded a video that was 63 seconds long and named it ‘One-Minute Holding Breath Challenge.’

After releasing the video, those who followed Chen Ge were notified, and some already commented without watching the video.

“Breath holding challenge? There’s no scary video today?”

“What is this? Even a drinking challenge would be more interesting than this!”

“Is this some new challenge? I’m going to give it a try, too.”

“It’s all over; the host’s talent has run out. What the F*ck! What is that thing I saw lying beside the tub? Get the f*ck out of my phone!”

Chapter 45

Chapter 45: Someone Is Trying to Kill Me!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

One minute after the video was posted, Chen Ge's comment section exploded again!

"The shadow leaning against the tub 56 seconds in is a special effect, right? It seems to crawl up from underneath the tub!"

...

"The person waving the cleavers in the video is the host himself? Someone get him an Oscar!"

"If the black shadow had held on any longer, host wouldn't be with us anymore!"

"F*ck this sh*t! I was trying to hold my breath as I started the video, but this thing popped up halfway!"

"Run while you still can! The host only shares ghost videos! Run and don't look back!"

"After staring at my phone for a full minute, I realized I am not going to sleep tonight."

"After your last video, I didn't dare look at the mirror anymore, and after this video, I won't dare take a bath alone anymore! Heartless host, taste this piledriver from me!"

Chen Ge was glad that his video had such a good reception even though it was 4 am. Feeling the 'love' his fans had for him, he realized everything was worth it. Before closing the video app, Chen Ge did not forget to put up an advertisement for his Haunted House. The fans were quick to respond, leaving messages saying they would visit him with some local delicacies.

Buying tickets to visit the Haunted House and, on top of that, wanting to gift me local delicacies, the visitors today sure are nice.

After Chen Ge exited the app, he felt much better. He stretched lazily once more and left the Murder by Midnight scenario, hugging the five dolls to his chest.

The night soon passed, and dawn arrived. The sky outside the Haunted House started to brighten. Chen Ge found several wooden planks from the Props Room. He nailed them entrance and the trap door that was connected to the Murder by Midnight scenario. Before he dealt with the mirror monster, he did not plan to use that scenario.

Twenty a ticket, and Murder by Midnight can fit seven visitors at one time. If one run is counted as fifteen minutes, I'll be able to gain a profit of 560 RMB per hour. One day's work is eight hours, so that translates to more than 4,000 RMB.

The thought squeezed Chen Ge's heart with pain, but he was not blinded by greed. Safety's first. There'll be more to earn after future scenarios are unlocked.

After sealing up the scenario, Chen Ge returned to the staff breakroom. He placed the dolls beside his bed and changed into his running attire. The Trial Mission reminded Chen Ge of the fact that if not for his occasional training, he would have been buried under the ground then.

Xu Wan arrived for work at around 8.40 am. She was surprised to see Chen Ge around the corner with his head full of sweat. In her mind, her boss was not someone who was into exercising.

The gate of the Haunted House swung open, signifying the arrival of a new work day. The two workers stood at their assigned posts, ready to start the operation. At 9 am, the visitors started to enter the park, but the entrance of the Haunted House was still quite empty; it was the most vacant spot of all the attractions inside New Century Park.

"Boss, what did you do inside the Haunted House last night? Why are there water puddles all over the place?"

"I was moping the floor." Chen Ge gave a random excuse before adding, "When you are acting as a ghost, remember to stay far away from any mirrors."

"Why?"

Chen Ge was about to explain it to her when he saw Uncle Xu, the park manager, walking toward them.

“Uncle Xu, is there a problem?” Chen Ge removed the ear-mic. He realized Uncle Xu did not have a very pleased expression.

“You are just getting weirder by the days.” Uncle Xu studied Chen Ge up and down. “Just now, the people from the canteen came to me to report that they are missing their cleavers. I was just wondering which thief would be so odd to only steal two cleavers. After looking at the surveillance, I have just one question to ask. Why weren’t you asleep at night but snuck into the canteen to steal their cleavers? Is it that fun running around waving two cleavers?”

Uncle Xu reminded Chen Ge that the cleavers he had taken from the canteen were still left inside the bathtub.

“I just helped the police solve an open case, right? But one of the killers is still missing, so the cleavers are for self-protection. Don’t worry, I’ll buy the canteen new cleavers tomorrow.”

Chen Ge had no clue whether blades that had touched a ghost before could still be used for culinary purposes, so he didn’t think it was wise to return the cleavers to Uncle Xu.

“It’s getting harder and harder to understand you. Kid, tell me honestly. Are you involved in some illegal dealings behind my back?”

“What kind of illegal dealings can I get into with two cleavers? I’m not doing anything criminal, Uncle Xu, don’t worry.”

Uncle Xu was only half-convinced. However, since the park had just opened for the day, he had too many things to deal with to get into it with Chen Ge. He took a step closer to Chen Ge and pulled out a tightly wrapped plastic case from his pocket, “Here is 5,000, if you have any trouble, please come to me.”

“Uncle Xu, thank you so much. I’ll return you the money this weekend.”

“Just stop making trouble for me, that’ll be more than enough repayment.”

After Uncle Xu left, Chen Ge shoved the money inside his shirt. He leaned against the gate, thinking about how to utilize this money.

5,000 should be just enough to install some cameras. However, the interior space of the Haunted House is now all occupied. I’ll need to expand before I can unlock new scenarios. Renting the underground parking lot is not a bad idea, but I wonder how much the management will charge me.

Chen Ge had a mounting headache from the many problems he realized he was facing. The biggest problem I have is a lack of money! The reward money is still nowhere to be seen. Should I try to hurry them?

He turned to look in the direction of the police station. When his gaze scanned a certain corner, his pupils narrowed, and his gaze centered on a curious visitor. The man was wearing a cap low on his head and a long-sleeved top with two hands stuck inside his pockets. He wandered between several attractions as if deciding which one he should try.

That person looks so familiar.

Due to Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge's vision was better than most. The person probably did not know he had been exposed.

Shall I go stop him?

Just as Chen Ge was contemplating that, he had a group of visitors who wanted to visit the Haunted House. He threw himself into work, and the suspicious visitor was thus tossed out of his mind. When Xu Wan and Chen Ge were about to go for their lunch break, he once again spotted the suspicious man loitering near the Haunted House.

The man hasn't come near the Haunted House the whole morning, but he came over just as me and Xu Wan are planning to go for lunch. What is he up to?

Chen Ge had Xu Wan leave first. He returned to the Haunted House. When the visitor noticed his return, he turned around and left the park without even turning back.

Have I seen him somewhere before?

Chen Ge's eyelid twitched, a sign of a bad omen. Chen Ge decided to skip lunch and headed for the park security center. After getting the guard's permission, he went to search for this suspicious visitor's footage.

It was quite obvious that the man was purposely avoiding the cameras. From his arrival to his departure, the man had kept his hands inside his pockets. Even when he stopped for a smoke break, he had only used one hand to light the cigarette that he kept dangled on his lips. However, the most suspicious part was that after paying for entry, he only rode one attraction. That was the Ferris Wheel, and he rode it three times in a row.

This person is definitely suspicious!

Chapter 46

Chapter 46: Suspect

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge's fingers slowly tightened as he linked the series of unusual actions together. Without saying a word, he pulled out his phone to call Inspector Lee's number at Western Jiujiang City's police station while standing in the security office.

The phone rang twice before Inspector Lee's gravelly voice came through the line. "Hello?"

...

"Uncle San Bao, I need to report something to the police!"

"One, you'll need to call 110 for that. Two, my name is Inspector Lee."

"I found the last fugitive from Ping An Apartments! He was at New Century Park!"

When he heard that, Inspector Lee's voice changed. "You sure?"

"Yes, I am, but please don't come in your police car; you'll spook him, and he'll go on the run."

"Be there in fifteen minutes!"

After ending the call, Chen Ge held the phone in his hand as he stared at the surveillance footage. The guards also realized something was wrong, and they hurried to call Uncle Xu.

"What's going on?" After a while, Uncle Xu rushed over, sipping from his water bottle. "Can I not have my lunch in peace? Xiao Chen, why are you here and not at your Haunted House?"

He glanced at the surveillance footage. When he saw the phone in Chen Ge's hand, he asked cautiously, "Who were you on the phone with?"

"The police." Chen Ge did not turn to look at Uncle Xu as his eyes jumped between the many surveillance cameras. "They'll be here in another fifteen minutes.”

“Police? Why didn’t you discuss this with me first?” Uncle Xu’s voice went up a pitch. “The park management has its own way of dealing with robberies, natural disaster...”

“Uncle Xu.” Chen Ge turned around to interrupt Uncle Xu. His eyes were incongruently calm and collected considering the words that fell out of his lips. “Someone is trying to kill me!”

When he announced that, the security room became silent, and all the guards whipped their heads around to look at him.

“Chen Ge, have you been mentally affected from living inside the Haunted House for too long?” Uncle Xu did not call him Xiao Chen like usual but used Chen Ge, which he reserved for serious occasions only. “What nonsense are you talking about in broad daylight?”

“I helped the police solve the arson case at Ping An Apartments, but one of the murderers is still on the loose.”

Uncle Xu understood what Chen Ge was getting at then. “You mean that person is now inside the park and is out for revenge?”

“I thought he would escape the region to hide, but who would have thought the man was so courageous?” Chen Ge pointed at the man on screen. “This visitor is acting too strangely. His cap is too low, meaning he’s trying to hide his face. Plus, today is not a cold day, but he’s wearing a long sleeve shirt, and he kept his hands inside his pocket throughout. Even when he was smoking or drinking water, he only used his right hand, and he kept his left hand firmly inside the pocket.”

“That might be so, but none of that proves anything. Perhaps those are just his personal quirks?” Uncle Xu put down the water bottle and walked to close the security room door.

“The fugitive’s name is Zhang Peng; his build is exact same as that of the man on screen. Most importantly, there is the tattoo of a peony on the back of his hand.”

“Peony?”

“The flower of good fortune. The man is a down-on-his-luck gambler who has lost everything.”

“Meaning he kept his left hand hidden because it would expose the tattoo?” Uncle Xu was slowly convinced by Chen Ge’s story. “Could it be that the man has some weird skin disease that he doesn’t want anyone to see?”

“I have other proof.” Chen Ge switched the video footage. “After entering the park, he only visited one attraction, the Ferris Wheel, and he went on it three times in a row. Do you know what that represents?”

“What does that represent?” Uncle Xu was slowly lagging behind.

“The Ferris Wheel provides the best vantage point of the park. He was trying to find the best escape route for himself.” Chen Ge slowed down the footage. “When Xu Wan and I left the Haunted House to go to the canteen, I saw him sneak toward the Haunted House. You can see from the video footage that he wandered around the Haunted House the whole morning but didn’t approach it. He only did so after ensuring that Xu Wan and myself had left. This is definitely not the normal way a visitor would act.”

“You’re right.” Uncle Xu nodded, convinced by Chen Ge’s argument. “But why would he go near the Haunted House only when no one is there?”

Chen Ge tapped his fingers on the table. “If I were in his shoes, planning to kill the owner of a Haunted House, I would definitely stake out the place first to familiarize myself with the building’s layout. Perhaps I could hide inside the Haunted House and wait for the place to close for maintenance, then I could jump at my target without him anticipating my arrival. Furthermore, a Haunted House is the perfect place to hide a body. If the blood stains are taken care of, when the body is discovered, it will most likely be the next day already.”

Uncle Xu got chills listening to Chen Ge’s speculation; there was a scene forming in his mind already. “Now that you mention it, it is quite scary.”

“The scariest thing is that it almost happened!” Chen Ge pulled his gaze back, and his balled fists slowly relaxed. “Thankfully, he has acted too rashly. Plus, my senses have been maintained at an all-time high due to the many weird events that have been happening; that’s the only reason I managed to spot him.”

“Then, where is he now? Shall I alert the other visitors?” Uncle Xu finally understood the gravity of the situation.

“He has already left the park after he was discovered. At the time, I still hadn’t seen the footage, so I was not confident with my speculation; that’s why I didn’t stop him.”

“You did well. If the suspect went berserk inside the park, it would have caused great chaos.” Uncle Xu took a sip of the water and told the guards beside him, “Remember to cooperate with the police when they arrive later.”

Ten minutes later, the door to the security room was pushed open. Three men in casual attire strode into the room; the one leading was Lee Sanbao. “Where’s Chen Ge? Let me see your surveillance footage.”

With the aid of the guards, Inspector Lee compared the man in the video to the police station’s database and finally managed to confirm the two were one and the same!

“Kid, you’ve done society another great service!” Inspector Lee smacked Chen Ge on his back before pulling out his phone to contact the station to report on the situation. After some discussion, they decided to split into two teams, one was going to conduct a secret investigation while the other would surround New Century Park and observe from afar.

“Zhang Peng is an extremely dangerous individual. You have to be careful since you’re being targeted. The probability of him coming back is very high, so I suggest you stay away from the Haunted House for the time being.”

After hearing what Inspector Lee had to say, all the guards felt uneasy. Chen Ge, however, was surprisingly unfazed. “If I’m not there, Xiao Wan alone won’t be able to keep the Haunted House open. If I close the Haunted House, Zhang Peng will definitely know that gig is up; he’ll go on the run then.”

“You mean, you’re planning to stay at the Haunted House as bait?” Inspector Lee frowned slightly, thinking this plan was far too dangerous.

“Don’t worry, if he dares come inside my Haunted House, I guarantee he won’t be leaving anytime soon.”

Chapter 47

Chapter 47: I'm an Emotionless Killer

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

"I'm afraid I cannot agree to that." Inspector Lee shook his head. "Capturing a fugitive is the police's responsibility; how can we allow you to take this unnecessary risk?"

"Staying behind at the Haunted House is merely to create a false image for Zhang Peng to think he hasn't been exposed. This way, he'll follow through his plan to seek me out. When he returns to the park, you will be able to detain him," Chen Ge explained after much contemplation. "If we fail to catch him this time, I'll need to spend the rest of my life in fear, looking over my shoulder every moment, since he could strike at any given time."

...

"In any case, the actual plan will have to be decided only after we discuss it with the city's investigation team. The case at Ping An Apartments is their responsibility; we from the western station are merely providing assistance, but I will relay your request to them." Inspector Lee packed up his laptop and made a call before leaving the security room with the two other officers.

Uncle Xu wandered over after the police left. He was worried about Chen Ge. "Xiao Chen, I think you should listen to the police and go find somewhere else other than the Haunted House to stay for a few days."

"Hiding from the problem is not going to solve anything, but I appreciate the concern, Uncle Xu."

After taking another look at the surveillance, Chen Ge returned to the Haunted House.

Xu Wan was leaning against the gate, and when she saw Chen Ge walk toward her from the security office, she pointed at the boxed rice left on the table. "Boss, today's menu is stir-fry green chili with pork and rice. When the canteen auntie wasn't paying attention, I added another scoop of meat for you."

Chen Ge thanked Xiao Wan for the rice. He looked at the girl but decided not to reveal any information about Zhang Peng. He finished the rice with big mouthfuls and began the afternoon service. Xu Wan acted as the ghost inside the Minghun scenario while Chen Ge stayed at the entrance to sell tickets. He kept his head low, but his eyes swept every corner of the park.

Zhang Peng's appearance can be a curse or a blessing depending on how I use him.

After completing several missions on the black phone, Chen Ge's logical thinking had improved tremendously, and his tolerance for stress had been given a power up.

There's a mirror monster hiding inside the Haunted House currently. The thing can pass through the mirror world and reality freely. In other words, if there's a mirror, it is invincible. Chen Ge sold the ticket mechanically while his brain worked on overdrive to process the information. The attacks on He San and He Feng were very similar. Based on He Feng's description, the monster's aim was to possess their body and swap out their consciousness. Temporarily, we have no idea what the purpose of that is, but one thing worth considering is, if the monster enters a person's body, does that mean that it won't be able to escape the body at least for a short period of time?

Chen Ge had discovered this phenomenon when he conversed with He Feng, but there was no danger-free method to test out this theory. He had prepared to give up on this idea, but then Zhang Peng had decided to show himself that morning.

When he confirmed it was Zhang Peng on the camera, the plan had been settled in Chen Ge's mind. He planned to use Zhang Peng as bait. He had to figure out a way to lure Zhang Peng inside the Haunted House and enable the mirror monster to possess his body.

This way, he could kill two birds with one stone. It was also why he insisted on staying at the Haunted House.

This is the plan. It's dangerous, but if it's successful, I'll be able to remove two threats at once.

At 5 pm, Chen Ge called Xu Wan out and let her leave early. He went back inside the Haunted House to prepare various stuff for Zhang Peng. At 5.30 pm, Chen Ge received a call from Inspector Lee, telling him that the police had set up a perimeter around New Century Park. If Zhang Peng showed himself, he would definitely not get away. After dinner, Chen Ge carried Doctor Skull-cracker's outfit and hammer as he entered the Haunted House's main control room. He locked the door and sat before the monitors. If there was no accident, he was going to spend the whole night inside the room.

There are indeed too few cameras. There are too many blind spots, so I mustn't let my guard down.

The sun dipped below the horizon, and as daylight left, New Century Park felt weirdly eerie. Chen Ge wrapped the outfit around him as a cover as he sat inside the control room. At midnight, those who should not be there had arrived, but those who should have been there had not.

Similar to the previous night, the sound of sawing came from the Murder by Midnight scenario.

Is the creature taunting me? Chen Ge shrugged the outfit off and walked to the door, wondering if he should go meet the creature. I'll let it be for now.

Putting back on the ear-mic, Chen Ge hugged the doll left behind by his parents to his chest and returned to the surveillance monitor.

At around 1 am, when Chen Ge was at the verge of giving up, he saw the door to the bathroom rattle on screen.

Someone's there?

He focused on the monitor, completely rejuvenated. Not long after, the door fell open a sliver and a lanky man wielding a twenty-centimeter-long boning knife slipped through the opening.

That bathroom is where I did my first Nightmare Mission. The window leads outside. He probably prepared some stepping stone beforehand and messed with the lock earlier.

Chen Ge looked at the surveillance calmly. The door to the control room was still locked. The control room's location was well-hidden, and those unfamiliar with the Haunted House's layout would not be able to reach it anytime soon.

On screen, Zhang Peng travelled down the corridor, holding the knife in one hand and his phone in another. He had no idea he was being watched as he focused on side-stepping the random stuff and unknown props that littered the corridor.

After fifteen minutes traversing the obstacle course, Zhang Peng finally reached the staff breakroom. He could be seen hesitating at the door. His chest rose and fell unevenly, and his hand that held the knife shivered. He reached out to push on the door multiple times, but every time, he pulled back just before his finger touched the door. It was obvious that he was caught in a conundrum.

Zhang Peng dithered for about twenty seconds before he came to a decision. He did not even notice the camera that was looking at him.

He raised the knife in one hand while the other grabbed the door knob. With a deep breath, he shoved the door open, and like a leopard pouncing on its prey, he jumped into the breakroom!

One minute later, Zhang Peng came out carrying the knife. There was a bit of red on the blade, he seemed to have accidentally slashed his arm. He tossed the knife to his other hand. Zhang Peng's expression turned more grievous. He glanced at the stairs before picking up the pace as he went down the corridor.

From the surveillance feed, Chen Ge could see Zhang Peng was heading toward the control room. Chen Ge messaged Inspector Lee and held Doctor Skull-cracker's hammer as he hid behind the door.

He was about to surprise Zhang Peng with a horror movie classic—the scare behind the door—but Zhang Peng merely wandered past the control room's door before heading into the workers' passageway.

What is this man up to? Chen Ge was confused by his opponent's actions. He hurried to the monitor and saw that Zhang Peng was using his knife to pry off the wooden planks that had sealed up the trap door at the end of passageway before heading in without a second thought.

Why is he heading into the Murder by Midnight scenario? Chen Ge peeled off his ear-mic as his eyes widened with shock. There have been sawing sounds coming out from the scenario... does he think I'm sawing stuff inside?

Chapter 48

Chapter 48: Please Let Me Go!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge's features twisted as Zhang Peng's vicious and obstinate glare appeared in his mind. Two demons fighting each other?

The sawing sound from the Murder by Midnight scenario did not stop due to Zhang Peng's entrance—the mirror monster probably did not anticipate that someone would rush in so blindly and rashly.

...

I can't play it safe any longer. I have to see the mirror monster enter Zhang Peng's body with my own eyes before I can sleep easy at night.

With a glance at the surveillance to pinpoint Zhang Peng's location, Chen Ge yanked out the chains from the Doctor Skull-cracker outfit and dropped them to the floor before putting both the outfit and the skin mask on. He waved the iron hammer twice to get a feel for it, and a wicked energy radiated from Chen Ge.

How come it feels like I'm the bad guy here?

After grabbing his keys and phone, he shoved the dolls into his pocket, grabbed hold of the weirdly-designed hammer, and headed out of the control room.

...

Trapped inside the Murder by Midnight scenario, Zhang Peng felt the weight of the knife in his hand getting heavier. He had prepared for this day for a long time, but one could never prepare enough because accidents had already happened.

It was already 1 am, and a normal person would be asleep already. Even if they were not, they would be resting in their bedroom. He was all sorts of excited when he saw the sign that pointed to the staff breakroom. It had taken him a long time before he managed to calm down.

He had given himself plenty of pep talk, to arouse the hatred and resentment within himself before he gathered enough courage to blast through the door. As he did so, he had waved the knife fiendishly at the bed. He had been so caught in the motion that he did not notice he had slashed himself.

The blade was tipped with blood, but there was no one inside the bed. The only blood stain on the ruined bedspread came from his arm. Other than resentment, there was now an additional stain of grievance; it fueled his murderous intent, eclipsing his rationality completely.

Ruining Ping An Apartments, sending Juan Er into jail. You despicable bastard, I swear I'll kill you if it's the last thing I do!

The more Zhang Peng thought about it, the angrier he became. The sawing sound from upstairs was like flies, causing his emotions to rile up even more.

He gripped his knife tightly as he wandered close to the source. To prevent being found out, he was extremely careful along the way.

I'm close; the source is from this floor!

Zhang Peng poked his head out from the stairs. He did not carry any light source with him. He kept his back to the wall as he entered the third-floor corridor.

I say, this Haunted House sure is creepy; the corridors are as complicated as a maze. After I kill him, even if I just drop his body inside a random room, it'll take at least half a month before he's discovered.

His lips curled up into a cruel smirk.

The sound is coming from in front! But what is the man up to, not sleeping so late at night but sawing stuff? Fixing some emergency props?

Zhang Peng bent down. He used the long sleeves to cover his wound as he crawled forward with the point of the knife leading the way forward.

At the end of the third-floor corridor, the entrance to the scenario, Zhang Peng saw a blurry black shadow. The shadow was standing in the middle of the door, holding something in his hand, scratching on the door.

Weird, why didn't he turn on the lights?

It was not until he was so close that Zhang Peng realized this incongruity. However, he did not dwell on it because his mind was soon swallowed up by the desire for revenge. The air seemed to have frozen around him. He slowly raised the knife above his shoulder. His body was as tense as a strung bow, and he charged forward to stab at the shadow.

“Go to hell!”

The full speed sprint sent Zhang Peng and the knife crashing into the shadow!

An excited smile had begun to appear on his face, but it only lasted for 0.2 seconds before it disappeared. The knife shot through the shadow directly!

The inertia caused Zhang Peng to slam into the door headfirst, and he almost broke his waist from the impact.

“What the f*ck?” Zhang Peng was unable to accept this result. He climbed up from the floor in a hurry and waved the knife frantically around him. “Where is he? Where is he?”

After his anger left him, a sensation that he had not experienced before started to grow within Zhang Peng's heart.

I swear I saw a black shadow standing here! My eyes weren't mistaken!

Zhang Peng no longer cared about hiding his tracks. He pulled out his phone to light up his surroundings. The door was crisscrossed with scratch marks, and several sharp mirror pieces littered the ground.

This was all left behind by the dark shadow, so I was right, there was someone standing here earlier!

So, where in the world did he go?

Zhang Peng shivered from head to toe. His anger had been completely drenched as he looked fearfully down the darkened corridor that suddenly felt so eerie.

A man can't just disappear from thin air, unless... that wasn't a normal man.

His Adam's Apple wiggled, and the weak light from the phone could no longer bring him a sense of security. If anything, the weak light only heightened his fear, like there were monsters hiding in the corners where the light could not reach.

The Haunted House's owner isn't a living person! This Haunted House is really haunted!

Zhang Peng's forehead was covered in cold sweat. Even his hand that gripped the knife was soaked with sweat. Any thought of revenge and murder had completely left his mind. He dashed down the corridor hurriedly; all he had on his mind then was to escape this blasted place.

In his hurry to escape, he did not notice the angle of the staircase door was different from how he had left it before.

Revenge can be re-planned after I leave this place.

Holding his wounded arm, Zhang Peng jumped into the staircase, when a shadow flitted out from behind the door and assaulted him.

The sound of bone cracking was crisp to the ear. Zhang Peng held his right arm that seemed to be dying, and his brain went into shutdown.

"Sorry, I missed." Chen Ge wandered out from behind the door. The creepy skin mask twisted with a display of myriad expressions as Chen Ge's lips moved. "I was aiming for your shoulder blade."

Chen Ge's tone was indifferent, like he was talking about the weather. Looking at Chen Ge, Zhang Peng felt like he was about to suffocate. Jesus, Buddha, Allah, someone please help me!

Zhang Peng did try to resist, but when he saw the forty-centimeter-long hammer in Chen Ge's hands, his limbs refused to listen to his commands. The hammer is covered with blood, and the handle has the shape of a human spine! Are you that afraid people won't know that you're a mad murderer?

Without giving his opponent much time to recover, Chen Ge picked up the hammer and swung it at Zhang Peng's leg. He needed someone who was completely defenseless to be the vessel for the mirror monster.

Bang!

The bars on the stairs curved from impact. Zhang Peng evaded the attack at the last minute. With one arm bleeding and another incapacitated, Zhang Peng had given up on resistance. He even dropped his knife as he ran down the stairs.

“You dare visit my Haunted House with such lack of courage?”

Grabbing the iron hammer, Chen Ge gave chase after his prey as the two of them returned to the first floor.

Chapter 49

Chapter 49: Xiao Chen, Are You Hurt!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Zhang Peng shot out of the workers' passageway like a bullet, as blind as one too. The layout of the Haunted House was complicated, and combined with the lack of lighting, several minutes later, he soon realized with a sinking heart that he was lost.

"Why are you stopping? Don't be afraid, I won't hurt you; I just want to do a small experiment on you." With both of his hands on the iron hammer, Chen Ge trailed behind Zhang Peng, slowly leading his prey into a dead-end.

...

"Not going to harm me? The moment we met, you cracked my arm! That is what you called not going to harm me?" Zhang Peng had lost his only weapon; his left arm was bleeding; his right arm was limp, hanging off his shoulder like a noodle. In that moment, he felt wronged, and the thought to call the police for help appeared in his mind.

"Listen to my advice—stop struggling and follow my orders, or you might need a wheelchair for the rest of your life." Chen Ge took deliberate steps toward Zhang Peng. He had no pity for the man; after all, Zhang Peng was there to kill him. If he had not discovered that sooner, he would have been dead already.

"Boss, does that sound like what a victim would say? I must have been jinxed!" Zhang Peng was completely defenseless, so he ran down whatever open path he could find.

"That pair of legs sure know how to run..." Chen Ge continued to chase after Zhang Peng. However, several steps later, a sawing noise appeared in Chen Ge's ears again as a black shadow shot out from the workers' passageway!

The mirror monster must have understood what was really happening by then; it knew this was the perfect opportunity. Zhang Peng raced blindly around the first floor. When he turned a corner, he saw a figure of a man waving at him from the corner of his eyes. Perhaps he was too scared by Chen Ge because he ran toward that person without a second thought.

Chen Ge, who followed behind Zhang Peng, saw this, and a chill ran down his spine. The figure was around the same build as He Feng; it was the mirror monster!

“I want you to live, but you insist on dying; that’s a real ghost!” Chen Ge’s warning fell on deaf ears. Zhang Peng had reached the end of the corridor, and with the guidance of the figure, he wandered into the bathroom.

The mirrors in the first-floor bathroom are in pristine condition. Since it’s leading Zhang Peng toward the bathroom, the monster is going to make its move soon!

Chen Ge was feeling nervous since the crucial moment had arrived. He dashed to the bathroom and worked with the doorknob. It was then that he realized the door was locked.

The development had strayed from his plan. The sudden appearance of the black shadow had ruined everything. It had managed to capture Zhang Peng before Chen Ge could detain the man.

” Ahhh! ”

Several seconds later, an ear-splitting scream came out from behind the bathroom door. Then it was followed by the sound of stuff falling and crashing. Zhang Peng seemed to have stumbled across something really scary.

“What’s going on in there?” Chen Ge raised the hammer to crack down on the doorknob. The doorknob fell off, but the door still would not budge. Someone had used the cupboard to block the door from behind it. Unable to know what was happening inside the bathroom, Chen Ge was anxious as he swung the hammer repeatedly at the wooden door.

Bang! Bang! Bang!

The loud noises could be heard even outside the Haunted House. Chen Ge had depleted most of his energy before he managed to break the hollow wooden door. The cupboard behind it had started to budge to reveal an opening that was about half a palm wide.

Looking through the opening, Chen Ge saw the black cloth that covered the mirror had fallen to the floor. Zhang Peng was staring at the mirror with his eyes unfocused, but the scariest thing was... there was a large black shadow standing between him and the mirror!

The black shadow was slowly morphing until it became almost like Zhang Peng. It took one step back to allow half of its body to melt into the mirror, and then the weirdest thing happened.

The dazed Zhang Peng walked toward the mirror. He pressed his face against the surface of the mirror. His body and the black shadow were slowly merging. About four seconds later, a creepy grin appeared on Zhang Peng's blank face!

He slowly turned around and made sure to hold Chen Ge's gaze through the door and the cupboard. He swiped some fresh blood off his arm and wrote down something on the surface of the mirror.

Another one or two seconds later, spirit seemed to return to Zhang Peng's eyes. He shuddered visibly before jumping out the bathroom window and out of the Haunted House.

The mirror monster has escaped into Zhang Peng's body? But does that thing have such a deep resentment toward me? Could it be because I've ruined its plan multiple times?

The mirror monster had assaulted both He San and He Feng. Both times, it had been interrupted due to an external influence; that was probably why the monster harbored resentment toward the owner of the Haunted House, Chen Ge.

The door to the bathroom was still blocked, and it would stay blocked for a quite some time. Chen Ge quickly rushed to the front door, but before he could get anywhere, he could hear Inspector Lee's voice calling.

"Chen Ge! Hang in there! We're coming to get you!" Following a loud bang, the Haunted House's gate was pried off its hinges, and several officers streamed into the building. Seeing this, Chen Ge immediately tossed the iron hammer to the side and removed his outfit and mask.

The sound of footsteps echoed down the corridor. Inspector Lee was the first one to burst through the darkness. Seeing Chen Ge standing all alone in the corridor, he asked with concern, "Xiao Chen, are you hurt?"

Chen Ge played into the skit as he staggered a step back and leaned ‘weakly’ against the wall. He had his hand on his chest as he said, “I was shocked, but I wasn’t hurt. Leave me be, go chase after Zhang Peng! I saw him jump out of the Haunted House’s bathroom window!”

“Okay, leave the rest to us. Thank you for your help tonight!”

“Don’t mention it. To be able to help the law enforcement is my honor, what is a little risk or sacrifice?”

“But you’d better not act so rashly anymore in the future—just look at how dangerous it was tonight!” Inspector Lee’s eyes were aglow with admiration and approval. He had his men chase after Zhang Peng while he stayed behind with Chen Ge inside the Haunted House to examine the crime scene.

He wandered into the staff breakroom first. When he saw the blood on the bed, he turned to Chen Ge with worry. “Xiao Chen, you’re injured? Let me see!”

“That isn’t mine...” Chen Ge also didn’t how to explain it. “At the time, the room was dark. The suspect probably accidentally hurt himself.”

Inspector Lee nodded. He used his flashlight to examine the knife marks on the bed frame and bedsheet, and his expression darkened. “You’re not wrong. A man who is not familiar with knife work would accidentally slash himself in extreme stressful situations.”

He counted the visible marks and concluded, “17 slashes in total! This is more than enough to pin him with attempted murder; this is the best proof!”

Looking at the knife marks, Chen Ge also felt a chill run up his arms.

Inspector Lee pulled on his gloves and signaled for Chen Ge to vacate the room. “Remember to not touch anything in this room. Later, people will come to take pictures to keep as evidence.”

“Of course, I will provide my full cooperation.”

Chen Ge retreated out of the room and returned to where he had been earlier to hide the iron mallet before walking to the first-floor bathroom. He stood before the ruined door and wondered to himself, If I’m not mistaken, Zhang Peng wrote something on the mirror, right?

Chapter 50

Chapter 50: Meaning of the Number

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After adjusting his position, Chen Ge finally managed to discern the blood message that was left on the mirror, it was another Arabic number—2.

There was nothing scary about the number itself, but the fact that it was written in blood did up the scary factor slightly.

...

What does this number mean? After the black shadow left last night, I saw a 3 on the shattered mirror and now it has become 2 ; is there some kind of relationship between them? Why is the number decreasing? Chen Ge was at a loss. Could they represent some kind of countdown?

Looking at the drying blood stain, Chen Ge leaned against the door and started to contemplate.

The mirror monster has already entered Zhang Peng's body, so there was no reason for it to leave this message behind unless it plans to come back for revenge.

Chen Ge considered this possibility, but he couldn't confirm it; he knew too little about the other world and the mirror monster.

Suppose the number continues to drop, what will happen when it reaches zero?

A bad feeling rose within Chen Ge's heart as he paced around the entrance of the bathroom. Could the number be related to my life? When it reaches zero, my life will be over like those tropes in scary movies?

Chen Ge stopped himself from overthinking. I suppose there's nothing else for me to do for now but wait for tomorrow night to arrive. If there's another number that appears around or within the Haunted House, then I'll decide what to do.

Chen Ge sighed deeply. All he ever wanted was to keep the Haunted

House his parents left for him alive, and if it was within his means, he hoped to improve it, but there just had to be these accidents that screwed with his plan.

When he returned to the staff breakroom, several police cars had arrived outside the Haunted House. The main city's investigation team had come to ask Chen Ge some questions and snap a few pictures of the crime scene before joining the others to pursue and capture Zhang Peng.

Inspector Lee accompanied Chen Ge, but even when the sun climbed up over the horizon, there was still no news of Zhang Peng being captured. However, Inspector Lee promised Chen Ge multiple times that with the condition Zhang Peng was in, he would not be able to avoid capture for long; he would be caught within the next 24 hours.

Honestly, Chen Ge was not that worried about Zhang Peng. He was feeling down because he was concerned about the number that had been left behind by the mirror monster. Inspector Lee thought that Chen Ge was reeling from trauma, so he consoled him as best he could before leaving with the other officers after daylight.

Chen Ge was left alone in the Haunted House. He opened the window to allow the morning draft to caress his face.

I'm the owner of a Haunted House, the lord of ghosts and spirits so to speak, but how come I feel I am so pitiful?

The morning rays filtered into the room. The ragdoll left on the bed turned as if carried by the wind and fell underneath the bed.

Chen Ge picked it up and poked it on its tummy. "The only specter who listens to me only knows how to act cute. In a real combat situation, I'll probably need to protect you."

The ragdoll seemed to be unhappy with Chen Ge's evaluation of her. She tried to resist but could not do anything.

The rewards from both Nightmare Missions were support skills; they are useful for the development of the Haunted House but don't really help me personally much.

Even though Chen Ge had no idea what the numbers meant, he refused to let himself be toyed with by some mysterious forces like that.

Taking out the black phone, Chen Ge clicked through the app for a long time and realized his only trump card was the scary-looking Red Specter—Zhang Ya. When he was at the wooden hut behind Ping An Apartments, Zhang Ya had helped him once, tipping him to Wang Qi's presence. Technically, she had saved his life.

However, during the Nightmare Mission, when the mirror monster tried to drown him in the bathtub, she had not appeared. This went to show how cavalier she was with Chen Ge's life.

Completing her Bloody Heart Mission will enable me to get her to do something that is not against her will. Maybe I'll be able to get her to help me deal with the imminent danger.

Chen Ge clicked on Zhang Ya's name, and even his courage that had been cultivated from a young age started to waver as he looked at the bloody red interface. But this lady likes a dead Chen Ge, what if the affection level rises too fast and she can't wait for me to join her in the afterlife?

Not everyone could accept a specter's admiration that easily. After exiting the app, even the air around Chen Ge felt fresher. The Bloody Heart Mission will be my final resort. If the mysterious number appears one more time tonight, I'll have to complete the Bloody Heart Mission.

After making that decision, with a plan forming in his mind, Chen Ge fell back to sleep.

Xu Wan came to work at around 8 am. Chen Ge left the Haunted House in her capable hands while he went to purchase the surveillance cameras with Uncle Xu's money. He was in such a hurry because there were too many blind spots around the Haunted House; it was too dangerous. On top of that, one of the black phone's Daily Missions was for him to install surveillance cameras and security devices.

After the purchase was made, Chen Ge had the workers come to the Haunted House that afternoon to install the devices. With him personally watching, the few workers installed the cameras in most corners of the Haunted House with their hearts shaking, forming a surveillance web that had few blind spots. Even though Chen Ge planned to purchase listening device as well, due to limited funds, he only got the cheapest one and had it installed inside the Minghun scenario.

At 7 pm, after the final testing was done, Chen Ge received the mission success alert on the black phone.

“Congratulation for completing the Easy Mission, reward earned—Background Music, Wedding Dress!

“Note: Wedding Dress is the perfect accompaniment to Minghun! The Minghun scenario’s Scream Factor has been upgraded to 1 Star!”

Chen Ge was surprised when he saw the phone alert. The original Scream Factor for Minghun was only 0.5 Stars, but with this new music, it was upgraded to 1 Star.

Looks like this music is even more disturbing than Black Friday.

Wanting to immediately try it out, Chen Ge played the music. It was a completely different style from Black Friday. One was a slow insidious burn, like a force slowly dragging the listener into the dark abyss; the other was weirder in nature, a mix of wedding music and funeral music. The new track caused Chen Ge’s skin to crawl from the first note alone.

It does fit the Minghun scenario perfectly, but constant exposure to it will probably cause unwanted psychological trauma. Unless someone comes to challenge the Haunted House, I’d better keep it to myself for now.

Chen Ge saved Wedding Dress to his own phone before returning to the third floor alone to clean up the place.

He did not have enough funds to hire cleaners, so with the dolls smuggled in his pockets, he cleared out all the mirror pieces he could find on the third floor. When he was done, it was almost midnight. Chen Ge held his phone as he wandered between the bathroom and the staff breakroom.

He looked at the mirrors carefully as he waited for midnight to arrive.

Chapter 51

Chapter 51: The Choice

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

With dark circles under his eyes, Chen Ge stood before the mirror hugging the dolls. One more minute until midnight.

The lights in the bathroom were off, and Chen Ge stared at his reflection in the mirror. Afraid that he might miss out on some details, Chen Ge did not dare to blink with his palms on the sink and his face close to the mirror.

...

He focused all of his attention on the mirror. When there were only several seconds away to midnight, the phone in Chen Ge's pocket vibrated.

A call? Who would call at such a time?

The sudden phone call startled Chen Ge. He hurriedly pulled out his phone and the caller ID was Inspector Lee.

Has there been some kind of accident?

Chen Ge answered the call and put the phone beside his ear. "Uncle San Bao, have you got an update?"

On the other end of the phone, Inspector Lee sounded serious and hurried. "Zhang Peng is still on the loose, but we've come to the conclusion that he's still around western Jiujiang! You have to be careful! The man is incredibly dangerous and cunning. His actions and thinking are different from normal, and we cannot rule out the possibility that he will return for you!"

"But didn't the police set up a perimeter around New Century Park yesterday? With injuries on both of his arms, he shouldn't have been able to get far." From Chen Ge's perspective, he had been sure Zhang Peng was going to be captured.

"There was an unexpected development. For now, I cannot give you the details, but what I can say is, last night, one of the officers who managed to intercept the suspect experienced some kind of trauma. He's currently in a deep coma and being looked after at the hospital."

"What?" Chen Ge's expression shifted, and he was about to say something when he glanced at the mirror on the wall out of the corner of his eye. A bloody Arabic number of 1 had surfaced on the mirror when he was not paying attention.

"But don't worry, the police are closing in on him. Justice always prevails."

Inspector Lee continued to talk on the phone, but Chen Ge's mind was already elsewhere. He placed the phone down and looked at the mirror dumbly.

When did this appear? The mirror monster has already left, so why would the number still appear on the mirror?

Chen Ge was reminded of what he had seen in the bathroom the day before, where half of the mirror monster's body was outside the mirror and Zhang Peng had voluntarily walked forward to merge himself with the creature.

What does this number really mean? Yesterday it was 2, and today it is 1. Does this mean it'll become zero tomorrow?

The dropping number caused Chen Ge's eyes to dim with concern. After Zhang Peng was possessed by the mirror monster, the number started to drop. When Inspector Lee mentioned the coma of the officer, the number dropped again. Does the number represent the number of victims? The mirror monster needs three living victims?

Regardless of the real meaning of the number, Chen Ge could not wait anymore because it was now related to innocent lives. A great sense of urgency appeared in his heart.

The mirror monster is growing stronger and stronger; tomorrow night might be my last chance already.

Chen Ge picked up a dirty cloth to wipe the number on the mirror away; he could not play it safe anymore. After a few more words with Inspector Lee, he ended the call and then entered the Props Room with the black phone.

It is now a new day; the Daily Missions will have refreshed already. Now, the only thing that might help me are the Red Specter's Bloody Heart Mission or the new Nightmare Mission.

Chen Ge tapped into the Daily Mission interface of the app.

Easy Mission: A normal Haunted House experience should not create permanent trauma to its visitors; I hope you understand this simple theory. Please improve the Haunted House's security by inspecting the security threats hidden around the Haunted House.

Normal Mission: You've achieved the criteria to enable the first expansion of the Haunted House, do search for a suitable location soon! Due to space limitations, you are unable to perform any Trial Mission to unlock scenarios!

Nightmare Mission: There has always been a second occupant inside your room, wouldn't you like to meet said person?

(Beware! The more difficult the mission, the more dangerous it'll be, so please choose carefully!)

After reading all three missions, Chen Ge's eyes fell on the Nightmare Mission. The other person inside my room? Just the description of it makes me uncomfortable.

Chen Ge knew the possible danger of the Nightmare Mission perfectly well. After a long hesitation, he chose to open the Red Specter's page instead.

"Are you sure you want to accept Zhang Ya's Bloody Heart Mission? Warning! This mission contains a certain level of danger!"

The app kindly provided Chen Ge with a warning. He rubbed his temples, unable to come to a decision.

Both of these missions have a certain degree of risk and danger. However, the rewards of the Nightmare Mission are random; there's a high chance it might just give me another supportive skill. In comparison, the Bloody Heart Mission... Zhang Ya has been given the special title of Red Specter and even her own personal page on the app, this means that she is probably a powerful specter, at least several levels higher than the mirror monster. With her help, I should be able to survive this crisis.

After thorough analysis, with a grit of his teeth, Chen Ge clicked on Zhang Ya's Bloody Heart Mission.

“Are you sure you want to accept Zhang Ya’s Bloody Heart Mission?”

“Yes!”

The red interface started to change and peel off like wilting roses, and soon, a new message appeared on screen.

“Anderson’s Fairy Tales Volume One, Book Three—Red Dancing Shoes: Once upon a time, there was a pair of ruby red dancing shoes that could make the dancer who wore them light on her feet and perfect at her dance. However, none of the dancers dared put them on because they were a pair of magical shoes, one that would make its dancer keep on dancing until they perished from exhaustion.

“Please arrive at Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy within one hour from accepting the mission and locate Zhang Ya’s red dancing shoes before dawn.

“Warning: Don’t be late on your first date, or she’ll be very unhappy.”

Chen Ge did not know what to feel after reading the mission details. The Private Academy had been abandoned several years earlier due to unknown reasons. However, Chen Ge had heard plenty of scary rumors about it.

My first date with a girl is at an abandoned school after midnight, am I that unlucky at love?

The mission required him to be at the Private Academy within one hour. Chen Ge calculated the distance in his mind, and realized he still have some time left.

The Private Academy is at this part of town, so not that far away from me. The biggest issue is going there after midnight. Sigh, I’d better go take a bath first; no matter what, this is my first time.

After a quick shower, Chen Ge changed into a clean outfit. He stood before the mirror to inspect his image.

There are fifty minutes left, why am I feeling so nervous all of a sudden?

Chapter 52

Chapter 52: First Date

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After taking a few deep breaths and splashing cold water on his face, Chen Ge finally calmed down.

“It’s time to go.”

...

Chen Ge retrieved the backpack that he had used last time and placed Zhang Ya’s love letter, a power bank, and toolallet into it. After the lesson from last time, he put the penknife directly in his pocket and the doll left behind by his parents inside his shirt pocket. He was bulging all over the place, but at least he felt safer.

After packing everything he needed, Chen Ge locked the Haunted House and rushed out of New Century Park. It was 12:15 am, so there was little traffic on the road. He waited for another ten minutes before he managed to hail a cab.

“Sir, please get me to Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy. I’m in a hurry, so please drive faster.”

“No problem, get in.”

The driver was an easy-going middle-aged uncle, and the radio in the car was playing hit songs from the 90s. Chen Ge sat in the backseat and used this downtime to search for online information related to his current mission.

The first thing mentioned by the phone when he accepted the Bloody Heart Mission was Anderson’s Red Dancing Shoes, so that was the first thing Chen Ge looked for on the internet. He managed to find the original source, and after skimming through it, Chen Ge felt rather petrified.

The original plot was not much different from the black phone’s version. It described the story of a young girl who was gifted a pair of beautiful red dancing shoes. She loved them so much that she wore them everywhere, including to church, where she was cursed to dance forever. She was afraid, helpless, and exhausted. In the end, she begged the woodman to chop her legs off, and then came the most curious part of the fairy tale. After the legs were chopped off, they danced away into the forest still wearing the red dancing shoes.

Is this even a fairy tale?

It added to his nervousness since his mission was searching for Zhang Ya's red dancing shoes.

When I won the cursed love letter, the black phone did provide a brief description of Zhang Ya. She was wearing a bloodied school uniform and red dancing shoes at the time of her death, so could the fairy tale be real? The red dancing shoes couldn't be taken off after they were put on?

Chen Ge's skin crawled. Different from his previous missions, this time he was going face to face with a Red Specter, one that had a Bloody Heart Mission, something that could only be given by specters with heavy resentment.

Looks like the key to tonight's mission is the red dancing shoes.

Chen Ge read the fairy tale again for a few times; the main lesson to be learned here was to not be vain but be humble at all time.

Was there even a reason for the black phone to refer to this fairy tale at the start of the mission?

He could not figure out an answer, so he decided to focus his energy on searches related to Western Jiujiang's Private Academy. The school was closed after just two years of operation and had been abandoned since then. With regards to the reason for its closure, there were plenty of rumors online. Some said it had to do with lack of budget, whereas others complained about the high semester fees.

Chen Ge scrolled through all the information patiently, and Zhang Ya's name did not even appear once, like she had nothing to do with the school at all.

There has to be something more sinister about the closure than what's been speculated online!

Chen Ge looked at the streetlights out the window that seemed to be running backwards, and he squinted his eyes in thought. Just what kind of ending could a girl experience to turn her into a Red Specter? Why would she harbor such deep resentment? What does all of that have to do with red dancing shoes?

While Chen Ge was deep in his thought, the volume of the radio picked up. He turned toward the source with shock and realized the driver uncle had been looking at him via the rear-view mirror.

“What’s on your mind, young man? You have such a sad face.” The driver was a quintessential chatterbox. He had attempted to start a conversation with Chen Ge when Chen Ge entered the car, but Chen Ge had ignored the man mostly because he was busy looking up information.

“So much has changed in my life recently that I’m struggling to get my head around it, feeling rather swamped at the moment.” Chen Ge smiled politely as he put his phone away.

“Slow and steady wins the race. I’m sure everything will work out in the end. If you’re that stressed, do what I do: play some disco music, and after a few shakes, you’ll feel much better.” The driver grooved along to the music.

At least the man is optimistic, thought Chen Ge.

“By the way, why are you going to the Private Academy so late at night? That place is mostly abandoned, and it’s not close to any residential area.”

Chen Ge’s lips fell open and eventually he answered, “Going on a date.”

“A date? At this kind of ungodly hour?” The driver glanced back at Chen Ge.

“It’s true. I don’t know how to explain it; the girl is a bit hard to please and has some weird quirks.” Chen Ge tried to normalize it as best as he could. After all, he had not been asked out on a date before, and being invited to one did make him feel quite good about himself.

“That’s a good thing! What are you worried about, worried that she won’t like you? Then again, what kind of person goes to a date dressed like you? Listen to me, even guys need to know how to dress these days. Look at that backpack, it goes against the rest of your outfit.”

The floodgate of the driver’s mouth had been opened, and Chen Ge did not even know how to respond. A normal person going on a date would have been happy and overjoyed, but his date was more like a coercion and a desperate move to save himself than an actual date.

“A gentleman mustn’t be too forward, don’t start the conversation with random topics like the weather, compliment her, and be a good listener. After all, the first impression is very important...” Listening to the driver’s advice, Chen Ge had half a mind to play Wedding Dress on his phone so that everyone could have a little peace and quiet.

The taxi zoomed through the night. The cars on the road and the buildings beside it had gotten increasingly sparse; even the streetlights had started to disappear. The signs of civilization outside the window started to disappear, and the road was slowly swallowed up by the forest.

The driver glanced at the GPS and asked Chen Ge, “Are you sure you got the right address? Other than an abandoned school, there’s nothing down the road.”

“Yes, I’m sure, just drop me off near the school. How much?”

“19, do you mind paying me via WeChat? I just started my shift, and I don’t have spare change on me.”

“No problem.”

As Chen Ge grabbed his phone out of his pocket, the penknife bounced out of it as well. The knife sat quietly on the cushion, causing the driver who spotted it to lean surreptitiously forward. The driver moved his hand to lower the volume of the radio. As he did so, he stealthily used his pinkie finger to press a button on the machine.

None of this escaped Chen Ge’s eyes. However, there was nothing he could do but continue to smile. He believed the uncle had mistaken him for some kind of late-night burglar.

“Transaction successful.” Chen Ge put away his phone and glanced at the driver seat. “Uncle, you’re recording this to report to the police?”

The driver, who was in the middle of drinking from a bottle of water, coughed violently as he waved his hands about vehemently.

“I can understand why you’re doing that but...” Chen Ge turned to look at the eerie outline of the school in the dark.

“...I’m really here for a date.”

Chapter 53

Chapter 53: The Chair Is Moving

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The driver's face was pale, and he laughed awkwardly. "Then, good luck to you."

"Thank you, so do you mind stopping the recording now?" Chen Ge flashed a smile that he thought was friendly. "This is just a misunderstanding."

...

"Of course," the driver answered readily. He pressed some random button on the machine. After driving for another two or three meters, the red light on the driver's walkie-talkie lit up. He pressed it lightly, and before he could say anything, a rough, gravelly voice appeared.

"Lao Liu, you're also near Western Jiujiang's Private Academy? What is wrong with people tonight? I also have a passenger with me who wants to go there. Actually, we're quite close. By the way, what is this message that you sent to the group? 'I am held hostage?'"

"It's nothing, just focus on your passenger." The driver swiped the sweat on his forehead away and quickly hung up on the walkie-talkie.

"That should be I am held hostage, right? Uncle, didn't you say you trust me?" Chen Ge asked with his eyebrow raised. Afraid that the driver uncle might just call the cops on him, he said, "You can drop me right here."

"Yes!" The driver was quick to follow his instruction. Chen Ge even managed to see that the man's legs were shaking.

Chen Ge looked around to make sure he did not leave behind anything. After he got out and closed the door, he looked up and saw the running sign on top of the taxi say—"I am being held hostage, please call the police!"

"Uncle, you sure are creative."

The taxi left Chen Ge like it had grown wings. Several seconds later, the several hundred meters around Chen Ge fell silent. It was a starless night like it was going to rain soon. The rainclouds were hanging low in the sky, blocking out all light. Chen Ge pulled out his phone to look at the time; there were still eight minutes left until the designated time.

Just now, inside the car, the person on the walkie-talkie said he's also bringing a passenger to the Private Academy. That person is coming here at 1 am, could it have something to do with me?

Chen Ge reminded himself to be careful. If not for the time limitation, he probably would have hidden himself in the brush by the side of the road to see who was following him.

Only eight minutes left. I'd better go familiarize myself with the layout of the school first. I'll need all the advantages I can get.

The area surrounding Western Jiujiang's Private Academy was a piece of deserted land. There were no streetlights, only a single road cutting through heavy forest and shrubbery.

Flipping on the flashlight on his phone, Chen Ge followed the road for another hundred meters before reaching the abandoned school's front gate. The chains and the iron bars had already rusted together. The gate was too heavy to even budge. Looking through the bars, all Chen Ge could see was darkness.

How do I get in?

Chen Ge paced around the gate. He tossed his backpack over the gate first before taking several steps back. With a running start, he grabbed hold of the bricks on the wall as he jumped over the outside wall.

The school compound was not big; the whole area could be seen with one glance. There were several tall silhouettes standing in the dark like solitary watchmen. The school's sign had long since been removed. Chen Ge himself did not know what the real name of the school was. Like everyone else in the city, he only knew it as Western Jiujiang's Private Academy.

The overgrown shrubbery had swallowed up most of the path. It scratched Chen Ge's legs at every step, making him feel both ticklish and painful.

I've managed to arrive within the designated time limit; now my mission is to find Zhang Ya's red dancing shoes.

Chen Ge pulled out the mallet from his backpack. Feeling the icy metallic touch on his skin, Chen Ge felt much safer.

Using his phone as guidance, Chen Ge walked deeper into the school. He only took several steps before he felt something was wrong. He stopped moving and took several steps back.

Is it my imagination? How come it feels like there is something pushing me into the school? And when I tried to walk backwards, there was a mysterious force blocking me from behind.

Chen Ge turned to look over his shoulder, but there was nothing there. He used the phone to shower some light behind him, and there was nothing like ghost or spirit as he has imagined.

Could it be that she's already here? Standing behind me? Only I can't see her? Chen Ge shivered. The thought of swinging the mallet at the space behind him cropped up in his mind, but he thought, What if Zhang Ya is really behind me and this swing angers her?

He was a mere Haunted House owner; he was practically defenseless stranded in this deserted school. He shuddered, thinking about the ending should he manage to anger a baleful specter.

In any case, I should go in first.

Chen Ge pulled his backpack higher as he walked into the school holding up his phone and the mallet. The night darkened, and a draft picked up; it even carried a light dusting of rain with it.

The most probable locations where I will find the red dancing shoes are either the female changing room at the dance studio or Zhang Ya's former bedroom. I'll have to focus on these two locations.

Chen Ge headed toward the building that was closest to him. The trees inside the school had grown into twisted shapes, and the wild grass had grown up to Chen Ge's waist. There were statues that littered the school compound, and most of them were human figures. All in all, the place radiated an air of eeriness in the dark.

The girl's dormitory?

The dormitory building was not tall, only four-stories high. However, it did look creepy, probably due to an extended period of abandonment. The glass door of the building was locked up tight using a metal chain. Chen Ge leaned against the glass to take a closer look.

The doors on both sides of the dark corridor were tightly closed, but curious enough, a solitary chair sat in the middle of the corridor facing away from the bedroom door.

A single chair is left right in the middle of the corridor? Is there some special meaning to this?

Chen Ge leaned back from the glass door. Both the main gate and the hostel entrance have been locked, and the corridor doesn't seem to have any trash in it. This goes to show that when they were closing the school, they cleaned the place up first, so why did they leave a chair right in the middle of the corridor? Just a mere coincidence?

If the chair was purposely left behind by the school management, then what is the meaning of it? If it was not left behind by the school, then who moved the chair to the middle of the corridor after the place was locked up?

Chen Ge aimed his phone at the glass door. The chair was placed around five meters away from the entrance, and there was a broken hall light right above it.

The light is already broken, and the electrical wiring is even exposed. Chair and wiring, is it me or that looks like a hanging scene?

Honestly, after seeing this curious scene, Chen Ge's heart had started to palpitate.

I'm probably just overthinking.

He looked left and right. The breeze caused the leaves to rustle. The school after dark was hauntingly creepy.

I can't scare myself for no reason. After all, Zhang Ya, the Red Specter, is the scariest presence at this school. I have her love letter, so who dares to challenge me? Considering the situation, this was the only way Chen Ge could console himself. Furthermore, this is just an affection mission. To put it simply, it's a special kind of date. There's nothing to be worried about.

He gave himself a pep talk, and when he was done, he walked back toward the glass door with the mallet. He was about to smash the door when his eyes caught a shocking detail.

The chair that should have been right under the hall light had moved one meter away from the light fixture. It seemed to have moved forward.

*F*ck!* This was the first time Chen Ge experienced something like this. What just happened?

Chapter 54

Chapter 54: Arts Activities Center

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Staring right at the wooden chair in the middle of the corridor, Chen Ge stood at the ready, gripping the mallet tightly. He waited for ten seconds, and the chair remained unmoved.

Is it because I'm watching it?

...

Chen Ge walked forward and turned on his phone's recording function before cradling it within the chains on the door. Then, he walked back to the abandoned garden outside the building and waited patiently.

The school at midnight was unsettlingly quiet; there was not even the sound of a bird or insect chirping. About three minutes later, Chen Ge returned to the dormitory; he had prepared himself for the worst. However, when he stood at the glass door, he saw that the chair was still where it was, just one meter away from the broken hall light.

Didn't move? What's going on?

Chen Ge walked to the door and picked up the phone from the chain. He looked through the video and saw nothing out of the ordinary. The chair sat in the middle of the corridor just as it should.

It'll only move when it's around a living human?

When the thought appeared in his mind, Chen Ge instantly felt something was wrong. He turned to look down the corridor, and the chair had moved two meters ahead again; it was now incredibly close to the glass door!

It moved forward again? What does that mean? It only moves when I am close, does this mean it wants something from me?

It would have been a lie to say he was not afraid, but Chen Ge's tolerance for fear was much higher than most, so he managed to maintain a clear mind under such situation.

The school is clearly haunted, but before I understand why, I should try my best to avoid these things.

Chen Ge actually wanted to smash the glass door and rushed in to bash the chair into pieces. However, considering the blind spots inside the building, he was afraid there were threats hidden in corners that he could not see. He was afraid that after entering the building, it was not the chair that would snap but himself.

Tonight's main mission is to locate that pair of red dancing shoes. As long as this weird stuff doesn't interrupt with my progress, there's no reason for me to interact with it. Chen Ge grabbed his phone and retreated from the door. I'd better go investigate other places first. I can always return if I can't find the dancing shoes. After all, the mission is considered successful as long as I locate them before sunrise; there is still plenty of time.

Chen Ge committed the location of the girl's dormitory to memory before retracing his step back to the school gate. He switched his phone off and squatted near the main gate, holding the mallet in his hand.

Based on the time, the taxi behind me should have arrived already, so why is the road still so dark?

A car's headlights would be extremely eye-catching against the total darkness, but Chen Ge waited for a long time without seeing any source of light heading toward the school.

Could there have been an accident?

This detail had not left his mind. Chen Ge knew there was no such thing as coincidence in this world; the person who followed him to Western Jiujiang's Private Academy had some motive of their own.

The opponent probably knew that I would wait for them, so they came out from the car earlier and walked the rest of the way on foot? If that's the case, then this is troublesome.

Chen Ge wished that he was wrong. He already had more than enough on his plate as it was.

In any case, I'll need to pick up pace. I have two advantages on my side: I've familiarized myself with the surrounding since I got here first, and I have Zhang Ya on my side. She won't watch me get bullied on her home turf, right?

Perhaps Chen Ge's eyes had gotten used to the darkness, or maybe it was the effect of the Ying-Yang Vision, but things were no longer that blurry in the dark.

Those in the light open themselves to being hunted by those in the dark.

Chen Ge did not turn on his phone but headed toward another building in the dark. The tallest building in the school was the education building. It was five-stories tall, and behind it was a field that was unkempt and overgrown. On the other end of the field was a building that sat itself apart from other buildings.

The building stood out because it had faded red paint.

The education building is for classes, so the dancing shoes won't be there; the possibility is even lower for the boy's dormitory. I'd better go take a look at the red building then.

Chen Ge walked along the outer perimeter of the field before he reached the front door of the curious building.

The building was as tall as the girl's dormitory, but it was only two thirds the size. Once he got close, Chen Ge noticed how truly unusual this building was. There was a wooden sign that was placed before the front door, and two conspicuous words were painted on it with red ink—NO ENTRY!

What is the purpose of this building?

Curiosity is part of human nature. Chen Ge's desire to enter the building only rose after reading the warning sign. Something must have happened here several years ago—maybe the red dancing shoes I'm looking for are inside.

Chen Ge walked around the wooden sign and saw the front door was sealed up with two locks.

I could break the door down with the mallet, but it'll create too much commotion; that might attract the attention of the person who is following me.

Chen Ge thus shied away from the door and walked around the edge of the building. There, he saw a window that was seriously worn—even a large piece of the glass was missing.

This can be my point of entry. Chen Ge extended his hand through the window to open the lock from within. To play it safe, he waited for several minutes to ensure that no one was inside before he jumped in.

He closed the window and moved everything to how it was before. Chen Ge did not dare lower his guard as he surveyed his surroundings. He had landed himself in an artist studio. The walls were pasted with the students' handiwork, and marble models sat on the shelves.

This place does look creepy, but it is no competition for my Haunted House.

Chen Ge walked through the rows of marble models as he headed for the room's back door. He looked through the door's window and saw a banner with the words 'Arts Activities Center' hanging on the corridor.

Looks like I'm at the right place. Chen Ge pulled the door open slowly. Perhaps because it had not been used for a long time, the sound of the door sliding on its hinges was grating on Chen Ge's ears.

Calm down, just leave immediately after you find the shoes.

Since he was inside an enclosed building, Chen Ge switched on his phone again. The dim light did not bring him any comfort. If anything, it only heightened the fear in Chen Ge's heart.

Chen Ge looked through the first-floor rooms one by one. All of them were artist studios. In fact, some of them still had easels and paintings that had been left behind.

This building has four stories; the dance studio I'm looking for is probably on another floor.

Armed with his phone and the mallet, Chen Ge headed up the stairs. When he reached the second floor, his heart started to race, and his back was covered with chills.

Because as he turned to look down the corridor of the second floor, there sat a wooden chair.

This thing again?

The muscles in Chen Ge's hand grew taut, as he gripped the mallet even tighter.

Chapter 55

Chapter 55: Five Girls

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The chair was placed right in the middle of the corridor, so if Chen Ge want to enter the second floor, he had to walk past it. The memory of what he had seen at the girl's dormitory was still fresh in Chen Ge's mind. These chairs seemed to have the tendency to get close to living humans.

Hiding at the staircase, he started to hesitate.

...

It has a back for people to lean on, and it looks different from all the other chairs I've seen in this building. It seems to have been moved here from someplace else, but why would someone do that?

Upon closer inspection, the chair looked similar to the one Chen Ge had seen inside the girl's dormitory; it was likely one of the chairs the school management assigned to the dormitory rooms.

Chen Ge used the camera on his phone to zoom in on the sign on one of the doors; it said something related to vocal training. The dance studio is not on the second floor, it seems— should I just head to the third floor? But what if there's another wooden chair on the third floor's corridor? If it starts to chase after me, won't I be blocked from both sides?

As the creepy image flashed across his mind, Chen Ge decided to enter the second-floor corridor. The corridor was so shadowy that Chen Ge could not see the end. The doors on both sides were closed, and the windows were crusted with a thick layer of dust, blocking Chen Ge of the view inside.

Chen Ge took deliberate steps. He did not think to hurry simply because of the possible threat from the wooden chair. In fact, for Chen Ge, the abandoned classrooms on both sides seemed scarier than the chair.

I wonder how long it has been since a living soul stepped into this place. The dust on the floor is so thick, and I have no way of dealing with the footprints that I've left. If the person following me has also entered this building, I'll definitely be discovered.

Even in this situation, Chen Ge did not forget about the hidden threat of the third party. I have got this over with as soon as possible!

The light on Chen Ge's phone wavered as his arms moved. He inched closer to the wooden chair.

In reality, there's nothing really scary about this, right? What can a wooden chair really do?

Chen Ge walked around the chair, and it gave him the feeling that it was just a wooden chair and nothing more.

Maybe I should take a closer look at it...

As the thought cropped up in Chen Ge's mind, he had already put it into motion. He knocked the chair to its side, and it was then that he noticed the handwriting underneath the chair.

Qian Yujiao? That sounds like the name of a girl.

In any case, the appearance of the name confirmed Chen Ge's earlier suspicion. The chair wasn't native to the Activities Centre but belonged to a specific individual. When the school hosted large events, the management would have the students bring their own chairs. To prevent confusion, many would jot down their name underneath their chair.

Does this mean there's also a name underneath the chair in the girl's dormitory?

Chen Ge memorized the name. After some hesitation, he decided not to break the chair but placed it inside one of the empty classrooms. The longer I stay here, the more uncomfortable I feel. I'd better head up to the third floor soon.

He returned via the route that he had come from and climbed up the stairs to the third floor. The corridor was empty this time. Chen Ge pushed open the door for some of the classrooms. The tables and chairs were all pushed to the back of the room, and parts of the wall had been repainted—it was rather obvious because the wall had two different hues.

The school was already closing, so why did they waste money to repaint the wall? For whom is this for?

Chen Ge's experience at Ping An Apartments provided him with a possibility. It's probably to hide something.

He used the mallet to peel at the paint, but weirdly enough, the wall behind the new paint was completely normal; there were no blood stains or weird marks.

No, there has to be something more than this.

Chen Ge continued his tour of the classrooms. He realized that not all the classrooms had been coated with new paint. There were spots that had been repainted, and some of them were curiously close to the indoor piping.

This building's water drainage system was probably updated before its closure. Chen Ge looked up at the piping and concluded, The classrooms on the first and second floor showed obvious signs of usage, but the classrooms on the third floor seem to have been abandoned even before the closure.

The tables and chairs were piled on top of each other, and there was not one piece of chalk left on the lectern. Some of the classrooms even had locks on them.

Ghost haunting? Murder? Hidden security concern?

There could be many different reasons for the sealing of the place, and Chen Ge could not pinpoint which one it was. He exited the classroom and headed up the fourth floor.

When he took the first step, Chen Ge turned back to see whether the wooden chair was following him or not.

It wasn't.

When he reached the landing between the third and fourth floor, there was a rope tied across the two banisters of the stair that blocked his way. There was a wooden board hanging on it. Similar to the one at the front door, it said 'NO ENTRY'.

Naturally, Chen Ge was not deterred by the wooden sign. He picked it up and put it to the side before bending down to scurry under the rope.

As he reached the fourth floor, Chen Ge noticed with his first glance that a faded room sign was hanging on the door of the room right opposite from him.

The dance studio!

After such a long search at the Activities Center, he had finally located the venue where the red dancing shoes had the highest chance of appearing. The layout of the fourth floor was different from the other floors in the sense that instead of individual classroom, the walls had been knocked out to form a large studio.

After tearing down the seals and prying open the lock, Chen Ge pushed open the door to the dance studio that had been left unused for many years. The place appeared to have been forgotten by time; things seemed to be how they were several years ago.

The slick floor was filled with a thin coat of dust, and the room was suffused with a weird smell. The closest description Chen Ge had for the smell was heavy deodorant that had gone off after being trapped in an enclosed room for years.

Chen Ge walked into the studio, sticking close to the wall. The studio was at a professional level; the wooden floor was waxed to accommodate the dance practice, and the walls were equipped with acoustic boards and panels to prevent the noise from disturbing the other classrooms.

This is the first time I've seen such a large dance studio.

Chen Ge used his camera to zoom in on the various angles of the room. The walls were mounted with bars that one usually saw in ballet classes. The bars' height was adjustable, and underneath them were a row of low seats that students could use for rest.

On the other end of the room were six floor-length mirrors that were perfectly joined together. Each mirror was about one meter wide and two meters tall.

I'd almost forgotten that mirrors are a necessary fixture inside a dance studio.

Looking at the row of mirrors, Chen Ge sucked in a cold breath. He then noticed, situated right at the middle of the mirrors, three wooden chairs.

Three at once?

Chen Ge bit on his lips before walking over to the chairs, his every action reflected in the mirror.

Facing his own reflection in the mirror amid an empty dance studio at midnight, Chen Ge felt increasingly unsettled.

Resisting the urge to break the mirrors, he toppled the three chairs to their sides, and like the chair he had found earlier, all of them had a girl's name written underneath them.

Including the chair at the girl's dormitory, I've stumbled across five chairs already. If every single one of them represents a girl, then this means I'm dealing with the spirits of five girls. So, the question is, what has really happened to them?

Chapter 56

Chapter 56: She Who Cannot Be Named

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge could not deduce the truth since there were plenty of clues still to be found. He returned the three chairs to how they had been before turning his head to look around the room. Due to the wall of mirrors, the dance studio felt larger and emptier than it was.

The place is so clean. It has been probably cleaned more than once recently.

...

There was no visible trash on the floor, and this was not good news for Chen Ge. Someone has messed with the place already. Hopefully, the red dancing shoes haven't been tossed out.

Chen Ge moved away from the wall of mirrors to the corner of the dance studio. The wall was covered with various certificates and accolade. There was also something that looked like a results list. After taking a closer look, Chen Ge found an anomaly. The first place of the list had been crossed off with a marker pen.

A list without the winner?

Chen Ge found all of the girls' names, including Qian Yujiao, on the list, but he could not find Zhang Ya.

He moved his gaze away, and one of the pictures on the wall grabbed his attention. It was a group photo of six individuals. Five of them were smiling brightly at the camera in a group hug while the sixth stood alone in the corner, quite a distance away from the rest. The photo had been manipulated to cut her out, if not for the snow-white dance shoes that peeked out from the corner, Chen Ge would have thought this was a group photo of five girls.

These are all individual photos or group photos, why isn't there a photo of the whole class?

Chen Ge aimed his phone at the wall and snapped a photo. Then, moving forward along the wall, he soon stopped before a room without a sign. Compelled by curiosity, he pushed the door open and walked into it.

The small room was equipped with a desk, a dresser, and a single bed.

This appears to be the office of the teacher, but why is there a bed? The teacher needed to work the night shift?

Chen Ge ransacked the room in the hope of locating the red dancing shoes. Unfortunately, the dresser was empty, and the drawers of the desk were filled with nothing but photocopies of winning certificates.

Looks like the dance students here were all very talented, since they won so many prizes. Chen Ge picked up a few random pieces to look at, and one of them had the name of Qian Yujiao's group printed on it. Swan Lake Citywide Ballet Group Competition Champion. This means that they were qualified to join the state-wide competition.

This certificate was not pasted on the wall outside, and most curiously, the winning group was supposed to have six names, but the last name had once again been crossed off.

It's the same as the result list.

Chen Ge wandered around the room for a little while longer before leaving it empty-handed. Chen Ge's heart skipped a beat when he pulled the door open. The three chairs had moved from their original position to a spot closer to the door that he had just exited.

It has started again!

Chen Ge told himself to just ignore those chairs. He rushed to look for other clues. If he could not come up with any clues for the next three minutes, he had decided to leave the Activities Center. Using his phone as a light source, Chen Ge walked to the deepest edge of the dance studio before he found the door that said the girl's dressing room.

According to rumors, the girl's bathroom and dressing room are where the Ying energy is the most concentrated at any school. I'll need to be extra careful.

He pushed the door slowly open. The dressing room was lined on both sides by steel lockers, and a long wooden chair sat in the middle.

So, this is what a girl's dressing room looks like.

This was the first time Chen Ge had entered such a place. He left the door half closed and walked into the room to pull open one of the lockers. A girl's school uniform was placed on the top level of the iron shelf. The design was different from other public school; it was more exquisite and prettier.

The skirt barely reaches my knees, isn't that a bit too short?

Chen Ge searched through the uniform's pockets and found nothing. He looked down the shelf and spotted a pair of white dancing shoes.

The color is not right, not the ones I'm looking for.

After closing the locker room, Chen Ge realized there was a small card pasted above the lock; it had the girl's name written on it. Now, this should make my life easier.

Using his phone, he examined the names on the lockers, but after one round, he still had not found Zhang Ya's name. However, he did find a solitary locker at the corner, isolated from the rest without a marking or a name.

The owner of this locker seems to have been ostracized by the rest. Chen Ge opened the door, and other than a dirtied ballet dress that sat on the top level of the shelf, there was nothing else.

No name and ostracized, who could this locker belong to? Chen Ge already had the answer inside his heart. He took out the dress and realized there were five candy boxes that had gone sour hidden underneath the dress.

What are these for? Presents? Chen Ge placed the ballet dress on the wooden chair and picked up the candy boxes. Every box had been hand-wrapped, and each one of them had a girl's name written on top. Every name was different, but the handwriting was similar, so they probably came from the same person.

These candy boxes were most likely the presents that she prepared.

When Chen Ge picked up the last box, he noticed a picture that was placed at the bottom. The picture was the complete version of the picture that was stuck on the wall outside. On the back of it was written, "Congratulations to Room 414 for winning the qualifications to enter the state-wide competition." The front showed six girls.

Five of them were happily celebrating on the right side on the picture while the sixth girl was standing about half a palm away from the rest. The girl had a tall figure, about 1.7 meters, and she looked like the main character of Swan Lake, graceful, pure, gentle, and beautiful. Even in the same picture, her supernatural grace put her apart from the rest.

“Could this be Zhang Ya?” muttered Chen Ge. He really could not reconcile the girl in the picture with the cruel and vicious Red Specter.

It was a pure accident that Chen Ge mentioned Zhang Ya’s name, but when he did so, the lockers in the girl’s dressing room started to creak and rattle—it sounded like they were overloaded and were about to burst. On top of that, Chen Ge could hear an insistent banging noise coming from outside the door, like someone was trying to get in.

“Who is it?”

After shoving the picture inside his pocket, Chen Ge turned towards the half-closed door as his grip on the mallet tightened. He looked through the opening and saw that the three wooden chairs had formed a barricade at the entrance.

“You really think I don’t have the guts to smash you all into pieces?” Chen Ge’s back was drenched in cold sweat, but he did keep his word as he walked toward the chairs with the mallet in hand. There was no other exit from the girl’s dressing room; if he didn’t clear a way out for himself, things would only get worse for him.

Chen Ge’s eyes wandered outwards as he tried to plan his escape route. However, his legs froze when his eyes landed on the wall of mirrors in the dance studio.

The mirrors were reflecting the situation in the dance studio. The only difference was... there were three girls sitting on the three chairs.

Chapter 57

Chapter 57: She Has Arrived

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Teetering bodies, dirtied school uniforms, pale faces, and moving mouths like they were trying to say something. The three girls' faces were frozen in fear and terror, and their bodies seemed to have grown out of the wooden chairs.

As his gaze alternated between the mirrors and the entrance of the girl's dressing room, a chill crept over Chen Ge's heart. Just not too long ago, he had tipped the chair over and observed them closely.

...

Could that be considered my first intimate contact with a female?

He shivered involuntarily, and his footsteps that headed toward the door hastened. As he wandered closer to the exit, the three chairs shuffled incrementally forward, and the lockers in the dressing room rattled slightly.

After he mentioned Zhang Ya's name, things seemed to have changed inside the dance studio. The name appeared to be a taboo here.

The mirrors can only reflect what is in the dance studio. Perhaps there's something even worse in the dressing room—I need to leave, pronto!

As if confirming his thought, the steel doors of the lockers started to creak like something was trying to escape from them. Holding the mallet in his hand, Chen Ge raced toward the door. With a running start, Chen Ge used his legs to kick the chairs that blocked his way. As he tried to rush out, he felt something pull on his shoulders.

He turned to look at the mirror, and in the reflection, two slender and pale arms could be seen hanging off his shoulders. Without a second thought, Chen Ge turned and started his assault!

Bang!

The mallet landed on the back of the chair, causing a crack to appear on the chair. The scream of a woman reverberated in his ears. In the mirror, he could see the female student on the chair glare fiendishly at his back while her arms encircled themselves tightly around his shoulders like she was trying to press him onto the seat of the chair.

What is the purpose of her doing this? Could this be some kind of evil musical chairs game where my soul will be eternally trapped inside the chair if I sit on it?

The force on his shoulders gradually increased as pairs of pale arms latched themselves onto him, trying to pull him back into the girl's dressing room. To make matters worse, Chen Ge could hear shuffling from the outside corridor, and several seconds later, another wooden chair appeared at the entrance of the dance studio.

My luck is always used at the worst possible moment. It chooses a time like this to make me popular with the girls!

Chen Ge was at his limit. Instead of running away, he shifted to attack mode. With one hand on the chair's back, he used his other hand to swing the mallet around, laying waste to the chairs that surrounded him!

When his mallet formed the first crack on the chair, Chen Ge had noticed that the expression of the female student shifted from pleading to venomous resentment. Through the shift in expression, Chen Ge came up with the conclusion that the chairs should be their items of possession, similar to how Xiaoxiao's family attached themselves to the ragdolls.

Demolishing the items of attachment won't destroy them, but at least it'll be able to injure them.

The force on him intensified. A newbie who had not experienced this before would probably have ended up as a willing lamb for this group of girls by now. Unfortunately, their opponent was Chen Ge. This proprietor of a Haunted House had just spent a night at a haunted apartment with a serial killer. Chen Ge still knew fear, but after multiple incidents, his resistance to fear had been trained. Even when he was in fear or shock, he could still manage to make the correct decision, and his grip on the mallet didn't waver.

Bang!

Chen Ge smashed the chair and gripped the ends of the chair to swing at another chair. The image reflected in the mirror was a bit hard to describe in words, but Chen Ge did not have time to deal with that anymore.

He used about ten seconds to destroy one of the chairs. Just as he turned to aim his wrath at the second chair, he felt something grip his neck. Turning his head to the mirror, he saw a pale hand choking his throat. His opponent seemed to have given up the thought of pressing him onto the chair and decided to kill him instead.

This shift in situation did not slow Chen Ge down; instead, it only made him more vicious as he gripped the chairs and smashed them at the wall. As the chairs cracked, the force around his neck lightened. When all three chairs were nothing but splinters, the chokehold around his neck finally disappeared.

“Leaving these things behind benefits no one. Later, I’ll burn all of you to help you seek closure.” Chen Ge leaned against the mirror and tried to catch his breath. There were visible strangle marks around his neck.

The fighting must have created tons of commotion. This will definitely attract the attention of the person who is following me. I’ll need to leave as soon as possible. Anyway, the red dancing shoes don’t seem to be here.

This place was definitely haunted, so Chen Ge didn’t want to stay at the dance studio anymore. The sound of the rattling of the lockers inside the girl’s dressing room intensified, and that was not something that could be caused by a draft. Other than that, there were many other curious happenings like the sudden deepening in the colors of the walls and floor as well as the weird ‘ping, ping’ noises from the corridor that had gotten far more frequent.

Just as Chen Ge prepared to leave, he almost tripped from someone pulling on his lower calf.

Chen Ge turned to look at the mirror and saw the three female students were pulling on his leg, their fingernails almost pushing into Chen Ge’s skin.

Seeing this, Chen Ge also grew desperate. He smacked his mallet down on the wooden splinters, but no matter how hard he smashed, the girls did not release their grips on his calf.

The weird noise in the corridor was getting closer, and the vengeful faces that were pulling on Chen Ge started to laugh maniacally. A heavy cloth seemed to fall over the dance studio because the light from his phone started to twist as the heavy stench that Chen Ge had caught a hint of earlier started to suffuse the air.

There's a scarier presence hiding at this school?

Chen Ge was spooked by the thought in his mind. He dared to come to this school so late at night mainly because he assumed Zhang Ya was the scariest presence this school had to offer. He was there to do a favor for Zhang Ya, so she had no reason to harm him.

This is bad.

Something seemed to have reached the door of the dance studio, and the stink in the air intensified.

The three girls on the floor were glaring at Chen Ge with fierce and sinister expressions. Chen Ge's back was leaning against the mirror. He reached into his pocket, and his fingertip had just touched the doll when the weird noise at the door retreated with a speed that was faster than it was when it arrived. Then, the stink in the air slowly vanished.

What happened? It feels like the thing outside the door was scared.

All the weird noises disappeared instantly, and Chen Ge could only hear his heartbeat then. The light twisted at a greater degree than before, and the temperature in the room seemed to have dropped further.

What is happening?

The pulling on his calf had also disappeared. Chen Ge lowered his head and saw the three female students were hiding as far away as they could and looking at the space behind him with desperation in their eyes.

Behind me?

Chen Ge turned his head awkwardly around to face the tall mirror. The image reflected back at him was not his own but a woman in a blood-red school uniform looking down at him.

Chapter 58

Chapter 58: Red Dancing Shoes

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge was only half a finger away from the mirror, so he got a much better view than he would have liked. The elegant school uniform was dripping with fresh blood that caused it to stick to her body. Her face was hidden behind her hair, and the overly pale skin that was exposed looked scary.

The cold light from the phone screen twisted, and Chen Ge could feel his limbs becoming frozen. He used every ounce of energy in his body to stabilize his lips before he could utter the girl's name.

...

“Zhang Ya?”

As if hearing Chen Ge's voice, the girl slowly raised her head. The curtain of black hair parted to the side, and an unblemished face appeared in his view. However, the mirror started to mist when her head was only raised halfway. She took a step forward, and she disappeared from the mirror.

“Where did she go?”

Chen Ge stared at the mirror, and something even more curious happened. Cast from the phone's light, his shadow slowly stood up to stand behind him.

Chen Ge could see that the shadow was about 1.7 meters tall. As the dripping sound of something like blood entered his ears, the shadow started to gain color. The bloodied uniform stuck to its body, and it was all red.

Chen Ge stood where he was and did not dare move. The chilliness from his back had climbed up his spine to his brain. Right then, the red shadow took another step back to lean against his back!

Standing back to back, Chen Ge's body froze. Even as he gasped for air, the sensation that he was running out of air would not go away.

The specter has stuck to my back?

Standing back to back was sometimes quite scary because you could not know who was standing behind you.

Something cold seemed to reach for his fingers. Chen Ge did not dare turn to take a look. His frozen fingers slowly opened to allow the phone to slide to the floor. The light flickered twice before it switched off suddenly.

Surrounded by darkness, the coldness behind his back continued to spread. Chen Ge couldn't even imagine the things that were happening to him. 2 am, inside an abandoned school's dance studio, facing a tall mirror, standing back to back with a Red Specter... in a way, I guess one could call this romance.

Various thoughts crossed Chen Ge's mind. Something was holding his hand, and it made him feel increasingly cold. The hair of the girl behind him was moving as it entwined itself with Chen Ge's hair.

What is she planning to do? My mission here is to find the red dancing shoes. I'll fail the mission if I am unable to do that before dawn.

However, Chen Ge's body was frozen in place, and the only thing he could do was stare at the mirror before him. He did not notice it initially, but several seconds later, he realized with a start that fuzzy shadows were forming inside the mirror. He widened his eyes as the shadows started to become clearer.

Wait, aren't these the girls who are trapped inside the chairs?

Inside the mirror, five girls in clean uniforms entered the dance studio. Their outfits were completely different from what Chen Ge had seen earlier, so he suspected that the images he saw now were reflecting scenes that happened years ago.

The five girls walked toward the mirror, laughing among themselves. Soon after they entered the studio, Zhang Ya showed up. Even though they were wearing the same uniform, Zhang Ya carried herself in a different way than the rest of the girls.

She was carrying a bag in her hands. Chen Ge had seen this bag before inside the girl's dressing room; it was holding the five candy boxes.

Zhang Ya seemed to be in quite a good mood. She walked into the dressing room with hurried steps, and several minutes later, all six girls came out wearing their ballet dresses.

The situation had not changed much. The five girls were in their little group while Zhang Ya tailed behind alone.

Not long after they started their training, the dance studio's door was pushed open. A female teacher walked in holding the Swan Lake winning certificate in her hand. She was talking animatedly with the girls, probably encouraging and congratulating them.

That day was probably not a normal school day because Chen Ge didn't see any other students. The six of them were likely there to do intensive training to prepare for the state-wide competition.

The female teacher left after half an hour. After making sure the teacher had left, the five girls stopped practicing and started playing on their phones and chatting while lying on the floor. The only one practicing was Zhang Ya.

Then, one of the girls said something while pointing at Zhang Ya. The rest of the girls laughed with the exception of Zhang Ya. However, she did not seem to mind it too much. After practicing for a little while longer, she stopped to rest. Then she turned to walk into the dressing room and came out with the bag of candy boxes.

Zhang Ya passed them to the girls, but as one of them reached for it, she was stopped by one of the other girls, who was as tall as Zhang Ya. She said many things while pointing her finger assertively at Zhang Ya. She then ran into the dressing room and came out with a school bag. She pulled out several love letters from it. From the name, Chen Ge knew they were all addressed to Zhang Ya.

This could not really be considered an argument because it was totally one-sided, dominated by the other girl who was weirdly agitated.

Zhang Ya's candy boxes were thus rejected. She placed them back into the bag and left. Chen Ge thought that was the end, but not long after that, the door to the dance studio was pushed open again. The few girls were startled. Thinking it was the teacher, they quickly climbed up from the floor and started to 'practice'.

A fuzzy shadow of a male walked in. He was about 1.8 meters tall, slouching, and very large in size.

The man said something to the girls, and only two said something in return to him. Chen Ge was confused by his identity.

The girls soon returned to their practice, and the man entered the office. Later, he opened the office door and waved for Zhang Ya to come to him. Zhang Ya appeared like she did not know or even trust the man. She walked toward the office with hesitation and stood at the door but did not go in.

The mirror could not reflect what was inside the office. However, about eight seconds later, the scene on the mirror darkened as Zhang Ya ran out of the office. Holding his arm, the man chased after her while cursing all the way.

All five girls in the dance studio saw this, but all of them sat where they were. None of them were willing to go to Zhang Ya's aid. Soon, Zhang Ya was cornered at a space that was nowhere close to the door. She screamed loudly for help, but it was not answered. The girls acted like they did not even hear her.

The man said many unsavory things as he closed in on Zhang Ya. Zhang Ya's hands had reached the edge of the window behind her—there was only one exit left.

Looking at the scene that played itself on the mirror, Chen Ge was suddenly reminded of the lines that appeared on the black phone when he won the love letter.

Her eyes exposed, cheeks white as ash, the moment she fell off the building, she became the taboo of the school. Red dancing shoes and blood-dyed uniform, even her name became something that was only uttered in frantic whispers.

The man studied the empty window closely but did not rush down to save Zhang Ya. Instead, he took several steps back to stop beside the five girls, who were in complete shock.

Chapter 59

Chapter 59: Together Forever

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The dance studio was extremely quiet. In the mirror, the man was the first to recover. He stood before the five girls and started to glare threateningly at them. One of the girls started to weep, so the man yanked her up from the floor and pointed his finger at her face while his lips moved. The girls shook her head vehemently.

Then, the girl who was as tall as Zhang Ya stood up. She walked over to the man and started to help him persuade the other girls. From how she carried herself, she seemed to know the man and shared a more than friendly relationship. Perhaps it was even she who planned for the man to appear just after the female teacher left.

...

With the girl's persuasion and the man's threat, the other girls finally nodded. After a few more minutes of discussion, the man was the first to leave. The five girls then entered the dressing room to change, and they all left soon after.

The mirror returned to normal, but the atmosphere in the dance studio grew tense. Chen Ge could feel the chill coming from his back; it felt like he was carrying a frozen dead body.

That's all?

The mirror only recorded what had happened in the dance studio but did not go into what happened next. Chen Ge believed there had to be more than that. After falling from the fourth floor, as long as it wasn't head first, Zhang Ya still had a chance of being rescued.

Red Specter harbors deep resentment... Maybe the fatty snuffed out Zhang Ya's last breath because he was afraid of being exposed? The water system of the activities center has been renewed so perhaps the fatty used the system to deal with the body?

As the thought cropped up in his mind, Chen Ge rejected it. Zhang Ya was lost inside the school, so the police had to have been involved.

Furthermore, cleaning up a body was not as simple as depicted on those crime dramas. Sometimes, the more one tried to hide, the more obvious it became.

Chen Ge was curious what happened next, but the mirror had stopped moving. Perhaps I should give Inspector Lee a call. This is a murder, and Western Jiujiang's Private Academy is within their jurisdiction, so he must have some kind of record.

Chen Ge's idea was not bad, but when he planned to pick up his phone, a scream came from behind him. Zhang Ya's hair started to twine up his shoulders like snakes curling themselves around his neck and chest, tying them close together.

"I'm not leaving; I just want to help you!" Chen Ge argued before his breath was choked out of him. However, the black hair continued to constrict like a boa constrictor suffocating its prey. Perhaps from Zhang Ya's perspective, this was the only way the two of them could be together—this was true love.

Chen Ge had escaped from the wolf's den to enter the tiger's cave. Now he understood why Zhang Ya's love letter was a curse; this lady did not like living man, and the more she loved a man, the greater her desire to kill him.

Standing back to back, his limbs too weak to even resist, all Chen Ge could do was to argue his case. "I will help you call the police and have law enforcement provide justice by bringing all who have harmed you to the judgement of law!"

The words felt ineffective even to Chen Ge's ears. Zhang Ya's situation was unique. Unlike the family of four at Ping An Apartments, she did not need him for revenge. Those who had harmed her were trapped inside chairs already! And Chen Ge believed she had plenty to do with that.

The kind and graceful Zhang Ya had been completely corrupted into a mad specter. Chen Ge did not even dare to imagine the type of disaster that had befallen the five girls before they were trapped inside the chairs.

Chen Ge had given up—this was how he was going to go—but as he prepared for death, the black hair stopped attacking.

"What's wrong? There are still people who haven't received their just punishment?" he uttered quickly, to stress that he would help Zhang

Ya capture all those who had harmed her. The black hair started to release as if Zhang Ya was also considering the options. All Chen Ge could do then was wait.

The dark dance studio returned to silence. Ten seconds later, an unexpected thing happened. While he was dancing on the line of life and death, the door to the dance studio was suddenly pushed open, and a lanky guy poked his head in to look around.

When he saw Chen Ge, a cruel, excited grin lit up his face, and the hand with the peony tattoo pulled out a fruit knife from his back pocket. However, coincidentally, when Chen Ge saw the man, he also smiled, his expression saying—'You're finally here!'

"Surprise to see me? You've left too many clues; the bricks on the outer walls had your footsteps, and the window on the first floor of this building had fresh dirt and grass stuck to it. After entering the building, your footprints are practically everywhere. You're too careless, and now, you shall pay!"

The man standing at the door was naturally Zhang Peng. His eyes were bloodshot, and his mental state was unusually animated. He held the fruit knife in his usable arm. However, to Chen Ge's surprise, after Zhang Peng said that long speech, as he took the first step into the dance studio, the expression on his face shifted drastically. Earlier, he had been vicious, but now, he retreated worriedly, his eyes glowing with caution and resentment.

The mirror monster has taken control of his body?

Before Chen Ge could react, Zhang Peng started to race down the stairs. He seemed to have spotted something scary. His limbs were twisted in unnatural angles as he ran, which gave him the impression of a puppet being pulled along by his master.

The black hair around Chen Ge disappeared, along with the girl behind him. All he could see was a red flash across the mirror; a chase seemed to have begun. The chilliness from his back gradually dissipated, and life returned to Chen Ge's frozen limbs. He picked up his phone and backpack before racing toward the stairs, his speed no less than Zhang Peng's.

This Bloody Heart Mission will have to be put on the backburner for now. If I truly earn Zhang Ya's affection, my life in the future will be a little too exciting for me to handle.

Chen Ge dashed out of the Activities Centre. He took a glance at the surrounding dark forest and used his phone to call Inspector Lee.

The phone rang once before it was picked up, and Inspector Lee's voice came through. "Xiao Chen? Did you run into Zhang Peng?"

"Western Jiujiang's Private Academy! Zhang Peng is here! Other than that, I have something important to tell you," Chen Ge said through heavy breaths as he raced toward the school gate.

"Fu Jun, Da Yong, contact the investigation team immediately." Inspector Lee didn't hang up. After he gave his orders, he returned his attention to Chen Ge. "What is this other thing you want to talk about?"

"I discovered another murder case at Western Jiujiang's Private Academy!"

Chapter 60

Chapter 60: You've Found Another Murder Case?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

"You've found yet another murder case?" Inspector Lee's tone on the other end of the phone was puzzled to say the least.

"Four years ago, a female student by the name of Zhang Ya jumped out of the building, but there is more to her death than suicide!" Chen Ge said firmly.

...

"Wait a minute, let me go look at the files first. If the victim's family had asked for an autopsy, we should have the record of it somewhere." Inspector Lee didn't hang up as he turned on the lights of the records room to search for the files. He finally found something five minutes later. "Wait, why does Western Jiujiang's Private Academy sound so familiar? Xiao Chen, get out of that school now!"

"I'm already heading for the gate, what's wrong?"

"That school is just weird; I can't explain it to you in just a few sentences, but I can give you a number. Six people committed suicide within the span of two weeks at that school, and their deaths were all very weird."

The sound of paper flipping could be heard through the phone as Inspector Lee looked through the files.

"That sounds about right! That number fits what I'm thinking." The school gate was within Chen Ge's view—he could exit the place soon.

"Fits what you're thinking? What exactly is happening over there?"

"Don't mind that, check whether the name of the first suicide victim is Zhang Ya or not." Chen Ge was in a hurry to confirm his suspicion.

Inspector Lee double-checked the records before replying. "Indeed, the name is Zhang Ya, but she did die from a fall. It is a suicide because the mortician did not find any other wounds on her body. On the day of the discovery, the police did visit the crime scene for investigation. The girl fell from the fourth floor's dance studio; the window she fell from was undamaged, and the soundproof foam around it wasn't showed no signs of cleaning. So, from this, we confirmed Zhang Ya jumped out of the building without outside influence."

"Without outside influence? Inspector Lee, have you considered that she was forced to do so? If she didn't jump, she would have been raped!" Chen Ge relayed the scenes he had seen in the mirror.

"We considered that as well, and there are testimonies from Zhang Ya's roommates in the records. All five girls said that they didn't know anything. Zhang Ya jumped off the building after their class was over, so Zhang Ya was inside the studio alone. According to their testimonies, Zhang Ya had always suffered from high stress, was prone to solitude, and was perhaps even mentally unstable. To confirm their testimonies, the police at the time even verified their accounts with the girls from the class, and everyone agreed."

"Zhang Ya is definitely not the person they described; they all banded together to frame her!" Zhang Ya was feeling indignant on Zhang Ya's behalf. He did not expect that the whole class would gang up on Zhang Ya; the girl didn't even do anything wrong.

"What kind of person Zhang Ya was, you and I will never know, but the evidence doesn't lie." Inspector Lee didn't understand why Chen Ge was so agitated. "In any case, get out of that school as soon as you can. We're sending our men to come fetch you."

"They were all lying! Take a closer look at Zhang Ya's time of death, it should be before the class was over! They lied on the time of death, so those five girls were accomplices!" The volume of Chen Ge's voice inadvertently increased.

"That's where you're wrong. Zhang Ya's time of death was between 6 pm and 8 pm. Those five girls left school at around 5.30 pm, their usual time of departure." Inspector Lee didn't know how happened to Chen Ge at the school, so he stood from an outsider's perspective to analyze the situation.

"Impossible!"

"It is indeed possible. The mortician conducted a detailed analysis based on livor mortis and rigor mortis. Zhang Ya's time of death is indeed between 6 pm and 8 pm. The cause of death was a broken spine. Other than that, there were wounds to her skull, calcaneus, and hipbone, all common injuries suffered by suicide victims that died from falling.”

Chen Ge had no way to retort. He stopped where he was. “If Zhang Ya did jump off the building before the five girls left, this means that she didn’t die instantly after the fall. However, due to the broken bones that incapacitated her body, she could only lie in a pool of her own blood as she waited for death to come, tortured by pain and heartache until she truly died around 6 to 8 pm.”

“Your hypothetical scenario is possible, but you have forgotten one thing. If the girl still had a breath in her after she fell off the building, why wouldn’t the five girls who were there save her? Even if they had their own reasons not to save her, other people at the school would have discovered her.”

“It was a holiday, and the school was deserted other than the six of them who were at school to practice for the upcoming state-wide competition. Their teacher had already left beforehand, and even if there were guards or someone of the sort, isn’t it possible that they were sent away by people with ill intentions?” Chen Ge posed a differing opinion.

“I’m not going to argue that with you; after all, it is a moot point arguing whether Zhang Ya died from suicide or murder. You believe those five girls were the real murderers in Zhang Ya’s death and collaborated with each other to provide false testimony, but two weeks after that, these five girls died one after another. The real murderers you assumed are now dead, so how are we supposed to investigate this case?” Inspector Lee was more worried about Chen Ge’s safety.

“Inspector Lee, I never said that these five girls are the murderers; they are merely accomplices! The real murderer who caused Zhang Ya’s death is a fatty that is 1.8 meters tall with a slouched back!”

“That’s quite a detailed description, mind telling me how you came to that conclusion? Four years ago, the security at Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy hadn’t been completed yet, and all the witnesses are now dead. But you’re telling me there’s a real murderer on the run... how do you expect me to believe you?”

Inspector Lee had worked overtime for the past few days already thanks to the Ping An Apartments’ case. It was why he was still at the station even at 2 am. Lethargy could be heard laced in his words.

Chen Ge could discern the suspicion in Inspector Lee's voice. "We can start by investigating the people who are related to Western Jiujiang's Private Academy from four years ago; we have to find this person! He was at the crime scene!"

"Chen Ge, starting a police investigation is not a game. Do you know how difficult it is to reopen a case that was closed four years ago? Even if you can convince me, it'll be pointless if you cannot convince my superiors. What we need is actual proof—not suspicion, not speculation."

"Everything that I've said is the truth."

"That is according to you." Inspector Lee had started rearranging the files to put them back where they were. "Do you mind telling me why you are suddenly so interested in this case? You don't give me the impression of a young man who is filled with a sense of justice."

Why am I so insistent? Chen Ge was startled by this sudden question from Inspector Lee. He was reminded of the aid that Zhang Ya had lent him when he was trapped inside the wooden hut as well as the chilling loneliness coming from his back when Zhang Ya was standing behind him inside the dance studio.

"It's nothing. In the current circumstances, the only person who can help her and come to her aid is me." Chen Ge looked at the black phone.

"I still don't understand what you're saying." Inspector Lee continued after a long pause. "But holding up justice is the job of law enforcement. Since you've brought up the suspicion, after the case on Ping An Apartments is wrapped up, I'll personally help you look into this."

"Thank you, Uncle San Bao!" Chen Ge sighed in relief. "Capturing the real murderer, I suppose is giving Zhang Ya some kind of release. With regards to this godforsaken place, I really don't want to return again."

He hung up the phone and turned to look at Western Jiujiang's Private Academy one last time.

To his shock, Red Specter Zhang Ya was just standing behind him!

There were about three meters between them. Fresh blood dripping on her school uniform, Zhang Ya looked at Chen Ge with her head tilted. This time, she didn't move closer, and her expression was a bit weird.

Chapter 61

Chapter 61: Affection Level Increase

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge was thankful that he didn't say anything bad about Zhang Ya earlier. He laughed awkwardly and said, "I came out for fresh air because the dance studio was a bit too stuffy."

The red blood trailed down her uniform as Zhang Ya stared at Chen Ge. Then she raised her slender, pale arm to point at the building that Chen Ge knew as the teachers' lounge.

...

"You want me to go there?" Before Chen Ge could get an answer, Zhang Ya disappeared. Chen Ge was several meters away from the gate, so he was caught in a conundrum. If he returned to the school to investigate, he might run into more danger, but if he just left like that, he would feel so unsatisfied.

Zhang Ya's attitude toward me seems to have softened. Her hint should be related to the case four years ago. However, this school seems to have another presence similar to Zhang Ya, and there is more than one. I should probably wait for the police to arrive first before I go back in.

After jumping out of the school, Chen Ge stood on guard outside the gate. He wasn't sure whether Zhang Peng was still alive or not, so he did not dare let his guard down. Fifteen minutes later, the blinding headlights of a car cut through the darkness; two police cars were heading his way.

Chen Ge jumped out into the road and waved the flashlight on his phone. "I'm here!"

The cars stopped at the gate to Western Jiujiang's Private Academy, and Inspector Lee, as well as an officer Chen Ge hadn't seen before, stepped out from the car.

"Uncle Lee, you're so fast." According to Chen Ge's calculations, the police should have required another half an hour before to get there.

“We received a distress call from a taxi driver earlier, saying he was getting robbed, so we were already on the way to this place.” Inspector Lee had heavy circles under his eyes, signs that he had overworked himself for the past few days.

“Is that so? In any case, come in quick, Zhang Peng should be still inside the school!” Chen Ge pointed at the abandoned school’s gate—one might have thought he was the host inviting the guests into his house.

“Da Yong,” Inspector Lee said, and a muscular police officer who was about 1.9 meters tall pulled out a clipper from the car’s trunk. “After entering the school compound, we’ll need to be very careful. The suspect is very cunning, so stick together in pairs.”

He turned to look at Chen Ge. “Where is the last place you saw the suspect?”

“At the dance studio, but he has run away already. In any case, I have something else to report to you.” Chen Ge walked to Inspector Lee’s side and pointed at the teacher’s lounge. “Inspector Lee, do you mind following me?”

“Da Yong, you stay behind to watch over the road, others move out according to plan.” Inspector Lee issued his orders, and then he followed Chen Ge into the teachers’ lounge.

This building only had three floors, but the interior décor was much more high class than the other buildings Chen Ge had been in.

Inspector Lee held the flashlight in his hand and asked, “Why are we here? Did you see the suspect run this way?”

His gaze was sharp, and the tiredness fell from the man. Once he entered the crime scene, Inspector Lee seemed to morph into another person.

“Zhang Peng won’t have come here.” Chen Ge walked ahead, trying to pinpoint the exact room Zhang Ya’s finger had pointed at. “I’m bringing you to the place that’s related to the death of the girl four years ago.”

“Haven’t I said I will help you investigate that after we capture Zhang Peng? The two cases cannot be mixed together, and the most important thing now is to capture Zhang Peng.”

“We’re here; this is the room.” Chen Ge didn’t answer Inspector Lee. He had waited for the police to come because he wanted to lower the risk to its bare minimum. The sign on the door said that this was the storeroom for gym equipment. After pulling off the seals and kicking the door open, Chen Ge and Inspector Lee walked into the room.

Numerous balls littered the room, and exercise equipment like tennis rackets and ping pong paddles hung from the walls.

“You brought me here to see this?” Inspector Lee used his flashlight to scan the corners of the room. “What can it prove?”

“Gym equipment...” Chen Ge walked to the center of the room and started ransacking the place. He stopped when he reached a single bed that was placed next to the innermost cupboard. There was also such a bed inside the dance studio; it looked specially made because the bedframe was slender than most normal bedframes.

“Why is there a need for a bed inside the storeroom?” Chen Ge frowned with confusion before lifting up the bed’s wooden boards. A harrowing scene revealed itself before their eyes.

Underneath the worn and dusty bedframe hid ten female ballet shoes of differing sizes, and a pair of them had been dyed black by blood!

“That many of them?” Looking at the shoes that appeared to have been purposely hidden underneath the bed, Chen Ge did not feel anger but shock, shock that the incident at Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy might be more distressing than he had assumed.

“There’s more than one victim!” Chen Ge asked Inspector Lee, “Why would the ballet shoes of the suicide girl be hidden here? Was there any mention of the girl’s shoes in the case report?”

“There’s no record on the shoes.” Inspector Lee frowned. “The shoes are all covered with dust even though they are hidden under the bed; this means that they have probably been left here for a long time already. However, they were placed neatly in a row, like someone took special care to look after them... perhaps this is the murderer’s fetish.”

“Uncle Lee, you’re the police officer here, so you have to help return justice to the victims.” Chen Ge dropped the boards to the side. “The murderer had free access to the dance studio as well as this equipment storeroom, so he was probably a manager or guard.”

“If what you’re saying is true, then that does narrow down the investigation scope quite a bit.” Inspector Lee seemed to have been moved by the pair of darkened dancing shoes. “Don’t worry, I will not rest until I get to the bottom of this case. No matter who the murderer is, I’ll have him punished to the full extent of the law!”

When Inspector Lee said that, Chen Ge’s black phone vibrated. He pulled it out to glance at it. There was a new message on the phone.

“Managed to locate Zhang Ya’s red dancing shoes before dawn.
Completed Zhang Ya’s Bloody Heart Mission, Mission Completion Rate: 50 percent.

“Zhang Ya’s affection level toward you has increased! You can write something you want her to do in Zhang Ya’s personal profile page (Note: It mustn’t be against Zhang Ya’s will).”

Chen Ge silently retreated to the door. Tonight’s experience might have been harrowing, but at least the result is good.

He opened up Zhang Ya’s personal page, and the display turned red immediately. My demand mustn’t be against Zhang Ya’s will—that’s the only requirement.

After some thought, Chen Ge wrote, “I hope Zhang Ya will listen to me forever.”

“I’m sorry, but your demand is against Zhang Ya’s will, please change it.”

“I hope Zhang Ya will protect me from being harmed.”

“I’m sorry, but your demand is against Zhang Ya’s will, please change it.”

“I hope Zhang Ya will not harm me or harbor any intention to kill me!”

That’s doable, right?

“I’m sorry, but your demand is against Zhang Ya’s will, please change it.”

Er...

Chapter 62

Chapter 62: Four-Star Scenario!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After trying it three more times and failing three more times, Chen Ge decided to give up. He would continue the research when he was back at his Haunted House. To his surprise, when he exited Zhang Ya's personal page, there was another unread alert on the black phone.

Haven't I finished the Bloody Heart Mission already?

...

Chen Ge opened the second message without much thought.

"The Specter's Favored, congratulations for completing Rare Level Ghost, Red Specter's Bloody Heart Mission. This mission is part of a side mission for a four-star scenario—School of the Afterlife!

"Note: When the Bloody Heart Mission's completion rate reaches one hundred percent, it'll unlock the Trial Mission for School of the Afterlife (Mission effective time is three months). Completing all the Trial Missions will unlock said scenario!

"School of the Afterlife—Scream Factor 4 Stars!

"Side Mission 1: Red Dancing Shoes (The school after midnight is the Red Swan's stage. She is a wicked specter as well as a red ballet dancer). Mission Venue: Western Jiujiang's Private Academy.

"Side Mission 2: The Hanging Man (I never kid, not in life nor in death). Mission Venue: Western Jiujiang's Private Academy.

"Side Mission 3: The Stink (He collects all the trash in his bedroom just to hide an unspeakable secret). Mission Venue: Western Jiujiang's Private Academy.

"Side Mission 4: The Pen Spirit Who Refused to Leave (Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, can you tell me who will die next?) Mission Venue: Mu Yang High School.

"Side Mission 5: The Fifth Cubicle in the Toilet (Every day at midnight, people swore they could see a red shadow appear inside the toilet. To catch her, I hid inside the fifth cubicle of the toilet). Mission Venue: Mu Yang High School.

“Side Mission 6: Deep Well (One brother and one sister went to school, but how come no one returned?) Mission Venue: Mu Yang High School.

“Side Mission 7: The Sealed Classroom (There’s a classroom at the end of the corridor that’s always sealed. No one ever enters it, but every night, the classroom comes alive with activity). Mission Venue: Mu Yang High School.

“Side Mission 8: Eternal Life (In an undisclosed underground morgue, there’s a group who seek eternal life). Mission Venue: Western Jiujiang’s Medical University.

“Last Mission: Currently Locked.”

Reading the series of message on the black phone, Chen Ge was baffled. Four-star scenario? Even a one-star scenario manages to cause forensic science students to faint, so just how scary will a four-star scenario be?

Everyone has a threshold with regards to horror; once that threshold is overshot, it might be harmful to the person’s health. Chen Ge read the various Side Missions again, and just the mission description alone made his skin crawl. Most importantly, these were just Side Missions; the finale was still locked. Logically speaking, Chen Ge had to finish the eight Side Missions first before he could unlock the final mission.

A four-star scenario is probably too hard for the current me. Perhaps I’ll be able to challenge later but definitely not now.

Chen Ge closed the message and clicked into the unlockable scenario tab. Other than The Third Sick Hall and The Haunted Hearse, there was now an additional School of the Afterlife, but different from the previous two, this scenario’s name was written in blood-red ink.

So, this one scenario practically collects all the haunted school stories into one. In that case, even after this scenario is unlocked, it probably can’t be released to every member of the public.

Looking at the Scream Factor delineation of the various scenarios, a thought bubbled up in Chen Ge’s mind. One-star scenario should be open to anyone, but entrance to scenarios that were three stars or above should be limited to those who had survived one- and two-star scenarios. In other words, this could be considered a type of visitor protection.

The playability of the Haunted House will be increased in this manner as well. Those who have visited once may return to challenge a scarier scenario until they perfect every scenario. This means that they will have a different experience every time they visit, and this will definitely boost the popularity of my Haunted House.

Suddenly, He San's image appeared in Chen Ge's mind. He was technically the only visitor who had challenged more than one of the Haunted House's scenarios. That kid is somewhat of a good luck charm of the Haunted House. Perhaps I should invite him again when the new scenario is unlocked...

There were many fresh ideas in his mind, like giving additional rewards and certificates after the visitors survived certain levels. This way it would encourage the visitors to breakthrough to challenge scarier scenarios.

This makes me feel like some kind of dungeon master.

Chen Ge couldn't help but smile. In the future, there would probably be professional teams who came to his Haunted House to understand the true meaning of fear.

"Why are you smiling dumbly to yourself? Looks like you up to some kind of no good." Inspector Lee came out from the room. He had completed the initial survey. "I've communicated with Team 1 and Team 2; they couldn't find any trace of Zhang Peng. The atmosphere of this school weirds me out, and the environment is too complicated to navigate at night. We'll retreat for now and set up a plan when the investigation team gets here."

"Okay." Chen Ge had prepared to leave for a long time already. All his reasons for being there had been accomplished.

Everyone thus retreated from the school grounds. The police sealed the gate, waiting for aid to arrive. The investigation team finally arrived when dawn came, and they looked as exhausted as Inspector Lee's group.

After a simple greeting, Inspector Lee drove Chen Ge home in his car.

"Yet another sleepless night." Chen Ge finally relaxed when he was sitting in the backseat of the police car. He stretched lazily before lying down on the cushion.

“You’re the first person that I’ve come across who can be so comfortable inside a police car,” Inspector Lee commented with a degree of dissatisfaction. “By the way, I have a few questions that I haven’t had the chance to ask you until now.”

“Then, don’t ask.” Chen Ge could already guess the questions. He used his backpack to smother his face and pretend to fall asleep.

“Why would you go to Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy at midnight? And how did you know the exact time of death of the girl? This was four years ago, and even the forensic doctor wouldn’t be able to tell me the time of death without referring to the case file, but you managed to do that. That’s just too abnormal.” Inspector Lee crawled into the driver’s seat and started the engine.

“Lucky guesses.” Chen Ge turned his body about. “Uncle San Bao, can you turn the air-conditioning on?”

“You’ve dropped all formalities around me, haven’t you?” Inspector Lee grumbled as he turned on the air-conditioning. It was then that his phone suddenly rang.

“Uncle, it’s your phone.”

“Talk some more and see if I’ll toss you out of the car or not?” Inspector Lee looked at the ID before answering it. He did not say a word, and there was no sound coming from the other end either. The call was ended three seconds later.

“Who is so brave to make prank calls to the police?” Chen Ge turned to look but was surprised to find Inspector Lee’s facial expression had softened.

“That’s my wife. Every time I’m on a special mission, she’ll give me a call to check on my safety. Due to the sensitive nature of certain missions, we’ve come up with our own style of communication. Instead of verbal communication, as long as I pick up the phone, that means that I’m still okay.”

Chapter 63

Chapter 63: Someone's in the House

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Auntie sure cares about you.”

“Of course.” Inspector Lee put his phone away, and his face twisted with confusion. “Wait, just who do you think you are? You call me uncle and my wife auntie?”

...

He waited for an answer, but it never came. He turned and realized Chen Ge had already fallen asleep. When the police car arrived at New Century Park, Chen Ge was shaken awake by Inspector Lee. The former left the car in a sort of daze, carrying his backpack.

“Be careful at all times! Zhang Peng is still out there. Based on the current situation and his twisted mentality, he might give up everything just to take revenge on you,” Inspector Lee reminded Chen Ge.

“I know.” The mention of Zhang Peng did wake Chen Ge up slightly. He waved at Inspector Lee before turning to enter New Century Park. The elderly guard was already asleep. Even as Chen Ge walked through the front door, he did not wake up.

Tonight's reward is quite valuable. I can ask for a favor from Zhang Ya since I've completed her Bloody Heart Mission, but would it be too much of a waste to have her eliminate the mirror monster for me?

Chen Ge pulled out the black phone and clicked into Zhang Ya's page. The affection level had been raised from “Crazy about you” to “Yours forever.”

I'll need to study this closer so that I maximize the usability of this chance.

As he entered the Haunted House, Chen Ge did not exit the page but continued reading through the details on Zhang Ya.

When I have enough money, perhaps I should rent myself a room outside.

Sleeping in the staff breakroom feels weird after a while, Chen Ge thought to himself as he walked down the dark corridor. He was familiar with every corner of this Haunted House; even without light, he wouldn't knock into anything.

When he passed the first-floor toilet, the wooden door creaked as if blown by the wind. The wooden door was not sturdy to begin with, and after being assaulted by Chen Ge using the mallet, the door itself had become misshapen. He tried to close the door as best as he could, but when he walked toward it, he noticed that the window in the toilet was half open.

Did I forget to close the window when I left? The sky outside the window was brightening. Chen Ge stood at the window to inspect it. He didn't see anything like a footprint near or on it. It's probably due to the recent high amount of stress.

Even so, Chen Ge grabbed the mop that was leaning against the wall as he headed toward the control room. The Haunted House was fitted with cameras that covered every corner. A simple look at them would confirm for Chen Ge whether someone had snuck in or not.

Pushing open the control room door, Chen Ge sat before the computer and booted up the computer. All the surveillance footage was stored inside this computer. Chen Ge looked for the ID of the camera at the entrance of the toilet and pulled up the video.

He thought he was being overly cautious, but several minutes later, Chen Ge did discover a strange man on screen!

The man had his head lowered and quickly rushed down the corridor once he exited the toilet.

Someone did come in; there's another person hiding in this Haunted House other than myself! That woke Chen Ge up completely. The man seems to know there's a camera at the entrance of the toilet and knows where he's going. This means that he has probably been inside the building before.

There were several cameras installed on the corridor. After the mysterious man disappeared from the camera, Chen Ge searched for the ID of the next camera, which was placed at the corner of the corridor that led to the toilet. On the second video feed, it was shown that the strange man turned into the control room once he raced down the corridor.

He headed for the control room directly, probably to destroy the evidence.

This man knows the layout of my Haunted House very well.

There was only one name in Chen Ge's mind, and just as he was about to continue his investigation, he saw himself on screen.

The video has rolled onto the present. That's me holding the black phone and the mop as I entered the control room... Wait, this means that the man hasn't left! Just as Chen Ge saw himself on screen, he grabbed the mop next to him and turned around!

The locker that was about two meters behind him was shoved open, and a man with bloodshot eyes, holding a sharp knife in his hand, jumped out from it!

"Zhang Peng!" Chen Ge screamed when he saw the man's twisted features. Probably agitated by Chen Ge's voice, Zhang Peng charged at him with the knife. Chen Ge calmed down quickly from the initial shock. He opened the room door that was behind him and retreated as he deflected Zhang Peng's assault.

Even though Zhang Peng was handicapped, he fought with the passion of one who did not want his life anymore. The man knew this was the end of the line, and what he wanted now was someone to join him in death. Chen Ge evaded left and right as he moved toward the maintenance room. He looked like he was cornered, but that was part of his plan.

Zhang Peng had put his life on the line, so escape was out of question. He needed to fight back, but the wooden mop in his hand wouldn't harm Zhang Peng, so Chen Ge was reminded of Dr. Skull-cracker's iron hammer. Earlier, to avoid an unnecessary misunderstanding with the police, Chen Ge had hidden the hammer inside the maintenance room.

The assault intensified. Zhang Peng seemed to have seen through Chen Ge's plan. He did not even attempt to avoid Chen Ge's hit as he allowed the wooden mop to smack on his body—his aim was to get close to Chen Ge.

Very soon, Chen Ge retreated to the door of the maintenance room. He was biding the time to jump into the room, but before that could happen, he felt an extra weight on his body like he was carrying a boulder.

"You're going to die today!" Zhang Peng, who had been silent, suddenly cried out. Spirit had returned to the man's eyes, and his knife skill became much more agile.

What's going on? The mirror monster has been controlling Zhang Peng until now? So where is the monster now? Chen Ge could feel his movement slowing down. He used his hand to feel behind him, but he couldn't feel anything. Something pressed hard on his shoulder, causing him to bend over slightly. He turned his head around to look, and a black shadow about the size of an adult man was riding on his back!

The mirror monster!

Panic flashed across his eyes. Chen Ge dipped to avoid a knife aiming at his neck, and he turned to blast through the door into the maintenance room. He ran toward the cupboards that held all the random junk.

It's still not time to give up. Zhang Peng and the black shadow share one entity, if I use the hammer to incapacitate Zhang Peng, then I'll be able to stop the black shadow as well!

Chen Ge felt like he was dragging a small mountain on his back. He had underestimated the black shadow's growth. Compared to the first time they met, this creature had become much harder to deal with.

Something was choking the breath from his throat as the weight on his back continued to increase. The laughter of various individuals appeared in his ears, and when Chen Ge reached the cupboard, he was drained from exhaustion.

Chen Ge's consciousness wavered, and a humming sound sung in his ears. Without turning to look, Chen Ge knew Zhang Peng was walking toward him with the knife.

The monster on his back continued to press down on him. Chen Ge used every ounce of his energy to open the cupboard door. As he tried to search for the hammer through the junk, the black phone fell from his pocket, the screen still on Zhang Ya's personal page.

Chapter 64

Chapter 64: Ate It?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The mirror monster had Chen Ge in a chokehold, and the murderer was inching toward him with a sharp knife. Chen Ge had no time to hesitate. When he saw Zhang Ya's page, he reached out to type two words—Help me!

The weird laugh in his mind grew louder. Zhang Peng's knife came at him before Chen Ge had the time to key in anything else. He turned around and grabbed anything from the cupboard that he could get his hands on to throw at Zhang Peng.

...

His limbs were failing him, and the veins in Chen Ge's neck were protruding. Even without the stab from Zhang Peng, he would be strangled by the mirror monster. Chen Ge clawed violently at his neck, but he caught no purchase—it was as if there was nothing there. Chen Ge placed his last hope on the black phone.

He turned his head to look at the phone on the ground and saw that there was a line of blood red letters on screen. "She has understood your demand, so please accept the content of the first agreement."

It appeared like the demand went both ways. While Chen Ge asked something of Zhang Ya, she would also ask something of Chen Ge, and Chen Ge's order would only be carried out once the agreement had been reached.

At a time like this, no matter how ridiculous the content of Zhang Ya's agreement was, Chen Ge would agree unhesitatingly. Inching his finger forward, Chen Ge pressed the "yes" button on screen.

The moment his finger touched the screen, the temperature of the small room dropped tremendously as cold drafts blew into the room from all corners. The weird laugh in Chen Ge's head stopped immediately. He could feel the monster on his back shiver; it could also feel fear.

The sound of dripping suddenly appeared in the room like something was leaking. The mirror monster on Chen Ge's back released its hold on Chen Ge and escaped back into Zhang Peng's body.

The maintenance room became eerily quiet. Even Zhang Peng knew something was wrong. This gambler who had nothing to lose did not choose to retreat at the last moment but raise the knife to charge at Chen Ge.

However, he only took the first step when the expression on his face changed. The mirror monster had forcibly taken over his body, making him leave. The man and the ghost were quarrelling, forcing them into inaction. While that was happening, Chen Ge's shadow slowly stood up, and a bloody dress appeared behind Chen Ge.

Zhang Ya had probably left quite a heavy trauma on both the man and the ghost at Western Jiujiang's Private Academy because when they saw the Red Specter behind Chen Ge, a consensus was made, and the man turned to run.

Without the constriction from the mirror monster, Chen Ge was released from the lock. He had almost been killed by Zhang Peng, and he was still reeling with anger, so naturally, he wouldn't let them escape so easily.

He just stood up with the iron hammer when the Red Specter made her move. Zhang Ya seemed to have a fetish for cruel kills because even without the order from Chen Ge, needle-like black hairs shot into Zhang Peng's body.

The murderer's footsteps slowed. Naturally, Chen Ge would not give up on this perfect opportunity. He swung the iron hammer on Zhang Ge's shoulder. The impact caused the man to fall forward. Making use of this opportunity, Chen Ge aimed yet another strike at Zhang Peng's upper calf.

An ear-splitting shriek escaped from the maintenance room. The mirror monster inside Zhang Peng knew that the man was cornered, so it decided to abandon Zhang Peng and flew toward the toilet.

"Not good, there's a mirror inside the first-floor toilet!"

Before Chen Ge realized what had happened, Zhang Ya started to chase after the mirror monster. This shadow creature seemed to be highly interesting to her.

I have to figure out a way to block the mirror.

Chen Ge looked around him and spotted the half-full vat of fake blood left in the maintenance room. The toilet's door creaked in the wind. When Chen Ge arrived, he saw that half of the mirror body had already been punctured by Zhang Ya's hair, but it was just inches away from the mirror.

"You're not getting away that easily this time!"

Unsure whether it would be of use or not, Chen Ge splashed the fake blood all over the mirror. The black shadow hesitated before the mirror. Before it could react, tendrils of black hair curled around its body like snakes. Chen Ge could barely make out its humanoid shape anymore as it was caught in the hair.

The bloody dress fluttered in the wind. After Zhang Ya got bored, she tore the black shadow that was compressed into a ball into two. She swallowed half of it before tearing up the other half into pieces and gently blowing it into Chen Ge's face.

Chen Ge felt like something had entered his eyes, and his body shivered involuntarily from the sudden cold.

"What was that?" Chen Ge wanted to get an answer from Zhang Ya, but after fulfilling her part of the agreement, this cruel Red Specter disappeared into his shadow.

The toilet door was still squeaking on its hinges, but there was nothing left inside the toilet to suggest that the crazy things that Chen Ge had just witnessed had truly happened.

Just like that, Zhang Ya ate half of the mirror monster and blew the other half into my eyes. Chen Ge looked at the mirror and a sensation that felt like he was dreaming overwhelmed him. The mirror monster has been taken care off, so there shouldn't be a new number that surfaces on the mirror tomorrow night, right?

Until now, he could not understand what the numbers meant, but he had a feeling they pointed to a huge secret.

After closing the door, Chen Ge used his phone to contact the police. He did not trouble Inspector Lee this time. After all, the man wasn't a machine; he had been required to deal with more than enough over the past few days already.

Leaning against the wall, Chen Ge glanced at Zhang Peng, who lay as if dead on the floor. When the mirror monster left his body, it seemed to have taken something from the man. The man's eyes looked blankly forward, and his gaze was soulless.

I suppose this is a kind of karma.

At 6 am, the investigation team from the main city, officers from Western Jiujiang police station, and members of the park's management all gathered at the entrance of the Haunted House. The last suspect from the Ping An Apartment case had finally been caught.

After watching Zhang Peng being hauled into the police car, Chen Ge's taut nerves finally relaxed. He did not stay to chat but returned to the Haunted House and locked himself in the breakroom.

The case at the Ping An Apartment is finally wrapped up. The mirror monster has been eaten by Zhang Ya, so there are no more hidden threats lingering in my Haunted House, meaning I can finally open all of the scenarios up for business in the morning. Chen Ge lay in bed, thinking about his future. What I should focus on next is the expansion of the Haunted House because the new scenarios won't be unlocked without the expansion. After I wake up, I should go talk to Uncle Xu. In any case, I have to convince him to let me rent the underground parking lot.

As he tried to fall asleep, Chen Ge felt a cold breeze caress his body. The chill did not leave even when he wrapped himself up in the covers. The chill seemed to come from his eyes.

Zhang Ya did blow part of the mirror monster into my face, could this be caused by that? Chen Ge grabbed a small piece of mirror to look at his face. Everything looked normal except perhaps his pupils turned darker like the surface of a bottomless lake.

Eventually, fatigue caught up to him. Chen Ge placed the mirror underneath his pillow and soon drifted off to sleep.

At 10.30 am, before he managed to catch several hours of sleep, Chen Ge was woken up by the call on his phone. He looked at the ID and answered it. "Xiao Wan, you can have the morning off. Come back in the afternoon."

"Boss! There are so many people down here! There are even police and reporters, what have you done?"

Chapter 65

Chapter 65: Captain Yan

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“But I’ve not done anything! Wait for me, I’m going down now!” Chen Ge leaned closer to the window to glance down. There was indeed a great crowd outside the Haunted House, and the number was still growing.

“Boss, listen to me, surrender while you still can before this gets worse.”

...

“Surrender my foot! Just wait for me.” After hanging up, Chen Ge quickly put on his clothes, washed his face, and ran to the door. He pulled back the heavy curtains and dashed out the gates.

When Chen Ge made his appearance, the rowdy crowd started to quiet down. The surrounding visitors looked at Chen Ge with curiosity and more than a bit of disappointment in their eyes. Obviously, they had expected the person who was surrounded by the police to look less... normal.

This was the first time that Chen Ge had felt so many eyes on him. He seemed to shrivel up in shyness, but he felt like he should say something. “Do any of you mind telling me what this is for?”

“You are Chen Ge?” The leading officer carried a box in his arms. He was slightly rotund, but his eyes were sharp and penetrating, which created a rather humorous contrast to his babyish face.

“Yes.”

“Can I see your identification?”

Chen Ge searched for a long time before producing his identification card. All this while, he was silently studying the officer before him. The officer was wearing a uniform different from Inspector Lee and his men.

“Okay, thank you for your cooperation.” The officer smiled. He waved at the reporters beside him, opened the box in his hand, and announced in an official tone, “For providing the murder case at Ping An Apartments with crucial evidence, Jiujiang Municipal Bureau for Public Security is awarding this Level Three Public Security Medal of Honor to Chen Ge! Hopefully, Chen Ge will appreciate this honor and continue to contribute to the maintenance and improvement of the public security of our society!”

This series of announcement confused Chen Ge. Things were happening too quickly for him to handle. As the box was pushed into his hands, he looked at the shiny medal, and there was only one thought on his mind, which was only half-awake. Where’s the reward money?

The slightly rotund officer stood beside Chen Ge and paraded him to the wall of reporters. The whole process lasted for fifteen minutes. After the crowd dispersed and the reporters left, Chen Ge quietly sought out the rotund officer. “Sir, how may I refer to you?”

“The name’s Yan, you can call me Captain Yan. I was classmates with Western Jiujiang’s Ol’ Lee. In fact, he has told me many things about you.” Captain Yan seemed to be a friendly character. His eyes that looked upon Chen Ge were glowing the praise. “The way you handled the case at Ping An Apartments is impressive. When you were being chased by the killer, your reaction and observation skills surprised both me and Ol’ Lee.”

After being fed the series of praises, Chen Ge felt too embarrassed to jump to the topic of the reward money. “All I did was run crazily around the woods. The case wouldn’t have been solved without the police. In fact, I would have been the killer’s latest victim if not for all of you.”

After the trading of compliments, Captain Yan realized that Chen Ge was still lingering shamelessly around the police car. He smiled to himself because it finally dawned on him why Chen Ge was there. “Xiao Chen, you’ll need to go to the main city’s bureau personally to get the reward money. Due to the large scale of the case, it took a while for the reward to be approved, but you can go get it now. I hope you understand.”

“Of course, of course.” After knowing where to get the reward money, Chen Ge’s heart that hung in the air finally settled.

"I came here today to thank you in person. Every unsolved case is like a boulder pressing on every police officer's heart, and it's something passed on from the senior to the junior. Four years ago, I was also involved in this case, so thank you for solving this trouble in my heart." Captain Yan smiled sincerely. "By the way, the elder from Ping An Apartment also wished to speak to you. The elder is incapacitated, can no longer move his lower body, and has lost much of his capacity to talk, but his mind is still sharp. He knows it is you who saved him and solved the death of his family. He also wants to thank you in person."

"I understand." For Chen Ge, the case was merely a mission dispensed by the black phone, but for the victims and their family, it was a meaningful closure.

"You'd better visit him soon. The elder is currently in hospital. Perhaps it was the emotions that ran high or perhaps the question that has been keeping him alive has been answered... in any case, he's not doing so well."

After that, Captain Yan got into the car.

"Okay, I'll visit him later in the afternoon." Looking at the special uniform that he wore, Chen Ge felt this Captain Yan carried a greater responsibility than he let on. After the police car left, the park's workers surrounded Chen Ge.

"Boss, are you going to be on television again?"

"Not bad, there's even a medal."

After sending them off, Chen Ge found Uncle Xu in the crowd, and he dragged him to a corner to speak.

"Uncle Xu, what's the update regarding the rental of the underground parking lot? The money will be coming soon!"

The mention of underground parking lot made Uncle Xu frown. "This is not the issue of budget. Xiao Chen, I cannot sit idle and watch you jump into your own grave. The visitor number of the park has been steadily dropping, and everyone is trying to flee, don't you understand that?"

"I do understand that, and I know what I'm doing," Chen Ge replied confidently. The Haunted House might carry the key to the disappearance of his parents. Only by continuing to expand it would Chen Ge have the chance and the ability to interact with the other world.

“Still so stubborn.” Uncle Xu tried to persuade Chen Ge for a long time, but it was to no avail. In the end, he could only sigh. “Come with me then. Due to the appearance of the police, Mr. Luo is also with us. You might as well talk to him in person.”

“Director Luo is here?” Chen Ge had heard his parents mention this actual owner of New Century Park many times already.

“What do you think? The police set up a security perimeter around the park, did you think they would not inform the management? To provide full cooperation, Director Luo has been staying at the park for the past few days.” Uncle Xu led Chen Ge to a building on the northern side of the park. This was the second tallest structure in the park, behind the Ferris Wheel. “When you meet Director Luo later, remember to watch what you say. The less you say, the less likely you’ll make a mistake, you understand?”

Chen Ge followed Uncle Xu into the elevator that led them up to the top floor. They stopped before the door of an office. The door wasn’t locked. Uncle Xu knocked on it, and very soon, a man in his fifties came out from it.

The man was of average height, and his hair was half white. His features were gentle, and the suit he wore was not branded, but it was clean and didn’t have the slightest crease on it.

This is Mr. Luo? He looks so different from the picture. From how Chen Ge saw it, the man standing before him looked more like a retired teacher.

Chapter 66

Chapter 66: Build Her a Park

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“How can I help?” the man inquired in a soft-spoken tone, surprisingly unbusinesslike.

“Director Luo, this is the brave Xiao Chen who helped the police capture the fugitive.” Uncle Xu pulled Chen Ge to his side. “He’s here to get an update about the thing I reported to you earlier. He wishes to rent the unused underground parking lot.”

...

“I understand. Leave us be, you can go busy yourself with your work.” Director Luo signaled for Uncle Xu to leave.

Director Luo had Chen Ge sit on the sofa while he poured two cups of tea. “I’ve been informed you wish to rent the underground parking lot. Do you mind telling me why you plan to do that?”

“I wish to expand the Haunted House. I want to build an underground maze inside the parking lot.”

“An underground maze. That’s not a bad idea, but do you have the budget and ability to handle something of that scale? The rental for the space will be small in comparison to the finances you need to set up the place.” Director Luo leaned against the couch, his eyes colored with lethargy and tiredness. “I am not against your idea, and I can rent you the place, but before that, I need to ask you a few questions.”

Even though he had gotten a verbal agreement from Director Luo, the man had not yet mentioned the rental amount, so Chen Ge was still nervous. “Ask away.”

“You’re the owner of a Haunted House, so you know better than I do how high the early investment in a Haunted House is. Also, different from hotels or motels, where you can still sell or reuse the tables, chairs, and utensils, if your Haunted House fails, what are you going to do with the spooky props and items?”

Director Luo did raise a valid concern, something that Chen Ge had not even considered before.

“Even if you manage to do a good job reviving the Haunted House, how are you going to solve the issue of returning customers? A Haunted House is a one-time exhaustion product. There might be some initial hype, but it’ll eventually run out because the number of your potential customers is only so big. You’re going to invest greatly into this, are you confident you’ll even earn back your capital?”

“One final question, by building your Haunted House underground, how are you going to promote it? Your customer’s number is highly dependent on the park’s visitor number. How is your Haunted House going to survive when the day comes for the park to close?”

Chen Ge knew that Director Luo was stopping him out of kindness. In fact, he knew that those who advised him against investing in the Haunted House were only looking out for him. They had his best interests at heart.

Director Luo’s three questions revolved around Chen Ge’s mind. The first two questions were easily solved with the presence of the black phone, so Chen Ge’s real conundrum was the last question. If New Century Park closed, naturally, his Haunted House would close, too.

Moving to another place would be difficult, just the number of documents would cause Chen Ge enormous headaches. Furthermore, his budget was limited; to find another location to fit the black phone’s scenarios would be impossible.

“Have you seriously considered these three questions?” Director Luo seemed to anticipate Chen Ge’s answer. “Why don’t you go back for now? We mustn’t jump into important decision without detailed research and thorough contemplation.”

Chen Ge sat unmoved on the couch. He turned to look at Director Luo and asked directly, “Is the park really going to close soon?”

Director Luo did not confirm or deny, but the tiredness in his eyes deepened. “If I say the park is really closing soon, will you insist on renting the underground parking lot?”

“I will.” Chen Ge’s answer surprised Director Luo. “Director Luo, I already have the solution for your first and second questions. And your third question is not valid.”

There was fire dancing in Chen Ge's eyes. The young man powered on fearlessly. "My Haunted House has never relied on anyone else before, and my visitor number will not be entirely dependent on the park. Give me time, and I will not only attract countless visitors to the Haunted House, I will also use it to revive the entire park! Renting the underground parking lot is just the first plan. My plan is to build the world's first unique theme park that is based on horror and terror."

After he finished what he had to say, Chen Ge finally remembered Uncle Xu's advice—the less you say, the less likely you'll make a mistake.

He looked at Director Luo with uncertainty. He regretted telling him everything that was inside his heart.

After listening to Chen Ge, Director Luo put down his cup, and the tiredness in his eyes had disappeared. After a moment's silence, he suddenly laughed and said, "You remind me too much of myself when I was young."

He stood up and walked to open the curtain. The whole park was within view from the office.

"I'm the most devastated and most unwilling for the closing of New Century Park." He opened the window and allowed the wind to ruffle his peppered hair. "This park means the world to me. If possible, I wish for it to stay open forever."

Director Luo turned to smile at Chen Ge. His smile was complicated; it was a calm smile of a man who had seen the world rise and fall, one who had surrendered to the vagaries of fate. "I've heard about your story. After your parents' disappearance, you quit your day job to take over their Haunted House. In a way, our stories are very similar, but you are luckier than I am."

He picked up a picture frame from the table. It was the only picture frame in the room. It had the picture of a pair of father and daughter. The father was of average height and had a gentle demeanor. The girl in his arms was cute, but her hands were twisted at a painful angle, and there seemed to be no life in her eyes.

"This is my daughter. She suffered from serious aphasia and required a special device to even stand upright. God was harsh on her, but she was a strong little girl who loved to smile, not only to me but to the world." Director Luo turned to look at the sky outside the window. "But the world didn't smile back at her. I used to take my daughter to the garden for walks, but none of the kids wanted to play with her. When she turned to look at me helplessly, I knew that she was afraid, afraid that she had done something wrong and that was why she was being isolated. I didn't know how to console her, so we only took her out during the rainy days so that she wouldn't have to face the unfeeling crowd. Perhaps it was then that the thought to build my daughter her very own theme park appeared in my mind.

"Unfortunately, she didn't live to see the day the park was open." Putting down the frame, Director Luo's eyes were still surprisingly calm. "Many people don't understand why I would risk bankruptcy to keep an outdated theme park alive, but I believe perhaps you do."

"I do." Chen Ge had already stood up earlier. He had not expected that Director Luo would reveal such intimate information to him.

"Everyone is trying to find a way out, but you're different. You've surprised me." After closing the window, Director Luo pulled out a document from his drawer. "Actually, when Uncle Xu came to me with your request, I had already approved it. Take it. Come to me if you need any help, but remember, you only have two to three months left."

Chapter 67

Chapter 67: You Can See Her?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge accepted the document, and the first line read—New Century Park’s Underground Parking Lot Usage Agreement.

After flipping through it, Chen Ge did not find any clauses related to rental. “Director Luo, is the document missing something?”

...

“Have you not seen a free rental agreement before? I’ve stamped the document, so it’ll be effective after you sign it. The document is effective until the park closes, so make good use of it and don’t let me down.” Director Luo’s mood seemed to have improved greatly. He poured himself another cup of tea and said, “You should be quite busy from now on, so I won’t hold you any longer.”

When Chen Ge exited the office holding the contract, he still could not believe that he had managed to get the park’s underground parking lot without paying a single dime!

According to the contract, he was allowed free use of the parking lot as long as the park did not go under. Chen Ge assumed that Director Luo was being so generous because the park would close in another two- or three-months’ time when the new park at Eastern Jiujiang opened.

The underground parking lot is a third of the size of the park. Even though it has been abandoned, to be able to rent it for free is still a wonderful surprise!

Chen Ge felt his luck had gotten much better after taking care of the mirror monster. He had received a medal of honor, the reward money was coming soon, and he had solved the issue of expansion; everything was looking up.

Could it be that removing dirty things can improve my luck? Chen Ge did not think that things would be so coincidental; the thought was merely to humor himself.

After returning to the Haunted House, Chen Ge started his work for the day. He had Xiao Wan put on the park uniform and stand outside the Haunted House to sell tickets while he roamed through the Murder by Midnight scenario, chasing the visitors about in his Doctor Skull-cracker uniform.

Chen Ge exited the Haunted House at 5 pm. He let Xiao Wan leave early before going to get his money.

This will be the first time in my life there have been four digits in my bank account. I deserve some celebration tonight. Chen Ge changed into a clean outfit in the staff breakroom and was about to leave, when he saw a small ragdoll lying beside his bed. The small fella had most of her body hidden underneath the bed like she was playing hide-and-seek.

The day is still bright, but you're out here already. Chen Ge was suddenly reminded of the thing Captain Yan had told him that morning. The grandpa's situation seems to be deteriorating, and he has no family around him. I should go pay him a visit.

Chen Ge poked Xiaoxiao on her stomach before putting her in his pocket and leaving the Haunted House.

At 6:15 pm, Chen Ge exited the bureau with the reward money of 36,000, which was less than he had expected.

After purchasing a fruit basket and some milk, Chen Ge departed for Jiujiang People's Hospital. With the nurse leading the way, he entered a sickbay on the third floor. He was there only to visit the elderly grandfather, but to his surprise, he ran into a familiar face there.

"Inspector Lee, why are you here?"

Sitting beside the bed, Inspector Lee was feeding the elder some porridge. He was as careful as a little girl when he took care of the old man.

"This is weird, how come I keep on running into you everywhere I go?" Inspector Lee placed a towel on the elder's chest. "After a good night's sleep, the station manager saw how tired I was, so he assigned me a lighter job for the day."

"Law enforcement even cares about things like this?"

"The elder came into the mishap under our watch, so before we can find him a personal care-taker, it's only fair that we look after him.”

Inspector Lee tried feeding him twice, but the elder man seemed to have no appetite. He did not force it but put the spoon down to point at Chen Ge, who stood at the door. “Sir, this is the young man who provided us with the crucial evidence to solve the case and the young man who called us that night to save you.”

When he saw Chen Ge, the old man's arm that was still movable twitched, but it was unclear what he was trying to communicate.

“Thinking back, I should be thanking the old sir. If not for the fact you broke the bowl at Ping An Apartment to warn me, I wouldn't have realized how weird things were.” Chen Ge placed the fruit basket and milk on the counter. Looking at the old man who looked like he could depart at any moment, Chen Ge's heart shook. “Inspector Lee, do you mind leaving the room for a minute? I have something personal to talk to the old sir.”

Inspector Lee did not know what Chen Ge was up to, but due to trust, he walked out without asking any questions. After closing the door, Chen Ge pulled the doll out from his pocket. “Old sir, I brought Xiaoxiao to come see you.”

When Chen Ge took out Xiaoxiao, the old man in the bed did not show any response, but when his murky eyes fell on the ragdoll, the man's pupils shook greatly, and a voice that sounded like it came from a broken bellow escaped from the old man's lips. The arm that could still move reached out as if to grab something.

“You can see her?”

Chen Ge did not expect this. He had brought Xiaoxiao there to see her family, but he did not expect that the senior would be able to see Xiaoxiao, who possessed the ragdoll!

He hurried to the bedside and placed the doll lightly in the old man's arm. The senior's arm hugged the doll tightly before he settled down again.

According to legends, people are able to see to the other world at the end of their life.

The black phone in Chen Ge's pocket vibrated. He exited the room to give the grandfather and the granddaughter their privacy.

“I heard some noises coming from inside the room earlier, what did you tell him? Listen to me, the senior’s situation is very fragile, and he won’t be able to survive too much of a shock.” Inspector Lee stood outside the door. Should things turn awry, he would rush in immediately.

“I only brought the old sir the person he wished to see the most.” Chen Ge sat on the bench provided in the corridor and pulled out the black phone. He realized the reason of the vibration was because on the affection page, Yin Xiaoxiao’s affection level had increased from ‘Slightly Favorable Opinion’ to ‘Can be Trusted’.

The little fella is the most unique Baleful Specter I’ve ever met. I wonder what will happen when I raise her affection level to the maximum. Chen Ge returned the phone to his pocket and leaned against the wall. “Uncle San Bao, don’t worry, the old sir will recover.”

“You sure are optimistic.”

Chen Ge and Inspector Lee chatted for a long time. When they entered the room, the senior’s condition had stabilized. He waved at Chen Ge, but nobody understood what he meant.

After nodding at the nurse, Chen Ge left with Xiaoxiao. The little fella hid inside the doll, apparently asleep.

After getting a quick dinner at the roadside stall, Chen Ge rushed back to the Haunted House.

I still haven’t accepted today’s daily mission yet, I wonder if there’s still time.

Among the three Daily Missions, the most suitable was definitely the expansion. All he needed to do was choose the direction of expansion and a general location.

Chapter 68

Chapter 68: Midnight Ticket Counter

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Last night, before leaving for Western Jiujiang's Private Academy, Chen Ge had glossed through the three Daily Missions. The simple mission was to check for hidden security threats; the normal mission was to find a suitable location to expand the Haunted House; the Nightmare mission was to identify the other individual that shared his room.

If he wanted the biggest reward, naturally, the Nightmare Mission was the best choice. However, according to his previous two experience, Nightmare Missions had a time requirement, and they were mostly around midnight. Once he missed that period, there was high chance the mission would fail automatically.

...

There's no need to risk it. Chen Ge selected to accept the Normal Mission.

"Normal Mission: You've achieved the criteria to enable the first expansion of the Haunted House, do search for a suitable location soon!"

This was the first time that Chen Ge had expanded the Haunted House. He did not know how to go about it, and the black phone did not give him any instructions.

I can't find a guide, so it looks like I'll have to slowly research it on my own. Chen Ge looked at the interface of the app, and two places captured his attention.

My Team of Ghosts and Ghouls was still empty, which meant that neither Zhang Ya nor Yin Xiaoxiao had become part of the Haunted House. Yin Xiaoxiao was probably because he had not earned enough affection points, while Zhang Ya... Chen Ge would be thankful if she just stopped trying to kill him, much less asking her to join the Haunted House.

The second thing that attracted Chen Ge's attention was the tab for Haunted House Expansion. The original gray font had turned red. After clicking on it, a sentence appeared on screen.

"Please select the location of the entrance."

If the words become red, it means that they're clickable. The location of the entrance you say...

The underground parking lot Chen Ge rented was huge, but the only downside was that the entrance to the parking lot was outside of the park. The path was not streamlined, so he planned to open a new path underneath the Haunted House, one that directly led to the underground parking lot.

Normally, large attractions like rollercoasters or Ferris Wheels were not allowed to have any space underneath them, but since the Haunted House was located at the isolated corner, it was the sole exception at New Century Park. In fact, the space right underneath Chen Ge's building was the parking lot.

Holding the black phone, Chen Ge walked to the entrance to the Night of the Living Dead scenario that was on the first floor. After gaining the two one-star scenarios, Minghun and Murder by Midnight, this scenario had pretty much been abandoned.

I'll set the door beside the entrance to this scenario. If it is necessary in the future, I can just remove and replace the Night of the Living Dead scenario.

That was Chen Ge's plan. He used a piece of chalk to mark out an area on the floor, but he realized after drawing it that he had no way of communicating his plan to the black phone. Since he received the mysterious phone, it had been a one-way communication.

Have I missed something? Chen Ge clicked through the app. When he tried tapping the home page twice, the Haunted House that was used as the background suddenly zoomed out until Chen Ge could see its layout, which was similar to his actual Haunted House, including the locations and set-up of the many scenarios.

So, I do it here?

Chen Ge found the scenario for Night of the Living Dead on screen. He clicked on an empty space beside the entrance, and a question instantly popped up on screen.

“Are you sure you want to place the entrance here?”

“Yes.”

“Please select the expansion direction.”

“Downward.”

After making his choice, the screen returned to normal, and several other messages popped up.

“Only through continuous expansion will your Haunted House be able to play host to more homeless spirits and thus collect more screams. Congratulations for completing the Normal Mission. Obtained reward—A free spin at the Wheel of Misfortune!

“Congratulations for completing your first ever expansion. Special reward, a unique construct obtained—Midnight Ticket Counter (Broken)!

“Midnight Ticket Counter (Broken): There’s a one in one thousand chance for you to attract special ‘visitors’. They are different from others and might lend you a helping hand.”

Chen Ge read the messages carefully. The mission had rewarded him with a free spin at the Wheel of Misfortune, but there was too much of uncertainty to this reward. Only by trading a hundred Screams would he get the chance to spin it once. According to the description on the phone, there were definitely some useful things that could be won from the lucky draw.

However, even Chen Ge had scared himself with how ‘lucky’ he was. What if he won another cursed love letter?

The two baleful specters might just split himself perfectly in half so that each of them could have their way with him equally. An image of the two spirits holding bloodied knives in their hands arguing over who would lay claim to his skull and body appeared in his mind.

Too soon, too soon.

The Wheel of Misfortune was thus put on the backburner, so Chen Ge turned to look at the other reward—the broken Midnight Ticket Counter. His Haunted House had been missing a specialized ticket counter. After all, before obtaining the black phone, he had at most ten visitors in a week, hence there was no reason to build a ticket counter.

The black phone has helped me solve a problem, but what is the meaning of this one in one thousand chance of attracting special visitors? Does it mean ghosts?

Chen Ge purposely walked to the front door, but the gate had remained the same; nothing had changed. Perhaps the change will happen after midnight like how it did with the Murder by Midnight scenario.

Since he had received the rewards, Chen Ge stopped worrying about them. He cleaned the place while waiting for midnight to arrive. Even though the mirror monster had been vanquished, it did not mean that the number on the mirror would disappear.

Chen Ge rolled up his sleeves as he cleaned the fake blood off the toilet's mirror.

He was acting in such a hurry because there had been a little incident that afternoon. A visitor had asked to use the toilet when he was inside the Haunted House. Chen Ge had led him to the toilet, but when the man had seen the fake blood that pooled around the floor, he had refused to enter the toilet. He had held his pee in until his face was green as Chen Ge led him out of the Haunted House.

"The scary places should be scary, but other places should be as comfortable as possible. After all, we're in the service business."

That was some advice that Chen Ge's father had once given him, and he remembered it to this day.

Chen Ge finished cleaning the fake blood at around 11 pm. He also fixed the broken toilet door. Then he stood before the mirror with his phone.

He checked his profile on the video-sharing app. His number of followers was slowly increasingly, and his videos were heavily shared. In fact, some advertisers had come to him with offers already.

I need to pay attention to the videos and livestreams as well. After all, they're my main source of promotion.

When it was 11:59 pm, Chen Ge put away his phone and stood before the mirror. Similar to his first Nightmare mission, he locked the toilet from within and turned off all the lights.

Chapter 69

Chapter 69: Door in the Mirror

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The toilet was dark and the world was so silent that Chen Ge could hear his own heartbeat. He stared unblinkingly at the mirror before him. When the clock struck 12, the mirror turned blurry like it was starting to mist. Then, a number appeared in the middle of the mirror—0.

The changing number surprised Chen Ge. He had thought this number was something left behind by the mirror monster. Since the monster had been consumed by Zhang Ya already, the number should have disappeared along with it.

...

The number has nothing to do with the mirror monster? He took out his phone to snap a picture of the number, but as he raised his arms, his whole body froze. The reflection in the mirror shifted from reality, and the door to one of the cubicles turned red!

It was a red that was unmistakable; it was as if the cubicle was filled with blood, and fresh blood was still leaking out from the cervices.

Why would this change happen to the cubicle with the squatting toilet?

Using his phone to record this curious phenomenon, he slowly turned around to slowly push open the cubicle's door.

As the door in reality was pushed open, so was the door in the mirror. There was nothing inside the cubicle in reality, but in the mirror, everything inside the cubicle was dyed red, including the toilet paper holder, the toilet paper, the flush, and even the small advertisements pasted on the wall.

In the darkened room, the blood red cubicle was exceptionally eye-grabbing.

Chen Ge did not understand what was happening. He took a cautious step forward, and when half of his upper body reached into the cubicle, a strange sensation overwhelmed him. Something sticky covered his skin like he was being swallowed and compressed.

He immediately retreated, and one minute later, the cubicle in the mirror returned to normal. When Chen Ge walked into the cubicle again, the strange sensation was no longer there. The red door in the mirror only appeared for one minute after midnight, and everything returned to normal after that.

Why would the cubicle door in the mirror turn red? And beyond that, even the walls and paraphernalia behind it were all blood red. Chen Ge switched on the light. He leaned against the window and started to think. Could that be the mirror world? The mirror monster escaped from this blood red world?

To confirm his suspicion, he searched for the details of his first Nightmare Mission on the black phone.

“It requires plenty of courage, incredible luck, and a bit of luck to see the hidden world.”

Then, there's a high chance that the hidden world mentioned in the phone refers to the blood red world inside the cubicle.

Chen Ge tried to think back to the situation that night. Even though he did not open his eyes, he did pay plenty of attention to his surroundings with his ears.

Thinking back, I do remember hearing the cubicle door creak! It was also after that noise that weird things started to happen.

At the time, Chen Ge had assumed it was the wind, but now he revised his theory. Perhaps the cause of the creaking was the mirror monster escaping the blood red world.

The mirror is most likely the buffer space between the two worlds. The cubicle in the mirror was opened, and the monster escaped from the blood red world. However, due to the disruption from the doll, it was trapped inside the mirror. Chen Ge looked at the wooden door of the cubicle in question, and a weird thought cropped up his mind. What if I enter the cubicle in the real world when the door turns red in the mirror? Will that transport me to the other world?

Shaking that crazy thought out of his mind, Chen Ge returned to stand before the mirror. The blood red cubicle appeared in the mirror after the number dropped to zero. Looks like all my previous speculation was wrong —the number has nothing to do with killing. It is probably a countdown, perhaps representing how many more days the mirror monster could exist in the real world.

The door in the mirror had returned to normal, but Chen Ge did not dare assume that it would not appear again. There was a possibility that it would continue to appear every night at midnight as long as the mirror monster did not return to it.

If it continues to appear tomorrow night, I'll need to remove the mirror; that's the only thing I can do now. Chen Ge found a heavy black cloth to cover the mirror and left the toilet. After returning to the staff breakroom, Chen Ge pulled out the black phone to check the newly refreshed Daily Missions.

Easy Mission: A normal Haunted House experience should not create permanent trauma to its visitors; I hope you understand this simple theory. Please improve the Haunted House's security by inspecting the security threats hidden around the Haunted House.

Normal Mission: A single hand cannot clap. A good Haunted House needs a good management team. Recruit more talents; they will definitely help when the situation demands it.

Nightmare Mission: There has always been a second occupant inside your room, wouldn't you like to meet said person?

Chen Ge was familiar with these three missions. He was conflicted. Nightmare Mission was the best choice if he wanted to expand his Haunted House faster, but after the incident with the mirror monster, he was wary of choosing Nightmare Missions.

I'll think about it tomorrow; I deserve a good sleep tonight.

Ever since he received the black phone, Chen Ge had not had a good night's sleep. If this continued, his physical body might not be able to withstand it.

Pulling the sheet around him, Chen Ge soon fell asleep.

The next morning at 8 am, Chen Ge, who was fully recovered, rushed out of his room. The first place he visited was the entrance to the Night of the Living Dead scenario. The space that he had selected last night had experienced some changes—there was now an additional path leading downward.

The black phone sure is effective.

A tunnel had been dug through the ground. He walked down the stairs and soon reached the abandoned underground parking lot. The space was empty and destitute, and there was barely a working light.

That's it? The expansion is only adding a set of stairs? Chen Ge was rather disappointed, but reminding himself that the large space was his to toy with relit his passion and desire. There are three more months until Eastern Jiujiang's Virtual Reality Futuristic Carnival is completed. I'll need to unlock as many scenarios as I can within these three months to upgrade the Haunted House to build a theme park that is no less interesting than the opposing park.

Returning to the first floor, Chen Ge walked to the Haunted House's front door with the black phone. Between the gates and the Haunted House's entrance corridor stood a new semi-transparent wooden construct that was painted black. It looked like two dressers that had been sewn together.

This is the Midnight Ticket Counter? It looks so damn crude.

Chen Ge opened the door and took a seat within. The interior of the place was so cramped that he felt like he was lying inside an uncomfortable coffin.

Chapter 70

Chapter 70: Special Visitor

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

This Midnight Ticket Counter is broken, but there's no noticeable way to fix it. This black phone keeps on giving weird stuff.

Chen Ge exited the counter. The more he looked at the construct, the more he felt it was not made for living souls.

...

“Boss!” Xu Wan jogged toward him in her casual outfit, holding two steaming buns in her hands.

Looking at the cheerful Xu Wan, Chen Ge’s mood brightened instantly. This girl tended to be a bit clueless at times, but she had a natural charm that could brighten up the gloomiest of days.

Accepting the offering from Xu Wan, Chen Ge chomped on the bun happily. “Why are you here so early today?”

“Boss, look!” Xu Wan sat down beside Chen Ge on the steps. She pulled out her phone to show Chen Ge the long list of news and videos that were all on the case at Ping An Apartments. “These are all about you, Boss—you’re famous!”

“Let me see.” Chen Ge looked at the articles, not expecting the short interview from the day before to have gone viral. “Such a waste.”

“Waste? Why? I think it’s rather swell.” Xu Wan’s face was flushed, probably from the little jog earlier.

“At the time, I was too focused on the reward money that I forgot this was a perfect promotional opportunity,” Chen Ge said grumpily as he swiped through the articles. “If I knew it would go viral, I would have interrupted Captain Yan to promote our Haunted House! Look at some of these articles, they even got the facts wrong. They didn’t even put down the address of our Haunted House!”

“Xiao Wan, this is your job for the day. Later, we will both go onto these comment sections to announce our identity and drop the address of the Haunted House. Those who come with proof of our comments will get a twenty percent discount!”

“That sounds so unethical...” Xu Wan was embarrassed doing such a thing, but she did end up following Chen Ge’s instructions.

At 9 am, when the park opened for business, both of them put away their phones and prepared to work. After opening the gates, Xu Wan finally saw the Midnight Ticket Counter.

“Boss, did you make this yesterday?”

“Yes, it’s ugly, but it’s usable.”

“Indeed, I also think it’s about time we have a ticket counter.”

Looking at the serious expression on Xu Wan’s face, Chen Ge sighed internally. Such a good worker, never once doubted my words.

They both entered the Haunted House. Xu Wan went to put on her make-up while Chen Ge hauled several wooden planks out from the Props Room to block the entrance to the underground parking lot. The new scenarios had not been unlocked yet, so the place still had no use.

After all the preparation had been made, it was time to start the day. Even though it was a holiday period, there was already a line in front of the Haunted House. It was not that long a line, but it was already an impressive improvement compared to before.

Xu Wan was busy chasing people around as the ghost bride inside the Minghun scenario while Chen Ge had to split himself between selling tickets and scaring people as Doctor Skull-cracker inside the Murder by Midnight scenario. It was harsh maintaining the large Haunted House with just the two of them.

It was worth noting that Xiaoxiao would have surprise interactions with the visitors inside the Murder by Midnight scenario. This ragdoll had a penchant of trailing behind the visitors, which worried Chen Ge because he was afraid that the visitors might just snatch her home.

The two finally caught a break around noon. Chen Ge checked on the black phone—both reputation and visitor number had increased tremendously, and he wasn’t far from the second expansion.

Two workers managing two scenarios is already at its limit. After unlocking the new scenario, I'll need to recruit new workers.

Chen Ge looked at the black phone. The Nightmare Missions were often ridiculous, but Easy and Normal Missions normally would point out the weaknesses of the Haunted House directly, and completing them would improve the establishment.

Even the phone has issued a recruitment mission... looks like I'll need to get on that soon. Ever since the old workers that followed Chen Ge's parents handed in their resignation, he had been wary of hiring new blood. If only Xiaoxiao and Zhang Ya would listen to my commands, they would be the perfect employees.

Of course, this was merely a fanciful thought. To have Xiaoxiao and Zhang Ya scare people inside the Haunted House... Xiaoxiao would be fine, but Zhang Ya would probably create an actual crime scene.

My Team of Ghosts and Ghouls is still empty. I wonder when that will change. Chen Ge sat on the steps outside the Haunted House. He was catching a much-needed breather before throwing himself back into work.

The sun rose to its highest point, and the visitors started to dwindle to avoid the sun. It was then that Chen Ge's black phone vibrated. He clicked the message open, and the content gave him quite a shock.

"The Midnight Ticket Counter's effect has been triggered. The first special visitor has appeared! Please make use of this opportunity, the result will be different based on your choice!"

The effect has been triggered? Even at the one in a thousand chance? Based on my previous experience, this cannot be anything good! Chen Ge stood up straight like a soldier preparing for war. He scanned around the Haunted House. The sun is shining bright, so it cannot be a specter.

It was the point of the day when the heat was at its highest. The visitors that walked around the park had visibly decreased.

Is it that an arguing couple? The girl is so pretty, but the guy is so ugly; there must be some problem. Who is Uncle Xu talking to? A new worker? How come I have not seen that person before?

While Chen Ge was speculating, a skinny, dark-skinned woman about thirty wandered over with light steps.

Could it be her?

Chen Ge studied the woman's appearance silently. Her skin was darker in tone, and she was not tall. She gave a reserved smile and was wearing a faded jacket.

"Hello, how much for a ticket to visit the Haunted House?" The woman's voice was surprising shrill, but it was not to the point where it would hurt one's ears.

"We currently have two scenarios; one ticket is 20 RMB, and you can choose which one you would like to experience," Chen Ge answered with a business smile.

"Okay, then give me two tickets." The woman handed Chen Ge the money.

"You wish to experience both scenarios?"

"No, it's for the both of us." The woman smiled apologetically as she waved at a boy who looked to be eight or nine. He ran toward her from underneath the shade.

The boy was quite shy around people. He stopped beside the woman, but he did not reach out to grab her hand. He just stood there expressionlessly.

"I'm sorry, but our Haunted House has an age requirement—no entry to those under fourteen." Chen Ge took a look at this boy and had a feeling he was different from normal boys, but he could not pinpoint why he felt that way.

"Can you please make an exception for us? This boy loves visiting Haunted Houses. There aren't that many visitors now, so even if we go in, people won't notice. I promise we won't cause any trouble."

"A child that small likes to visit Haunted Houses?" Chen Ge slid the black phone stealthily back into his pocket and shook his head. "I'm sorry, but those are the rules."

Chapter 71 - Heaven Inside the Well

Chapter 71: Heaven Inside the Well

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The afternoon sun was rather blinding. Even after the woman was rejected firmly by Chen Ge, she and the boy refused to leave.

“It is his wish to visit your Haunted House, and I promised that he could. Can you please show some kindness?” The woman pulled out a 100 note from her purse. “I promise you, it’ll be fine.”

...

Chen Ge did not accept the obvious bribe but asked confusedly, “Why do you insist on entering the Haunted House? The boy is at most eight years old—the environment inside the Haunted House is so complicated that I’m afraid it might scar him for life.”

The woman smiled helplessly but did not answer Chen Ge’s question. Instead, she turned around to rub the boy’s fluffy hair. “Fan Yu, shall we go play something else...”

Before she could finish, the boy slapped her hand away. The boy did not like physical contact, even from his family member. No matter how the woman tried to persuade him, the boy stood unmoving at the front of the Haunted House. Occasionally, he might raise his head, and Chen Ge could see fear, inferiority, and a trace of detachment in his eyes.

“Fan Yu?” Chen Ge’s attention had completely shifted to the boy. This was the first time he had come across such a curious child before. He squatted down to the boy’s level. “Can you please tell me why you want to visit the Haunted House? It is very dark inside the building, and there are scary things.”

The boy averted his eyes, but Chen Ge noticed his gaze kept wandering toward Chen Ge’s shadow. He still had not said a word.

The woman was probably afraid that Chen Ge might get offended, so she instantly jumped out to say, “Xiao Yu is different from most children—he doesn’t like to talk—so I hope you don’t mind.”

“Of course.” Chen Ge realized these two were not going to move unless tossed out by the guards. He wasn’t so cruel as to do that to a woman and a child, so he relented. “How about this? I will let you enter the building for free, but you are only allowed to visit the outer perimeter, and I will be tagging along.”

“Thank you!”

“Sign the disclaimer agreements first, both adult and child. Please do not touch any of the props or run amok while you’re inside. Stay close behind me.” Chen Ge gave the two documents to the woman and the boy. Normally, he only needed the signature from the guardian, but to get as much information as he could from the boy, Chen Ge asked for the boy’s signature as well. After signing the agreement, Chen Ge led them into the Minghun scenario.

Chen Ge explained the story background to them. The trio stood at the entrance, which was decorated with white lantern. The woman was a bit nervous, observable from the way she gripped her purse. The boy had his head lowered, but it was unknown whether from fear or something else.

The dead trees swayed in the wind, and the paper money that littered the floor scrunched under their footsteps. Chen Ge pushed open the entrance to the Siheyuan and explained, “That is what the interior looks like. Remember not to go in. The park has strict rules that prevent children under the age of fourteen from experiencing the Haunted House.”

As he finished, the little boy, who had been extremely quiet, suddenly rushed into the Siheyuan before the two adults could even stop him.

“Fan Yu!” The woman ran after him alongside Chen Ge. The boy stopped at the old well inside the courtyard. He had half of his upper body leaning down the well as if he was looking for something.

“I’m sorry, I’m so sorry.” The woman apologized profusely to Chen Ge as she tried to yank the boy out from the well. However, the shy boy seemed to have changed into another person. He not only tried his best to swat the woman’s hands away, but in his desperation, his nails clawed her arms until they were bloodied. It appeared like he had gone berserk.

“The boy sure has some huge mood swings.” The well in the Siheyuan was just a prop; it was not even that deep, so Chen Ge was not worried for the child’s safety. He was, however, curious about why the boy was so interested in the well.

After three more minutes at the well, the boy released his grasp unwillingly, probably because he did not find what he was looking for. The boy was definitely different from most young boys—he was more excitable at places that were dark and sinister.

“Since you’re already inside, then I suppose a little tour won’t hurt.” Chen Ge’s attention was fully focused on the boy. Even among his peers, the boy was of a smaller stature. He had delicate features and large eyes that looked like pure ebony.

“The Minghun scenario is modelled after the traditional Siheyuan, and the East and West Houses are normally meant for the newer generations.” He pushed open the door to the East House, and a female ghost in bridal outfit floated out from behind the door without warning. The woman screamed from shock and staggered back hurriedly.

“Don’t worry, it’s just an actor.” Chen Ge stopped the bride and whispered, “Xu Wan, go take a break for now.”

“Boss, couldn’t you at least pretend that you’re scared. Such a buzzkill...” Xu Wan picked up the dress and stepped over the wooden threshold. The boy who was behind Chen Ge rushed forward to stand before Xu Wan and tilted his head up to look closely at Xu Wan.

“Hmm? Boss, why did you let such a small boy in?” Xu Wan was surprised, but only Chen Ge realized how weird this was. The bridal outfit was red as blood, and Xu Wan was in her special make-up. She looked like a dead person. In such a circumstance, the boy did not feel fear but moved forward actively to Xu Wan to take a closer look.

“The kid seems to like me.” Xu Wan smiled at Chen Ge. It was not until Xu Wan left the scenario that the boy pulled his gaze back.

“I suppose that’s enough touring for one day. The rest of the place has similar décor, so shall we leave now?” Chen Ge and the woman moved toward the exit, but the boy stopped in the courtyard. He looked left and right as if looking for something.

“Fan Yu, it’s time to go!”

The boy ignored the woman. He moved back to the old well and continued his search.

“Isn’t the boy afraid?” Chen Ge did not rush them but started chatting with the woman. “Are you his mother?”

“No, I’m his aunt. I’m sorry for creating so much trouble. Xiao Yu is a bit different from boys his age. Ever since the accident with his parents several years ago, he has been like this. We’ve been to many doctors, but it was to no avail.”

“Psychological problems? If you don’t mind me asking, what happened to his parents?” Chen Ge asked cautiously.

“Xiao Yu’s parents were both teachers at Mu Yang High School. They disappeared one day and have not been found since. At the time, Xiao Yu was only five. I didn’t how to explain it to him, so I could only lie to him and say that his parents left for some place far away called heaven.”

“Mu Yang High School?” Chen Ge tensed after hearing these four words.

“You’ve heard of it? There are plenty of rumors about that school. I advised Xiao Yu’s parents from the beginning to seek employment elsewhere, but they refused to listen to me.” The woman’s eyes started to redden from the memory. She stopped talking to Chen Ge and walked toward the boy. “Xiao Yu, it’s time to go home.”

The boy stayed stubbornly beside the well. This made Chen Ge even more curious. He squatted down beside the boy and asked, “Why do you keep looking inside the well? Is there some kind of monster living down there?”

Fan Yu shook his head. The boy seemed to have let his guard down, standing at the corner that was shaded from the sun.

“Then can you tell me why you don’t want to leave the well?”

The boy glanced at a spot behind Chen Ge before answering, “I’m looking for something.”

“What are you looking for?” Chen Ge was curious.

The boy looked down the dark well for a long time before answering, “Heaven.”

Chapter 72 - Two-Star Scenario!

Chapter 72: Two-Star Scenario!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Looking for heaven inside the well?” Chen Ge looked at the boy and was suddenly reminded of something. His emotions were running wild. He turned around to take a deep breath to calm himself down. Thankfully, the woman did not notice his weird reaction.

However, as he turned back around, he lowered his head and saw the boy has been staring at her, the glow in his eyes similar to earlier when he saw Xu Wan in Mortician’s Make-up.

...

“Fan Yu, it’s time to go home,” the woman repeated. Finally, the boy moved away from the well. Even though he still had his head lowered, his mood seemed to have improved.

However, after they exited the Haunted House and the sunlight fell on the party, the boy returned to how he had been before, silent with an unbridled fear circulating in his eyes. It was hard to tell whether he was afraid of light or living humans.

The woman thanked Chen Ge before leading the boy away. After the pair left New Century Park, Chen Ge sighed in relief. The black phone in his pocket vibrated. He sat on the steps as he thought back on what had happened earlier.

Looking for heaven inside the well... perhaps for the boy, this was not meant in a metaphorical manner. After conversing with the woman, Chen Ge knew she had lied to the boy by saying that his parents had gone to somewhere called heaven so that he would not be too sad.

She had probably hoped that the boy would come to the realization as he grew up, but things did not go as planned. The boy’s psychological health was stunted—he could no longer be considered a normal young boy. However, the thing that surprised Chen Ge the most was the boy’s answer when he asked what he was doing beside the well.

His parents had gone to heaven and the boy kept on searching for heaven inside the well. Did this not prove indirectly that the boy had seen his parents shoved into the well with his own eyes ?

Their bodies are inside the well! Chen Ge lit a cigarette unknowingly. He did not hurry to call the police but continued his line of speculation.

The boy's parents were both teachers at Mu Yang High School, and one of the side quests activated on the black phone is related to both Mu Yang High School and a well. If this is not a coincidence, then the disappearance of the boy's parents should be related to Mu Yang High School.

Chen Ge took out the black phone, and there was an unread message. He opened it.

"Different choices lead to different result. The first special visitor has left. You made the correct choice during the visitation period. Congratulations for obtaining the reward! Unlocked Hidden Trial Mission—Mu Yang High School! This mission is part of the four-star scenario, School of the Afterlife's side mission. Completing it will unlock a two-star scenario, Mu Yang High School, and lower the Trial Mission difficulty for School of the Afterlife.

"Mu Yang High School Trial Mission (Scream Factor 2 Stars): This scenario has four side missions. Survive after experiencing all of them, and the scenario will be unlocked.

"Mission Venue: Mu Yang High School.

"Mission Request: Arrive at the mission venue before 11 pm tonight and survive until dawn.

"Mission Hint: Everyone has a deep well inside their heart where shameful and unknowable secrets stay buried.

"Do you wish to accept the mission?

"Warning: Trial Mission is only active for 24 hours. If you do not accept it within 24 hours, you will forfeit the mission, and the scenario will forever be locked."

The message on the black phone flustered Chen Ge. He did not expect the reward for accepting a special visitor would be the unlocking of a two-star scenario's Trial Mission. He had already experienced the terror of a Trial Mission at Ping An Apartments. It was much more dangerous than a Nightmare Mission, and Ping An Apartments was merely a one star Trial Mission.

Chen Ge memorized all the information on the screen as he looked through the black phone again and again.

The previous mission required me to find the murderer while this mission only requires me to stay alive until dawn. It looks simpler in comparison, but the black phone must have its reasons to label this a two-star mission; its level of danger has to be higher than Murder by Midnight's Trial Mission!

To survive, it sounded like a simple demand, but it greatly unsettled Chen Ge. The offer of the Trial Mission would be open only for 24 hours, and this was a great point of contention for Chen Ge. He did not know if surrendering this mission would affect the development of the four-star scenario, School of the Afterlife.

Even though based on his current situation, unlocking a four-star scenario was practically impossible, he would still feel pain if he had to surrender it.

Forfeiting this mission might mean forfeiting School of the Afterlife. Two losses at once is indeed too big a loss. Chen Ge measured the pros and cons in his heart. Not accepting it means losing two scenarios, but if I manage to complete the mission, it means unlocking a two-star scenario, and it will also complete the side missions for School of the Afterlife. The Haunted House requires constant updates to retain the repeat visitors. This two-star scenario comes at the right time, so I should give it a try.

New Century Park was facing closure, and he needed to create results within three months, something that was impossible with the current Haunted House. After some thought, Chen Ge decided to accept the mission.

After the message disappeared, Chen Ge decided not to waste any more time. He called Xu Wan to inform her to look after the Haunted House for the rest of the day because he had to go somewhere else.

The boy was the key that activated the Trial Mission for Mu Yang High School, and Chen Ge believed he would be able to get more information from him. Chen Ge ran out the park entrance and saw the boy and the woman get on a bus.

Route 14.

Chen Ge hailed a cab and told the driver, "Go to the next stop for Route 14."

The taxi reached the station arrived earlier than the bus, which arrived one minute later. The bus was crowded, and the woman was holding the boy in her arms as they were squeezed to the back of the bus. They did not discover Chen Ge.

Following them home might nab me some surprise discoveries.

Chen Ge did not hurry to expose himself but stood at the front of the bus. The bus continued to pass seven stations, and many passengers descended as the surroundings outside the bus became more and more deserted.

When they almost reached the final station, the woman and the boy finally got off. They did not walk down the street but turned down a small, secluded path.

They live at such a secluded place? Then again, the woman did mention finding many doctors for the boy—that would burn a hole in the family finances.

Chen Ge trailed behind them. A short distance later, the woman and the boy suddenly increased in pace.

Have I been discovered? Or are they hiding from something else?

Chapter 73 - Red and Black

Chapter 73: Red and Black

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The dilapidated paths crisscrossed like a maze. Afraid of being left behind, Chen Ge also picked up the pace. After many turns, a squat two-story terrace block appeared before his eyes, and it was into this place that the woman and the boy disappeared.

The drains surrounding the building were fetid with a horrible stench, and a large poster stating that the original tenants had moved was pasted on the first floor. Everywhere Chen Ge turned, there was rubbish piling up either at the corner or directly on the floor.

...

Chen Ge walked toward the building, and many questions floated up his mind. The pair lived in such a horrible environment, so this meant that their living conditions were too good. However, at the park, the woman readily pulled out 100 RMB just for the boy to visit the Haunted House. This went to show how much she cared for the boy. Yet, the boy was cruelly indifferent to her. He had said only two phrases while he was inside the Haunted House, and they were both directed at Chen Ge. The boy seemed to dislike the woman vehemently.

Is it because of his mental issues, or is something more sinister at work?

After walking up the stairs, Chen Ge realized there was only one tenant residing on the second floor. The corridor was swept clean, and there was laundry hanging on poles.

“Is anyone in?” The door was open, but Chen Ge still knocked on the door out of courtesy.

“Coming.”

Footsteps could be heard coming from inside the room. When she saw Chen Ge, she was visibly stunned.

“Why are you here? Did we cause some damage when we visited the Haunted House?” the woman asked cautiously.

“No, it’s not that. I’m just interested in the little boy’s situation, and I have something to ask him.” Chen Ge realized the woman did not show any sign of wanting him inside the house so he continued. “I have some friends at Jiujiang Medical University, and I thought, maybe they can help.”

“Thank you, but it’s alright.” The woman rejected him without thought. Then again, Chen Ge also felt like he was being a little too forward. “I am really not a bad person. You can look on your phone for today’s Jiujiang Morning News.”

Since the woman did not move, Chen Ge took out his own phone to look for an article on him helping to solve the Ping An Apartment case.

“Look, I’ve once helped the police solve a buried case and was awarded a medal of honor.” Chen Ge passed the phone to the woman, and she took a glance at it. “Supernatural Livestreamer trapped and was finally saved by the police? The intrepidity of a Haunted House operator almost caused his death?”

“Ignore the headlines. There should be my picture inside the article.”

Chen Ge explained for a long time before the woman put her suspicion aside. She returned his phone to him and said, “Come in for a seat then, just leave the door open.”

“Okay.”

The woman led Chen Ge to the ‘living room’, which was more like a thirty square feet space that had a dining table and beds pushed to the corners.

“Forgive the mess, I wasn’t expecting any visitors. Would you like to have something to drink?” The woman was embarrassed. In that moment, Chen Ge could see the boy’s shadow on her.

“That won’t be necessary. I just want to ask some questions about the boy’s parents.” Chen Ge took out his phone to record anything he deemed important.

“It has been so long already, why are you asking that now?” Regardless, the woman sat down across from Chen Ge and told him everything that had happened at Mu Yang High School three years ago.

Three years ago, Mu Yang High School had still been a normal school. That summer day, it had poured down with rain. When the boy's parents returned home, the boy had been nowhere to be found. They had gone out to search for him, but in the end, it was the boy who had returned and not them.

This sounds like the reason for the parents' disappearance is also because of the boy... Chen Ge recorded the key points that was given by the woman on his phone. He tried his best to recreate the event.

Fan Yu's parents had realized that their child was missing after they came home after work. When they went out to look for him in the pouring rain, the last place they had been seen was unknown, but their bodies were most likely trapped under the water well at Mu Yang High School, and the boy was probably the sole witness of the whole event.

It was also probably because he had witnessed the whole process that Fan Yu had become like this.

Chen Ge looked at the surface of the table and frowned. He pulled out the black phone to look for the details of the side missions for School of Afterlife. The description for Side Mission 6, Deep Well, was 'One brother and one sister went to school, but how come no one returned?'

The black phone would not make a mistake, so what did the pair of siblings have to do with Fan Yu's parents? According to the hint on the black phone, it was the siblings who fell into the well and not the boy's parents. Why was that?

Chen Ge put the black phone away and looked at the woman with tears in her eyes. He asked with uncertainty, "Is Fan Yu an only child? Does he have brothers or sisters?"

The moment the question left his lips, the woman's expression changed. Her nails scratched deep into her skin, and her tears fell freely. "If the accident did not happen to my two children, then Xiao Yu would have had a brother and a sister to play with."

"Your children?" Before Chen Ge entered the room, he had noticed that the clothes hanging on the rods outside were mostly women's and children's, so he had assumed the woman was not married.

“They died when they were still very young, mere toddlers.” The woman was on the verge of a breakdown. She blurted a quick sorry before escaping into the kitchen to collect herself.

Then, Fan Yu does have a brother and sister, but according to the woman’s description, they passed away a long time ago. Why would the black phone say the pair of siblings did not return home after school? Why would toddlers attend school? Is the black phone mistaken, or is the woman lying? Or was Fan Yu hallucinating?

The woman stayed inside the kitchen for a long time. Chen Ge stood up and headed toward the only other room in the house. Fan Yu should be inside; he was the focal point of this whole mystery.

Chen Ge pushed open the door, and the bedroom he stepped into was very clean. Fan Yu was standing before the table, seemingly writing something. Chen Ge walked up to the boy and looked over his shoulder. He realized the boy was drawing, and he had a preference for black and red colors.

“Xiao Yu, what are you drawing?” Afraid that he might spook the boy, Chen Ge spoke in a soft voice. The boy turned to look at Chen Ge but did not answer. He turned back to focus on his drawing.

As he continued to add colors, the picture on the paper started to materialize.

In a pure black house stood several red miniature humans.

After finishing the drawing, the boy crumpled the paper up and threw it onto the floor before starting a new drawing.

Chen Ge stood and watched for a long time. He realized the central theme of Fan Yu’s drawings comprised of only these two things—A black house and small, red humans.

What is he trying to convey? Chen Ge picked up the finished drawing from the floor and flattened it out. After studying it for some time, he silently slid it inside his pocket.

Chapter 74 - Group Photo

Chapter 74: Group Photo

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Red has the longest wavelength of the visible light spectrum. It is the direct contrast to black so pairing them together creates a unique optical effect.

The black house was dark as night while the red humans were fresh as blood. The picture created a great pressure on those who viewed it.

...

“The boy’s favorite pastime is drawing. He doesn’t like to go out and often secludes himself in his room.” Unbeknownst to Chen Ge, the woman had entered the room. She held two glasses of water in her hands. “Now, I no longer wish for anything but for him to grow up happily like a normal boy.”

The woman passed a glass of water to Chen Ge while placing the other beside the boy. “Let’s go outside, he is afraid of contact with strangers.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge returned to the living room, holding the glass of water. The woman sat down across from him.

“Do you have any other questions?” The woman seemed to have put her guard up again.

“The poor child, I believe that he was traumatized when he was young, so to cure his condition, we have to find out the reason why and then work from there.” Chen Ge vocalized his inner thoughts. “You are his only family, and it is obvious that you care about him, do you mind if I ask you a few more questions?”

The woman nodded. She had a thin sheen of sweat on her forehead, probably due to the heat.

“Earlier, you mentioned that Fan Yu’s parents went missing after going out in search of him, so where was Fan Yu ultimately found?”

“At Mu Yang High School. He was hiding in my brother’s office.”

“Mu Yang High School again? Weird things seem to keep on happening at that place.”

“You couldn’t be more right...” The woman sighed. “Mu Yang High School is the worst school in Jiujiang. To be honest, I don’t even understand the purpose of its existence. Before it was shut down, the police had to visit it every other day on account of the constant fighting.”

“That serious?” Chen Ge listened closely. After all, getting the information from the woman was much more convenient than researching online.

“That’s not all.” The woman stood up and continued in a serious tone. “The school is famously haunted. According to the nearby elders, the place was originally a crematorium. It was knocked down due to city planning, but just think about it, how peaceful could the school be, being built on top of a site like that? I advised my brother not to seek employment there, but he just refused to listen to me.”

“Then why did your brother insist on going to teach at Mu Yang High School?”

“The salary was high, and he had a record, so it was difficult for him to find a job. Who would have thought that would be his last job?”

“A record? Did he make some enemies? Could his disappearance be related to that?” Chen Ge latched onto the details in the woman’s conversation.

“No, it’s nothing like that. My brother liked to drink, but he was a horrible drinker. That was why he was fired from his original school, and a bad history was left on his record. There were only so many schools in Jiujiang, and that made it difficult for him to get a new job.”

“Then, his disappearance doesn’t sound like it was caused by revenge.”

“It’s definitely not.”

The woman’s confidence made Chen Ge narrow his eyes. “How can you be so sure?”

The woman hesitated before she pulled out a picture from the drawer to place it on the table. "Ever since the initial opening of the school, there was a classroom that had always stayed locked, and entry was forbidden for all staff and students. Other than the headmaster, nobody knew why. After the old headmaster passed away, this became a mystery. There are still many legends surrounding that classroom. People said it was a reserved classroom for the spirits who had perished in the crematorium, or some tragedy had befallen the workers before the school was completed. In any case, it is a very dark place."

"What does that have to do with your brother's disappearance?" Chen Ge was confused.

"Take a look at this, and you will understand why."

Chen Ge accepted the photo from the woman, and it was a very curious group photo. A drunken man sat in the middle, and around him stood several rows of students.

It did sound like a normal graduation photo, but the problem lay in the fact that all the students were turned away from the camera!

And should one look closer, every student was standing in a curious manner—they were all on their tiptoes.

"Where did you find this picture, and have you showed it to the police?" Chen Ge placed the photo back on the table and rubbed the sweat that covered his palms.

"The night before his disappearance, my brother was at the bar watching the ball game with his friends. To ensure he would be able to attend work the next morning, he decided to sleep in the nurse's office. When he passed one of the classrooms, he saw many people standing inside. Praising the class for their hardworking attitude, he stopped for a moment in front of the classroom's door. The people inside the class seemed to be in the middle of taking a class photo. When they saw him, they invited him in to take the central seat. After taking the picture, the students left, and he himself was unclear who ultimately gave him this picture." The woman's voice was flat, but the story made Chen Ge's skin crawl.

"When my brother saw the picture, it gave him such a shock that he woke up from the alcohol instantly. It was then that he realized he was sitting inside the sealed classroom." The woman pushed the picture toward Chen Ge. "He only revealed this to me and sister-in-law. We all thought it would eventually blow away, but the next day, that unfortunate incident happened. Xiao Yu suddenly disappeared, and the both of them went searching for him, but it was them who ended up missing. Therefore, I believe their disappearance doesn't have anything to do with revenge but was related to that sealed classroom."

"What did the police say?" Chen Ge pushed the photo back.

"They did bring the photo back to Mu Yang High School to conduct an investigation. Even though the students in the picture were wearing Mu Yang High School's uniform, they could not be found at the school. They opened up the sealed classroom and took a close look. All they found were my brother's footprints, which confirmed that my brother was indeed once inside that room."

"Okay, I understand." Chen Ge asked the woman a few more questions, most of which she had no answer for and for some she only provided a vague answer. After knowing he would not get any new information from the woman, Chen Ge stood up to leave.

"Leaving so soon? It's so hot outside, why don't you take a sip of the drink before you leave?"

"Thank you, but I'm not thirsty." Chen Ge thanked the woman for her kindness before leaving the second floor.

After the conversation with the woman, Chen Ge had a better understanding of Mu Yang High School. There are four side missions at Mu Yang High School, and two of them are related to the little boy's family.

He took out Fan Yu's drawing from his pocket to take another few looks. The contrast of black and red seemed to be telling him something. Black house and red men. Could they be related to Mu Yang High School? Could this drawing refer to a building at Mu Yang High School?

Chapter 75 - Mu Yang High School

Chapter 75: Mu Yang High School

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

A child's thinking is more direct and less metaphorical. Could this drawing be an actual representation of the crime scene that he witnessed?

The house is black, meaning the time of the crime was at night, and the people inside the house are red—they probably represent his parents, the victims. This is the most direct interpretation.

...

Chen Ge tried looking at this painting from multiple angles. The boy had a hasty artistic style; all the human shapes looked the same and had no defining features. Chen Ge could not even tell their gender.

Wait, the red humans probably aren't referring to his parents, there are way too many of them in the drawing. Chen Ge tried counting the number of red people, but every time he ended up with a different number. The drawing is too messy. What is the boy actually trying to communicate with it?

In the room, Fan Yu kept on repeating the same drawing. They were all about a black house and many red people. However, every time he was done, he would crumble up the drawings and toss them away as if he was dissatisfied with them.

Regardless, this painting is a crucial clue. Chen Ge came up with nothing even after studying the painting for a long time. He pocketed the drawing and glanced at the building behind him. The door, which he had left ajar, was now shut.

Both the aunt and the child are problematic in their own way. The question is... whose problem is bigger? Chen Ge got on the bus after escaping the maze-like paths. He was worried about his upcoming mission. If the woman was not lying to him, the test he was about to face that night would be incredibly difficult.

For the sake of safety, Chen Ge took out his phone to search for more information on Mu Yang High School online. He came up with quite a large amount of information, and most of it came from various school forums.

Based on the timeline, the posters probably were once students at Mu Yang High School, and after the school closed down, they were forced to change school and took the legends of Mu Yang High School along with them.

After a cursory glance, a few of them did capture Chen Ge's attention. About one year ago, five students snuck into Mu Yang High School on a dare. They used their phones to record their experience, but instead of videoing the event, they updated a thread every few minutes.

The original thread had long since been removed, and Chen Ge was reading a shared post. According to rumors, they had entered the sealed classroom and started playing the game of Pen Spirit.

The five had sat around a table to summon the Pen Spirit, but as the game went on, there had ultimately been seven people standing in the classroom. No one knew where the additional two had come from, and the five ran out of the school, crying and yelling all the way.

Luckily, all five of them had survived the ordeal, but two of them seemed to have been traumatized from the incident. One of them had turned illogically violent while the other had acquired an irrational fear of daylight. Eventually, the two had moved out of Jiujiang.

Chen Ge looked at some of the comments under the post. A poster pointed out that during the game, two additional persons appeared, and in the end, there were two students who were traumatized. The poster suspected that the two who escaped were already someone else, and the original two were still trapped inside that classroom.

This speculation received many likes, but there were other opposing views as well. Some said all five had been possessed, but the two had stronger constitutions, and that was why they had acted weirdly.

There was a pinned message from a teacher that banned further discussion on Mu Yang High School. Chen Ge scrolled through the thread and realized there was one that was hidden.

Chen Ge opened it, and he was baffled by the content. The poster stated that his father's company had planned to purchase the land on which Mu Yang High School was located for a low price. Initially, everything was fine, but when the contract was almost ready, his father would have the same dream every night. Many students wearing Mu Yang High School's uniform would come to their house for classes.

The weird thing was, when they woke up, there was evidence of forced entry into their house. His father was so scared that he fell ill before finally resigning. That was the end of the story.

After reading all the posts, Chen Ge could not help but compare Mu Yang High School and Western Jiujiang's Private Academy, since they were both schools, and he came to a weird discovery.

There were many supernatural rumors about Mu Yang High School online, but none of the stories mentioned death or injury. In comparison, while there was not much information on Western Jiujiang's Private Academy online, the record at the police station showed that there was more than one death that had happened at the school.

If I really think about it, Western Jiujiang's Private Academy does sound scarier. That was the only way Chen Ge could have made himself feel better.

Sitting on the bus and looking out the window, Chen Ge's phone suddenly rang. He looked down and saw it was from He San.

The kid sensed the possible unlocking of a new scenario, so he called to book in advance? Chen Ge answered the call and placed his phone beside his ear. "Hello?"

"Boss, quickly get on the video-sharing app, someone is coming for your bread and butter!"

"Huh? There's someone who is opening a new Haunted House?" Chen Ge clicked open the app, and before he was allowed entry into the homepage, an ad appeared on his phone—"Host, Qin Guang leads you to explore an actual haunted house!"

Chen Ge clicked on the screen and more details popped up.

Qin Guang was a famous livestream host on the platform. He had more than 600,000 followers, and most of his short videos had a humorous theme. On his personal bio, it stated that he belonged to XX Studio, and that studio was the same one who had tried to cozy up to Chen Ge earlier when he was at Ping An Apartments.

The ad explained that Qin Guang's latest adventure was to branch into a new livestreaming territory, to host a mystery livestream inside an actual haunted house.

Chen Ge did not think too much of it at first, but when he saw Qin Guang's first mystery location, he was speechless. Qin Guang's team was going to livestream at Western Jiujiang's Ping An Apartments.

"Boss, have you seen it? That man realized that you had more than ten thousand views on your first livestream, so he's trying to copy your formula!" He San grumbled indignantly.

"There's no need to worry, certain things cannot be copied."

Chen Ge had thought He San was going to bring him some big news, so he was rather disappointed. He was not that worried about Qin Guang, although he also knew Qin Guang would not see him as competition either.

On the other end of the phone, He San said urgently, "He has so many followers. After he consolidates himself as a supernatural host, I'm afraid they'll turn around and claim that it was you who copied them!"

"It'll be fine. By the way, are you familiar with child psychology? I have a few questions for you."

"Boss, what time is it, you still have the luxury to ask questions like that? Furthermore, I'm a forensic doctor. For questions of psychology, you should refer to psychologist or psychiatrist!"

Chapter 76 - School on a Rainy Night

Chapter 76: School on a Rainy Night

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“There’s a boy who came to visit my Haunted House today. He looked about eight or nine, doesn’t like to speak, and the darker the place, the more excited he gets, what kind of symptom are these?” Chen Ge voiced the problem directly. He only had two people he could ask; one was He San, and the other was He Feng.

“Forensic students focus on practical medicine, biology, and some chemistry. Psychology focuses on mental phenomena, neuroscience, and psychiatry. They are completely different fields. Even if you ask me, I won’t be able to provide you with an answer.” He San sighed helplessly. “Boss, are you really not planning to do anything about this? I notice you have not updated for a few days already, and your previous livestream was days ago. If you allow this to continue, your popularity will start to fall. Look at your profile page, there are already comments that say you’re running out of ideas, and they even started to mock your Haunted House.”

...

“Mock my Haunted House? There’s such a thing?” This did make Chen Ge worry. He clicked into his personal page and realized there were indeed plenty of negative comments.

“Boss, there are currently too many short videos, and homogenization is a serious problem. Once you stop updating, the viewers will quickly move onto other uploaders.”

“You’re right, but things aren’t as serious as you think,” Chen Ge replied. His focus was still on Fan Yu and his aunt. He had always treated the livestream and videos as additional support; the most important thing was still the missions on the black phone.

“If you say so. I just wanted to remind you.” There was a saddened trace to He San’s voice. “That Qin Guang is an established host, and on top of that, he has great support from his studio. The platform will definitely provide him with plenty of promotion, but I still believe your livestream will be better than his.”

“His content is an imitation of mine,” Chen Ge replied with a smile. The biggest difference between his content and other hosts’ was that his was completely authentic and could not be copied. “Yes, I am widely lagging behind in terms of resources, channels, and fans, but if we’re talking about the understanding and handling of the fear factor, he is still a rookie.”

“You’re right! After all, you’re a professional.” He San paused before adding, “Boss, I suddenly remembered something.”

“What is it?”

“Do you still remember the senior of mine that you scared until she cried?”

“Your description fits so many people—you might as well give me the name directly.”

“Gao Ru Xue. Her father is a psychologist and a tenured lecturer in criminal psychology. I’ll ask if she can help you tonight.”

“Okay, if you succeed, I’ll treat you to a meal and gift you a free tour of the Haunted House’s new scenario.” Chen Ge appreciated the aid of this honest young man and easily promised a reward.

“Thanks, but no thanks! Last time I visited your Haunted House, it caused me to have nightmares for a few consecutive nights,” He San complained. “This one time, I fell asleep in class, and I didn’t even know the lecturer had wandered to my side. In my dream, I was chased by a crazed doctor holding a hammer. When I ran to the top of the stairs, I felt a hand on my shoulder. I was so shocked that my body just reacted with an elbow jab, and when I opened my eyes, the lecturer’s glasses were broken already...”

Chen Ge tried to hold in his laughter, but he failed. “Alright then. I won’t force you to visit the Haunted House in the future.”

After chatting for a bit more, Chen Ge finally hung up. He looked out the window, and the sun was slowly covered up by rain clouds. When he returned to New Century Park, from afar, Chen Ge saw a group of people crowding the entrance of the Haunted House. Xu Wan was busy negotiating with them.

“Xiao Wan, what’s the matter?”

“You’re finally back. These visitors are all here to visit the Haunted House, but since I could not find you, I could only ask for their patience.” Xu Wan was already out of her make-up, and her forehead was filled with sweat from the anxiety.

“Well done. Stay outside to sell them the tickets, leave the rest to me.” Chen Ge pushed open the gate, put on the Doctor Skull-cracker outfit, and entered the Murder by Midnight scenario.

At around 4 pm, it started to drizzle, and the clouds in the sky thickened. Many of the park attractions had to stop for fear of accidents, and most visitors who still had not had their fill went to the indoor attractions. It was thus that Chen Ge’s Haunted House became an unlikely favorite. The crowd outside the place was huge until 5 pm, when it started to disperse.

Chen Ge, who had run around the building for the whole afternoon, was exhausted. He removed his outfit and walked out of the Haunted House.

The sky was dark, and the wind was howling.

It was also pouring several years ago when Fan Yu’s parents disappeared. Chen Ge looked at the sky with a complicated emotion. He told Xu Wan to go home before returning to the maintenance room to prepare his backpack.

He shoved a lighter, flashlight, multi-purpose mallet, and doll into it and left the Haunted House in a raincoat. Due to the unexpected crowd, when Chen Ge left the park, it was already 6 pm. He stopped a cab at the entrance, but when he told the driver his destination was Mu Yang High School, the driver refused to take him.

He had no choice but to wait for another. The other driver told Chen Ge that the roads leading to Mu Yang High School were already overgrown with shrubs and were unpassable by car, so he could only drop Chen Ge near Mu Yang High School.

There was a time limit on the mission. Arriving early meant more time to scout and consequently lower the risk. Chen Ge did not want to waste time. After negotiating the price with the driver, he departed.

On the way there, he asked the driver for more information on Mu Yang High School, but the driver merely looked ahead with a serious expression and focused fully on his driving. In that moment, Chen Ge found himself missing the talkative uncle who had driven him to Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy.

At around 7 pm, they finally reached the destination. The road was horrible, and the place was even more backwards than the countryside.

“The car cannot continue any further, so this is where I’ll have to stop.” The driver pointed outside the window. “There should be people living nearby, so go to them if you’re lost. Send me the fare through WeChat; I don’t accept cash.”

“No cash?” Chen Ge was confused, but he did not ask further; everyone had their quirks. After paying, he got out from the taxi.

The rain started to intensify, and the sky by then was completely dark. Chen Ge looked around him, and there were indeed several rows of houses a distance away, but they looked abandoned because they were completely dark.

“How am I supposed to find Mu Yang High School?”

Chen Ge turned to ask the driver, only to see the driver toss the seat mat he had sat on earlier out the window and turn around to leave without hesitation.

He refused to take my cash and tossed out the mat I sat on earlier... what is the meaning of this? Is it because he thinks I'm dirty?

Chapter 77 - The Paper and Pen on the Table

Chapter 77: The Paper and Pen on the Table

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The strange way the taxi driver acted unsettled Chen Ge. Taxi drivers were the party that were the most familiar with the city; thus, they knew the taboo places that populated the city.

Has the driver misunderstood me?

...

The mat was dropped in the mud and was soon drenched by the rain. While he was reading the supernatural stories on Mu Yang High School, Chen Ge did not think they were that scary. However, after the incident with the taxi driver, Chen Ge's bravery started to waver.

The requirement of this mission is merely for me to survive. This means that even the black phone believes that surviving will be a huge challenge.

In the blink of an eye, the taxi disappeared down the road. Chen Ge stood in his raincoat surrounded by a wide expanse of nothing but trees. It felt like he was abandoned in the wild.

The rain continued to pour. Chen Ge pulled the raincoat tighter and pulled out his flashlight to wander down the muddy road. The rainclouds were low in the sky, blocking out the moonlight. Chen Ge moved toward the buildings that he had seen earlier, and it was not until then that he realized how rundown they actually were.

Rusted chains hung off the door, and the glass on the window had long since been broken. Looking through the cracks, Chen Ge saw that the interior was stuffed with rotten furniture and trash with unknown bugs crawling over the ground.

There's not a single sign of a living person, is this place that cursed?

Before he came, he did obtain several precious nuggets of information from Fan Yu's aunt. Therefore, Chen Ge knew a thing or two about the surroundings of Mu Yang High School. Since there was no one for him to ask, he could only wander deeper into the unknown based on his memory.

The road was muddy from the rain, and it was bordered on both sides by weirdly-shaped trees, but they had all overgrown into the road due to a lack of trimming.

Mu Yang High School's site was once a crematorium. As scary as that is, it meant that there had to be a road for vehicles. However, the road keeps getting smaller and smaller; it's practically impossible for any four-wheeled vehicle to traverse. Am I even on the right road? The intensity of the rain slowed Chen Ge's progress. It'll not bode well if I get lost. If Mu Yang High School is not at the end of this road, I'll need to turn back and abandon this quest.

Chen Ge continued on the road at another thirty minutes. At the end of the road, he saw a sign that was knocked off the ground and a wooden fence.

There's lichen growing on its side—it has been on the ground for years already.

Chen Ge pulled the sign upright, but the characters were too faded for him to make any sense of it. He used his flashlight to scan the sign. Why does the lichen only grow on one side? Is it because of the sun, or has someone been here recently to move the sign and the fence?

He stopped moving and looked at the time on his phone. It's almost 8 pm, and the mission location is still nowhere to be found. The only good news is that I still have coverage. At least I can call for help in case of an emergency.

The night was exceptionally dark because of the rain. Chen Ge's phone was the sole source of light for miles. Both sign and fence are here, but weirdly enough, they seem like they have recently been moved. This is curious.

Chen Ge used the sign to part the shrubbery that blocked his way. He walked for another ten meters before the scenery changed. A row of broken wooden railings stood in the middle of the forest, and within the railings were several squat buildings.

This is Mu Yang High School?

Compared to Western Jiujiang's Private Academy, this school looked far more dilapidated. Its size was less than one-third of Western Jiujiang's Private Academy.

Chen Ge did not let his guard down simply because the place was smaller in size. The school being smaller might not necessarily be a good thing. Yes, the need for exploration had decreased but so had the space for hiding.

Chen Ge tossed the sign aside and jumped over the rail into Mu Yang High School. All the buildings of the school could be captured with one glance.

The one closest to the entrance was the education block. It seemed to have been the victim of a huge fire. The surface was charred black, and the corners of the wall seemed cracked, as if it could fall at any given moment.

To the left side of the education block was the dormitory. Probably due to the low number of students, the dormitory only had two stories and barely a handful of rooms. To the right was the office, and from the exterior, the building seemed to be the best preserved.

Behind the education block was an uneven field. Two basketball courts and several ping pong tables stood to the side.

Thus was the layout for Mu Yang High School. Other than its rich supernatural history, the school itself was lacking in flavor and personality. Chen Ge suspected that the real reason for closure was not something supernatural but rather there were simply no new students who wished to study here.

Weirdly enough, when Chen Ge arrived at his destination, he felt calmer. He was an expert at managing his emotions.

There are four side missions at Mu Yang High School: The Pen Spirit, The Fifth Cubicle in the Toilet, Deep Well, and The Sealed Classroom. If I want to unlock the full scenario, I mustn't miss out on any of them.

In the previous mission, it was because Chen Ge had a more than ninety percent completion rate that he obtained the hidden reward—Wang Qi's Missing Person Notice. It was this item that had bridged the relationship between Chen Ge and Xiaoxiao's family.

He understood the importance of having a high mission completion rate, but it was easier said than done. Any one of the side missions could rival the creepiness of a Nightmare Mission, and he was expected to complete all four in one night.

It is still not yet midnight. There's still time before the active hour for the residents of the other world. I should scout out these four locations. If the difficulty is too high, I still have time to leave.

Chen Ge put the doll in his chest, whipped out his trusty mallet, and headed toward the education block.

The surface of the building was black with soot that remained even after so many years.

The whole building is burnt, could this be related to the original crematorium?

Chen Ge moved lightly. He remembered the mission description provided by the black phone.

“There’s a classroom at the end of the corridor that’s always sealed. No one ever enters it, but every night, the classroom will come alive with activity.”

Bad luck befell Fan Yu’s father after he entered that classroom, so that classroom might be the center of the paranormal activities at Mu Yang High School.

The creepy photo appeared in Chen Ge’s mind. There was a high chance he would have to spend the night with the roomful of students who refused to meet the camera.

All the classrooms were locked, and Chen Ge could only peer in through the windows with his flashlight. The front few classrooms were normal abandoned classrooms. It was not until Chen Ge reached the very last classroom at the end of corridor that he spotted something weird.

The classroom was curiously preserved from the fire. However, what attracted Chen Ge’s attention the most were the books, paper, and pen that were placed on the table in the middle of the classroom, creating the illusion that someone had just attended a class there.

Chapter 78 - I Can't Control My Right Hand

Chapter 78: I Can't Control My Right Hand

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Shall I go in to take a closer look?

Chen Ge was anxious. Holding the mallet in his hand, he wished desperate to knock the door down to see what was written on the piece of paper.

...

According to the school forum, five students once broke into Mu Yang High School to play a game of Pen Spirit in the last classroom on a dare. Could the pen and paper have been left behind by them? Chen Ge thought about it and realized that was impossible. According to the post's description, when the two extra people appeared in the room, the five students were so scared that they escaped as fast as they could. In their desperation to escape, they had to knock over some of the furniture, but all the tables and chairs in the room now were neatly arranged.

Of course, that doesn't take away from the possibility that after they left, the furniture was rearranged or the speculation that all five were possessed.

Chen Ge put his mallet down and decided to save the classroom for last. After leaving the education block, Chen Ge headed for the dormitory.

The dilapidated squat building had less than a handful of rooms, and he walked around it for a long time before coming across a faded iron sign. The characters on it were smudged, but Chen Ge believed that it once read 'Second Floor is Female Rooms. No Entry to Males.'

This school sure is shabby.

After removing his raincoat, Chen Ge dabbed at the rain that had seeped into his collar and was about to carry on when his phone rang. He looked at the caller ID and answered it readily. "He San?"

"Boss, I've given my senior your phone number. She said that she would have her father contact you when he's home."

"Thank you, is there anything else?"

"Also, that Qin Guang has just started his livestream. Are you sure you're not going to take a look? He hired an actor to play the killer next door, and his opening and even his analysis were a complete copy of yours. I didn't even know from where I should start to complain."

"Let him be then. But when I start my livestream in a bit, remember to come support me."

"You're starting a livestream?" He San's voice shot up several octaves. Chen Ge was gladdened that he had such a loyal viewer. "Since it has been quite long since my previous livestream, I have something exciting planned this time."

There was silence on the other end of the phone. Chen Ge could hear shuffling footsteps several seconds later. He San seemed to have put on his slippers to run around his bedroom to shake every one of his roommates awake. "It's time to get up to watch the livestream! Yet another bout with death tonight!"

While Chen Ge was thankful for He San's free promotion, but his words did make him feel a bit weirded out.

After hanging up, Chen Ge opened up the video-sharing app. Qin Guang's supernatural livestream was heavily promoted on the front page. He clicked on it for a quick look. It was obvious that a full team was behind this production. There was a professional cameraman, and Qin Guang was only responsible for the analysis and looking for clues. Just the comparison of video quality alone could squish Chen Ge like a bug. He definitely could not fault his opponent for having better preparation.

680,000 views. If I had that many views to promote my Haunted House, wouldn't the whole park be filled the next day?

Livestreams and short videos were Chen Ge's only way of advertisement, and Qin Guang's featured livestream did point a way for Chen Ge. If he could reach Qin Guang's level of popularity, then perhaps one day the platform would be willing to use so many resources to support him.

Chen Ge, don't get too far ahead of yourself for now. Focus on the current goal of surviving tonight first.

He left Qin Guang's livestream and opened his own. He was stranded at the countryside, so his connection was weak. His livestream video was fuzzy, and there were constant black screens and lag. He could not even see the chat.

My video quality might not be as good as Qin Guang's, but my content is definitely better than his...

Since he couldn't see the chat, Chen Ge could not communicate with his viewers. After a brief introduction of Mu Yang High School, he stopped following the livestream. Chen Ge searched through the first floor of the dormitory and came up with nothing, so he moved to the second floor.

"The female dormitory room looks similar to the males'."

The rooms were filled with textbooks and trash. When the school was closed, most of the stuff inside it was not cleared out. Chen Ge looked through the rooms patiently with his flashlight. When he passed through the fourth bedroom on the second floor, he discovered that there were four chairs placed neatly in a row inside the room, and several pieces of white paper as well as a ballpoint pen were placed on one of the chairs.

"The paper and pen look brand new, so they must have been placed inside the room after the school was closed."

This was the second time that Chen Ge had come across the combination of paper and pen. The rusted lock was a mere decoration. Chen Ge merely rattled it several times before it fell away.

As the door opened, the smell of mold hit him like a wave. Chen Ge covered his mouth and nose as he walked closer to the chair to look at the pieces of paper.

There were four white papers in total, the first one read—"When will I die?"

The second read—"How will I die?"

The third read—"Who will be the next to die?"

The fourth was completely empty.

The Pen Spirit game?

Chen Ge ransacked the rest of the room to try to come up with some extra info, but most of the stuff had decayed from time.

Since his investigation turned up nothing, Chen Ge turned his focus back on the white paper in the middle of the room. No one could provide an actual explanation behind the Pen Spirit game, but the scientific community stresses that it was reasons like breathing, heartbeat, and blood flow that caused the human body to shiver. A simple human without special training would have their arm move after maintaining them in a constant, elevated position for a long time. This is a natural bodily reaction that has nothing to do with legends of the Pen Spirit.

Chen Ge placed the phone on the bed and made sure himself and the four chairs were all within view.

Since I need to complete all four side missions at Mu Yang High School, might as well start with this one.

He turned to close the bedroom door. He stood and hesitated for four minutes before sitting down and picking up the ballpoint pen.

Internally, he told himself not to worry. Chen Ge placed the doll in his chest pocket, and with his right hand holding the pen and left hand holding the mallet, he started the game of Pen Spirit.

He tried to remember as many details from the thread that he had read earlier. He raised his arm slightly and straightened the pen so that the tip of the pen touched the white paper. He closed his eyes and started to chant.

“Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, you are my spirit from my previous life, and I am your spirit in this life. If you are with us, please draw a circle on the paper.”

After chanting, Chen Ge tried to make himself calm down. His arm was suspended over the paper, his body frozen.

The rain outside the window continued to fall. The school that was swallowed by the night started to shift imperceptibly.

The moldy smell in the room dispersed, and a cold draft of an unknown origin lifted the white paper on the chair slightly. Not long after that, Chen Ge’s eyes flew open. He had just felt someone grip his hand.

Chen Ge stared closely at his right hand while his left hand tightened over the mallet. He would strike the moment things went wrong.

Chapter 79 - A Chance to Redeem Yourself

Chapter 79: A Chance to Redeem Yourself

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

A weird smell suffused the cramped female bedroom. The bedsheet that was beyond the light of the flashlight fluttered lightly like something was crawling out from underneath it. Rain droplets fell on the window. A storm was brewing outside, but inside the dormitory room, it was eerily quiet.

With his arm hanging over the white paper, Chen Ge tried to make himself relax. After chanting the spell to invoke the Pen Spirit, there was an obvious pressure on the back of his palm like someone had placed their hand over his. Chen Ge could even feel the chills coming from the other person's fingertips.

...

“Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, you are my spirit from my previous life, and I am your spirit in this life. If you are with us, please draw a circle on the paper.”

Chen Ge chanted again, and the feeling of iciness on the back of his hand intensified. However, to his befuddlement, the pen in his grasp remained upright. It did not draw a circle or even do anything.

The Pen Spirit refuses to answer my call?

The atmosphere in the room turned palpable with pressure, and the chill from the back of his hand had now spread to his arm.

For some reason, I feel like a few more individuals have joined me in this room.

Chen Ge focused, and his pupils started to dilate in the dark. Probably due to the Yin Yang Vision, he could see three blurry shadows standing around him with their hands extended to grab the pen in Chen Ge's palm.

Three of you?

Chen Ge's heart skipped a beat, but with a blink, the image that he saw instantly disappeared. However, Chen Ge knew that it did not mean they had left. Chen Ge's palm felt like it had been stuck inside a cold-water bath. He was certain that there were at least three other hands holding the pen in his grasp.

Three 'individuals' answered my call. Is this the effect of my 'Specter's Favored' title?

While Chen Ge was trying to figure out an answer, the pen that hovered over the paper suddenly moved. It was slight, but Chen Ge definitely felt it.

Is it beginning?

The flashlight he placed to his side seemed to have dimmed, and under Chen Ge's close scrutiny, the pen in his grasp started to move. The tip of the pen attached itself to the surface of the paper, and with the friction between the paper and the pen, soon a red circle was drawn.

Chen Ge knew he did not move, but there was indeed a drawing on the paper. Chen Ge stared at the circle, and he was reminded of this side mission's name—The Pen Spirit Who Refused to Leave.

There are three taboos to the Pen Spirit game. One, you mustn't ask about your cause of death; two, you mustn't ask about your life expectancy; three, you have to unbind the spirit when you're done. Violating any one of these will lead to horrible consequences.

The third was the most serious because if the spirit was not unbound, it would stay by the person who had invoked it forever until it turned malevolent and killed all the players.

"Hopefully, there is no accident," Chen Ge murmured before shifting his focus back onto the white paper. The red circle was drawn right in the middle of the paper.

Sounds like it has heard my voice. It's time for me to ask some questions.

Chen Ge was only there to complete the black phone's mission. He did not want to try anything stupid lest he angered the spirit.

It is rare to have summoned the Pen Spirit. Chen Ge thought about it and voiced the question that he most wished to know the answer to. "Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, do you know where my parents are?"

When he did the bathtub Nightmare Mission, the people Chen Ge wanted to meet the most were his parents, but his wish had not been fulfilled. However, this did tell him that at least his parents were still alive. They were merely missing.

Chen Ge did want to know the answer to this question. However, to his surprise, when he posed this question, the pen in his grasp started to quiver, and there was even a faded crack that appeared on the body of the pen.

This was different to what he expected. Is my question that difficult?

Two minutes later, Chen Ge had an uncanny feeling that the room had turned brighter. The pen in his hand started to move again to draw another circle.

What does that mean? Pass? Chen Ge looked at the two circles on the paper, and he could sense the Pen Spirit's awkwardness. It did not know the answer to his question either.

This is weird, but it does sound like my parents' disappearance is more complicated than it appears. Chen Ge was silent for a long time. Other than this question, he really did not have anything that he was that curious about. So be it, I'll just ask a random question just to get this side mission over with.

The chill on his arm had spread to his shoulder. As the game continued, Chen Ge could feel about half of his body starting to get numb like it was slowly escaping his control.

"Then I shall switch to a different question. Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, can you please tell me who my future wife will be?"

The pen quivered, and the flashlight flickered as if announcing the arrival of something. The atmosphere in the room started to get nervous again. The window rattled on its hinges, and droplets of rain seeped into the room. Lightning flashed across the sky, and in that split second, there were four shadows that were reflected on the wall.

Chen Ge felt his hand weaken as the pen in it started to move. Blood red letters appeared on the white paper, and soon, the first character was finished.

"Xu? Is it Xu Wan?" Despite it supposedly being a throwaway question, Chen Ge's interest was piqued. The pen in his hand continued moving, but as it was starting to begin the second character, it suddenly stopped moving.

“What’s going on?”

Chen Ge was a spectator in this whole enterprise. He did not exert any force, but the pen in his grasp began to quiver violently, and more cracks started to form on its surface.

BANG!

Many forces seemed to be fighting within the darkened bedroom. The ballpoint pen finally crumbled under pressure and cracked. One of the forces seemed to have surrendered. Then Chen Ge saw something shocking.

The pen in his grasp crossed out the “Xu” that was already written and wrote down another name beside it!

“Zhang... Ya?”

The name was so perfectly and clearly written on the white paper that Chen Ge did not even know how to respond. “Pen Spirit, are you sure this is the name that you intended to write from the very beginning?”

There was no answer, and the chill on his arm also disappeared. “Pen Spirit, are you still with us? If you can hear me, please draw a circle.”

The feeling of Yin energy had dissipated completely, and the room had returned to normal. It seemed like the Pen Spirit had left without saying goodbye. However, for the sake of security, Chen Ge chanted, “Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, you are my spirit from my previous life, and I am your spirit in this life. If you wish to go, then please go ahead.”

Chen Ge stood up from beside the chair since the game was already over. Once he relinquished his grasp, the ballpoint pen in his grasp split into several sections. The whole thing just looked sad.

My game of Pen Spirit sure is different from others’.

Chen Ge picked up his phone and realized with a start that his livestream’s popularity had surpassed 20,000 views—this was a brand-new record for him.

Chapter 80 - The Fifth Cubicle in the Toilet

Chapter 80: The Fifth Cubicle in the Toilet

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

When did the views surpass 20,000? At the beginning of the livestream, I remember seeing only ten people in the room. Chen Ge raised the phone up to the ceiling, but the signal was still weak. The chat was lagging badly. One moment, he could not even load a single comment, but suddenly, he would be overwhelmed by a ton. He could barely make sense of anything.

20,000 views but less than 5,000 followers, this ratio is a bit lacking.

...

Chen Ge used his phone to snap pictures of the few pieces of paper that had been used in the Pen Spirit game. He then turned the camera to capture the broken ballpoint pen that sat in the middle of the chair. “Dear viewers, can you see this? I have played the Pen Spirit game until the pen itself committed suicide! Aren’t you going to follow me? Do you know how much I’m risking being here? An unknown host like myself, without equipment or a team. I’m here all alone, threading the line of danger. I know my equipment is not that great, and I can’t even interact with you in chat, but I can lead you into the most authentic supernatural experience. This is definitely one of a kind and cannot be copied.”

After giving his speech, the number of followers started to rise. For Chen Ge, he was merely completing the black phone’s mission, but it was a different concern from the viewers’ perspective. Especially in comparison to Qin Guang’s livestream. Even though Chen Ge was lacking in terms of equipment, his content was inimitable, whether from the aspect of danger or spectacle.

The key to a successful livestream was none other than freshness and creativity. Qin Guang’s team relied on a finished script, and they even had an actor to play the part. However, no matter how realistic the actor’s acting was, it would appear forced. However, Chen Ge’s content was very different; even Chen Ge himself did not know what would happen next.

“Thank you for your support. That was the Pen Spirit game, please do not try this at home. Alright, now we shall move onto the next location.” Looking at the popularity that was still rising, Chen Ge was overjoyed. In any case, since he had to finish these missions dispensed by the black phone, why not make use of them fully and convert them into popularity?

I wonder what is happening inside the chatroom, but a rising popularity is a good thing. At least my risk of coming here tonight is not going to waste. The easy completion of the first side mission gave Chen Ge a boost of confidence. He put on his raincoat and left the dormitory. He had done everything he could there, so there was no point in staying.

There are three side missions left: the Sealed Classroom, the Deep Well, and the Fifth Cubicle in the Toilet.

The Fifth Cubicle in the Toilet appeared to be inside the education block. Chen Ge had been to the dormitory’s toilets, and they only had four cubicles. If the office building’s layout was similar to the dormitory’s, then only the education block’s toilets fit the mission description.

Chen Ge glanced at his phone. He had arrived at Mu Yang High School at 8 pm. Technically, the Pen Spirit game should not have taken too long, but the time showed that it was now almost 9 pm.

There are three hours left until midnight. One hour for each mission, should be fine. Chen Ge’s plan was to finish all the side missions as soon as possible and find a corner to hide in until dawn arrived.

When he stood before the education block again, Chen Ge had a weird feeling that the thing that sat before him was not an abandoned building but a giant coffin that housed plenty of dead bodies.

The side mission did not specify the exact location of the toilet. There are three stories to this block, and this means that any one of the toilets on the three levels could be my mission location. Chen Ge turned on his flashlight and entered the building.

Passing through empty classrooms at night caused Chen Ge’s skin to crawl. He was afraid that once he turned, he would see something that shouldn’t exist inside the classroom. He rushed toward the end of the corridor and entered the first floor’s toilet.

The place was spared from the fire and the interior remained the same as it was several years ago. The flooring was cracked and weeds could be seen peeking through the cracks. There were a brownish stain on the wall and the sole window in the room was creaking eerily.

“Focus on the mission, there’s no time to waste.”

All of the toilets inside the education block had 6 cubicles. Years of abandonment meant that most of cubicle doors were broken and Chen Ge could look into the cubicles without even opening the door.

With the mallet in his hand, Chen Ge walked past the six cubicles. The earlier four cubicles had nothing wrong about them but the fifth and sixth cubicles caught his attention. The doors to these two cubicles were shut and with a slight push, Chen Ge realized with a start that they were locked.

Normally, the door is locked only because someone is occupying the cubicle. However, that could not be true here. The school has been abandoned for three years already. Even if something is occupying the cubicles, it cannot be ‘human’. In any case, I’d better take a closer look.

Chen Ge smashed at the sixth door with his mallet, and the door fell open. Before Chen Ge could react, several dark shadows charged at him.

“What is that?” He jumped back to avoid them. He shone his flashlight at his ‘assailant’, and Chen Ge was embarrassed to realize it was merely the cleaning equipment. After recovering from the fake scare, Chen Ge picked the mops and brooms off the floor and shoved them back into the cubicle. He found the same thing in the next cubicle. All six of the cubicles on the first floor were normal, which meant that his mission venue was on another floor.

After exiting the toilet, Chen Ge looked over with shoulder with uncertainty. The cubicle doors creaked on their hinges like people waving at him.

This would create quite a scary effect inside the Haunted House. Chen Ge made a mental note to remember this for the future and headed up the stairs to the second floor. It had the same layout as the first-floor toilet, but the window was boarded up. Once Chen Ge stepped into the space, he felt weirdly pressured.

This should be the place then.

Probably because the window was boarded up, the toilet was better preserved than the first floor one; there was not much change compared to how it was several years ago. He walked to the first cubicle, and before even pushing the door open, he heard footsteps coming from the corridor outside.

However, due to the interruption from the rain, he could not really tell for sure. Is someone running in the corridor?

He hid in a corner of the toilet and raised his mallet in a guarded posture in case someone decided to rush into the room. Nothing like that happened.

As time moves toward midnight, the school is slowly starting to change, like it is coming alive. Looks like I will need to pick up my pace. Chen Ge stopped hesitating and pushed open the first four cubicles in one go. When he stood before the fifth cubicle, the footsteps in the corridor started again, and he heard it clearly this time. There were two sets of footsteps.

The mission description for the Fifth Cubicle in the Toilet stated that a red shadow would appear at midnight, was that it?

Chapter 81 - Children

Chapter 81: Children

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

However, the mission was described in first person, stating that someone hid themselves in the fifth cubicle to capture the red shadow that appeared at midnight. However, what happened next was an unknown, leaving Chen Ge plenty of room to imagine.

He switched off the flashlight and thought to himself, The mission states that a red shadow will appear in the toilet at midnight, but the footsteps clearly show that there were two people walking side by side. Could it be that the red shadow has found a new friend in the years that it was trapped in this abandoned school?

...

The footsteps were slowly approaching the second-floor toilet. Following the mission requirement, Chen Ge should hide inside the fifth cubicle, but Chen Ge felt that was too dangerous. He would have effectively trapped himself.

Perhaps I should act more proactively. Chen Ge hid behind the toilet door, and no matter who it was, he would start by whacking them on their head. Chen Ge took a deep breath before holding it in and raising the mallet above his head.

The footsteps became clearer and clearer. It sounded like two individuals running side by side. They were dangerously close to the second-floor bathroom. The wait was real torture for Chen Ge. He had no idea what was outside and had even less of a clue what they were planning to do. All he could do was make himself as silent as possible.

Several seconds later, the footsteps finally stopped before the toilet entrance.

Here they come!

Chen Ge's hand that gripped the mallet had started to sweat, and his heart was racing at an impossible rate. The storm continued to brew outside, and the rain seeped into the room, wetting the toilet floor.

Where are they? Chen Ge turned to look over his shoulder. There were no human faces staring down at him like he had expected. His patience was wearing thin. With one hand on the door knob, he prepared to lean out to take a look. However, before he could do that, a flash of lightning tore apart the sky, and utilizing the temporary brightness, Chen Ge saw two shadows reflected on the toilet floor.

They're standing at the entrance!

His body froze, and since his flashlight had already been switched off, he could see nothing in the darkness of the toilet.

The shadows were short, like two children.

He did not dare to let his guard down. After waiting for several seconds, the footsteps resumed. However, unlike what he had expected, the owners of the footstep did not enter the toilet but went down the staircase next to it and down to the first floor.

Leaving just like that? Chen Ge slowly moved out from behind the door. He turned to look at the entrance, and there was nothing there.

The thing that stood at the door earlier felt like two children. This is different from the red shadow described by the black phone. Is this because too much time has passed since then, or did my early arrival at the school mess up the schedule?

Chen Ge could not figure out the answer. Switching the flashlight back on, Chen Ge wandered over to the fifth cubicle. Regardless, he had to inspect the cubicle to see whether it was the actual mission venue. The door opened to reveal an old yet completely normal space.

Based on the situation thus far, the mission venue should be in the third-floor toilet. The two children from earlier have run down to the first floor, so this is the perfect chance. Chen Ge turned to walk out the toilet. Before he reached the threshold, his phone rang. It was an unknown caller.

Whose number is this? Chen Ge did not have many friends, and the few he had would not normally contact him. After a brief hesitation, Chen Ge retreated to the corner and exited the livestream to answer the phone. "Hello?"

"Are you Ru Xue's classmate? I hear you came across a strange boy whom you suspect is suffering from a psychological problem?" The voice on the other end of the phone had a gravity to it. It exuded an air of confidence.

“I did, and you are?”

“I am Ru Xue’s father.” He San did mention giving Chen Ge’s phone number to Gao Ru Xue earlier. Looks like this senior of his did things with efficiency.

“Do you mind telling me about the boy in greater detail?

Psychological illness is not unlike a venom inside one’s body. If one does not remove it as soon as possible, it might ruin that boy’s future.” Gao Ru Xue’s father was familiar with the potential danger of psychological problems. From his perspective, a psychological illness could be more dangerous than many physical illnesses.

“There is this boy about seven or eight. He’s physically fine, but he appears to have withdrawn from the world; he refuses to interact with others and is afraid of sunlight.”

“Are there any other symptoms? If possible, can you give me them in detail?”

“I met this boy at the entrance of a Haunted House park attraction. His aunt told me that the boy likes to spend time inside Haunted Houses. Normal emotions that one should experience inside a Haunted House like fear and anxiety were missing from the boy. In fact, he appeared to be more comfortable in the darkness than under the sunlight. It gave me the impression that darkened corners give him a sense of security.” Chen Ge voiced the speculation that he had. If he had not met the child in person, he would not have believed that such a curious boy existed.

“A boy of seven or eight who likes to visit Haunted Houses? And doesn’t feel afraid?”

“Yes, the boy even showed interest in the actor who was in a dead person’s make-up.”

There was silence on the other end of the phone for a few seconds. “If it is just a lack of fear, it could be autism, which could be responsible for the damage to the amygdala of his brain.”

“I’m sorry, but I don’t think I understand.”

“To put it simply, the amygdala is the central nervous system where memory is processed and stored. It is also responsible for the production of emotions like rage and fear. If one's amygdala is damaged, even if facing a lion or viper, one wouldn't be afraid, much less being scared inside a Haunted House."

Gao Ru Xue's father had a point, but Chen Ge still felt the description did not quite fit Fan Yu's conditions. "Doctor Gao, it is by no means that the boy is not afraid of anything. For one, he is afraid of sunlight and hates walking under the sun. Also, he was not only unafraid of the Haunted House, he liked the environment inside it. It felt like he was a completely different boy inside and outside of the Haunted House."

Chen Ge thought about it before adding, "He was completely silent when he was outside the Haunted House and refused to have interaction with others, but he was energized when inside the Haunted House. When it was time to leave, his refusal to leave was vehement, and I saw him injure his aunt with my own eyes."

"Listening to your description, it might also be a sign of bipolar disorder, highly destructive and irrational when angered but highly individualistic and retreats into his own world when depressed." Teacher Gao shared his analysis with Chen Ge. "But one point still eludes me. Patients with bipolar disorder might be triggered at any given moment, and there shouldn't be a clear trigger like being inside or outside a Haunted House. My personal opinion is that since the boy's attitude change is related to Haunted Houses, then the source of his problem should be related to a Haunted House as well. Did he suffer from any trauma inside a Haunted House when he was young? Or did his parents work at a Haunted House?"

After hearing the analysis from Gao Ru Xue's father, a speculation appeared in Chen Ge's mind.

The boy's changes in personality happened inside his Haunted House, and the biggest difference his Haunted House had compared to others was that his Haunted House was really haunted.

Chapter 82 - The Only Witness

Chapter 82: The Only Witness

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Fan Yu likes to visit Haunted Houses because he likes the company of ghosts? Chen Ge came to this unlikely answer after listening to all of Teacher Gao's reasoning.

"I don't dare diagnose this patient so easily. If you have time, you can bring him to see me." Teacher Gao also had not come across such a patient before, and he wished to inspect him in person. "Psychological illnesses are very complicated, and there are too many uncertainties to their causes. It could be related to the boy's living environment, personal trauma, or even genetic inheritance."

...

Chen Ge did not answer. When he came up with the conclusion that Fan Yu liked the company of ghosts, an extremely scary thought cropped up in his mind!

He peeled open his raincoat to retrieve Fan Yu's drawing from inside his pocket. The black house and the red little humans.

Before arriving at Mu Yang High School, Chen Ge had assumed that this referred to one of the buildings at the school, but none of the building there fitted Fan Yu's drawing. If anything, the squat dilapidated room shared by Fan Yu and his aunt had a closer resemblance to the drawing.

If Fan Yu is really drawing about the house he's living in and these red people... Even the hairs on Chen Ge's arms stood on end. Fan Yu's house is filled with ghosts?

He was reminded of the scene when he went to visit Fan Yu that morning. The aunt had been incredibly worried while Fan Yu locked himself up in his bedroom with the door and window closed, his head lowered, fully focused on his drawing.

Every time, he only used the two colors, red and black. All of his drawings were about a black house and red people, but each drawing had a slight difference. Chen Ge's lips paled. He clearly remembered that the position of the red people was different in every drawing.

He had originally thought that was Fan Yu just scribbling, but now thinking back, they represented the dirty things moving inside the house.

Fan Yu can see them?

Chen Ge sucked in a cold breath, and more details from when Fan Yu was inside his Haunted House continued to surface. When Chen Ge was talking to the little boy, the latter had kept looking behind Chen Ge, especially at his shadow.

Fan Yu had said two sentences inside the Haunted House, and both of them had been directed at Chen Ge. At the time, Chen Ge had assumed that the kid had taken a liking to him, but now he realized that the boy probably treated him as kindred spirit.

No wonder he's afraid of sunlight and likes to visit Haunted House. The boy's perception has been seriously twisted. Chen Ge gripped the phone tightly. He did not know why Fan Yu had turned out that way, but the boy's various curious actions and the testimony from the woman had led Chen Ge to a scary speculation.

In a similarly rainy night a few years ago, the boy had disappeared. Tragedy had befallen his parents after they went to look for him. To be able to kill two grown adults and deal with their bodies and crime scene on a stormy night required plenty of careful planning and preparation.

Although, viewing this from another perspective, if someone did have the intention to harm Fan Yu's parents, why would a killer with the ability to hide the bodies perfectly and clear their every trace from the crime scene let Fan Yu go?

When his aunt told Fan Yu that his parents had gone to heaven, Fan Yu had examined the well closely because he said that heaven was inside the well. This meant that he knew his parents' bodies were inside the well. He had seen everything—he was one of the witnesses—so the killer had no reason to let him live.

Chen Ge narrowed his eyes slightly as a chill coursed through his body. That is unless the killer knew the boy or was the boy himself!

Regardless of which one it was, either possibility made Chen Ge's heart cold with fear.

The aunt herself was also a prime suspect. There were way too many plot holes in her story, and when she supposedly went into the kitchen to pour water for Chen Ge, she should not have wasted so much time in there. Then, during the conversation, and even before he left, she had kept reminding Chen Ge to take a sip of the water.

At the time, Chen Ge had been too focused on his mission to be careful of her 'kindness', but thinking back, he suspected that something had been done to that glass of water.

If it was the aunt who killed Fan Yu's parents, what was her motive? The woman loved Fan Yu to the extent of pampering him. She was blessed with beauty but did not seem to keep up her appearances. It was obvious that it was not easy for her to raise Fan Yu alone. She even spared no expenses to take him to see many doctors. She had put her whole life on hold for Fan Yu's sake, would such a kind woman really be the killer?

To be honest, the thin woman had left a good impression on Chen Ge; he thought she was independent and strong.

Then again, if she was not the killer, then the next prime suspect would be the boy himself!

He was the crime's only witness and survivor. Chen Ge did not suspect him initially because he was just a child, but after knowing the secret behind his drawings, Chen Ge realized he had greatly underestimated this child.

Fan Yu had a pair of unique eyes, and his constant company was only ghosts. He was not scared by their presence but, in fact, managed to survive just fine. Chen Ge even suspected that he had the ability to control them.

This would sound preposterous to others, but not to Chen Ge because he himself was the Specter's Favored.

But if the boy is the killer, what was his motive? This was the question that stumped Chen Ge the most. Neither the boy nor the aunt had any actual reason to murder their close family.

What really happened on that day? Fan Yu's parents were ultimately dropped inside Mu Yang High School's well, but why Mu Yang High School of all places?

When Chen Ge placed the drawing back inside his pocket, he realized that the call was still connected, so he immediately apologized to Doctor Gao. "I'm so sorry, my attention was otherwise distracted."

"No worries, I was just flipping through the journals to find out more about the patient. In fact, I'm really interested in his case. Do you mind bringing him to see me when there's an opportunity?" Gao Ru Xue's father had not hung up; he had waited patiently for Chen Ge.

"Of course, should the opportunity arise, we will definitely visit you."

"Thank you, this number is my personal number, so call me when you're coming. Lastly, I have something to remind you." Teacher Gao sounded like he was hesitating on the phone, as if he was deciding whether he should say something or not.

"What is it?" Chen Ge was appreciative of any advice from this kind doctor.

"The way to treat a patient is with plenty of patience, but it is undeniable that serious patients carry with them a certain degree of threat. When you are in their company, please remember to try not to incite them."

Chapter 83 - How Do I Complete This Mission?

Chapter 83: How Do I Complete This Mission?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“For the sake of the child’s future recovery and your personal safety, please be careful.”

“I understand.”

...

After hanging up the phone, Chen Ge leaned against the toilet’s wall. His mind was a clotted mess. If the killer was not Fan Yu, then it had to be Fan Yu’s aunt. They were the prime suspects but also the victims’ closest family.

In any case, it is certain that Fan Yu’s aunt is hiding something from me. Something else must have happened that rainy night several years ago.

Their closest family turning into their killer, this was a mystery that stumped Chen Ge.

The crime scene was at Mu Yang High School, perhaps I can find some clues here.

Chen Ge reopened the livestream. The chat was still lagging, but at least the footage had gotten much clearer. After apologizing quickly to his viewers, Chen Ge walked out of the second-floor toilet with his mallet in hand. He stood at the door and waved his flashlight at the floor—there was not anything like footprints.

When I was hiding behind the toilet door earlier, I really did hear footsteps. They stopped before the toilet entrance, but the lack of footprints suggests that the owners of the footsteps are not living humans. Chen Ge glanced down the stairs. Last he heard, the sets of footsteps did head downstairs.

Chen Ge was unsure whether the footsteps belonged to the red shadow mentioned in the mission or not, but for the sake of safety, he decided to avoid it for now. Brandishing his flashlight, Chen Ge headed up to the third floor. However, when he was at the landing between second and third floor, the sound of footsteps reverberated in his ears again.

They seemed to be coming from the first floor. Two ‘people’ standing side by side were heading upstairs.

Have they discovered me? Chen Ge immediately switched off his flashlight, stuck his back to the wall, and stared closely at the mouth of the staircase.

The footsteps did not stop, and they walked onto the second floor.

It sounds like they’re heading into the second-floor toilet? Just as this thought crossed Chen Ge’s mind, the sound of cubicle doors being opened appeared beside his ears.

The cubicle doors were opened one after another, six times. They seemed to be checking the toilet cubicles. Chen Ge leaned closer to the railing and tried to poke his head out to take a closer look at the situation on the second floor.

After the cubicle doors stopped moving so did the footsteps. It appeared like everything Chen Ge had heard earlier was part of his imagination. He waited for five minutes on the stairs but could not hear any weird sounds coming from the second-floor toilet anymore.

The lack of footsteps means that the walking spirits are now inside the toilet. They’re probably hiding in one of the cubicles, waiting to ambush me. Chen Ge might have a powerful heart, but it did not mean that he had no fear. A surprise from inside the toilet cubicle would probably scare him quite a bit.

Since the spirit is now hiding inside the second-floor toilet, it’s the perfect opportunity for me to check out the third floor. Chen Ge did not turn on his flashlight. Thanks to the Yin Yang Vision, the reward he had received from completing a Nightmare Mission, even though it was not as magical as described by the black phone, it did greatly improve his sight, enabling him to see better than most at night.

In the darkened night, thunder flashed occasionally across the sky, giving Chen Ge a temporary glimpse of his surroundings. It created an eerie atmosphere. He feared that one of the lightning flashes might enable him to see things that he did not want to.

Chen Ge looked left and right several times as he stood at the entrance to the third-floor toilet. There was nothing in sight, so Chen Ge stepped into the toilet.

The third floor's toilet was even more curious than the ones on the first and second floors. The window was boarded up, and the walls were unstained. The place seemed to have been abandoned even before the school was closed down.

All six cubicles were closed, giving Chen Ge a strange feeling that every single of them was hiding a scary surprise. The fifth and sixth cubicles in the first-floor toilet were closed because they were storage rooms for cleaning supplies. Could that be the case again?

Chen Ge walked to the first cubicle and leaned toward the door. There was no sound coming from within, definitely no crying of babies or giggles of girls like he had anticipated. Then, he did something even braver. He knelt on the floor and peered through the bottom opening.

Empty?

There were no random items like mops or brooms, nor was there a pair of legs; it was just a normal cubicle.

Chen Ge tried pushing the door, and it opened easily. The cubicle was extremely clean. If not for the layer of dust on every surface, he would have believed that this place was cleaned daily.

The whole education block looks like it was burned down in a fire, but this toilet shows no signs of burning—this is similar to that classroom on the first floor. This similarity attracted Chen Ge's attention. That basically confirms that this is my mission venue.

He pushed open the other cubicles before stopping at the fifth.

I have a very bad feeling. Could there be a nasty surprise waiting for me behind this door? Chen Ge patted the doll inside his shirt pocket and used his mallet to shove the door open.

The door fell open, and when he saw what was inside the cubicle, Chen Ge took an involuntary step back. Drawings of eyes covered every surface inside the fifth cubicle, their sizes similar to actual human eyes.

Before opening the door, Chen Ge had tried to envision what could appear behind the door—perhaps it might be pale-faced girl or a scary monster or madman covered with blood—but he definitely did not anticipate this.

Why are there so many eyes on the walls and boards?

This creepy discovery sent a chill down Chen Ge's spine. He felt like there were innumerable eyes looking at him. His legs were shaking as he stood outside the cubicle; one could imagine how unsettling it would be inside.

Which psycho did this and why?

The pairs of eyes felt like they were peeping on the people inside the cubicle. Shuddering, Chen Ge hurriedly closed the door again. It felt very unsettling being stared at by so many pairs of eyes even though they were mere drawings.

I've found the mission venue, but how am I supposed to find this quest? Hide inside the cubicle with all the eyes staring at me while waiting for the red shadow to arrive? Isn't that asking for a bit too much?

Chen Ge stared at the cubicle for a long time before moving to the sixth cubicle. He found the same drawing of eyes inside the sixth cubicle.

However, different from the fifth cubicle, the eyes in the sixth cubicle were only drawn on the wall and partition that was shared with the fifth cubicle; the other walls were completely clean.

Chapter 84 - It's Time

Chapter 84: It's Time

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge was weirded out by the single painted wall in the sixth cubicle. He returned to the fourth cubicle, and he was right; there were no doodles in the fourth cubicle. Could it be a mere prank from the students? But why did they pick the fifth cubicle? It's not the first one or the last one.

To get to the truth, Chen Ge returned to the sixth cubicle. He hesitated before walking into it. The water pipes all ran through the sixth cubicle, so the space was much smaller compared to the other cubicles.

...

There's nothing worth noting here. Do I need to enter the fifth cubicle for the mission to progress? Chen Ge looked at the eyes on the wall before raising his finger to lightly touch them.

They look scary, but they're just drawings. He was locked in a staring match with the eyes on the wall for a long time. The fourth cubicle is normal; the drawings are only in the fifth and sixth cubicle. This partition is unique because it's covered with drawing of the eyes on both sides...

Something slowly clicked in Chen Ge's mind. He used his finger to slowly move through every drawing on the wall. When his finger touched one of the eyes that was next to his knees, Chen Ge's expression shifted.

It is as I predicted! He squatted down and flashed some light on the partition. Underneath his finger was a peephole the size of a human pupil. A small hole had been gauged into the wall. Since its size was similar to an actual pupil and it was hiding in the corner, it was difficult to discover.

All the other eyes are to hide this single peephole. As Chen Ge looked at the peephole in the wall, he felt weirdly unsettled. The peephole connects the fifth and sixth cubicles, meaning someone once used this peephole to spy on the person inside the fifth cubicle from the sixth cubicle!

Who would have thought of the many eyes that surrounded the walls, one of them would be real?

Since the pipes are gathered in the sixth cubicle, as long as the Peeping Tom climbed on top of the pipes, he wouldn't be discovered even if someone peeked in from underneath the door. The man had it all thought out.

Being looked at in the dark made Chen Ge feel very uncomfortable.

Thinking about the mission description, the person that hid in the fifth cubicle was the victim of the Peeping Tom, which could be the red shadow.

Now that the secret of the fifth cubicle has been solved, how do I complete the mission? Do I have to stay inside the fifth cubicle for the red shadow to spy on me? Chen Ge waved the mallet in the air. If that was supposed to happen, he would not mind smashing the red shadow's eye blind.

Just as Chen Ge was trying to figure out how to complete the mission, the set of footsteps started again in the corridor, and they were speeding toward the third floor!

What's happening? The footsteps are more urgent than before. Is it because I opened the fifth cubicle? But that does not sound right. I opened the cubicle much earlier, so why are they rushing over now?

Before he could come up with an answer, the footsteps had already arrived at the third floor. Chen Ge was standing inside the sixth cubicle, so his only choice was to step into the cubicle and close the door. The moment he did, the footsteps entered the third-floor bathroom.

Finally, the time has come.

Chen Ge switched off his flashlight and raised his mallet. However, what happened next completely surprised him. After the footsteps entered the toilet, the being did not check the cubicle one after another but headed for the fifth cubicle directly. After the door of the cubicle next to him was closed, the toilet suddenly became very quiet.

They're just beside me, but isn't the order a bit messed up? According to the mission requirement, it should be me inside the fifth cubicle, right?

The silence persisted. After the owners of the footsteps entered the fifth cubicle, there were no more sounds. After waiting for another ten minutes, Chen Ge's interest in the 'person' next door was slowly piqued. He glanced at the peephole on the wall before squatting down and leaned toward it.

The black peephole seemed to have a magical attraction, drawing Chen Ge closer to it.

On the other end of the peephole was not a bloodshot eye or a red shadow but two kids about the age of three or four. The boy and the girl hid themselves beside the toilet, holding each other's hands. They looked intensely worried.

Shouldn't it be a red shadow? Where did these two kids come from? Chen Ge pulled his gaze back. The two children next door could not be described with the word scary.

Another side mission related to the well mentions a brother and sister. Since the deep well is related to Fan Yu, could these two be the aunt's son and daughter? But why would they appear here? And they look like they are being chased by something.

A series of questions appeared in his mind. Chen Ge gripped the mallet tightly. If his opponent was these two children, he had confidence he could win.

I should wait a little longer. I have a feeling that things aren't that simple.

The night darkened, and suddenly, the silence in the third floor toilet was shattered by a new set of footsteps that came from the corridor. Chen Ge pulled the cubicle door open a sliver and looked out. When the footsteps stopped at the toilet entrance, a faded red shadow was reflected on the tiles on the toilet wall.

It's finally here!

Chen Ge's mission target had finally arrived. He did not dare to breathe as his eyes were staring at the door. The sound of footsteps became clearer, signifying that the red shadow had entered the third-floor toilet.

Creak...

The first cubicle's door was pulled open, and Chen Ge saw a blurry red shadow poke its head into the cubicle. It stopped for a long time before moving to the second cubicle.

This was the first time in his life that Chen Ge felt the sound of door opening was so grating. Very soon, the doors to the second, third, and fourth cubicles were pulled open, and the red shadow stopped before the fifth cubicle.

Watching this unfold, Chen Ge tensed up. His body was like a pressed spring, about to explode at any moment.

If he had followed the mission's instructions, he would have been the one inside the fifth cubicle, and what the red shadow was about to do inside the fifth cubicle would be the thing that should have happened to him.

In the silent and dark toilet, the red shadow gripped the door of the fifth cubicle and slowly pulled it open.

The room felt like it had turned darker. Children's cries and laughter appeared from the cubicle next door. The red shadow stood at the door but did not go in. It looked left and right before moving to the last cubicle.

Chapter 85 - I Should Be Afraid!

Chapter 85: I Should Be Afraid!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

From the sliver of the door that was left ajar, Chen Ge saw the red shadow stop before the sixth cubicle. There was just a thin partition between them. Time seemed to have slowed down for the imminent confrontation.

Several seconds later, the red shadow leaned toward the door, and at the same time, Chen Ge raised his mallet. Chen Ge watched as the red shadow made contact with the door. As the door creaked open, every muscle in Chen Ge's body tensed.

...

Before the door was completely opened, the red shadow had started to phase through the door. Facing the dangerous threat, Chen Ge's survival instinct caused him to smash his mallet on the red shadow, and in the same motion, he aimed a strong kick at the door!

Bang!

The decrepit cubicle door understandably could not withstand his assault. It flew off its hinges and slammed into the red shadow, which did not even have the chance to evade. The red shadow did not anticipate this, and its body started to blur as it rolled on the floor. Then it ran out of the toilet.

Chen Ge gasped greedily for air. He had expected a fierce battle, but his opponent appeared to have a much weaker heart than he had anticipated. Chen Ge's sudden appearance seemed to have spooked it.

Has the thing forgotten its ghostly identity? Chen Ge did not relax as he gripped the mallet tightly. After the red shadow made its escape, children's crying drifted out from the fifth cubicle. The two kids, who Chen Ge assumed to be the woman's children, were still inside the toilet.

"Stop crying!" This was a common trope in scary movies. A creepy sound of tears that came from inside the toilet, it should have been scary, but with an angry warning from Chen Ge, the children's crying really did stop.

He blocked the entrance of the fifth cubicle angrily. The two children had their hands over their lips, their pale faces filled with fear.

"Why are you two acting like the victims?"

Chen Ge's emotions were a bit out of control from the intense confrontation with the red shadow. His loud voice combined with the dangerous-looking mallet scared the two kids in the cubicle. They held each other's hands as they half-crawled, half-ran out of the toilet.

Was I being a bit too harsh there?

The two children could very well be Fan Yu's brother and sister. Whether it was for the deep well mission or to investigate the disappearance of Fan Yu's parents, he had to follow the two children. The two kids ran very fast while Chen Ge chased after them. They soon left the education block and entered the office building next to it.

Chen Ge followed closely behind them. When he got onto the second floor, the two kids suddenly disappeared.

Where did they go?

The interior of the office building was different from the two other buildings at Mu Yang High School; the whole building had been spared from the fire, and it was much cleaner.

Chen Ge pushed open a random door and peeked in. The room had two tables and a bookshelf. There was flower pot sitting on the window sill.

They disappeared in the blink of an eye, where could they be hiding?

After walking deeper into the room, Chen Ge noticed a faded plaque lying on the floor. It read 'Mathematics'.

All of the mathematics classes at Mu Yang High School were held in this one small room?

Chen Ge soon realized why. After all, Mu Yang High School did not have that many students; they could easily fit into one room. Also, fewer students meant a smaller number of teachers; this room was probably the office for the Mathematics teacher as well.

He took a cursory look around the room. He discovered a rotten school bag inside the drawer of one of the tables. The bag was tiny and had cartoon prints on it.

Chen Ge placed it on the table and opened the zipper. There was a cartoon coloring book and a box of crayons inside.

Why would these things be inside the Mathematics teacher's office?

The contents of the school bag did not seem to be for high school students. Chen Ge surmised that the school bag probably belonged to the Mathematics teacher's child, and the bag had been left behind for some reason.

After opening the crayon box, Chen Ge realized that every color was there except red and black. Chen Ge was immediately reminded of Fan Yu. After flipping through the coloring book, Chen Ge's suspicion was further confirmed. All of the pages had the same drawing, a black house with two red small human figures.

All of the drawings' backgrounds were the black house, but the position of the red people changed every time. Chen Ge pulled out Fan Yu's drawing from his pocket and placed it beside the coloring book. The comparison caused him to suck a light breath. At least the boy's painting style has remained the same after all these years.

The drawings had given Chen Ge plenty of useful information. The rotten school bag and the spider webs that filled the drawer meant that the bag had been shoved inside the drawer way before Mu Yang High School was closed down.

This meant that the boy had started to draw ghosts from a young age. His pair of eyes had probably been like that since birth. If the black house in the painting was his home, then starting from several years ago, two ghosts had been residing in the boy's home.

Relating it to the aunt's testimony and what Chen Ge had seen earlier, the two ghosts were most likely the aunt's children.

After living together for so long, the aunt must know that Fan Yu has a special vision. Chen Ge looked at the two red and black drawings. It is because she knew that she was so willing to bring Fan Yu to the Haunted House. She probably pampers Fan Yu thusly because she is channeling her love for three children into that one boy.

The appearance of Fan Yu's school bag also told Chen Ge another thing; this room likely belonged to Fan Yu's father. He was Mu Yang High School's Mathematics teacher.

From the conversation with Fan Yu's aunt, Chen Ge knew that Fan Yu's father had been fired from another school due to drinking. However, Fan Yu's aunt added that other schools rejected Fan Yu's father, and he had nowhere else to turn to, which was why he had ended up at Mu Yang High School.

This made Chen Ge curious. What kind of mistake had Fan Yu's father made after drinking that would make him blacklisted from the entire school district and be shown the door by normal schools?

At the time, Chen Ge had wanted to ask, but the topic had quickly been pushed aside by Fan Yu's aunt when she pulled out the mysterious photo.

What kind of person was the missing father like? Chen Ge drummed the mallet on the table in thought. He continued to look through the room and finally found several paper notes inside an abandoned book on the bookshelf.

"Teacher Fan, we know what you did in the sixth cubicle of the third floor's female toilets. We demand that you apologize to the girl immediately! And get out of this school!"

"You have two nights to come to a decision. We want an open apology!"

"This is your last night. If you insist on staying at this school, then you shall stay here forever."

Chapter 86 - The Last Classroom

Chapter 86: The Last Classroom

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The Peeping Tom is Fan Yu's father? Chen Ge never would have imagined that if he had not read the paper notes. Looks like I was right. Fan Yu's aunt has been hiding something crucial from me.

When Chen Ge was trying to deduce the killer earlier, he had been missing a crucial element, a motive. The notes had provided him with a new line of enquiry.

...

There are three notes, and they have different handwriting. This means that at least three people knew about Teacher Fan's dirty secret. Chen Ge did not touch the notes inside the book. The paper was fragile from the passage of time, and he was afraid that his touch might ruin the key evidence.

The handwriting on the paper is very clear. Teacher Fan kept these three notes probably to find the students by comparing the handwriting. After all, Mu Yang High School is small; with the convenience of being a member of staff, three days would have been more than enough time to inspect the handwriting of all the students at this school.

Chen Ge memorized the contents of the notes. To be honest, he was rather curious as to how the three students discovered the secret of the cubicle. Were they all victims? But that does not seem like that from the tone of the notes, especially the last one—If you insist on staying at this school, then you shall stay here forever. That definitely doesn't sound like something a victim would say.

The message communicated by the three notes was extremely clear, but their demand sounded rather juvenile to Chen Ge. The correct solution to deal with people like Fan Yu's father was to report to the police and not ask for something like a public apology. If anything, the exposure of the incident might exacerbate the situation, for it might cause further trauma to the victim.

The content of these notes does sound like they came from students, could they be the ones who tossed Teacher Fan into the well?

Chen Ge had the motive, but the timing was all wrong. There were two adults who disappeared that night. To be able to kill two adults and deal with their bodies without leaving any trace behind did not sound like something that was achievable for several teenage students.

I must have missed something. Chen Ge tried to look at the situation from Teacher Fan's perspective. An open apology was definitely out of question. If this thing was exposed, his life would be ruined. He already had a record before coming to Mu Yang High School, and the punishment for repeat offender would be serious.

Fan Yu's father knew about that; it was why he had kept those paper notes. He had probably planned to sniff out the students who had threatened him and deal with them personally, but from the result, it seemed like his three-day search came up with nothing.

Here's the conclusion of everything I've found so far. These three notes came from different studies, but even after comparing the handwriting of the students at this school, Fan Yu's father came up with nothing. These three students discovered the secret of the sixth cubicle, but instead of reporting it to the police, they adopted the method that had the least effect and would easily expose them, which was to threaten Teacher Fan directly. Lastly, the warning on the final note did come true.

These three points made zero sense to Chen Ge. To summarize, three students who could not be discovered found out about Teacher Fan's Peeping Tom habit and, after their warning failed, made Teacher Fan disappear.

Individual who fits these three criteria basically doesn't exist. However, Chen Ge already had quite a good idea about who the killer was, but he was still uncertain.

The notes also mention a girl whom they want Fan Yu's father to apologize to. If I can find her, then many problems will be solved.

After recording everything with his camera, Chen Ge shut the book and placed it back where it had been.

If I did not stay to look through the drawers, I wouldn't have discovered these notes that are enclosed inside the book. Looks like to solve any mystery, everything starts with the details.

Chen Ge exited the mathematics room and went through the other rooms but came up with nothing.

It's already 10:30 pm. There won't be enough time to complete the remaining two side missions if I continue to slug like this. Chen Ge exited the office with the flashlight. He searched the school ground for the well but could not find anything like that even after a one-hour search in the rain.

Where could this well be? The black phone cannot possibly be mistaken! Chen Ge's pants and shoes were drenched, and he looked positively haggard.

There only half an hour left until midnight; I'll need to leave the well mission and find shelter. Chen Ge lowered his head to hide from the rain as he walked toward the education building. He wanted to reach the sealed classroom before midnight. If the mission was too difficult, the plan was to give up.

Chen Ge's boots felt heavy from the water and every step left a clear footprint on the floor. After entering the education block, Chen Ge headed directly for the sealed classroom. Looking from outside the window, the single table in the middle of the room that had the textbook, pen, and paper on it did look weird.

It looks stranger than I expected.

Mu Yang High School had originally been a crematorium. Chen Ge read from the online threads that the sealed classroom was exactly the location of the crematorium's former morgue. It had powerful Yin energy, and that was why the headmaster had kept the classroom sealed.

Some said a school bus ran into a huge accident when they were out on a school trip. Many people died, but the spirits of the students still came back to school. The headmaster had to leave this classroom open to accommodate them.

The last explanation was the most inspiring. Before Mu Yang High School was closed, the school was the worst school in Jiujiang. Their collective score was always first... counting from the bottom. To improve this situation, some of the staff suggested arranging the classes according to their results, the worse the result, the further to the back their class would be. However, this suggestion was vetoed by the headmaster, and he sealed the classroom to tell the students that no one was born in the last place and labelling them as such would be a horrible mistake.

There were many other rumors about the sealed classroom at Mu Yang High School, but Chen Ge could only remember these three, which were most discussed.

He checked the time again. At 11:36 pm, he opened the door and went into the sealed classroom. Chen Ge moved quickly, and his target was clear, which was to take a closer look at the things on the table at the center.

When he entered the room, Chen Ge did not feel that the classroom was any different from outside, perhaps slightly quieter.

Chen Ge looked at the textbook and the paper, but there was nothing notable written on them. However, when he picked up the textbook, he discovered there was plenty of writing carved into the wooden table.

Chapter 87 - You Are Inside the Drawing

Chapter 87: You Are Inside the Drawing

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The writing was carved onto the table with the end of a pen. Each marking went deep into the surface and spoke of the writer's pain and desperation. The writings were all collected at the center of the table. Chen Ge bent down toward the table to get a closer look.

"The eyes on the toilet wall came alive! I saw it, the eyes were moving!"

...

"I don't know why I would imagine that, but from that day onwards, I feel like a pair of eye has been following me."

"They could be hiding anywhere, inside the drawer, under the bed, behind the pillow."

"I've lost the courage to even look inside my bag, afraid that a pair of eyes will look back at me."

"I'm afraid of being left alone. I don't dare enter tight spaces. I'm scared of the dark. The moment the lights are switched off, I scream, waking up from a nightmare! I believe I've lost my mind, and the pair of eyes is watching me slip down the spiral of insanity."

"What should I do? A pair of eyes is following me."

"They must be hiding somewhere, and they look familiar, but I cannot place them."

"I have told my parents and the class teacher about this, but they brushed me off, saying that I probably need to lay off the heavy studying."

"They are probably right. I'm probably too tired, or else why would I think the pair of eyes look so similar to the class teacher's eyes?"

"My parents told the teacher to keep a tab on me, and I know they meant well, but whenever I'm close to the respected class teacher, I just want to grab a pen and jab his eyes blind.”

“Have I finally gone off the deep end? I don’t dare tell more people about this. I’m afraid, afraid of the eyes, and afraid that people might call me crazy.”

“I pretend to laugh and smile like I used to, but the appearance of the eyes has gotten far more frequent. I don’t know who I can trust.”

“I feel like I’m breaking down. Horrible thoughts appear in my mind when I see needles or fruit knives. I find myself wailing for no reason. I want the tears to stop, but I can’t control them. I know they are watching.”

“This cannot go on any longer. I only seek release.”

“I hope the rumors about this classroom are real. I am willing to give up everything just to destroy that pair of eyes.”

After reading everything, Chen Ge did not hurry to leave. He diligently recorded all the handwriting on his livestream. In a way, he was keeping evidence. The writing on the table was seemingly carved by the girl who had been hurt by Teacher Fan.

The eyes inside the toilet had traumatized her deeply. That, combined with Teacher Fan’s other actions, pushed her to seek help from this cursed classroom. After she paid her dues, Fan Yu’s parents really disappeared. In a way, those eyes that haunted her were indeed dealt with.

Chen Ge realized this sealed classroom played a key role in the whole process. In other words, Teacher Fan’s real killer might have been the things that resided in this classroom.

The paper notes with three different sets of handwriting belonged to three people who didn’t exist among the existing student roster and had the capability to kill. If the ghosts inside this classroom were the killers, they did fulfil the three criteria perfectly.

Chen Ge looked around him, and his heart started to waver. He was reminded of the group photo that Fan Yu’s aunt had shown him. He might be dealing with more than one or two ghosts. Perhaps a whole classroom of ghosts was trapped there.

Chen Ge turned to inspect other tables, and he realized that something was written on each table.

Every table is carved with words, but the handwriting are all different.

When Chen Ge moved toward the next table, he accidentally knocked into the table on which the textbook, paper, and pen sat. The pen rolled off the edge and fell to the floor.

When Chen Ge bent down to pick it up, an arm from beside the table reached out to pick up the pen and hand it to Chen Ge.

“Thank you.” Chen Ge accepted it and replied on reflex. However, as he straightened up to replace the pen on the table, he froze. A surge of chills climbed up his spine.

Where did the arm come from?

He aimed his mallet at where the arm had been, but it only made contact with air. He looked around, and the sealed classroom was the same as he remembered. The tables and chairs around him remained unchanged, but Chen Ge’s gaze did change.

There’s a classroom at the end of the corridor that’s always sealed. No one ever enters it, but every night, the classroom will come alive with activity, and it’s almost midnight.

The mission description crossed his mind. Just the thought of it made him shiver. Surrendering the mission, Chen Ge just wanted to get out of the classroom as fast as he could.

The closer he was to the door, the more anxious he became. He anticipated that the door would close at the final moment and he would turn to see the whole classroom filled with ‘people’. Chen Ge picked up pace and rushed through the door. Thankfully, what he feared did not happen.

Looks like this side mission is not accomplishable. Chen Ge looked at the classroom and realized the rumors were probably real. The whole class had turned into ghosts and stayed to haunt the place.

After closing the classroom door, before he could catch a break, Chen Ge lowered his head and saw something that gave him the shock of his life. There was another set of footprints outside the classroom beside him. The person seemed to have stopped in front of the classroom for a long time before leaving.

These look like the prints of rubber shoes; this person came prepared.

When he was inside the sealed classroom investigating, there was another individual watching him from outside the window. Chen Ge felt scared. If something had happened to him inside the classroom and he had run toward the door, said person could have easily locked him in from outside.

Gripping the mallet in his hand, Chen Ge soon calmed down. Footprints can't be hidden that easily. I'll need to find this person first before I decide what to do.

He followed the footprints, and the other person did not seem like they were planning to hide. The trail of footprints was clear, like they were waiting for Chen Ge to come find them. Chen Ge followed the trail up to the third floor, and he realized that the prints entered the toilet. He put away his phone and slowly pushed the toilet door open.

There was a woman in raincoat standing before the fifth cubicle. She looked slender and weak, like she could crumble at any moment.

"Whether you're a human or a ghost, you're not leaving here until you give me an explanation," Chen Ge warned while maintaining a three-meter distance from the person.

After a long time, the woman removed the hood of the raincoat to reveal her face. "I really didn't think you would come here. I'm here to save you."

The woman who appeared at Mu Yang High School at midnight was Fan Yu's aunt.

"Save me?" Chen Ge did not believe her fully. Fan Yu's aunt was still a suspect. He had not forgotten about the woman's insistence on giving him that glass of water.

"Yes, I saw Fan Yu's drawing." The woman peeled out a wrinkled piece of paper from inside her raincoat. "You are inside the drawing."

"Place it on the floor and take a few steps back."

Fan Yu's aunt dropped the drawing and retreated to stand beside the sixth cubicle.

Chapter 88 - The Truth

Chapter 88: The Truth

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge's suspicion toward the woman lowered since she was so cooperative. He walked forward to pick up the drawing. There was a black building on the paper. The building was filled with red humans, but standing apart from the rest, as if the red humans were afraid to be near it, was an extremely conspicuous black man.

"You said that I am inside the painting. What is your evidence?" Of course, Chen Ge would not buy her story with just a single painting.

...

"The people inside Fan Yu's painting have always been red in color. In fact, this is also the first time I have seen a black figure. I thought about it for a long time and deduced that you have to be this black person because in the past month, you are the only outsider who has been to our house." Fan Yu's aunt stood in the corner of the room, the rain on her raincoat dripping onto the floor, creating an uncomfortable rhythm.

"That's all? Then what is the meaning of these red people? What is the difference between the red and the black people?"

Fan Yu's eyes studied Chen Ge silently. Just as Chen Ge thought the woman would not tell him the truth, she suddenly said, "The red figures represent ghosts, and since I've only seen one black figure, I assume it represents a living human."

"Ghosts?"

"I know you won't believe it, but certain things in this world are inexplicable," Fan Yu's aunt said calmly like she had rehearsed this speech many times already. "Before the accident that happened to Fan Yu's parents, I knew the boy could see things that normal people couldn't. I told his parents, but they didn't believe in things like ghosts."

"Since they didn't believe it, why do you?" Chen Ge's curiosity was piqued.

“Initially, no one knew that Fan Yu has this power until my husband and two children passed away in a car accident. That was the darkest period of my life. I would collapse whenever I saw their picture. Should that happen, Fan Yu would come to me with his drawings. Two small red children living inside a black house, and he would tell me that the red children are his brother and sister.”

The woman’s eyes softened with warmth. “Naturally, I did not believe him initially; I assumed he was merely trying to make me feel better. But as the number of his drawing increased, my conviction started to shake. I would ask Fan Yu what his brother and sister were doing, and his description would be incredibly detailed. Sometimes, he even mentioned little habits of my children that only a mother would notice and know.”

“That was when you believed Fan Yu can see ghosts?”

“Yes, or I admit perhaps I wish that it is real. Sometimes, I even see my own child possessing Fan Yu’s body.”

“Even if what you’re saying is true, a child’s painting still represents nothing. Don’t tell me every human that appears in his drawing will die?” Chen Ge asked cautiously.

“You can turn over the paper to look underneath it.”

Following her instruction, Chen Ge turned the paper over. There was another drawing. This time, it was the painting of an old well. Inside the well, several figures that were redder than usual were climbing out, while a black person stood beside the well. Interestingly enough, the location of the black figure inside the well painting overlapped with the black person’s position in the black house on the other side.

“According to legend, there is an old well at this school that has claimed many lives. The ghosts inside the well are coming out, and you’re standing beside it, meaning you’ve been targeted by the ghosts. If you stay here any longer, accidents might happen,” Fan Yu’s aunt said sincerely. It did sound like she was concerned for Chen Ge.

Touching the paper, Chen Ge stared at the drawings for a long time. He frowned slightly as he compared the two drawings, and an answer settled in his mind.

“Looks like I’ve misunderstood you.” Chen Ge put Fan Yu’s painting in his pocket, a nonverbal signal that he was not going to return it. "Since I'm planning to leave, let's go together, this way we can watch each other's back. This place gives me the creeps."

"You're right." Fan Yu's aunt nodded as she walked toward Chen Ge. Chen Ge seemed to have trusted her fully. He turned to walk away, exposing his defenseless back to the woman.

The pair walked one in front and one at the back. Chen Ge walked very slowly, holding his mallet. Fan Yu's aunt behind him seemed to fear being left alone, and she slowly increased her speed. If someone was in front to see Chen Ge's expression, they would be shocked to see how calculative the glow in his eyes was.

As the distance between them drew closer, as Fan Yu's aunt was about to reach Chen Ge, this slender woman showed a face that was suddenly different from before. Her face was tense, and her hand underneath the raincoat, which was carrying something, reached out to stab Chen Ge!

"I knew you are suspicious." Chen Ge's reaction was faster than she had anticipated, and the man was crueler than she had thought. The mallet went for her hand, and a kick came soon after.

BANG!

After Fan Yu's aunt was knocked into the toilet's wall, the thing in her palm clattered to the floor. Chen Ge walked toward her and saw it was a paring knife. The thing was small and was normally used to bone meat, an extremely sharp implement.

Her hair falling all over her face, Fan Yu's aunt crawled up from the ground like a vicious ghost. However, Chen Ge did not give her any chance to counter and 'helped' her to the floor again.

"I've suspected you since I visited your place, but I could not find any proof. Now, you've finally shown me your true face."

The difference in strength was obvious. Fan Yu's aunt tried several times but could not get up. All she could do was glare at Chen Ge hellishly. "How did you find out?"

"From the very beginning, I didn't trust you, and this drawing provides me with the crucial evidence. The drawing on the back was drawn by your hand. Do you think a child's art is that easily mimicked? Don't look at me like that; you're the one who made the mistake. If you don't want to get exposed, don't do the evil deed in the first place." Chen Ge picked up the paring knife from the floor, and the blade glinted coldly in the dark. "You're the one who killed Fan Yu's parents, right? Regardless of your reason, how could you kill your own family in cold blood?"

"It was never my intention to kill! You have no idea what really happened that night!" Fan Yu's aunt lashed out at Chen Ge.

"That is true, but one thing's for sure—you are one of the killers." Chen Ge was considering how to immobilize the woman while waiting for the police to arrive.

"The real killer is Fan Yu's father!"

"You're pushing the blame onto a dead man? That is your argument?" After making sure that Fan Yu's aunt had no more sharp weapons on her, he relaxed slightly.

"It's true." Fan Yu's aunt collapsed to the floor, and the truth from years ago finally came out of her lips. "You must know by now what kind of sick bastard my brother was. It was inside this exact toilet that he caused an innocent girl to go crazy. In the end, I heard that the girl was forced to commit suicide. After that happened, my brother became even more unhinged and increasingly paranoid, often claiming that someone was out to get him. My sister-in-law finally could not stand it and filed for divorce. But my brother refused to let her leave. Forced into the corner, she threatened my brother, saying that if he didn't agree to the divorce, she would expose his crimes to the world."

Chapter 89 - Deep Well

Chapter 89: Deep Well

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Then what was your brother’s response?”

An originally mentally unhinged person who was haunted, Chen Ge expected such an individual to resort to extreme action when threatened, and what Fan Yu’s aunt said next confirmed his speculation.

...

“Weirdly enough, after her threat, my brother calmed down. He considered it for a whole afternoon before relenting to her demand.” The expression on Fan Yu’s aunt’s face was complicated. “In retrospect, he was probably figuring out a way to kill her instead of considering the divorce.

“Things went as planned for my brother. It was raining cats and dogs the day that he locked Fan Yu up in his office and returned home alone. When we discovered that Fan Yu was not home, we assumed that the boy had gone missing, so all of us went out to go searching for him. My brother led his wife to Mu Yang High School.

“When I returned home at 9 pm, none of them were there. I was worried, so I also headed for Mu Yang High School to go look for them.

“There was an old well on the hill behind the school. A few days before that, there had been a landslide caused by heavy rain, and the well had been buried. When I arrived, my brother was clearing the soil around the well.

“I didn’t see my sister-in-law at first. I called my brother’s name as I walked closer, and when I did, I saw her body stuck at the mouth of the well.

“I really didn’t expect him to do something like that; he was such a gentle soul normally, and he really did love his wife. I realized then that my brother has lost his mind. Ever since he brought home that photo and said that he was haunted, I should have known that was the case.

“After I stumbled across the murder, I was given two choices. One was to help him cover up the body, and the other was to die.

“To save myself, I had no choice but to listen to him. As he ordered, I left some wounds on my sister-in-law’s body and then helped him dig the well open.”

Fan Yu’s aunt was leaning against the wall, and her eyes were filled with regret. “I knew I had become an accomplice, but the scarier thing was that I didn’t know when my brother would dispose of me. He definitely would not leave any witnesses alive. Perhaps after burying my sister-in-law, he would also toss me inside the well.”

“So, you took the initiative and killed him first?” Chen Ge listened to the woman’s story quickly, and from his perspective, this whole family was abnormal. The husband was a Peeping Tom, and after finding out about it, the wife did not report it to the police but used that as leverage to ask for a divorce.

“If I did not kill him, I would have been killed. And after killing him, I became Fan Yu’s only family, and I did not need to share him with anyone else again.” The last sentence was probably the only truthful word that left the woman’s lips that night.

“But Fan Yu is not even your child to begin with.” Chen Ge believed half of what Fan Yu’s aunt had said. There was no way to confirm things that happened three years ago, and there was no one to counter Fan Yu’s aunt.

“You’re wrong! My children have possessed Fan Yu’s body, and that is why he is familiar with my children’s habits! Fan Yu is not only my brother’s child but also my children!” Green veins started to pop on the woman’s face, and her lips were bleeding from the vehemence of her claim.

Seeing her in this state, Chen Ge did not think it was wise to push her further. This woman said that her brother was crazy, but from how he saw it, she was not that normal herself. Her mind had probably snapped when her husband and children passed away in the car accident, and she applied her twisted love on Fan Yu when she realized the boy could see her children’s lost souls.

Looking at the distraught woman, Chen Ge was reminded of the mission description given by the black phone—Everyone has a deep well inside their heart where shameful and unknowable secrets stay buried.

“Get up, show me to the well where your brother’s body was dumped.”

“The well has already disappeared. After my brother shoved my sister-in-law down the well, I pushed him in. He broke his fall on top of my sister-in-law’s body. He screamed and cursed from inside the well, but no one could hear him because of the heavy rain.” Fan Yu’s aunt pulled at her hair nervously, her arms continuously shaking. “I filled the well up with soil, and three years have passed since then. I don’t even know where to start to look for the well.”

“You only need to give me a general area,” Chen Ge said in a normal tone, but it elicited a violent reaction from Fan Yu’s aunt.

“No one will be able to find them!” Memory struck the woman’s heart like a knife, and her expression twisted with ferocity. “I will raise Fan Yu alone; I will give him all the love he needs!”

“If you really love Fan Yu, you wouldn’t have done this. Your love benefits only yourself; it’s incredibly selfish.” When they were at the Haunted House, he had noticed that Fan Yu preferred talking to Chen Ge, a stranger, than deal with his aunt. It was obvious that they did not share a good relationship.

“You said that the period after your family’s accident was the darkest moment of your life. It was Fan Yu who came to you with comfort by offering you the drawings of your children. He helped you out of sincerity, but you killed his father.” Chen Ge was reminded of the small house that was filled with red figures. If he had not intervened then, things might have gone down a far worse and far crueler route. “You should be glad that Fan Yu is still a child.”

Facing the punishment of the law would be good for both Fan Yu and his aunt. Fan Yu was searching for heaven inside the well, which meant that he had witnessed everything; he knew his aunt was the real killer.

As he grew older, he might have repeated what his aunt had done, and with blood on his hands, his life would have been ruined.

“It’s time to give this tragedy its closure.” After ending the livestream, Chen Ge had called the police. With regards to the kind of punishment Fan Yu's aunt would receive, he really had no clue.

"The boy is forced to live with the killer of his parents. No wonder his psychological development is so stunted, you are the cause of his symptoms."

When Chen Ge called the police, Fan Yu's aunt shook her head vehemently, and her lips moved before she ran toward the toilet door.

"Stop struggling." Chen Ge followed behind her. He was afraid that she might do something stupid.

Two of them ran to the first floor. When they passed the sealed classroom, Fan Yu's aunt suddenly tripped and stayed on the ground for a long time. It felt like someone had yanked on her leg; it was weird to say the least.

Chen Ge stopped several meters behind her. Fan Yu's aunt was collapsed at the door to the sealed classroom, and Chen Ge was feeling apprehensive about this particular classroom.

He stuck his back to the wall opposite from the door and leaned to peek into the classroom. It was after midnight. The empty classroom was filled with students, and an old, rotund man was standing at the lectern.

Chapter 90 - The Cursed Ballpoint Pen

Chapter 90: The Cursed Ballpoint Pen

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Fan Yu's aunt had also seen the scene inside the classroom. The children sitting at the tables with their heads lowered were similar to the students shot inside her brother's group photo. After collapsing to the floor, fear was frozen on her face. She tried to stand up, but her limbs refused to listen to her command.

"Shush!" Chen Ge rushed to the woman's side to grab her arm and half-dragged her out of the education block!

...

The rumors were real. Regardless of their cause of death, the students had all returned to that classroom.

"You saw it, right? Right?" Seeing them in a picture and seeing them in real life had a completely different feeling. The woman's eyes bulged out of their sockets, and her breath came haltingly.

"Let's leave this place for now." Chen Ge dragged Fan Yu's aunt to the entrance of the education block. Before they left, he turned back to glance at the classroom. The door and windows were closed, and it was completely dark within.

I've been inside the school for so long already, and they haven't actively attacked me. Looks like they aren't malevolent spirits. Chen Ge had basis to believe that. The girl who was made insane by Fan Yu's father had committed suicide in that classroom, and the one who came out to help her was one of the spirits from that classroom. The people who wrote the warning notes to Fan Yu's father were the spirits. They were trying to protect the school's students, even though their method was a bit wrong.

Chen Ge held Fan Yu's aunt as they wandered over to Mu Yang High School's front gate. They stood beside it to avoid the rain. It was already past midnight. Chen Ge did not think it is wise to stay inside that three buildings, plus he had a random variable in Fan Yu's aunt to be concerned about.

At around 1 am, the rain started to slow. There was light coming toward Mu Yang High School. When Chen Ge saw this, he immediately turned on his flashlight and cried for help. As the leaves of the forest parted, a group of people forced their way through in their raincoats.

“Here! The suspect has already been detained!” Chen Ge was excited, but when he saw the person who was leading the way, his confidence dwindled.

“Why is it you again?” When Inspector Lee reached the gate and saw Chen Ge, his face began twitching. “The same person has called the emergency hotline thrice in a week. This is the first time that has ever happened in the station’s 35 years history. Did you know that? Even the officer who answers the calls felt like he can now recognize your voice.”

Chen Ge was made speechless by Inspector Lee. He too felt embarrassed. He quickly hauled Fan Yu’s aunt off the floor and led her to Inspector Lee. Inspector Lee asked his men to break the school’s gate open, and before entering, he asked, “She’s also a victim?”

“No, she’s one of the killers.” Chen Ge handed Fan Yu’s aunt over to one of the officers.

“One of the killers?” Inspector Lee flickered his flashlight thrice to alert his men. “There are other killers still hiding inside the school?”

“The other killer is already dead.” Chen Ge summarized everything he knew for Inspector Lee. “This woman’s brother was a voyeur, and after the brother’s wife found out, she used it to leverage a divorce. Unwilling to part, her brother killed his wife, and she happened to see her brother do that. To prevent herself from being killed, she killed her brother.”

“So, it was self-defense?” Inspector Lee caught onto the key question.

“If that was the case, she should have reported to the police after that. However, after she killed her brother, she cleared the crime scene and left. The murder happened three years ago, and there is no other witness. Everything I know, it was she who told me.” Chen Ge pointed at Fan Yu’s aunt. “So, it is not unlikely that she was lying.”

“Where was the crime scene then?” Inspector Lee had skipped even asking why Chen Ge was there. Even the assisting officers took this in their stride like it was not out of the ordinary to find Chen Ge there.

“That, you’ll need to ask her.” Chen Ge also wanted to know the location of the well. That was the last of his four side missions. Inspector Lee was far more experienced than Chen Ge at interrogating. He accepted a clean towel from his men before passing it to Fan Yu’s aunt. “Assault with intention to murder may send you to the chair, but if it was self-defense and the suspect shows signs of remorse, there might still be chance for you to see the light of day.”

Fan Yu’s aunt gripped the towel silently. She did not look particularly afraid of death.

“Think about your family. At your age, you should have your own children by now. If you refuse to cooperate, you might never see them again.” Inspector Lee soon found an opening, and the moment he said that, Fan Yu’s aunt started to waver.

After ten more minutes of persuasion, she finally spoke. “The hiding spot is at the hill behind the school, but I can only remember a general direction.”

She led Chen Ge and the police to a small hill behind the school. “The bodies were dropped down a well. At the time, there was a landslide, and it covered the well completely.”

There was no road around Mu Yang High School for heavy duty vehicles to enter. Thus, it would require manual labor if they wished to find that well. Chen Ge also considered that point.

“Inspector Lee, if we do not confirm her words as soon as possible, the case might shift when dawn arrives.” Chen Ge squeezed to stand beside Inspector Lee. His heart was worried about his last side mission.

“Seal the scene first, and we’ll wait for the crew to come with the necessary tools before the digging can start.” Without the reminder from Chen Ge, Inspector Lee was already on the phone, arranging everything.

At 2:15 am, the crew finally arrived. Inspector Lee assigned everyone their roles, and the digging began in earnest. Chen Ge also went to help by grabbing a shovel. He showed such conviction in his job that the officers were quite touched.

At 3 am, the well at Mu Yang High School finally surfaced. At 4.30 am, the well was cracked open, and two bodies were retrieved from within.

At the same time, Chen Ge's black phone vibrated; he received the mission accomplished message.

Putting down the shovel, Chen Ge found a secluded spot and clicked the message open.

“You managed to reach the Mission Location on time, successfully experienced all four side missions, and survived until dawn. Mu Yang High School Trial Mission successful! A new scenario has been unlocked. Player can manipulate the props inside the set freely using the interface available on the phone!

“Trial Mission completion rate more than ninety percent. Unlocked this mission's hidden item—The Cursed Ballpoint Pen.

“The Cursed Ballpoint Pen (Broken): The Pen Spirit refused to answer to your call. It rolled its eyes at you before hiding away.”

Chapter 91 - Increasing Popularity

Chapter 91: Increasing Popularity

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Reading the mission clear message, Chen Ge sighed in relief. This Trial Mission with a two-star scream factor had been easier than he anticipated, but that was probably because the spirits inside Mu Yang High School meant him no harm.

When he was halfway through the mission, he had already noticed that the residents of Mu Yang High School were not baleful specters. Including the Pen Spirit, they had no malicious intent. What had happened to Fan Yu's father was merely karma.

...

The most difficult side missions were definitely the classroom and the deep well. Even now, he still had not truly uncovered the mystery of the Sealed Classroom. He did go in to experience it once, and thankfully, the spirits inside did not make things too difficult for him. The difficulty of the Deep Well mission was high as well. Even with the aid of the police, they had dug for a whole night before locating the well before dawn. If he had attempted that alone, he definitely would have failed the mission.

Chen Ge felt satisfied with the rewards. He did not mind too much about the unlocked hidden item. According to legend, Pen Spirits could predict the future, but his Pen Spirit did not seem to be knowledgeable about anything and had no principles or morals.

The rain that had continued throughout the night finally stopped. The police did not forget to praise Chen Ge for his contribution. After taking his testimony, they drove him home. The emergency call and a whole night of digging had led to tired officers. Inside the car, the one sitting next to Chen Ge was falling asleep. Chen Ge nudged his own body to the door to make space for the officer. The journey home was silent.

Chen Ge arrived at New Century Park at 6 am. It could have been the Yin Yang Vision or constant exposure to spirits, but Chen Ge felt incredibly cold. He lay in his bed, but sleep would not come. He turned to his phone and was shocked to realize there were more than ten unanswered calls and unread messages.

Most of them came from He San, mainly asking about his safety and whether he needed to call the police. At the bottom of the inbox was a message from Doctor Gao. The good doctor said that Fan Yu's symptoms might be related to the people around him, and he advised Chen Ge to pay closer attention to such individuals in the boy's life.

The message was sent at 12:30 am. By then, Fan Yu's aunt had come clean to Chen Ge. After replying to both He San and Doctor Gao, Chen Ge opened the video-sharing app and clicked into his personal page.

A four-hour livestream but not a word with the chat, and I even closed the stream several times in the middle without warning. I can only imagine the damage that was done to my popularity.

After detaining Fan Yu's aunt, Chen Ge had closed the livestream in deference to Fan Yu's privacy and future. He did not have the time to explain the situation to his viewers; his attention had been required elsewhere.

After loading the main page, Chen Ge glanced at the interface and was shocked to realize that his livestream's followers had increased to 39,000 users.

I remember, before the livestream, I had less than 10,000 followers. What happened last night during the livestream?

He had been so occupied with the side mission that he had allowed the livestream to play on its own. He did not think too much of it, so he was surprised by this sudden reward.

Just as Chen Ge was trying to figure out what had happened, He San's call came. As he answered it, he could hear the commotion on the other side. "Boss! I knew you're still alive!"

Chen Ge ignored He San's celebration and asked directly, "What happened last night during my livestream? Why did my followers and views grow so tremendously?"

"Since you started your livestream last night, the number has been growing, but it was incredibly slow until you started to play the Pen Spirit game. Someone created a thread on the app forum exposing Qin Guang for his plagiarism and then even attached your first livestream." He San's voice turned sharp from indignation. "Qin Guang's livestream plagiarized your content down to the analysis, set, and even the identity of the killer, who was played by an actor! The evidence was right before their eyes, but Qin Guang's fans refused to admit it. They started to slander your name in the thread, saying that it was you who was mimicking their idol."

"Probably just the 50-cent army ¹ , nothing unusual. Then what happened next?"

"Many viewers went to Qin Guang's livestream to demand an explanation, but Qin Guang pretended not to have seen them. Not only that, he banned any viewers who brought up your name. However, with his high popularity and the all-in promotion by the platform, there were 800,000 viewers at the start of his livestream, and with the chat scrolling so fast, his team missed some of your mentions. Thus, a number of his viewers who were curious came over to your livestream." He San got increasingly excited. "The highest viewers during your livestream was 50,000 but it was the combination of passersby, paid viewers, Qin Guang's fans, and your own fans; it was a mess! You don't have any mods in your livestream, so even after the livestream had stopped, the chat kept going for another half an hour. By the way, thanks to this chaos, your livestream entered the Popular Ranking for the midnight session. Congratulations, not many newbie hosts can enter that ranking so early in their career."

Chen Ge could imagine the chaos in his livestream last night, but it was a blessing in disguise since his follower number did have a tremendous increase. After all, he was not lacking in content but exposure.

"Slow down. After all, that was just my second livestream." Chen Ge talked for a few more minutes with He San before hanging up.

He looked at the private messages that he had received from the other users of the app. Most of them were curses, but there were a few who could not stand Qin Guang's bullying and chose to send Chen Ge their support.

Near the bottom of his inbox, Chen Ge recognized a familiar user handler. The profile picture was similar to the studio that had harassed him before. The message warned him to not resort to dirty tricks, or he would make sure Chen Ge was unable to survive on this platform.

If another host saw this, they might have been afraid, but Chen Ge was different. Livestreaming and posting short videos were merely ways for him to promote his Haunted House. After blocking this account, Chen Ge exited the app and picked up the black phone.

“Mu Yang High School (Scream Factor 2 Stars): The setting up of the scenario has been completed, you can now go down to the subterranean level to visit it.

“Warning: Mu Yang High School is considered part of the four-star scenario, School of the Afterlife; its space is twice the size of a normal scenario. Please familiarize yourself with the interior layout before putting it to use.”

After looking at the message on the phone, Chen Ge sat up in bed. The size is twice normal scenario's? Wait... don't tell me, the whole of Mu Yang High School has been moved here?

He put on his shoes and ran to the first floor, peeled off the wooden boards, and peered downward.

The abandoned underground parking lot had been given a new look. The stairs had signs of being charred, the darkened corridor was littered with unfinished test papers, the doors to the classrooms creaked in the darkness, and shadows could be seen flitting between the upturned tables.

Chapter 92 - Request

Chapter 92: Request

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The scenery that unfolded before him surprised even Chen Ge, the Haunted House's owner. The size of Mu Yang High School's scenario was so much larger than Murder by Midnight. As he took a step into it, a cold draft caressed the back of Chen Ge's neck. It made him feel unsettled, like something might jump out at him from the dark at any moment.

Four classrooms, corridors, toilets, and offices...

...

Everything that Mu Yang High School had was perfectly replicated inside Chen Ge's Haunted House, but the layout was rearranged so that it was all closer together.

Walking down the dim corridor, Chen Ge could not help himself from turning to look into the classrooms on both sides. The walls beyond the windows were cement wall, and there could not be drafts underground, but the windows kept on creaking like they were touched by the wind.

The first few classrooms were creepy but still acceptable; however, when Chen Ge reached the sealed classroom at the end of the corridor, the hairs on his body stood up. This was the first time he had felt such intense fear inside his own Haunted House.

This classroom reminded him of the sealed classroom at Mu Yang High School, but it was not completely the same. Every table had writing scrawled all over it with red paint, but more scarily, there was a set of school uniform sitting on each chair.

The uniform was a perfect match to the uniforms Chen Ge had seen in the group photo taken with Fan Yu's father. The only difference was that, in the picture, all the students were facing away from the camera, but in this classroom, all the uniforms were turned toward Chen Ge, who stood at the door.

After taking a deep breath, Chen Ge forced himself to walk into the room. Standing at the lectern, looking down at the room, the rows of chairs felt like they were seated with students.

Why did only this classroom come with school uniforms? Could these uniforms represent the lingering spirits that remained here? Chen Ge counted the school uniform silently; there were twenty-four uniforms in total.

After completing the Murder by Midnight Trial Mission, the Haunted House's scenario became the new home for Xiaoxiao's family. If I follow this similar train of thought... Chen Ge's face twitched with discomfort. It meant that there were twenty-four lingering spirits who had moved into his Haunted House.

Then again, I might be wrong. Chen Ge exited the classroom, closed the door, and continued to move forward.

At the end of the corridor was the toilet, and a few steps past that brought Chen Ge to the first junction. The left turn led to the office area while right led to the female dormitory.

Chen Ge took the right turn. He only took several steps when the corridor turned narrow. The rooms on both sides felt like they were closing in on him, and at the end of the corridor was another junction.

Just a two-star scenario is already so complicated. If I unlock a few more scenarios, this underground parking lot will definitely become a Maze of Terror.

He pushed open a random door, and the interior was designed like a crime scene.

It was worth noting that Chen Ge discovered a row of chairs placed side by side in the second last bedroom, and several pieces of paper and a greatly damaged ballpoint pen were placed on top of one of them.

This is the hidden item for unlocking Mu Yang High School's scenario? Chen Ge picked up the ballpoint pen gingerly. It was so fragile that it looked like it could crack at any moment. Hidden items seem to have their own purpose. Wang Qi's Hidden Person Notice helped me befriend Xiaoxiao's family, and they now help me maintain the Murder by Midnight scenario. Could it be possible that this ballpoint pen will help me win the favour of the students in the sealed classroom?

Chen Ge could not figure out how. Eventually, he exited the scenario with the ballpoint pen in hand. He returned to the staff breakroom to fix the pen with tape.

“Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, I know you hold a grudge against me, but I’ve fixed your pen. If you have forgiven me, please draw a circle on the paper.”

“Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, you are my spirit from my previous life, and I am your spirit in this life. If you are with us, please draw a circle on the paper...”

To solve the mystery related to the sealed classroom, asking the Pen Spirit would be the most direct solution. However, no matter how hard Chen Ge chanted its invocation, the Pen Spirit refused to answer.

“Why so silent? I’m also a victim in this case, okay?”

Chen Ge had no choice but to return the pen to the female dormitory. He took a tour around the place before returning to the first floor.

The twenty-four uniforms in the sealed classroom were scary, but the impact was not enough. When I have time, I should update the models in the Night of the Living Room, put the uniforms on them, and placed them in the classroom. That should up the fear factor quite a bit. Chen Ge closed the wooden boards and was about to return to bed when his phone rang.

He turned to take a look and was surprised to see that it was from Inspector Lee.

“Uncle San Bao? How can I help you?” When Chen Ge returned from Mu Yang High School, Inspector Lee had stayed. He seemed to have been talking with the officers from the main city’s investigation team.

“If you’re not too busy, do you mind coming to the district police station? The killer wants to talk to you.”

“Me?” Chen Ge was confused, but he still agreed so as to give face to Inspector Lee. “Okay, I’ll be there in a minute.”

When he arrived, a familiar officer led Chen Ge to the interrogation room. Fan Yu’s aunt was sitting in the chair, her hands in cuffs.

“The autopsy for the bodies is still going on. The suspect’s emotions are very unstable, and she refuses to say anything. Her only demand is to talk to you in person, and that was why I called you.” The middle-aged officer in the interrogation room stood up and shook Chen Ge’s hand. “Then, I shall leave you to you.”

“I’ll try my best.” Chen Ge walked to Fan Yu’s aunt. In just one night, she seemed to have gotten even wearier than usual. Her head was lowered, and her hair covered her face.

When she felt someone approach, the woman’s eyes, which had been distracted earlier, started to focus on Chen Ge. They spoke of complicated emotions.

“You asked for me?” As Chen Ge tried to get near, he was stopped by the officer, who wished for him to maintain a safe distance.

Fan Yu’s aunt nodded slightly. She was silent for a long time, and the first sentence out of her mouth surprised Chen Ge. “Do you have the drawing I gave you in the third-floor toilets?”

If she did not bring this up, Chen Ge would have forgotten all about it already. He retrieved the drawing from his pocket and placed it before Fan Yu’s aunt. Looking at the weird drawing, Fan Yu’s aunt did not feel afraid. In fact, it felt like she treated it like some kind of treasure. Then again, that was too be expected; after all, when her husband and children passed away, it was with these drawings that she slowly walked out from her despair.

Eventually Fan Yu’s aunt spoke. “I’ve done everything I could for Fan Yu for three years, but the first living person who showed up in his drawing is you, how is that fair?”

“Things might not be as simple as you think. Fan Yu probably thinks I’m similar him.” Chen Ge pointed at his eyes. “We can see the same thing.”

“Is that so?” Fan Yu’s aunt lowered her head again, and the interrogation room became quiet.

“Is this why you called me here?” Chen Ge folded the drawing up neatly.

After ten minutes, Fan Yu’s aunt collected herself; it was as if she had come to a decision. She told Chen Ge in a soft voice, “I am Fan Yu’s only remaining family, and I will have to leave him soon. The boy has a weird personality and is unable to make any friends. I do not ask that you take him on, but I plead that you go visit him when you have time. Talk to him and make sure he isn't bullied by the other kids."

Chapter 93 - Twenty-four Names

Chapter 93: Twenty-four Names

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Regardless of what Fan Yu's aunt had done in the past, at least at that moment, she was putting Fan Yu first.

"I will try my best to watch out for the boy," Chen Ge promised without hesitation. In this whole incident, Fan Yu was the most innocent.

...

"Actually, you don't need to worry so much." The officer behind the desk also walked over to say, "We have already contacted child services. If you truly repent, you might still have the chance to see your child in the future."

"My child?" Fan Yu's aunt looked at that officer, and her blank expression slowly shifted. Her lips fell open as she stared at a spot above the officer's shoulder, and for some reason, she smiled. "Okay, I will tell you everything I know."

They then entered the normal interrogation process. Chen Ge felt he was not needed there anymore, so he asked to leave. After exiting the station, he hailed a cab to go to Fan Yu's home.

The incident might appear to have reached its conclusion on the surface, but there was still a huge question that had not been solved, a question that only Chen Ge knew and only Fan Yu could provide the answer to.

The sun was coming up, but its rays seemed to be unable to penetrate the maze-like alleyways. After exiting the taxi, Chen Ge walked deeper into the alleys, following his memory.

Eventually, he found the place that Fan Yu's aunt rented. He knocked several times on the second-floor door before he heard the lock being moved from within, and the door opened a sliver. Chen Ge pushed it open, and to his surprise, there was no one standing behind the door. He stood at the entrance for a long time, and even with the sunlight falling on him, he did not feel a trace of warmth.

“Fan Yu?” Chen Ge stepped into the room, and he felt even chiller. The living room and kitchen were empty. Chen Ge shuffled toward the bedroom. He tried to push on the door, and similar to before, the door was not locked and was pushed open easily.

Heavy curtains blocked all the light in the room, and the lights were not on. The place was dim, and the floor was littered with paper. Chen Ge picked up a random piece, and it was still a drawing of a black house crowded with red people.

“Why did you toss these drawings away? Are you not satisfied with them?” Chen Ge held the drawing in his hands while he looked toward the table. Fan Yu sat on the chair, facing away from him. The boy looked like he was spacing out.

Chen Ge avoided the drawings on the floor carefully, and when he walked closer, he saw there was one last drawing that was left on the table. On the white paper, a black crayon was used to draw the outline of a house, and a small black figure was standing isolated in the middle of it.

“What happened to the red people?”

Chen Ge did not expect Fan Yu to answer, but Fan Yu turned his head to look at him and whispered, “They have found a new home.”

“Meaning, they have moved away?” Chen Ge was reminded of the twenty-four uniforms he had seen inside his Haunted House and something clicked. “Are you friends with them?”

The boy shook his head. With his eyes on his drawing, Fan Yu reached into his drawer to pull out a paper box to give Chen Ge.

“For me?” Chen Ge looked into the box, and inside sat twenty-four school name tags with twenty-four different names. In the middle of the box was a photo group, and twenty-four students stood facing away from the camera.

These twenty-four name tags should reveal the mystery behind the sealed classroom, and now Fan Yu had handed them to Chen Ge. After surrendering the box, Fan Yu stopped saying anything. Chen Ge had no idea what the boy was thinking.

Neither of them said anything. Looking at Fan Yu, Chen Ge did not have the heart to ask the question that was on his mind. Suddenly footsteps came from the corridor, and soon, a man and woman appeared at the door.

"This should be the place."

"Why isn't the door locked? Fan Yu? Are you inside?"

Hearing them, Chen Ge ran out to see what was wrong. "And you are?"

"We are workers from Jiujiang Children's Home; this is our identification. We are here to take Fan Yu for a physical check-up and then follow up on the documentation for his future," the woman explained as they both looked at Chen Ge with suspicion. They did not understand why an unknown man had appeared at Fan Yu's home.

"Fan Yu is inside the bedroom. The boy is very independent, so please do take care of him."

"We will; that is our job." The woman entered the bedroom to fetch Fan Yu while the man stood outside to keep an eye on Chen Ge. They did not seem to trust him. Realizing that the woman had stepped into this territory, Fan Yu's reaction was rather agitated. He grabbed the drawing on the table and ran outside like he was trying to make an escape.

"Grab him!" the woman yelled from inside the house. The man at the door heard her, and when Fan Yu ran to his side, he grabbed at the boy's arm. The man was experienced at dealing with troublesome children. Very easily, he pinned down Fan Yu's arms. This way, he would not be scratched by Fan Yu, and Fan Yu had no opportunity of harming himself.

Fan Yu struggled like his life depended on it. This greatly unsettled Chen Ge, and after some negotiation with the man, he finally released Fan Yu. Fan Yu, who was released, did not attempt to make another escape. He gripped the drawing silently, like he knew running would be futile.

Watching Fan Yu being led away, Chen Ge could not hold it in anymore. He chased after the boy and squatted down before him to ask a question that had troubled him for a long time.

"You know heaven is inside the well, and you witnessed everything, so why didn't you say anything?" Chen Ge had never treated Fan Yu as a normal boy—the house of red people had prevented him from doing that.

A blank-faced Fan Yu thought about it for a while when he heard Chen Ge's question. In the end, he did not answer but raised his head to flash an innocent smile at Chen Ge.

As he watched Fan Yu leave, Chen Ge's back started to become drenched with sweat. This was the first time he had seen the boy smile. Hugging the paper box with twenty-four names and the photo that had been given to him by Fan Yu, Chen Ge returned to New Century Park.

The trip to the police station and then Fan Yu's place had taken up plenty of time. When he arrived at New Century Park, it was already past 10:30 am.

After the whole night of rain, the sun was shining brightly. Chen Ge's mood also improved when he saw the crowd that had gathered inside the park. As he entered the park, he immediately noticed the crowd that had formed outside his Haunted House.

Initially, he had thought those were customers, but he realized he was wrong when he got closer. None of them were lining up for tickets but very unreasonably blocked the entrance from other real visitors.

What's happening? Chen Ge walked over and realized that Uncle Xu was also there, negotiating with the unruly crowd.

When they saw Chen Ge approach, they quickly surrounded him.

Chapter 94 - New Customers

Chapter 94: New Customers

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Xiao Chen, where have you been? Why are you so late for work?” Uncle Xu pulled Chen Ge to stand behind him, afraid that the mob might harm the young man.

“I just came back from the district station; I was helping the police with a murder case.”

...

“Huh?” Not only Uncle Xu, even the mob who surrounded Chen Ge was shocked. Normally, the reason given for truancy was either a traffic jam or stomach ache; being involved in a murder case was truly an excuse they had not heard about before.

“Murder case?” Uncle Xu looked at Chen Ge with shock and had forgotten the urgent matter at hand.

“Yup, but the case is different from the earlier murder at the apartment; it probably won’t be broadcasted on the mass media.”

There was an earlier murder? The raging mob’s aggression suddenly dwindled.

“Alright, leave this to me.” Chen Ge stood facing the crowd and said, “You guys are looking for me?”

With just one question, Chen Ge managed to extinguish the little momentum the mob had left. The crowd that blocked the entrance to the Haunted House looked at each other before shoving out a middle-aged man, who was shortest among them, to face Chen Ge.

“We are from Qin Guang’s studio. Last night, you employed unethical tactics by hiring a 50-cent army to spread rumors that are damaging to Qin Guang’s reputation.”

“I’m the one who employed unethical tactics? You people sure know how to create story. Who the real unethical plagiarist here is, you know yourselves.” Chen Ge cut the man off instantly. “If there’s nothing else, please leave the premises; you are interrupting my business.”

“Qin Guang merely chose to have the livestream at the same location as you. That is not a basis for you to claim that he plagiarized your work simply because you happened to shoot at the location first.” The middle-aged man stood his ground and tried to argue with Chen Ge.

“A simple comparison between our livestreams show that Qin Guang mimicked even my starting analysis while trapped inside the bedroom. If that is not plagiarism, what is?”

“At most, he only copied your beginning. The plot that developed after that was his own creativity. Of course, it cannot be called plagiarism. At the very worst, you can call it a homage.”

Chen Ge had never seen such a shameless person before. He knew reasoning with them would be a waste of time, so he walked past them to open the gate and prepare for business.

“You are new to the scene, so we understand your drive to succeed, but you have to know that this job is not that easy.” The middle-aged man pulled out a document from his bag. Chen Ge had initially thought it was some kind of lawyer’s letter, but he had overestimated his opponent’s conviction.

“You are not from this field, so you don’t understand certain things—that’s fine—but most established hosts are made with gold and popularity. It might appear that you have caught some popularity for now, but the platform will never support a newcomer and abandon Qin Guang because Qin Guang is the platform’s key promoter. His success is tied to the success of the platform itself.” The middle-aged man waved the document in his hand. “If you agree to stop the malicious attacks against Qin Guang and post a public apology on your personal account, we will compensate you accordingly. However, if you insist on walking down the wrong place and harassing Qin Guang and any of his affiliates to brush up the popularity of your own livestream, we will contact the platform to block you from all of its channels.”

“Don’t try to shift the blame onto the viewers; they are completely innocent. If anything, the viewers simply cannot stomach the open bullying and came to support me.” Chen Ge did not give a damn about the threat. After all, the platform had never helped him once before.

Even he himself did not know how he had managed to achieve his current popularity.

“Being rash benefits no one, why don’t you think about it first?” The middle-aged man’s attitude softened; the unreasonableness that was evident before Chen Ge arrived had completely disappeared. Around six of them had come to create trouble for Chen Ge, but the first sentence out of the man’s lips when he arrived had thrown a wrench into their plan. Then again, they could not totally be blamed. Any normal person would be cautioned when they realized that the person they were dealing with had been involved in not one but two murder cases.

“There’s nothing to consider. I’ve already discovered the unique selling point of my livestream and videos. Even if I’m forced to leave this platform, I’ll just regain my follower base elsewhere.” Chen Ge chased the people from Qin Guang’s studio aside and informed Xu Wan to start preparing for work.

He had raced about the whole night, so he was tired. He sat in the ticket booth selling tickets. After the first few waves of visitors exited the Haunted House, the people from Qin Guang’s studio returned.

“You people sure are insistent! If you’re not here to visit the Haunted House, please move aside; you’re blocking the path for the real visitors!” Even a saint would lose their temper when pushed too hard. Chen Ge had been polite enough, but these people kept testing his patience.

“Who said we’re not here to visit the Haunted House? We also wish to experience the place that is dubbed the scariest Haunted House in Jiujiang.” Two young men from the studio with backpacks blocked the gate.

“You also want to visit the Haunted House?” Naturally, Chen Ge suspected that these people were up to no good.

“If you’re afraid that we might expose your fake advertising, then fine, we won’t enter.” Of the two young men, one was extremely well-built. He wore a tank top to purposely reveal his body that was the result of constant weight training.

Honestly, Chen Ge was a bit taunted by this guy. “Let me remind you, the last person who made a claim like yours came out lying on his back.”

“You’ve only managed to arouse my interest even more.” Standing beside the muscular man was a meek looking bespectacled man. “I’ve watched scary movies since I was young. Before being recruited by Brother Qin, I was part of a scary movie film crew. Alas, most of the movie settings were too fake; they were barely challenging.”

“I do love customers like yourself who are constantly searching for a greater scare.” Chen Ge pulled the curtain back. “Come in then, remember to sign the disclaimer agreement.”

Since there were willing lab rats, Chen Ge naturally would not send them away. Even the smile on his face had turned several degrees sincerer.

When Uncle Xu saw the smile on Chen Ge’s face, he shivered involuntarily, and the image of the forensic science students from Jiujiang Medical University lying weakly on the floor appeared in his mind.

Uncle Xu coughed and pulled him to the side. “Xiao Chen, don’t go overboard. Remember, they are still park visitors.”

Before Chen Ge could reply, the bespectacled young man thought that he had seen through their plot and scoffed with derision, “Well, well, well. That’s some pretty good acting. The experience has started even before we enter the Haunted House?”

“Before I arrived, I saw the reviews on the Haunted House, and many people said that the owner knows a bit of psychology. It looks like they weren’t lying.”

Uncle Xu looked at the young man with a speechless expression on his face. I’m trying to help you here. If not for the fact you might die inside there, I would not have cared about you!

“Uncle Xu, I know the limits. Don’t worry.” Chen Ge led the two young men into the Haunted House personally and saw them sign the disclaimer agreement.

The larger, muscular man was called Zhu Jianing, and the bespectacled man was Fei Youliang.

Chapter 95 - All School Uniforms

Chapter 95: All School Uniforms

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“When you’re inside, no photos or filming. There are four different scenarios for you to experience; they are the Sealed Classroom, the Fifth Cubicle in the Toilet, the Pen Spirit, and the Deep Well. The clues to the exit are hidden within these four scenarios. You’ll need to experience all of them before you can find the exit.” Chen Ge looked through their disclaimer agreement repeatedly. He was so careful because the agreements might serve their purpose soon enough.

“This is not our first Haunted House; we know all that.” Fei Youliang pushed on his spectacles and peered inside the Haunted House. “At least the suspenseful environment is not bad.”

...

“In that case, I will not waste my breath anymore.” Chen Ge had intended to make some small introduction to each of the small scenarios, but he decided that would not be necessary. “Follow me.”

Chen Ge led the two young men to the entrance to Night of the Living Dead on the first floor. The two saw the dilapidated setting and less than desirable mannequins that populated the scenario.

“The style is from ten years back.”

“Honestly, with set pieces like these, I feel like I can sue you for overcharging me for the entrance ticket.”

Zhu Jianing and Fei Youliang wandered into the Night of the Living Dead scenario and touched the dust that had gathered on the mannequins. “Just how long has this place been deserted?”

“Looks like the business is dying. I should have known that you would have hired the same 50-cent army to fill the comments with good reviews.”

“Are you two done?” Chen Ge raised the wooden boards from the floor. “The entrance is here.”

“It’s underground?” The two young men did not feel weirded out. They walked out of the Night of the Living Dead scenario with their backpacks and stopped before the staircase that led down the stairs.

The dark corridor led into an abyss. The doors to the classrooms on both sides creaked creepily, and even before they got down the stairs, a chilling wind surged from within to caress their skin.

“Now... this is... better.”

As the two young men entered the Mu Yang High School scenario, Chen Ge yelled from the entrance, “If you’re really afraid, yell for help at the cameras—the workers will come help you.”

After closing the boards, Chen Ge suddenly realized that there was no surveillance installed in the Mu Yang High School scenario, and there was not really an exit. He had just been saying that earlier out of habit. Looks like I better go in to join them. Hopefully, their minds are still intact when I reach them.

He had Xu Wan stay at the door to maintain the order. He put on the Doctor Skull-cracker outfit and entered the main control room to switch the background music to Black Friday before entering the Mu Yang High School scenario with the box of nametags given to him by Fan Yu.

...

After Zhu Jianing and Fei Youliang descended the staircase, they stayed near the entrance. Both of them waited until Chen Ge closed the wooden boards before they made a signal and retrieved Bluetooth cameras from their backpacks and pinned them on their chests.

“Each of us will record our side. We’ll film everything inside his Haunted House, and after we solve it, we’ll post the guide online.”

“Will that achieve anything?”

“For local Haunted Houses like this one, the design and traps of the scenarios are considered business secrets because they depend on them to attract visitors. If the guide is already posted online, then it would have lost all its allure. This is why Haunted Houses ban the usage of cameras and video recorders. They have to keep the mystery and anticipation up for future visitors.” Fei Youliang fixed his camera and walked in front. “After shooting the video, we’ll edit it to make it as boring as possible, and then after posting it online, we’ll hire some 50-cent army to swamp his comments with bad reviews.”

“Okay.” After he looked around, Zhu Jianing added, “But I have to say, the man has put a lot of effort into his setting; it does feel like we’re at an abandoned high school.”

“At the end of the day, it is still fake. In comparison to the 3D scary movies I’ve seen, this is nothing.” Fei Youliang was not afraid; if anything, he was bored. “Let’s get this over with.”

The two walked down the dim corridor. On each side of them were empty classrooms. The doors creaked on their hinges, and weird noises occasionally drifted out from the classrooms.

“Do you think the exit will be inside these two classrooms beside the entrance? After all, the comments did say that the boss is a master manipulator.”

“That’s your first mistake. If you focus too hard on searching for the exit, you will have fallen for the man’s scheme.” When Fei Youliang was talking, he did not forget to maintain the balance of his upper body. Both he and Zhu Jianing were expert cameramen.

“You’re right. Thankfully, you came with me.”

“In reality, Haunted Houses are very boring. It’s just people scaring people, and if you take it too seriously, you lose.”

The end of the dark corridor was still nowhere to be seen. Even though they said that they were not afraid, their progress was glacially slow. The signs of a fire could be seen everywhere, and the unique scent of burning was mixed in the stall air.

As living humans entered the scenario, the atmosphere inside Mu Yang High School slowly changed. In an unseen corner, many pairs of eyes slowly opened.

Fei Youliang, who walked forward, was a scary movie aficionado. As authentic as the setting was, it was not scary enough to make him feel afraid yet. In comparison, the muscular man, Zhu Jianing, started to wilt under pressure. He hid himself behind Fei Youliang, and his eyes kept wandering about to the dark corners.

The background music was not that scary, but it made his heart rate race and his breathing uneven. Fei Youliang suddenly stopped, causing Zhu Jianing to walk into the man’s back.

“What’s wrong?” Zhu Jianing said in a volume that he did not realize had become a whisper.

“This classroom, it’s different from the rest.” Fei Youliang stood at the door of the sealed classroom. Looking at the dark-colored uniforms that filled the chairs, he had a weird feeling that the classroom was filled with students.

“There are all these uniforms.” Zhu Jianing was even more scared than Fei Youliang; just a glance through the window was enough to make him shiver. “Should we go to someplace else first?”

“Don’t be scared. A worker at the Haunted House should be hiding inside this room, and that’s why its decor is different from the others.” Fei Youliang could still maintain his calmness. “The man said that we must experience the four scenarios, and this should be one of them. This is the selling point of the Haunted House; we have to record it and then solve it so that we can post it online.”

While he was talking, the door slowly opened on its own like being moved by an invisible hand.

“There must be some kind of control mechanism. It’s common equipment used in the shooting of scary movies.” Fei Youliang slapped Zhu Jianing on his arm. “Come on, let’s go catch some ghosts.”

“You’re right, but...” Zhu Jianing said with a head full of cold sweat, “I’ve taken a look around, and there’re only school uniforms inside the room; there’s no space for anyone to hide.”

“There’s probably some hidden compartment. Be careful. This means that the actor might come out to scare you from unexpected corners.” Fei Youliang and Zhu Jianing dawdled outside the classroom for a long time before finally entering it.

Chapter 96 - Game Start

Chapter 96: Game Start

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The Sealed Classroom was a place that even Chen Ge did not want to stay in for long, but Fei Youliang and Zhu Jianing entered it easily. There was a weird smell in the air. Entering the room was like going underwater; there was an inexplicable pressure pressing down on them, causing their breathing to become rather uneven.

“Youliang, should I wait for you outside?” The classroom was darker than the corridor. Zhu Jianing, who stood behind Fei Youliang, had a frightened grimace on his face, and his forehead was covered with sweat.

...

“What did we promise each other before entering the Haunted House? We said we’d never abandon each now, but now you’re already giving up?” Fei Youliang was getting increasingly agitated. The uniforms that littered the room were not unlike the props that were used in scary movies; for some reason, he felt apprehensive about going near them.

Zhu Jianing did not notice that his teammate’s confidence had been shattered. He whispered from behind him, “Where do you think the Haunted House’s worker will be hiding? Will they jump up from underneath the uniforms?”

“Not clear, but they would normally do something like that.” Fei Youliang nudged his way to the lectern. He gripped his fists as he walked down the rows of tables, but nothing scary happened. “It does not seem like there’s anyone hiding here.”

“But if there’s no one hiding here, why waste so many resources to create such a large and detailed set? There is what looks like blood writing carved onto the tables, and these old uniforms were purposely left in the room.” Zhu Jianing glanced behind him. “Furthermore, the door opened on its own earlier like it was inviting us to come in.”

“It was probably the wind.” Fei Youliang turned to glare at Zhu Jianing. “If you have to time to mumble this nonsense, come and help me look for the hidden mechanism or trick.”

“Don’t be mad, I’m just helping you analyze the situation...” Zhu Jianing headed in the other direction of the room. Due to his large body, when he walked past one of tables, he accidentally knocked one of the uniforms to the floor. He did not mind it and did not seem intent on picking it up. He stepped on the uniform and continued to walk until he reached the classroom’s backdoor. “There is indeed nothing worth getting scared over; I was expecting something to pounce at me when I passed the tables...”

Zhu Jianing’s voice faded out. He turned and realized that the classroom had reverted to its original state.

“When I walked down the row, I remember knocking into one of the uniforms. Youliang, did you pick it up from the floor?”

“A uniform that fell to the floor? How come I didn’t notice it?” Fei Youliang stood at the other end of the classroom, a distance of several tables away.

“Was I imagining it?” Zhu Jianing walked back up the row. He stood beside the table that was situated at the center of the room. “I remember it was this uniform that fell to the floor.”

He picked the uniform up and waved it once. A weird odor drifted out from it. It smelled like rotten fish.

“This is weird.” Zhu Jianing dropped the uniform onto the table and squatted down to inspect the table and chair for hidden mechanisms. He shook the table, and everything seemed normal. Just as he was about to move on, the sound of marbles came from inside the drawer.

“There’s something inside?” Zhu Jianing bent down and leaned into the mouth of the drawer. The dark drawer was stuffed with test papers and textbooks.

“Why was there the sound of marbles? There’s hidden compartment inside this drawer?” He looked into the darkness and reached in to pull out the papers. He only pulled out the first one when he saw two round eyes staring right at him from behind the paper.

“F*ck!” The sudden scare caused Zhu Jianing, who was half-squatted, to stumble back and knock the two tables behind him out of position.

“What’s wrong?” The commotion shocked Fei Youliang, who was also in the room.

“There’s someone inside the drawer!” Zhu Jianing tried to crawl up from the floor, but his limbs failed him. His face was drained of blood.

“Have you lost your mind? How can a person fit inside a drawer?” Fei Youliang cursed as he went to help his teammate. “It’s probably some kind of prop.”

He pulled out the papers and textbooks from inside the drawer and dropped them onto the floor. “Take a look. Don’t be such a scaredy cat; there’s nothing inside.”

After ten seconds to calm himself down, Zhu Jianing finally climbed up from the floor. “But I really saw a pair of eyes... I’m not lying! I swear on my life!”

“Even if that’s true, it’s just a trick of the Haunted House. Why are you so scared?” Fei Youliang was not that scared to begin with, but what Zhu Jianing said did unsettle him a little. “Fine, let’s leave this room for now.”

The pair escaped in a hurry, leaving behind a trail of chaos.

“Do we need to continue?” Zhu Jianing asked. Looking at the corridor that seemingly had no end, his heart was quivering.

“You’re giving up in less than five minutes? We’re here to ruin this place, not to do promotion for this Haunted House.” Fei Youliang had half a mind to kick Zhu Jianing. “Get a hold of yourself! Why are you acting all scared like a little girl? How are you going to answer to your muscles?”

Then he continued to move forward. Even though Zhu Jianing was afraid, it would be worse to be abandoned or labelled a traitor of Qin Guang’s studio, so he powered on.

As he moved forward, he looked over his shoulder. When he saw the door to the sealed classroom slowly open again, he quickly caught up to Fei Youliang and hissed, “Let’s go, it feels like something is coming out from that classroom!”

The pair ran forward in a hurry. They ignored the toilet and arrived at the first junction.

“Just how big is this set? There’s even a choice of paths?”

Zhu Jianing had completely given up, and Fei Youliang was frowning deeply. He loved scary movies and had visited many Haunted House in his life, but this was the first time he had encountered such a Haunted House. They had not seen any Haunted House workers in ghost costumes, but the feeling of fear refused to leave. The longer they remained, the stronger that feeling became.

In the Haunted Houses that he visited in the past, he could still see the 'ghosts', and with the appearance of the 'ghosts', he would feel much better because all those 'ghosts' were actors hired by the Haunted House. It told him that the place was fake; it was all a human creation.

However, the Haunted House he was in that day had completely upended his preconception of Haunted Houses. There were no actors so far, but it had managed to create an inexplicable feeling of suspenseful fear, like something incredibly scary might happen at any moment.

"Let's try this way."

The corridor narrowed as Fei Youliang and Zhu Jianing headed toward the female dormitory.

The front few rooms were not scary, and their emotions slowly relaxed as the fear surrounding their hearts slowly disappeared. Then they entered the room with the Pen Spirit game.

In the female bedroom that was preserved like a crime scene, four chairs stood side by side, and several pieces of white paper as well as a ballpoint pen that was glued together with tape sat on one of the chairs.

Chapter 97 - The Rampaging Pen Spirit

Chapter 97: The Rampaging Pen Spirit

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“This bedroom feels different from the rest,” Zhu Jianing commented at the door. The man seemed like he was about to run at any moment. “It has that Escape the Room feel. The clues to the exit are probably hidden here as well, right?”

“No idea, this is the first time I’ve visited a Haunted House that gave its visitors such a great degree of freedom. The boss sure is confident that no accidents will happen to his customers.” Fei Youliang walked to the chairs and picked up a random piece of white paper. On it, it was written “When will I die? How will I die? Who will be the next to die?”

...

“This looks like the Pen Spirit game, but...” Fei Youliang turned to look at the ballpoint pen on the chair. “Isn’t this pen a bit too unconventional?”

“Does it contain some kind of hidden mechanism?” Zhu Jianing also walked over to hold the pen in his palm. He pressed on it for several times and almost broke the pen. “It seems like a normal pen to me.”

“Do you still remember what the Haunted House boss said before we came in?”

“There are four scenarios in the Haunted House, and we have to experience them all before we can get the clues to the exit.”

“That’s right. The clues are hidden in the four small scenarios. Let’s take a closer look around. In my experience, there’s probably a key or paper note hidden inside this bedroom.”

The bedroom was small, and the pair searched every corner but came up with nothing.

“This Haunted House is not that easy to unlock, and the design are incredibly detailed.” Fei Youliang placed the paper on the table. Three of them had writing on, but one was left blank. “Does this mean that we have to play the Pen Spirit game at least once before we can get the answer?”

“Playing the Pen Spirit game inside a Haunted House doesn’t sound like a good idea.” Zhu Jianing was flustered after reading the writing on the sheets of paper.

“Of the four scenarios, this one seems the simplest. If you don’t want to do this, we’ll need to go back to that classroom. Would you prefer that?” Fei Youliang waved his hand impatiently. “Plus, do you really think there is a Pen Spirit in this world? Get over here. We’ll try it once, and if it doesn’t work, we’ll leave.”

Fei Youliang felt something was off, and he felt weirdly uncomfortable, like something was grasping his heart. Zhu Youliang unwillingly walked toward Fei Youliang. They stood on opposite sides of the chairs.

“But I don’t know how the game works.”

“Don’t worry, I’ve seen many movies about the Pen Spirit. I’ve even tried it out a few times at home. It’s just a trick and can be scientifically explained.” Fei Youliang straightened the pen and hovered it over the single paper that was empty. “Cross your fingers over mine and grab the pen tightly.”

“Okay.” Zhu Jianing squatted down beside the chair and did what he was told. “Now what?”

“Just be quiet.” Fei Youliang wrote down “YES” and “NO” on the white paper. When the bedroom became completely quiet, he started to chant, “Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, you are my spirit from my previous life, and I am your spirit in this life. If you are with us, please draw a circle on the paper.”

As he finished, a cold blast of wind suddenly shook the half-opened door of the bedroom. The dilapidated door slowly opened to reveal the empty and dim corridor. Zhu Jianing shivered and shrunk involuntarily into the room.

“Stop moving.” Fei Youliang stared at the sharp end of the pen, his body frozen like a statue. The chilling wind streamed through the bedroom. The paper on the floor fluttered like an invisible hand was flipping through them. The temperature dropped, and coldness seeped up from their ankles.

When someone is asked to hold the same position under a highly stressful situation, one's senses would be heightened. This was not unlike a form of torture for the pair who was in the middle of the Pen Spirit game.

The decrepit bedroom seemed to turn darker, and the dirtied bedsheet moved in the wind like something was crawling out from underneath the bed. Ten minutes later, the pair's hands, which hung in midair, started to tremble, and a series of dots started to appear on the paper.

Zhu Jianing could not help but ask, "Has the Pen Spirit arrived?"

He could not withstand this kind of tense atmosphere.

"Many movies set the time for Pen Spirit to appear after ten minutes. If there's no reaction within ten minutes, it means that the game has failed, but this is a made-up rule. Often, people think that the Pen Spirit has arrived, but in reality, it is merely a psychological effect," Fei Youliang said to calm his teammate. "This place is one of the four scenarios mentioned by the boss. We'll try to follow his rules for now and see what kind of tricks he can play on us."

As he finished, the ballpoint pen in their hands moved. It was a slight movement, but both of them felt it.

"Was that you?" both asked at the same time, and they managed to see the shock registered on the other person's face.

"It wasn't me," Zhu Jianing denied in a hurry. He had completely recovered from the fear brought on by the pair of eyes, and now this happened. He was in a highly tense state. "Youliang, do you think the real Pen Spirit has arrived?"

"Don't be silly. The Pen Spirit game utilizes the game's format and the environment to create psychological pressure. The elongated time of maintaining a constant posture will cause the pen to appear like it has moved on its own even though it is actually the result of our bodies reacting to the environmental and physiological stimulus," Fei Youliang stated in a tone that sounded like he was persuading himself. "Our subconscious imagines that the pen has moved, and it has influenced our conscious mind."

However, as he finished, the pen moved again, and it was very obvious this time. The pair looked at each other before both turned toward the paper in unison. The little dots on the paper were connected by a line to form an irregular circle.

“F*ck! It’s really here!” Zhu Jianing’s first reaction was to pull his hand back, but he was stopped by Fei Youliang.

“Whether or not it is the real Pen Spirit, we have to continue this game.”

“Why?”

“If it is the real Pen Spirit, if we end the game without sending it off, we’ll be cursed by the Spirit until we die; if it is fake, then there is no reason for us to be afraid, and everything is just a trick arranged by the boss to scare us.”

“Then what shall we do next?”

“Try to ask it some questions, and then send the Pen Spirit away,” Fei Youliang said calmly.

“What kind of questions we should ask? Questions like the ones written on the other paper?” Zhu Jianing pointed at the pieces of paper that littered the floor.

“That is a trap. We must not ask the Pen Spirit questions that are related to death. Try to ask some random questions.”

“Random questions?”

“Yes, let me try.” Fei Youliang gripped Zhu Jianing’s hand tightly. After a pause, he shushed Zhu Jianing, and he muttered softly, “Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, can you tell me the name of my future wife?”

To Fei Youliang’s surprise, when he finished the question, the wind inside the bedroom suddenly stopped blowing, and an insurmountable pressure started to expand from behind him.

The pen in their hands quivered violently, and soon, three words appeared on the white paper.

“YOU WILL DIE!”

Chapter 98 - There's Someone Behind You

Chapter 98: There's Someone Behind You

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“You will die?” Fei Youliang was confused. He had asked about his future wife’s name, but why would such a curse come out? There was no connection between them. He made sure he had followed the rules of the Pen Spirit game closely; he did not do anything that should have angered the Pen Spirit.

He thought about it, and an answer came to him. This must be one of the preset designs. No matter what question I asked, these three words were destined to appear.

...

Feeling like he had seen through the boss’ trick, the confidence that Fei Youliang had lost earlier started to resurface.

“The method to make these three words appear is interesting. Temporarily, I still don’t understand it, but to amplify the fear factor, the boss has forgotten to take care of the situation’s sense of logic,” he explained. “If it were any other visitor, they probably would have ended the Pen Spirit game or done something taboo to anger the Pen Spirit in their panic, and the appearance of these three words would have heightened their internal suspicion, thinking that the Pen Spirit had really appeared and allowed themselves to be feared.

Unfortunately, their visitors today are the two of us. We have made no mistakes along the way, but the answer on the paper still comes up as irrelevant to my question. Therefore, this Pen Spirit game is nothing more than a scary trick.”

Even after his long explanation, Fei Youliang realized that Zhu Jianing still had not responded, making him feel like he was talking to a wall.

“Xiao Zhu? Why is your hand so cold?” He raised his head and saw Zhu Jianing was staring dumbly at the space behind him, his mouth wide open and his features twisted in abject fear.

“What are you looking at?”

The expression on Zhu Jianing's face unsettled Fei Youliang. He did not seem to hear his teammate, and his whole body was shivering, just like the broken ballpoint pen they were holding. A bad feeling appeared in Fei Youliang's heart. He had also sensed that the atmosphere in the bedroom had changed. There was an indescribable presence that had joined them in the room, one that had not been there earlier, and it felt like it was just behind him.

He wanted to turn to take a look, but something pressed down on his back, and every muscle in his body tensed. "What's going on? What's behind this?"

Various questions flashed across his mind, and the feeling of wanting to take a look but being afraid of what he might see made the man crazy.

"Xiao Zhu, tell me, what are you seeing? What is behind me?"

A chill soon spread through his body; it felt like he had been dropped into an icy cave. Fei Youliang shivered involuntarily, and various purplish bruises appeared on his skin, like many invisible hands were grabbing him.

The thing behind him felt like it was trying to squeeze itself into his body, and the chilling presence pushing down on his shoulders became heavier and heavier!

Opposite him, Zhu Jianing seemed to use every energy in his body to squeeze out a warning.

"There's someone behind you!"

"Behind me?"

There were two explanations to this warning; either someone was literally on his back or someone was standing behind him. Fei Youliang's brain was churning when Zhu Jianing suddenly jumped up from the floor, shook Fei Youliang's hand off, and ran out the room!

Zhu Jianing did not hesitate or even turn around once in his escape.

Fei Youliang, who was abandoned, still sat dumbly on the floor. The ballpoint pen seemed to have stuck to his hand, and no matter how hard he tried to shake it loose, it simply would not come off. Suddenly, his arm froze like something had taken control of it. Then the pen started to move on its own to write on the white paper.

“YOU WILL DIE! YOU WILL DIE! YOU WILL DIE!”

The series of blood red curses appeared on the white paper. Zhu Jianing had already left, and the one holding the pen was himself. He was certain that he did not move his hand, so this meant that these curses were written by something else in the room.

Even at a time like that, Fei Youliang still managed to maintain his cool. He was an adrenaline junkie, and he did not believe in ghosts. He believed in the rationality and logic of science above all else.

The thing that Xiao Zhu saw is probably some 3D imaging. Since the chairs are arranged in such a manner, it means that the position of the Pen Spirit game is constant. With the careful manipulation of angles, it would create an authentic looking effect. That should be the tactic employed there, but why would my body be shaking?

He admitted that he had underestimated this broken ballpoint pen and the Haunted House in general. If given another chance, he would not have entered the Haunted House with so little preparation, and he definitely would have picked a better partner.

The chill on his back continued to spread. As if depleted, the pen in Fei Youliang's palm finally collapsed and broke into pieces after it finished the crazy scrawls. When the pen left his palm, the last word it wrote was “DIE”.

Is it over? Fei Youliang felt his senses returning to his arm. It was then that he finally sighed in relief. His muscles were still rather frozen. He wanted to work some temperature into them, but he realized the pressure on his shoulders had not left, and he was still unable to move!

He had thought he had survived the Pen Spirit game, but the real experience had just started.

Why can't I move still? Fei Youliang creaked his neck inch by inch to look over his shoulder. His eyes were narrowed into slits, and he was fully prepared, but when he turned, he saw there was nothing behind him.

It was all for naught? But then why would Xiao Zhu react in such a crazy manner? What did he actually see?

Fei Youliang's mind churned hastily, and the pressure on his shoulders increased like someone was stepping on them.

Shoulders? Stepping on them?

An image flashed through his mind, and Fei Youliang slowly raised his head.

Raven-black hair falling all over her head, her face bloated from asphyxiation, the eyes popping out of her pockets, anger rimming the edges.

There was a hanging woman standing on Fei Youliang's shoulders!

His lips fell open, but no sound came out. Every hair on his body stood upright, and his glasses slowly slid off his face. Fei Youliang felt as if his heart had stopped at that moment.

"I..."

Before finishing the sentence, the focus in his eyes started to lax, and his body collapsed weakly toward the floor.

...

Chen Ge waited for a few minutes before entering Mu Yang High School's scenario. He did not want to enter too soon after the two previous visitors.

I haven't heard any screams for so long... looks like I underestimated those two.

After putting on the skin mask, Chen Ge's first destination was the Sealed Classroom. He placed the paper box with the twenty-four name tags on the lectern. The tables and chairs have been moved. They have been here and probably stumbled across something.

What that something was, Chen Ge had no clue. After all, even he had not fully understood the secret of this sealed classroom yet.

After putting the tables and chairs back into position, and the papers and textbooks back into the drawer, Chen Ge suddenly heard footsteps coming from the junction not far ahead. Someone was running through the corridor.

Who could that be? He put on the bloodied coat and the mask made from multiple human faces and slowly slipped out of the classroom.

Chapter 99 - Silently Looking at You

Chapter 99: Silently Looking at You

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The footsteps sounded hurried, like the person was running away from some scary beast. When Chen Ge exited the classroom, he saw the person responsible for it. The 1.8-meter-tall Zhu Jianing rushed out of the female dormitory, screaming for dear life. His face was blanched, and he raced down the corridor like a mad bull.

What's going on? Based on his running direction, he probably ran into something scary inside the female dormitory, but there's nothing scary inside the female bedrooms. Zhu Jianing was already scared out of his mind before Chen Ge even did anything. This gave Chen Ge a sense of helplessness.

...

Didn't they say they're not afraid of anything? Weren't they very calm when they entered the scenario? Why is he running amok like a rabid dog now? Chen Ge also did not know what encounter they had experienced in the newly unlocked scenario. For the sake of safety, he decided to intercept Zhu Jianing to ask him for details.

Zhu Jianing, who had raced out of the female bedroom, did not even have a chance to catch his breath before he saw a shadow moving inside the sealed classroom!

The school uniform has come alive? The thought appeared in his mind immediately. He was racing so fast that he did not have the momentum to stop himself. When he reached the classroom door, he saw a bloody shadow slide out from the classroom. Time slowed for Zhu Jianing. His gaze fell on the person's face; it was a face sewn together by many different faces, and every single one of them captured emotions of fear, terror, and pain.

I knew the classroom was not safe! Unable to stop himself, Zhu Jianing rammed directly into the wall of the corridor. Ignoring the pain that shot through his body, he pushed himself off the wall and turned to run!

The combination of pain and fear had muddled his mind. Without seeing where he was going, Zhu Jianing saw the first exit and he rushed into it. When he entered, he realized it was the corner toilet.

Why would he trap himself? Chen Ge was becoming more and more curious about what exactly this man stumbled across in the female bedroom. Also, why is he alone? Where is his friend?

After giving it some thought, Chen Ge thought it was best if he could get the answer directly from the man. He touched the skin mask on his face before entering the toilet. It was not until he was inside the toilet that Zhu Jianing realized he had taken the wrong turn, but there was nothing else he could do. He yanked open a random cubicle, which was the fourth one and hid inside it.

He clamped his palm over his mouth and squeezed his muscular body to fit beside the toilet, his heart racing and his pupils darting about nervously. Zhu Jianing was really scared out of his mind. When they were playing the Pen Spirit game, he had sat across from Fei Youliang, and while his friend was busy analyzing, he had seen the Pen Spirit slowly appear behind Fei Youliang. When the woman's bloated face appeared in his mind, he also felt like the air was getting sucked out of his lungs.

That wasn't an actor! This Haunted House is really haunted! They had searched the bedroom, including under the bed, before starting the game. They were sure there was no one hiding inside the room; that poor woman had appeared out of thin air!

It has to be a ghost! The woman's face refused to leave Zhu Jianing's mind. Even when he closed his eyes, the woman could be seen swaying from the hanging rope. He felt extremely helpless as he leaned against the wall. He felt weirdly exposed.

Youliang is still inside the room. The ghost was standing on his shoulders. A scene like that wouldn't appear in real life, would it? Zhu Jianing took several deep breaths. He felt like he was going light-headed from a lack of oxygen.

I need to contact the people outside; this Haunted House is problematic. He tried to tell himself not to be afraid, but his muscular arms kept shivering. He rummaged in his backpack for a long time before he found his phone.

"Xiao Zhu? Why are you calling me? Are you guys done with the video?" The squat middle-aged man's voice came from the other end.

“Brother Yuan, please come in to help me! There are actual ghosts inside this Haunted House!” Zhu Jianing’s voice was trembled with tears. “I don’t know how long much longer I can hold on. There are god knows how many ghosts looking for me.”

“Isn’t it normal for Haunted House to have ghosts?” The middle-aged man thought Zhu Jianing was joking.

“Not ghosts played by actors but actual ghosts!” Zhu Jianing hissed urgently. He did not dare raise his voice lest the ‘ghosts’ outside heard him.

The middle-aged man finally noticed the seriousness in Zhu Jianing’s voice. “Give the phone to Youliang, let me talk to him.”

“Brother Liang was possessed by the ghost; he is still trapped inside that cursed bedroom.”

“Possessed?”

“I saw it with my own eyes; the ghost was standing on his shoulders. It was a hanging ghost, the face was purplish white, and her eyes were popping out from their sockets!”

“Standing on his shoulders? You guys were assaulted by the workers? Okay! We’re going in now!”

“Not the workers, it’s real ghost; there are no worker inside this Haunted House...” Before Zhu Jianing could finish, footsteps came from the toilet entrance. “Has the ghost entered?”

“What are you talking about? Hello?” The middle-aged man’s voice came from the phone. Afraid that it might catch the ghost’s attention, Zhu Jianing quickly ended the call.

Hopefully, it doesn’t hear me. Please don’t let it discover me, and I won’t ever visit this place again. Zhu Jianing turned off the phone, bent down, and stared straight at the wooden door of the cubicle.

He did not know when the door before him would be pulled open, and he did not know what might be beyond the door. Various scary images filled his mind like the scary woman’s face appearing behind the door or a school uniform fluttering on its own into his cubicle.

What should I do? Brother Yuan, please come soon! he prayed to himself. The sound of footsteps came closer and closer!

CREAK...

The door to the first cubicle was pushed open. The old wooden door creaked audibly, and it caused Zhu Jianing to hold his breath in fear. After a small pause, the second cubicle door was pushed open.

It's getting closer! After another long pause, as he expected, the third door was pushed open.

It's right next to me! It'll open this door soon! The muscles all over Zhu Jianing's body tensed. Fear and terror were tormenting his sanity. Time trickled by, but weirdly enough, no one opened the door to his cubicle. He waited for half a minute, and the door to his cubicle was still unmoved.

It left? He gathered all his courage to pull open the door a sliver. There was nothing outside. It really left?

He pushed the door slowly open, and there was really no one outside. That was lucky. I was almost discovered.

After sighing in relief, Zhu Jianing called the middle-aged man's number again. As the light shone on his phone, he saw something reflected on the phone display. He looked behind him, and on top of the door of the third cubicle, a disjointed face was silently looking at him.

Chapter 100 - What Happened to Fei Youliang?

Chapter 100: What Happened to Fei Youliang?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The phone slid through his fingers and landed on the floor. A voice could still be heard on the other end.

“Youliang’s phone is not reachable. What happened to you guys in there?”

...

“Xiao Zhu? Can you hear me?”

“Zhu Jianing? Are you alright? Talk to me?”

Of course, Zhu Jianing could hear him, but at that moment, he had lost the power of speech. His pupils rolled back, and Zhu Jianing slithered to the floor like wet laundry.

“Didn’t I warn you not to take pictures and videos inside the Haunted House? Why didn’t you listen?” Chen Ge removed his mask and placed it inside his pocket. He glanced at Zhu Jianing, who was convulsing on the floor, and he had a renewed appreciation for the disclaimer agreement.

His scare tactics were different from other Haunted Houses. Normal Haunted Houses had actors pretend to be ghosts who hid in the blind corner to scare the visitors with sudden screams and shouts. Chen Ge’s tactic was different. His focus was on the creation of the atmosphere, and he allowed the visitors to walk into the scare on their own. The whole process was fool-proof and could not be detected earlier.

Even when the visitors were already prepared, they would still be scared— Zhu Jianing was the perfect example. The fear inside his heart which had no place to release was like an ice cube lodged in his throat, stopping his breath and chilling his bones.

Chen Ge exited the third cubicle, picked up the phone, and slid it inside Zhu Jianing’s pocket before dragging the man out of the toilet and depositing him in the corridor.

Why haven't the spasms stopped? But he's still breathing, so he should be fine. Chen Ge applied pressure to the man's temples, and when Zhu Jianing's pupils regained focus, he said, "Can you hear me? Where is your friend who came in with you?"

There was no answer, so Chen Ge had to give up on the man. "Stay put, or else you might run into an actual ghost."

He was afraid that he might scare the other person dumb as well, so Chen Ge removed his bloodied outfit and carried it in his arm.

This man came running out from the female dormitory, so his friend should be there.

Chen Ge ran toward the dormitory, but even after he searched through all the bedrooms, he could not find Fei Youliang.

Where did he go? He stopped at the room with the Pen Spirit. The pen that he had fixed with tape was broken once more and was lying on the floor.

There is no sign of fighting in the room, so where could the bespectacled man have gone? Chen Ge exited the female dormitory and reached the junction. Could he have gone down the other way?

The other route led to the deep well and school office. The road was uneven, and after passing several offices, Chen Ge finally found Fei Youliang. The man's condition was even worse than Zhu Jianing's. There was white foam around his lips, and his glasses were shattered. However, the most curious thing was that he was lying near the well at the end of the corridor with one of his hands holding the edge of the well like he was going to haul himself into it.

What in the world happened to this guy? Looks like he has angered more than just the Pen Spirit! There was no surveillance in this new scenario, so Chen Ge had no idea what had happened to Fei Youliang.

Looking at the man's worse for wear condition, Chen Ge very kindly checked his pulse.

The man's condition is very similar to He San's when he first visited the Haunted House. I'd better get him out of here first.

After wasting plenty of energy, Chen Ge finally managed to drag the two to the scenario entrance. Prying open the wooden boards, he just finished dragging the two onto the first floor when he heard the sound of an argument coming from outside the Haunted House; it sounded like the people from Qin Guang's studio were attempting to barge into the Haunted House.

So much trouble today. With one arm under each visitor, he dragged the two out of the Haunted House. Chen Ge dropped Fei Youliang and Zhu Jianing before the people from Qin Guang's studio. His eyes scanned the lot of them as he demanded, "What is the commotion about?"

Two lively, vibrant men had walked into the Haunted House, and two lifeless husks had come out. One of them was even foaming at the mouth. Did he get scared until he vomited?

The surrounding crowd immediately took a step back to clear a space for them.

"Xiao Zhu! Youliang!" The people from Qin Guang's studio immediately rushed over to help them off the ground. Zhu Jianing was recovering; he now responded to others at least, but his legs were still weak.

The serious case was Fei Youliang. He was not unconscious, because his eyes were wide open, but he did not respond to people calling his name. His expression was blank, and the white foam continued to trail out of the corner of his lips.

"What have you done to the both of them?" the middle-aged man demanded angrily.

"Why would you ask me? How would I know?" Chen Ge was being honest. When he entered the scenario, the two were already in such a state.

"We talked to each other earlier. Xiao Zhu said that your employees stepped on Youliang's shoulders! How dare you allow your workers to assault the visitors? We are definitely going to sue!"

"Who saw my employees assault him?" Chen Ge glanced at the two lying on the floor. "Feel free to call the police. I can guarantee, other than their own hands, you won't be able to find foreign fingerprints on the rest of their bodies."

"Stop arguing, I'll call the park's doctor. The most important thing now is to help them." This was such a headache for Uncle Xu.

“They’re in this state, and you still refuse to admit your fault? Thankfully, we came prepared!” The middle-aged man opened Fei Youliang’s backpack and pulled out the laptop from within. Then he connected the wireless camera from Fei Youliang’s chest and the audio recorder attached to the backpack to the laptop.

“Indeed, you people sure came prepared.” When Chen Ge was dragging the ‘bodies’ out of the Haunted House earlier, he had already noticed the cameras and could guess the real motive behind why they were there. However, he did not mind it one bit. Other Haunted Houses banned recording was because they were afraid that their set designs would be leaked; after all, designing a set was incredibly pricey. However, that was not a concern for Chen Ge. He would be given new scenarios after completing Trial Missions. In terms of the updating speed for new scenarios, no Haunted House could rival Chen Ge.

From his perspective, the videos collected by these guys were a type of alternative advertisement; after all, what his Haunted House was missing most was exposure.

“You won’t be so smug in a bit. I will keep the video of your employees physically assaulting the visitors as evidence!” the middle-aged man said loudly like he was trying to get the attention of the passing crowd.

“We are absolute professionals; we didn’t not lay a finger on your people. How many times do you want me to repeat that?” Chen Ge asked as he wandered over to the laptop. He, too, was actually curious about what happened to Fei Youliang inside the Haunted House and why he ended up next to the well.

The middle-aged man straightened the laptop and played the recorded video. The screen was dark, and only random noises could be heard. At the time, Fei Youliang had not entered the Haunted House. The recorder had probably been activated beforehand. The camera had not been taken out yet, so they could only hear noises but could see no image.

Several seconds later, Chen Ge’s voice could be heard from the computer.

“Let me remind you, the last person who made a claim like yours came out on his back.”

Then Fei Youliang’s condescending laugh followed. “You’ve only managed to arouse my interest even more.”

Chapter 101 - Mu Yang High School's Hidden Mission!

Chapter 101: Mu Yang High School's Hidden Mission!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The sound coming from the laptop was not loud, but everyone could hear him clearly. Everyone turned to look at Fei Youliang, who was collapsed on the floor with foam on his lips, and their expressions were mixed. The middle-aged man sensed the crowd opinion shifting, so he quickly fast-forwarded.

One or two minutes later, an image finally appeared on screen. Zhu Jianing and Fei Youliang had officially entered the Haunted House. The visitors outside were curious about the interior design; some even pushed forward, attempting to see the hidden traps and layout.

...

The Mu Yang High School scenario was built underground, so it was very quiet. The recorder picked up the pair's conversation clearly, including how they discussed posting the guide online and hiring a 50-cent army to swamp the Haunted House with bad reviews.

"So, these people are here to purposely create trouble?"

"We almost believed them earlier."

The crowd started to mumble, and the middle-aged man had no choice but to fast-forward some more.

Due to the lack of lighting, the images were not clear. All they could see was a dim corridor and empty classrooms on both sides, but that was already scary enough.

The people from Qin Guang's studio did not shoot this video to help Chen Ge promote his Haunted House; they were looking for evidence of Chen Ge ordering his employees to assault his visitors, but after six minutes of footage, all they could see was Fei Youliang and Zhu Jianing being scared on camera. There was not even the shadow of a worker.

The people from Qin Guang's studio started to get worried, but the visitors were increasingly curious. Such a large Haunted House, but they did not have even one employee playing the ghost? Then, how did they plan to scare their visitors?

Very soon, the video reached the point where the two were playing the Pen Spirit game. When Chen Ge heard the familiar question asked by Fei Youliang, he almost bit his tongue. He finally understood what the pair did that angered the Pen Spirit so.

The video after that was even weirder. Zhu Jianing suddenly dropped his hand and escaped from the room while Fei Youliang started writing madly on the white paper.

“YOU WILL DIE! YOU WILL DIE! YOU WILL DIE!”

Looking at the words that appeared on the paper, the surrounding visitors were confused.

“What is he doing?”

“Mental breakdown? There's no need to trouble the park's doctor; we should call the mental hospital directly.”

“In other words, two of them entered the Haunted House, and one of them was scared dumb by his friend?”

Watching this video, Chen Ge sighed greatly in relief. Other than two victims, only he knew what really happened. The Pen Spirit must have appeared then, but it was unknown whether it could not be captured on camera or the camera angle was wrong. Regardless, the Pen Spirit did not show on the video; however, what was recorded was this eerie situation.

The video continued to play, and Chen Ge leaned in closer; he was most interested in what happened next. After Zhu Jianing escaped, Fei Youliang was left alone in the room. The man who was scrawling madly on the paper suddenly stopped.

The camera was pinned to his chest, and the video stood still for several seconds. Then the image tipped backwards—Fei Youliang seemed to have fainted.

“No one touched him, right?”

“Yeah, so why did he faint?”

Ten seconds later, something even weirder happened. The camera angle suddenly moved; Fei Youliang was standing up again!

He walked unevenly out of the bedroom. The camera was shaking violently; it felt like the man had forgotten how to walk as he tipped left and right. A fainted person who suddenly stood up and walked on his own... that had never happened before in Chen Ge's years of experience dealing with fainted visitors.

This man had probably been taken over by the Pen Spirit!

Chen Ge did not say anything, but his eyes narrowed. Fei Youliang soon familiarized himself with his body. A few seconds later, he picked up his speed, and his gait was no different from a normal person's. When he reached the junction, Chen Ge and Zhu Jianing had just entered the toilet; they had brushed past each other just like that.

The Pen Spirit was trying to escape the Haunted House? Chen Ge was spooked by the thought. If not for the incident that happened after this, the Pen Spirit might have successfully escaped.

In the video, Fei Youliang seemed to realize that there were people inside the toilet, so he snuck past the toilet before running toward the sealed classroom. His target was clear; he walked toward the last row and hugged one of the uniforms to his chest. When he was about to leave, he saw the paper box with the twenty-four name tags Chen Ge left on the lectern.

As if remembering something horrible, Fei Youliang deposited the tags on the table hurriedly. After pulling one out and placing it in his pocket, he ran toward the exit. However, before that could happen, the broken door of the classroom closed on its own.

Then, the weirdest part of the video occurred. Fei Youliang turned around to yell at the empty classroom.

"I also treat this classroom as our home, but I have my reason to leave; I have to explain this to Wang Xin!

"Please let me go!

"I promise to come back after I'm done!

"Get away from me! I have to leave today! No one is going to stop me!"

Fei Youliang maddened screams came from the computer. He yelled angrily at the empty classroom.

“Let me go! Let me go!”

The camera kept shaking before falling to the ground like it had been knocked off in a struggle. From that angle, the camera perfectly focused on Fei Youliang’s expression, which was changing madly like there were more than ten different personalities inside his body at the same time.

Several seconds later, the expression on Fei Youliang’s face returned to normal, and the classroom door opened. Without a word, he picked up the camera and replaced it on his chest. Then, like a puppet, he walked toward the deepest part of the Mu Yang High School scenario.

At that time, Chen Ge’s black phone vibrated. He pulled his phone out silently before taking several steps back, but he kept his gaze on the laptop.

While all this had been happening, he had been inside the corner toilet. There was only a wall between them, but he had not heard any commotion from the classroom next door. It felt like, after the classroom door was closed, the space within shifted to another dimension.

The video continued to play. Fei Youliang, who was moving in an awkward way, took deliberate steps toward the well. He stepped on the edge of the well and started to talk to himself.

“Are we going to jump?”

“I can understand Chen Yalin’s pain; she has her own reason.”

“If I were in her position, I believe I would do the same thing. After all, Wang Xin was her best friend.”

“Then, shall we give her another chance?”

Fei Youliang stepped back down from the well. His expression slowly returned to a blank face, and with a tilt of his head, he collapsed to the floor. Around four minutes later, Chen Ge arrived.

The camera had recorded everything. The first thing Chen Ge did was perform first aid, and everyone watching the video could bear witness to that.

“The boss didn’t do anything wrong. If anything, he was trying to save your friend.”

“We almost blamed an innocent person!”

The people from Qin Guang’s studio were made speechless. By that time, Chen Ge had retreated to the outer ring of the crowd, and he glanced at the black phone.

“Dear Specter’s Favored! Congratulations on triggering the Hidden Mission at 2-Star Scenario, Mu Yang High School—The Pen Spirit’s Wish!”

Chapter 102 - Reward: Hiring the Pen Spirit

Chapter 102: Reward: Hiring the Pen Spirit

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Mission Requirement: Find the Pen Spirit’s best friend and fulfil its wish.

“Mission Reward: The Pen Spirit’s affection level will increase tremendously, and you will have a chance to recruit it as the Haunted House’s employee!”

...

Chen Ge’s eyes studied the last sentence closely. Hiring an actual ghost to be his worker was his dream, and he had not expected that the day would arrive so soon!

When he first received the black phone, he had been paying extra attention to the My Team of Ghouls and Ghosts tab, but after completing so many missions, the tab had remained empty. Both Xiaoxiao and Zhang Ya could not be hired due to specific reasons. Chen Ge had already given up on that thought; after all, human and ghosts were different. However, it was not as good as he had hoped, since the black phone had now issued this mission.

The perks of employing the Pen Spirit were endless; she could predict the future and could scare the visitors without the use of make-up. In Chen Ge’s eyes, she was the perfect employee.

I shall help the Pen Spirit fulfil her wish.

After slipping the black phone back into his pocket, Chen Ge squeezed through the crowd. The few from Qin Guang’s studio were packing up the equipment and laptop; they looked like they were ready to leave. “Who said you people can go?”

Chen Ge walked toward Fei Youliang and pulled out the nametag from his pocket. The dirtied name tag had a woman’s name written on it—Chen Yalin.

“Why would you steal a prop from the Haunted House?” Chen Ge waved the nametag in the air. “Don’t tell me, this old nametag belongs to Fei Youliang?”

The people from Qin Guang’s studio looked at each other. They did not know what had possessed Fei Youliang to go to the classroom to steal this nametag either.

“Xiao Chen, let me handle this.” Uncle Xu was afraid of conflict, so he quickly came out to block Chen Ge.”

“First thing’s first, I need them to delete all the videos from their laptop, or else they are not leaving this place. Every set inside the Haunted House took painstaking effort to build, and I will not allow my effort to go to waste just like that.”

Uncle Xu also understood the damage that the Haunted House would suffer if the video was released to the public. He kept a close eye on the people from Qin Guang’s studio as they deleted the video from the laptop, then he led them to the park management. These people’s behavior had created a negative influence on the park, and they would be punished according to the park rules.

After the few were led away, Chen Ge pushed them out of his mind. In a way, he pitied them from accidentally angering the Pen Spirit.

After they left, Xu Wan walked out from the Haunted House. “Boss, are we still going to continue for the rest of the day?”

“Of course.” Chen Ge returned to the ticket booth, and the originally orderly crowd suddenly swamped him.

“Brother, how come there is no mention of the school scenario on the public forum? It looks f*cking interesting!”

“Is the ticket to visit the school the same price?”

“Can we go in four at a time? I haven’t been so excited and scared at the same time! Someone hold me!”

Chen Ge did not expect that the crowd’s reaction to the new scenario would be so positive after witnessing what had happened to Fei Youliang and Zhu Jianing. He glanced at the crowd and realized that most of them were students.

“I’m sorry, but due to some accidents, the scenario is temporarily closed for a two-day maintenance period.” Fei Youliang and Zhu Jianing were the beta testers. From their experience, Chen Ge realized that even without his intervention, the scenario was independent enough to scare the visitors on its own, but there were still too many uncertainties and, thus, a certain risk.

It was the same with the Murder by Midnight scenario initially. The mischievous Xiaoxiao followed behind Monkey and gave the man the scare of his life. It was only after Chen Ge solved the hidden mission in the Murder by Midnight scenario that the situation improved.

To have the lingering spirits inside Mu Yang High School listen to me, the simplest solution is to complete the scenario's hidden mission. Chen Ge stuck his hand into his pocket, and with his fingers curled around the black phone, he came to a decision.

The Haunted House continued to operate, the incident with Qin Guang's studio's people an interlude that was soon forgotten. Chen Ge was busy until 4 pm, when the number of park visitors decreased. Chen Ge called Xu Wan over and had her get off work early. After Xu Wan left, he entered the Mu Yang High School scenario alone.

This was the first 2-star scenario unlocked by Chen Ge. Its scenario was placed at the stairs that led down into the underground carpark. In the future, no matter how Chen Ge expanded the underground carpark, the entrance would not be changed, so the first scary scenario his visitors saw would be this one.

He turned on his flashlight and headed toward the sealed classroom. The toppled chairs, tables, and the nametags on the lectern had been replaced, but one of the nametags was missing.

"Can you hear me?" Chen Ge stood at the door and shouted into the room. The uniforms sat on their chairs, and there was no answer.

After shaking his head, Chen Ge went to the female dormitory. He picked up the broken ballpoint pen and fixed it before putting it inside his pocket. After that, he wandered to the well at the other end of the junction.

In the video, Fei Youliang had been talking to himself beside this well.

At the time, he should have been possessed by several lingering spirits at the same time, and that was why he was rambling what sounded like nonsense. Chen Ge looked down into the well. It was two or three meters deep. Even if someone fell into it, they would not be injured. Why would they say that then? Is there another secret to this well?

Chen Ge was reminded of the door inside the bathroom mirror, the door that would only appear for one minute after midnight. He could find no answer. After inspecting everything again, Chen Ge exited the underground carpark and sealed the wooden boards.

He took out 5,000 from the staff breakroom before locking the door and heading toward the park management office. When he saw Uncle Xu, he returned his money and asked about the update regarding the people from Qin Guang's studio. Uncle Xu told him that things had been taken care of, and he should not worry about it.

After handling all those miscellaneous tasks, Chen Ge walked out of the park and gave Inspector Lee a call. It was answered after three rings, but the line was quiet except for an extremely tense breathing sound.

"Uncle San Bao?"

"What have you discovered this time?"

"It's nothing—I just need your help to find a person."

"Not a murder suspect?"

"No, just a normal student."

After receiving the confirmed answer, the silence on the other end was broken, and footsteps could be heard in the background. People flipped through the documents while other talked on the phone; everyone resumed their work.

Inspector Lee sighed in relief. "I told them that four times in one week is too much. The stress you give my men..."

"Uncle San Bao, the person I'm looking for is Chen Yalin. She should be one of the victims from Mu Yang High School three years ago."

"Victim? You're looking for a dead person?"

Chapter 103 - One Survivor

Chapter 103: One Survivor

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Inspector Lee lowered his voice, and the tension returned. “Explain to me clearly, what is really happening?”

“It’s definitely not a murder this time. I just want to take a look at her information.”

...

“Are you kidding, do you think we can provide that kind of sensitive information to a citizen? If there’s nothing else, I’m going to hang up.”

After Inspector Lee hung up, Chen Ge felt rather hopeless. Just as he was trying to figure out what to do, his phone vibrated. It was a message from Inspector Lee. “The case files definitely cannot be released to the public, but you can come over at around 7 to 8 pm, and if your case is serious enough, I can help you take a look at the files.”

Chen Ge understood it immediately after reading the message. There were probably too many people at the office, and he could not promise him anything with so many eyes and ears around him.

“Uncle Lee, do you have any records on Mu Yang High School? What happened to force the school to close down? And why are there so many supernatural stories surrounding it?”

After some time, Inspector Lee’s reply came. “The school was built on top of a crematorium, so the land was very cheap. However, due to the taboo, no one wanted to purchase it. Later, it was purchased by a short and rather rotund old man who had the surname Chen. He built a private orphanage on the site.

“A few years later, Jiujiang established societal construct related to childcare, and so the old man transported all the age-appropriate children to the government-supported orphanage. This meant that there was a bunch of older kids who were left behind at the orphanage. To solve the education problem for these kids, the old patron visited many schools, but none wanted to accept them.

“Running out of options, the senior purchased the textbooks and started teaching the children himself. This story was picked up by the local news and thus alerted the relevant government bodies. After some discussion, the orphanage was changed into Mu Yang High School, and those children adopted by the senior became the school’s first batch of students.”

Before reading the messages, Chen Ge had not expected Mu Yang High School to have such a complicated history. “Inspector Lee, can you find out how many students there were in the first batch? Do you have that kind of information?”

After twenty minutes, Inspector Lee called him directly. “Xiao Chen, I’m now in the filing room. Most of files related to Mu Yang High School have been taken away by the city station since the murder case has been solved.”

“Uncle Xu, I just want to confirm one thing. Among the first batch of student, were there any girls by the name of Chen Yalin and Wang Xin?”

“Let me take a look.” Inspector Lee flipped through the pages before answering. “When Mu Yang High School was first built, there were twenty-five students, and they were all originally from the senior’s orphanage.”

“Twenty-five?” This number was close but not exactly the same as the number of uniforms.

“Indeed, but...” Inspector Lee hesitated. “There is only one survivor, the girl you mentioned, Wang Xin.”

“The rest of them came into some kind of accident?”

“Unfortunately, initially Chen Yalin was found hanging in the bedroom for unknown reasons, and then other than Wang Xin, who shared the same bedroom with her, the remaining twenty-three people went on a school trip, but the bus veered off the road and fell into the dam. All of them died, including the driver.”

“Twenty-five people with one survivor.” Chen Ge was reminded of the twenty-four school uniforms, and he slowly understood why the lingering spirits of the twenty-four students had returned to the classroom. It had a much deeper meaning to them; it was their home.

“Is there anything else? If not, I have to go back to work.” Inspector Lee had already done a big favor for Chen Ge.

“One last question, is there a way for me to contact the child who survived?” Chen Ge had confirmed that this Wang Xin was the person that the Pen Spirit was looking for.

“Wang Xin was hospitalized due to the trauma of Chen Yalin’s incident. Afterwards, I heard that a kind couple adopted her. You can find out more from the adoption website. Since Wang Xin’s case is so unique, there should still be records of her.”

After hanging up, Chen Ge followed Inspector Lee’s suggestion and logged onto the website. He searched for half an hour before he found Wang Xin’s name; the person who had adopted her was a Madam Gu.

After clicking on Madam Gu’s profile, he realized that she had posted many threads on the forum requesting for help. Chen Ge just wanted to know a bit more about this Madam Gu, but as he studied her threads, his expression changed.

Wang Xin seemed to have fallen victim to some kind of psychological illness and Madam Gu had gone about asking for professional help. In the end, it was a doctor with the surname Gao who had come to her aid.

This Doctor Gao’s resume was printed clearly on his profile: Senior psychologist, tenured lecturer at Jiujiang Medical University.

Could there really be such a coincidence? Chen Ge hesitated for a moment before giving Gao Ru Xue’s father a call.

“Hello?”

“Doctor Gao, I’m Gao Ru Xue’s friend. We discussed a boy’s condition last night.”

“Has the boy’s conditions stabilized?”

“I’m not sure about that, but I’m calling because of another case today.” Chen Ge thought about it and decided honesty was the best policy. “Have you treated a girl by the name of Wang Xin?”

Doctor Gao was surprised. “How do you know about that?”

“I know the reason behind Wang Xin’s psychological problem, and I can save her. Can you please give me her address?"

"You can save her?" Doctor Gao denied his demand immediately. "I'm sorry, but I cannot give away my patient's information."

"Doctor Gao, Wang Xin is in very deep pain. As her attending physician, you have to know how much suffering she is in. She must be tormented by fear and nightmares. Can't you give me a chance, please?"

Doctor Gao was silent for a very long time before sighing. "How about this? I will accompany you. We will meet at the gate to Fang Hwa residential area."

"Okay, see you there!" This was the best result Chen Ge could get.

Forty minutes later, Chen Ge finally met Gao Ru Xue's father in person. He was a middle-aged man with a fit physique and plenty of charm. After a simple introduction, Doctor Gao led him to one of the large buildings.

"Can you really solve Wang Xin's issues?" Doctor Gao was most concerned about this.

"I know the reason to her sickness, so I have fifty percent confidence that I can solve it."

"That is more than enough; she's also a special patient. The anti-depressants and medicine aren't working so well, but I simply couldn't find any other symptoms in her."

The pair rode the elevator until the 14th floor. One of the doors was opened. Doctor Gao had called the patient's family before they arrived.

Chapter 104 - Give Me One Minute

Chapter 104: Give Me One Minute

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The room was clean and thickly carpeted. The edges of the tables and counters were wrapped in thick cloth. There was a fruit plate on the coffee table but nothing sharp like knife or fork.

“Doctor Gao, please come in.” A woman in a white dress welcome Doctor Gao and Chen Ge into the room. She looked to be in her forties and took good care of her appearance.

...

“Has Wang Xin’s condition improved?”

“I’ve given her the recommended sleeping pills and anti-depressants, but the effect has not been as positive as I hoped.” The woman smiled weakly. “If anything, her condition hasn’t improved, but all the side effects did show themselves—dry heaving, shivering, and shaking hands. She could not even grip the chopsticks during lunch, and the food fell all over the table. Doctor Gao, do you think Wang Xin can still be cured?”

“Believe me, she will get better.”

“Hmm.” The woman then noticed Chen Ge behind the doctor. “And this is?”

“My name is Chen Ge.” Chen Ge did not want to waste time. “Can I please meet your daughter?”

“This...” The woman turned to Doctor Gao to ask for his opinion.

“I will join him.” After Doctor Gao nodded, the woman reluctantly let Chen Ge into the room. “The child is in her bedroom. After having one spoon of lunch, she started wailing.”

The woman walked to a door. She knocked lightly on it for quite some time, but there was no response. She placed her hand on the door knob, twisted, and opened the door a sliver. The woman sighed wordlessly before moving back.

“Let’s go in.” Doctor Gao looked at Chen Ge. “Do not say anything to provoke the patient, before you do anything, please discuss it with me.”

“Okay,” Chen Ge promised before he was let into the room. The carpet in the bedroom was even thicker, and the edges of the cupboards and table were all sanded off. There was not anything sharp in sight; even the windows were installed with anti-theft netting. There was not a bed in the room. Instead, there were two thick mattresses placed together. All of the decorations were white, and there were no personal effects.

Doctor Gao moved to the side, and Chen Ge finally saw the woman he was looking for. A slender girl was lying on the mattress. The white shirt with a round collar barely covered up her frame, her skin was white to the point it looked translucent, and she appeared fragile, like too violent a movement would cause her body to snap.

Realizing that she had guests, the girl slowly sat up in bed. While Chen Ge expected a raging mental patient, the girl was surprisingly normal, if a little reticent.

Doctor Gao squatted down beside the mattress to maintain a level eye contact with the girl and asked kindly, “Wang Xin, does your head still hurt?”

The girl shook her head and took a glance at Chen Ge before putting her head down.

“Then, have you been sleeping?” Doctor Gao asked, but this time, the reaction elicited was much more intense. She reached out to grab at her own hair, and when she released, there were strands of black hairs stuck between her fingers. That was how strong she was as she yanked her hairs out.

“Still can’t sleep, huh?” Standing up, the brows of the good doctor were deeply furrowed. “Neither of the medicines had an effect?”

“Doctor Gao, may I speak to her?”

“Wang Xin’s current condition is considered stable, so go ahead.” Chen Ge mimicked Doctor Gao and squatted down. The girl probably assumed he was also a doctor, so she did not show much resistance. She merely pulled her sleeves down to cover the red welts on her arms, which felt like they were the result of her own rabid scratching.

The girl before him was frail; she gave the impression of a paper kite, like a single thread was everything that connected her to survival. A single mistake, and she would be lost among the dark clouds before being torn apart by the storm.

“Wang Xin.” Chen Ge pulled out the ballpoint pen from his pocket. “Your friend wants to talk to you, so I brought her with me.”

Wang Xin glanced at the ballpoint pen but did not show any special emotion. She probably wanted to smile at Chen Ge’s attempt at a joke but found herself unable to do even that.

Doctor Gao beside him and the woman who was eavesdropping at the door were confused; they did not understand what Chen Ge was up to. Chen Ge was not discouraged by Wang Xin’s lack of reaction. He retrieved a piece of white paper from the desk and placed it on the mattress. He hovered the pen above it and prepared to start the Pen Spirit game.

Chen Ge was facing away from Doctor Gao and facing Wang Xin. He moved his lips but made no sound as he mouthed the incantation to invoke the Pen Spirit. “Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, you are my...”

As his lips opened and closed, Wang Xin’s focus was slowly attracted to Chen Ge. She turned to look at Chen Ge fully and reading the words on Chen Ge’s lips; she flailed her arms around and shrunk back into the walls like she was reminded of something horrible.

“What are you doing?” The woman dashed into the room to stop Chen Ge alongside Doctor Gao.

“I’m helping her solve the issue in her heart.” Chen Ge shielded the ballpoint pen in his hand. “No one knew what happened to Wang Xin, but that is the source of her illness! Just give me one minute, I only need one minute!”

His conviction was firm as he squatted beside the mattress with the pen in his palm. Initially, Chen Ge merely wanted to finish the Pen Spirit’s mission, but when he saw how tortured the girl was, he felt the need to do something.

“Why don’t we give him a chance?” After a long confrontation, Doctor Gao chose to trust Chen Ge. “During my sessions with Wang Xin, she has never shown this kind of reaction before. Perhaps this is a good sign.”

Doctor Gao eventually convinced the woman, and they agreed to give Chen Ge three minutes. The two walked to the door, and Chen Ge stood up to close the curtains and the door.

“Wang Xin, your friend has been trying to reach you.” He placed the pen above the paper again and continued to chant. “Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, you are my spirit from my previous life, and I am your spirit in this life...”

As Chen Ge continued to mumble, the girl hiding in the corner started to get increasingly feared. The nightmare-like memory that had haunted her for years started to appear in her heart. As cruel as it was, Chen Ge forced himself to continue. Not long after that, the pen hovering over the paper started to move on its own. Then, beautiful handwriting appeared on the white paper, handwriting that was different from Chen Ge’s own.

“Wang Xin, I really didn’t expect that a mindless joke would create such a lasting wound in your heart; you must hate me very much, right?”

Wang Xin was stunned when she saw the familiar handwriting. At that moment, her mind was blank; she also did not know what to think anymore.

“You have nothing to do with my death. I merely wanted to scare you when I saw you coming with another friend. Who would have thought the rope would be too tight and the chair would slip?

“You did nothing wrong; it was a silly prank gone very wrong.

“I’m so sorry, Wang Xin. I don’t ask that you could forgive me, but I hope that you can remove the bad memories from your mind and strive to live the best life on behalf of the rest of us.”

Chapter 105 - Second Haunted House Worker!

Chapter 105: Second Haunted House Worker!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Looking at the series of words on the white paper, Wang Xin's emotions got increasingly amped up. She leaned forward slowly and actively reached out for the ballpoint pen in Chen Ge's hand.

The cold fingers slid between Chen Ge's hand and the pen, and her arm kept shaking like she had experienced the body temperature from another human in the first time. She wanted to say something, but she had lost her voice. The three minutes soon ended, and the ballpoint pen started to move between them, but this time, only two words were written. "Good night."

...

The pen stopped moving, and Chen Ge started to chant the incantation to send the Pen Spirit away. Opposite him, Wang Xin followed him as if involuntarily. "Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, you are my spirit from my previous life, and I am your spirit in this life. If you wish to go, then please go ahead."

When both of them finished the last word, the dam holding in Wang Xin's emotions broke, and the needle that had been stuck in her heart for so long finally fell out. She gripped Chen Ge's hands, and she turned her face to the side as if unwilling to let others see the pain that she was in.

"The lights of the world have been extinguished, and everyone has gone silent, what am I to do all alone? Every feeling is wrong, and every road leads to a dead-end. I don't understand what I have done wrong, but I seemed to have turned into a monster." Wang Xin finally uttered the words that had been kept in her heart. She looked at the words on the paper before leaning down on the table, and her voice dwindled. "Help me, drag me out from this world. I want release from this pain, help me..."

Her forehead was pressed against the back of Chen Ge's hands, and her body lay down on the mattress. When her breathing stabilized, it seemed like Wang Xin had finally fallen asleep.

“Good night.”

Chen Ge pulled his hand lightly away and placed a quilt over Wang Xin before leaving the room. Both Doctor Gao and Wang Xin’s adopted mother were waiting outside the door. They wanted to know what had happened inside, but afraid of disturbing Wang Xin, they kept their enquiries in a soft voice.

“How is Wang Xin?”

Chen Ge pointed inside the room. “Already asleep.”

“She’s really asleep?” Doctor Gao breathed in disbelief. He understood how difficult it was for patients with severe trauma to fall asleep—normally, they would have to rely on medication. “How did you do it?”

“It’s a long story.” Chen Ge gave an explanation that was half true. “When I was looking for inspiration for my Haunted House at Mu Yang High School, I accidentally stumbled across some information related to Wang Xin’s past and uncovered the reason for her depression. It appears like a scar was left in her mind after witnessing her friend’s death while playing a game of Pen Spirit. Therefore, I used that as an opening. I simulated the Pen Spirit game she once played with her roommates and used that to tell her that it wasn’t her fault; it was all just an accident.”

“And it worked?” Doctor Gao was impressed.

The eyes of the middle-aged woman behind him were already wet. “Thank you, I shouldn’t have doubted you earlier, I’m sorry!”

“It’s fine. If anything, both you and Doctor Gao have done more than I did. Neither of you gave up on Wang Xin when she needed it the most, and that is the most important thing.” Chen Ge praised both to the moon and back, improving their impression of Chen Ge. Wang Xin’s adopted mother wanted to ask them to stay for lunch, but Chen Ge rejected it. When Wang Xin had fallen asleep earlier, the black phone had vibrated twice. He was in a hurry to look at its message.

After exiting Fang Hwa, Chen Ge bade Doctor Gao farewell before getting on a bus to return to New Century Park. He sat on the back row, and after making sure no one was paying him any attention, he pulled out the black phone.

“Congratulations on completing 2-star scenario Mu Yang High School's hidden mission—the Pen Spirit's Wish! Activating the next part of the Hidden Mission! Create mannequins for the twenty-four spirits to possess!

“Successfully completed the Pen Spirit's Wish. Even though she still cannot see you, she is appreciative of your help. Would you like to employ the Pen Spirit as a member of the Haunted House?”

Chen Ge clicked ‘yes’ without reservation. Hadn't he been waiting for this moment for a long time?

“Specters' Favored, congratulations on hiring a Special-Type Baleful Specter—the Pen Spirit!

“Chen Yalin (Pen Spirit): A fortune telling opportunity daily (All questions must be within the Pen Spirit's power. The rate of a successful reading is fifty percent)!

“Note: The Pen Spirit feeds on the visitor's frightful screams. The visitor's fear will improve the Pen Spirit's power, but if you keep the Pen Spirit's isolated and depressed, she might decide to leave you.”

Chen Ge read the Pen Spirit's information again and again. He was quite excited; he had finally hired his first supernatural employee. This meant that his previous dream could be realized; he could create a theme park that he could operate on his own!

A journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step. I'm sure more ghosts will join my team in the future. Chen Ge was very satisfied with the Pen Spirit. She could handle a small scenario all on her own, and her special talent could be incredibly useful.

Chen Ge saw the next section of Mu Yang High School's hidden mission, to build mannequins for the lingering spirits of the sealed classroom to possess. Even without the mission from the black phone, Chen Ge would have done that eventually.

The phone call with Inspector Lee had made Chen Ge understand why the twenty-four students had returned to the classroom. They were orphans, and Mu Yang High School was their home. With the unlocking of the new scenario, they had moved into Chen Ge's Haunted House, not unlike Xiaoxiao's family.

As I complete more Trial Missions, the underground scenario will only get bigger; I will need the help of these twenty-four lingering spirits to manage the sets. We both need the other. Chen Ge's plan was nice, but he needed to get the goodwill of the twenty-four spirits first.

The first thing Chen Ge did after returning to his Haunted House was sleep; he was truly exhausted by the events of the day. After being asleep for who knew how long, Chen Ge felt something crawling on his chest, like a kitten asking for attention. He opened his eyes blurrily and discovered he was hugging a small doll.

“Xiaoxiao?” He rubbed his eyes and placed Xiaoxiao beside him, “What’s going on? You have a grown man like myself hugging a doll when he sleeps, just imagine the impression it’ll leave on my future wife if she sees me like this.”

After stretching lazily, Chen Ge glanced at the time; it was 11:59 pm. Chen Ge put on his shoes and exited the staff breakroom to head for the first-floor bathroom.

He merely had to pee, but as he entered the place, he discovered that the atmosphere inside the bathroom was not right. The door of the cubicle was swaying lightly, and a red hue could be seen coming from the mirror underneath the black cloth.

Has the door in the mirror returned?

He walked to the mirror and lifted up a corner of the black cloth.

In the mirror that had cracked, the red door was half open.

Chapter 106 - The Sound Behind the Door

Chapter 106: The Sound Behind the Door

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge's hand froze in mid-air. The creepiest thing was that the door in the mirror was open at the exact same angle as in real life. Chen Ge removed the black cloth and walked to the cubicle. He turned to look at the mirror while he reached out to push the door open completely.

There was nothing inside the cubicle in reality, but it was different in the mirror. The narrow cubicle was painted red, like blood was seeping out from the ceiling, walls, and floor; it was a different world.

...

Chen Ge still did not have the courage to step into the cubicle. Holding the door knob, he wondered if he should just have the cubicle destroyed. About ten seconds later, Chen Ge heard a weird sound that seemed very close but also faraway. It felt like someone wearing wet clothes was crawling on the floor.

Where is that coming from?

The sound became clearer, as if it was getting close to Chen Ge. He walked out of the bathroom to peer down the corridor and then turned to look at the mirror. Finally, he confirmed that the sound was coming from inside the cubicle.

Something is coming? Chen Ge knew that it was not the time to be curious. He yanked the cubicle door shut and used the nearby mop to block it before turning to look at the mirror. The sound of something heavy being dragged entered the cubicle, and soon, a pool of red bled out from underneath the door. The other thing felt like it was looking for something, and the air was heavy with the smell of blood. After several seconds, the sound moved away, and the unique smell dissipated.

With his back against the wall, Chen Ge's palms were very sweaty. If he had not woken up, the thing that was crawling on the ground would have escaped, just like the mirror monster.

Even with the black cloth over the mirror, the blood red door still appears on time. Chen Ge was clueless about the world behind the cubicle door, so the only thing he could do was forget about it for now.

After splashing his face with cold water, Chen Ge returned to the staff breakroom. When he opened the door, he realized that Xiaoxiao had disappeared again.

Did she come earlier to remind me? Chen Ge sat on the side of his bed. Since he could not sleep, he took out the black phone. After he swiped on the screen, he clicked on the tab for the daily missions.

Easy Mission: A normal Haunted House experience should not create permanent trauma to its visitors; I hope you understand this simple theory. Please improve the Haunted House's security by inspecting the security threats hidden around the Haunted House.

Normal Mission: A single hand cannot clap. A good Haunted House needs a good management team. Recruit more talents; they will definitely help when the situation demands it.

Nightmare Mission: There has always been a second occupant inside your room, wouldn't you like to meet said person?

Chen Ge was familiar with the newly updated daily missions; he had seen them before.

The Easy and Normal missions are things that I should be doing at the current stage, more help around the place and improved security. However, in comparison, the reward of the Nightmare Mission is far more alluring.

Without risk, there would be no reward, but the key thing was, after hiring the Pen Spirit, he had a fortune-telling chance every day. The way Chen Ge saw it, using it on the Nightmare Mission was the best use of the Pen Spirit's power.

Holding the ballpoint pen that was taped together, Chen Ge felt embarrassed. When there's a chance, I should ask her if she wants to move to a newer pen.

He grabbed a random piece of paper and placed it on the table. After invoking the Pen Spirit, Chen Ge asked the question that was bothering him. "Can I finish the latest Nightmare Mission on the black phone safely?"

After that, Chen Ge looked at the paper for a long time. The pen shook, but there was no answer.

“Is the question that difficult?” Chen Ge realized the Pen Spirit was not as powerful as he had thought; she could not answer anything related to the black phone. Looking at the ballpoint pen that had started to break, Chen Ge quickly changed his question. “That question doesn’t count. I want to know, has there been another person living in this room?”

The ballpoint pen hovered for a long time before writing “Yes.”

“Then, do you know what he looks like?”

This time, the Pen Spirit did not answer; the ballpoint pen in his palm had returned to normal. Chen Ge did not blame the Pen Spirit, since fortune-telling was probably extremely exhausting for the Pen Spirit, which was probably why the limitation of one per day was in place.

So, there is another person living here. How have I not noticed all this time? Based on the mission introduction, the person is another friend from the other side. There were quite a few supernatural tenants living in Chen Ge’s Haunted House. He did not mind any more weird spirits as long as it did not actively harm his business like the mirror ghost.

After some hesitation, Chen Ge chose to accept the Nightmare Mission.

“Are you sure you want to accept the Nightmare Mission? Unforeseeable consequences might occur.”

“Yes.”

The screen flickered, and a new message appeared.

“It stays in the same room as you. After you fall asleep, it will appear.

“If it is kind, it will wash away the negative energy and keep the household safe and healthy.

“If it is malicious, when you are asleep, it will stand beside your bed, thinking about how to ruin you.

“The game is called ‘The Invisible Customer’. At midnight, spread soaked uncooked rice around the house, place a pair of worn slippers outside the door, and light a white candle on the bedroom floor. Arrange the bed in such a way that it looks like someone is really asleep in bed. You will lie underneath the bed. For the mission to work, you have to really fall asleep. If you manage to catch a glimpse of its face, then mission will be successful.

“This mission will be your third Nightmare Mission. After completing the mission, you will randomly get a scenario’s Trial Mission.

“Warning: After completing the third Nightmare Mission, the Nightmare Missions given for daily mission will be randomized, so please treat each Nightmare Mission carefully!”

Chen Ge memorized all the mission details quickly.

Why must I fall asleep for the mission? How will I take a look at the person’s face if I’m asleep? In my dreams? Chen Ge did not understand the meaning of this mission, but since he had accepted it, he could only follow the instructions.

After putting on his jacket, Chen Ge once more visited the park canteen late at night to ‘borrow’ half a bowl of white rice.

The Haunted House is so big; it’ll be such a waste if I have to cover every floor. Chen Ge soaked the rice in cold water and spread it around the few rooms on the first floor. Then he placed a pair of slippers at the corridor entrance and lit a white candle beside his bed.

Chapter 107 - Invisible Customer

Chapter 107: Invisible Customer

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After that, Chen Ge found the doll that had been left behind by his parents and the Doctor Skull-cracker's hammer and placed them beside his bed. Now, everything is ready.

After switching off the light, Chen Ge attached his phone to the charger and left it on the bedside table to record. He then crawled underneath the bed with the scary looking hammer. The flickering candlelight caused the brightness inside the room to fluctuate. Once Chen Ge closed his eyes, his brain was immediately filled with many scary thoughts—he could not control it.

...

He kept his attention on his surrounding as he curled into the fetal position, the top of his head touching the corner of the bed. From his vantage point, he could see the slippers in the corridor through the half-open door.

The slippers are where they were, and the white rice has remained unmoved. I wonder why the black phone asked me to prepare these things.

The candle burned shorter, and Chen Ge's eyelids grew heavier. Night spread through the Haunted House, and Chen Ge, who had not really rested for the past few days, held on for a little longer before drifting off to sleep.

...

His lower calf was a bit cold. Chen Ge opened his eyes blurrily. The candle had gone out, and the room was dark and quiet.

What time is it? Chen Ge wanted to glance at his watch, but he realized he could not move.

Sleep paralysis? ¹

After widening his eyes, Chen Ge did not make too much resistance.

He focused on adjusting his breathing; respiratory organs like lungs were not affected by sleep paralysis. Then, he focused his energy on trying to bend his finger. Throughout the process, he did not look elsewhere but on his finger. After all, even if there was something scary, he would have been unable to move. It would only add to his fear and cause him to lose his cool.

After three minutes, Chen Ge could finally move his pinkie; this was a good start. He tried to move onto the next stage, but as his eyes swept past the open door, a question bubbled up in his mind. When I placed the slippers earlier, did the head of slippers face inward or outward?

Since he would need to wear the slippers when going out, the slippers should have been facing outward, but the slippers that Chen Ge saw were pointing into his bedroom.

Did I misplace them earlier?

A bad feeling settled in his stomach, and he tried his best to move his other fingers. The candle in the room had long been extinguished. There was a shuffling sound like the room like someone was moving the rice that was placed around the floor.

Under Chen Ge's scrutiny, one of the slippers moved forward. It was an awkward movement, like someone learning how to walk for the first time.

It moved!

The more anxious Chen Ge became, the slower he progressed. After making the first step, the slippers placed on the corridor suddenly moved forward several steps like someone was putting them on.

The invisible customer is already here? Why can't I see him?

Just as Chen Ge was thinking, the pair of slippers had reached the door to the main control room. It suddenly stopped, and then the door to the control room fell open on its own before soon closing. The windows inside the Haunted House were shut, so it could not have been the wind.

What is it looking for?

The pair of slippers moved up and down the dark corridor before it stopped at the door to the dressing room. From Chen Ge's angle, he could see that the black cloth over the mirror in the dressing room had been taken down, and the skin mask made from multiple faces swayed before the mirror.

Chen Ge was alarmed watching this. He tried to move his fingers, but at that moment, the moving skin mask suddenly stopped, and the hollow behind the pair of eyes seemed to be staring at Chen Ge's hiding place.

I've been discovered!

The mask fell to the floor, and the door to the dressing room was closed. The pair of slippers stopped in front of the door before it turned toward Chen Ge and headed quick for the staff breakroom!

Hiding under the bed with his body immobile, Chen Ge could only watch as the pair of slippers move closer to him. The door to the breakroom was pushed open further, and the pair of slippers stopped beside the bed.

Chen Ge closed his eyes and pretended that he was asleep. He could feel a cold draft on his face and a light breathing beside his ear, as if a face was looking closely down at him.

The monster is checking whether I'm really asleep or not. Chen Ge did not dare open his eyes. He was afraid of seeing something that might make him lose control.

His movement was stopped, so the best solution then was to pretend to be asleep. Several seconds later, the chilling breathing sound disappeared. Chen Ge pushed his eyes open a sliver. There was nothing before him. He moved his eyes around and saw that the pair of slippers was placed beside the bed. However, the direction was different from before; now they were facing out.

It has jumped onto my bed? Just the thought of it made Chen Ge shiver. Every time he had been asleep, this thing had been wandering about the house. If the person had malicious intentions, the consequences would have been unbearable.

The slippers remained unmoved for a long time. The monster was likely lying in his bed. Chen Ge realized that his chance had arrived. He directed all his energy to the one finger he could move. His pupils darted about and tried to unfreeze the rest of the body from immobility. Completing the Nightmare Mission was no longer that important; the feeling that his body was out of his control was horrible.

After completing so many of the black phone's missions, Chen Ge's focus and concentration were better than most. After some time, the rest of his fingers could all move. Curling his palm into a fist, his control of his arm also slowly returned.

Just a little more, a little bit more. The muscles on his arms bulged. Chen Ge had a feeling that he could wake up soon. His breathing smoothed out, and he could now turn his neck slightly. If only his legs could move, then he would have regained full control of his body. With the hammer in hand, he would be less defenseless.

However, his lower body was completely unresponsive. He nudged his body, trying to turn onto his side. His heartbeat reverberated in his ears. Using every ounce of energy in his body, he finally managed to turn his body toward the wall. In that instant, he felt the shackles on his body unlock.

Chen Ge gained full control of his body back, but as he turned to look behind him, his skin became covered in goosebumps.

There was a girl lying behind him.

The monster didn't get onto the bed! It has been behind me all along!

Chen Ge involuntarily reached for the hammer beside him, and the girl lying behind him also realized that Chen Ge had woken up from the sleep paralysis.

Her reaction was one beat slower. She raised her head to share a look with Chen Ge before morphing into a shadow in a hurry and rushing out of the room.

Chen Ge grabbed the hammer and chased after her.

When he saw the girl's face, he had felt that she look weirdly familiar.

Chapter 108 - The Secret of the Third Sick Hall

Chapter 108: The Secret of the Third Sick Hall

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

I must have seen her somewhere before.

It was not that Chen Ge had that much confidence in his memory, but the girl's face was memorable. His mind drew a blank as he chased after the girl after picking up his phone and the iron hammer. The rice on the floor turned into a mess. By the time Chen Ge exited the staff breakroom, the shadow had already disappeared.

...

Where did she disappear to? The front door is closed, so she should still be inside the Haunted house.

Turning on the flashlight, Chen Ge noticed that the white rice formed a trail. He followed said trail to the deepest part of the first-floor corridor. The wooden boards that blocked the entrance were lifted up, and a wind could be heard blowing underneath. Chen Ge moved the boards to the side and entered the Mu Yang High School scenario.

There was rice left on the stairs, proof that the girl had entered the same scenario.

Her escape route is clear; she ran this way.

The scenario was huge, but the rice on the floor helped Chen Ge navigate the place. The scenario was underground, but it had not changed from the layout of the parking lot. The trail of white rice eventually disappeared beside a bearing beam.

She has hidden herself inside the beam?

The bearing beam was right underneath the Haunted House, supporting the whole Haunted House's weight. Patting the beam, Chen Ge was reminded of a story that he had once heard from his grandparents. Apparently, there was a spirit living inside every home, and while most of them were kind spirits, there were exceptions.

A kind spirit protected the house and the residents in it; a malicious spirit would ruin the family's Feng Shui. Normally, such spirits were the ancestors who had passed away, but there were exceptions, like the place Fan Yu and his aunt called home.

This fitted the description provided by the black phone. There was an invisible customer at the Haunted House, and it might be friendly or malicious.

The girl hiding behind me earlier, could it be the spirit that protects the Haunted House?

The more he thought about it, the more convinced Chen Ge became. He walked around the beam and realized that there was a doll that had been left leaning against it. This doll was the first doll that he had made.

"Wait! Aren't you supposed to be in my pocket?" Chen Ge's hands wandered to his pocket, and the doll was not there. "Are you the person who has been living at the Haunted House with me?"

Chen Ge bent down to pick up the doll, and when he did, he saw that the doll was covering a relatively small hole underneath it. He shone his flashlight into the hole. The space that could only fit four fingers had a bracelet and a paper crane inside.

Neither was expensive. The bracelet was made of plastic, and it looked like a little girl's toy; the paper crane that was stuffed underneath it had become out of shape. After pulling the items out, Chen Ge saw three curvy words at the end of the bracelet—Luo Ruoyu.

Why would there be a girl's toy inside the underground parking lot? Chen Ge studied the bracelet closer. If this bracelet belongs to that shadow, then this should be the girl's name.

Surname Luo, the guardian spirit of the Haunted House, a girl's toy...

After connecting the clues, it hit Chen Ge. He finally remembered where he had seen the girl's face. That girl is New Century Park Director Luo's daughter!

When he visited Director Luo to discuss the possibility of renting the underground parking lot, he had seen the girl's photo. She was physically disabled but had the purest of smile.

The girl has become the guardian spirit for the whole park? Then why would she attach herself to the doll left behind by my parents? Chen Ge felt like there was a hidden meaning to this Nightmare Mission. He took the doll, bracelet, and paper crane back to the staff breakroom. He pulled out an album from a locked drawer. The first page featured a family photo of Chen Ge and his parents. Since the picture had been taken on the day that the construction of the Haunted House had finished, the background of the picture was the Haunted House.

In the picture, Chen Ge's father stood proudly in the middle; he was as happy as a child. Chen Ge, who had still been attending school then, stood quietly to the side, looking at the camera with a trace of impatience on his face. His mother stood beside his father, but as he looked closer, his mother's hand was hanging in mid-air, and her fingers were curved like they were holding someone's hand.

There are four people in the picture?

Flipping through the album, Chen Ge found another picture that was weirder. His father was pointing at the Haunted House, talking to Chen Ge, while his mother half-squatted on the floor, her hands touching something in the air.

There were many other similar pictures, and looking at them, Chen Ge felt his heart chill. Ever since he was young, he had wondered why he had to leave a huge space during picture time. Now he understood it.

They sure were nice to the ghosts! It is probably because of them that I'm favored by the specters!

Chen Ge did not expect Director Luo's daughter to have attached herself to the doll left behind by his parents, and from the looks of it, she had stayed with them for a long time already. Director Luo's daughter was the guardian spirit of the park, so she could not leave the park. This explained why the doll was only useful inside the Haunted House and the park. It was why, when Wang Qi tried to ambush Chen Ge at the wooden hut behind Ping An Apartments, the doll had not reacted. There were many other such occasions as well.

Chen Ge closed the album and lightly rubbed his temple. He had a feeling that the mission was more than it seemed. He moved his gaze away from the doll and the bracelet to fall on the paper crane.

The material was normal, but it was dirtied by a blood stain.

This paper crane does not look new; it should have been inside that hole for a long time already.

Opening the paper crane, several words could be seen written on the bloodied paper—The Third Room of the Third Sick Hall!

The Third Sick Hall? Chen Ge's heart started to quiver when he saw those words. After completing three Nightmare Missions, one of the Trial Missions would be unlocked. Before this, Chen Ge had already prepared to select the Trial Mission for the Third Sick Hall because it was the only three-star mission carried by the black phone.

The handwriting looks similar to my parent's, but why would they leave behind a clue to a location? Is the third room in the third sick hall related to their disappearance? Chen Ge put the paper aside, and his brain was mulling on another problem.

The black phone said that after completing the three Nightmare Missions, the missions in the future will be randomized. This means that the first three Nightmare Missions are fixed.

The first mission opened the door to the other world; the second mission told me my parents are still alive but missing; this third mission gave me a venue. Buying my trust, giving me hope, and then providing me with an investigative direction. The three Nightmare Missions are related to each other, and they are more meaningful than they appear.

Chapter 109 - Second Special Visitor

Chapter 109: Second Special Visitor

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The three Nightmare Missions were like the new player missions given in such games. They had certain risks, but they also helped new players familiarize themselves with the game.

Looks like only after completing the first three Nightmare Missions can one be considered a real player. Chen Ge held the bloodied paper in his hand, and he discovered that his emotions were still raging. Every single mission so far had been a real threat, but until now, he had been in the kiddie pool, so just how difficult would the later missions be?

...

After putting away the note with the hint, Chen Ge slowly resigned himself to his fate. The most difficult missions so far had been the two Trial Missions. The most dangerous presence at Ping An Apartments was the people. Mu Yang High School was creepy, but the lingering spirits inside it had meant no harm. Therefore, technically speaking, the missions were not that dangerous.

Looks like from three-star scenarios onwards, the situation will be different. I'll probably encounter malicious specters then. In any case, Chen Ge could only power forward. This paper had probably been left behind by his parents, so no matter what, he had to pay the location a visit.

Chen Ge then pulled out the black phone. When he saw the girl's face, the Nightmare Mission had been completed.

"Specters' Favored, congratulations for completing the Nightmare Mission, obtained reward—Elementary Skill, Dollmaker's Talent.

"Utilizing real humans as your model, carve, cut, join, and shine each bone, paint the skin, sew up the wounds, and pair it with a flawless face. Provide it to a homeless spirit, and you will have created your first living doll.

"That mission was your third Nightmare Mission. After completing the mission, you were rewarded with a randomized scenario's Trial Mission. Would you like to draw the Trial Mission now?

“Warning: After completing the third Nightmare Mission, the Nightmare Missions given for daily missions will be randomized, so please treat each Nightmare Mission carefully!”

Similar to when he obtained the Mortician's Make-up skill, some new memories and techniques appeared in Chen Ge's mind. Other than that, there was no visible change.

Dolls and mannequins are integral parts of a Haunted House. This skill will be incredibly helpful for the management of a Haunted House. It's just a coincidence that there are twenty-four lingering spirits in Mu Yang High School that need them. I can use them to test out this skill. Chen Ge had skipped over whether the spirits would like to live his dolls or not. After finishing the dolls and pushing the spirits into them, it will most likely complete Mu Yang High School's Hidden Mission.

There were not enough mannequins in the Night of the Living Dead scenario, and his Haunted House did not possess the facilities to mass produce a bunch of mannequins.

Tomorrow morning, I should go around to look for a workshop that can help me produce mannequins. Hopefully, the price won't be too exorbitant. Chen Ge continued to look through the black phone. He was hesitating over whether he should draw the Trial Mission or not. In the end, he did not think that he was ready to take on a three-star Trial Mission.

After dealing with all that, Chen Ge reached for his phone, ended the video, and cut the part where the slippers entered the room on their own and stopped beside his bed.

‘Whenever I fell asleep, the slippers walk to the bed on their own.’ After giving it a random name, Chen Ge uploaded this video that was only eleven seconds long to the app. Despite its length, the effect was much better than the bathtub video. In less than several minutes, it had over more than a hundred views and fifty shares. The comments section, which had been quiet for so long, started to get rambunctious again.

“Small and weak! Your video is similar to your... Wait, can someone tell me why the slippers can move on their own?”

“Have you photoshopped yourself out of the video?”

“Am I mistaken? Or is there someone hiding under the bed?”

“I see it, too! But there appears to be two of them! F*ck, what in heaven’s name is this?”

Whenever Chen Ge released a video, his number of followers would increase. After reading the comments for another two minutes, he logged out of his account and went back to sleep. When Chen Ge woke up the next morning, he cleared the white rice away and cleaned the Haunted House before waiting for the park to open.

The lack of employees is a problem. If only the Pen Spirit could help me sell tickets...

Chen Ge started to plan internally. The Minghun scenario allowed a maximum capacity of three visitors at a time, but Murder by Midnight and Mu Yang High School were different. For Murder by Midnight, the more the visitors, the more exciting it would be. Mu Yang High School covered a large space, and even if eight people entered it at the same time, as long as he handled the rhythm well, scaring them dumb was still possible.

After completing Mu Yang High School’s Hidden Mission, I should have Xu Wan manage the Murder by Midnight scenario, and I’ll enter the Mu Yang High School scenario. That way, two scenarios can operate at the same time.

After making the plan, Chen Ge went online to look for a mannequin workshop near western Jiujiang, and he was pleased to discover that there was one close to New Century Park. In fact, the place’s main customer had once been New Century Park. This meant that the deterioration of the park had brought about the place’s demise as well. It seemed that the owner was about to let the place go.

The park opened punctually at 9 am. The number of overall visitors was dwindling, but the line before the Haunted House was increasing. Before, it was Chen Ge holding the stack of flyers in his hands, watching on with envy as the visitors walk past his Haunted House. Even the line for the Merry-go-Round used to be longer than the line for his Haunted House, but now the situation had flipped.

“Please stay patiently in line. Every scenario costs 20. For those of you who want to experience a different scenario after the first one, please return to the back to the line.”

Chen Ge had Xu Wan enter the Haunted House to prepare while he stayed outside to maintain order. When he was selling tickets, the black phone suddenly vibrated.

The day has just started, and there's already a message? Chen Ge stood where he was and pulled out the phone.

"The Midnight Ticket Counter's effect has been triggered. A special visitor has appeared! Please make use of this opportunity; the results will be different based on your choices!"

Another trigger? Chen Ge was dazed for a moment before his eyes swept over the line of visitors. Who could this special visitor be?

Chen Ge's eyes widened when his gaze reached the end of the line. The person saw him as well because he waved at Chen Ge.

"Doctor Gao?"

Chen Ge sent two visitors into the Minghun scenario before he walked over to Doctor Gao and studied the man closely. "Why are you here?"

"To find you of course." Doctor Gao was in a suit, so he did not look like a typical park visitor. "I knew that you are no longer a student, but I'm surprised you own a Haunted House."

"It's a family business." Chen Ge pocketed his black phone and said, "Then, how can I help you?"

"It's like this, I have stumbled across a unique patient. His situation is similar to the boy you once told me about, so I wish to ask you some questions."

Chapter 110 - The Same Dream

Chapter 110: The Same Dream

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Same condition as the boy? He also likes to visit Haunted Houses?” Doctor Gao had managed to pique Chen Ge’s curiosity.

“Low spirited with occasional outbursts. Prefers to be alone in dark places because it gives him a sense of security. Whether he likes to visit Haunted Houses or not, I’m not so sure.” Doctor Gao moved to the side to reveal the young man behind him. “Men Nan, my student, he came to me with his illness about three weeks ago.”

...

The person behind Doctor Gao was in his twenties, slight of frame, had a tense face, high cheek bones, and dark circles around his eyes. Standing under the sun, tiny droplets of sweat seeped out of his forehead. The young man seemed to be in a tense state, with his head lowered, unable to meet any one’s eyes.

“Surname Men?” Chen Ge tried to make conversation. “That’s rare, nice to meet you.”

The young man’s reaction was weird. He kept his head lowered, and his eyes scanned Chen Ge quickly before softly replying, “Nice to meet you.”

After examining the young man for some time, Chen Ge pulled Doctor Gao to the side. “But, Doctor Gao, why did you bring him here? If you plan to let him visit the Haunted House, I’m not responsible if anything happens to him.”

“Men Nan was a cheerful, confident child, one of my brightest students. He is incredibly talented in the field of personality psychology.”

“Personality psychology?”

“One of the branches of psychology. Generally speaking, it is the science of understanding human behavior.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge nodded even though he still did not quite get it.

“His symptoms appeared three weeks ago without any warning. There is usually a trigger to psychological illnesses, mostly related to one’s family or living environment. However, Men Nan lives alone, and his environment has not undergone any changes recently, so I’m stumped,” Doctor Gao whispered, obviously trying to not let Men Nan hear him.

“After many sessions, his condition has not improved. If anything, it is deteriorating. The young man has always been a patient fellow, but recently, he has been experiencing violent mood swings. He got into a scuffle recently with a classmate simply because the animal patterns on the curtain did not match, and he injured a random stranger simply because the number of sesame seeds on the bun kept changing whenever he counted them.”

“The reasons for his anger sure are unique.”

“Whenever one is under the torment of psychological pressure, even the smallest provocation can lead to an explosion of emotions. Men Nan’s actions made me realize he was in deep pain.”

“But why would you bring him to me?” Chen Ge looked at Doctor Gao and Men Nan. The special visitor was probably one of them.

“Wang Xin’s illness has improved greatly. Her symptoms that were deteriorating improved after meeting you,” Doctor Gao said with a smile. “I’m not a stubborn person. No matter the method, as long as it can cure the patient, it is a good method. I am deeply disturbed by the pain he is in, so I wish for you to lend me a hand.”

“Go on then.” Chen Ge did not reject Doctor Gao.

“Can you repeat what you did for Wang Xin on Men Nan? After all, from what we know so far, Men Nan, Wang Xin, and the boy we discussed about before all suffer from the same illness.”

Chen Ge hesitated after hearing Doctor Gao’s words. He did not expect that would be the reason behind the doctor’s visit. What he had done for Wang Xin had probably greatly impressed the senior psychologist, and that was why he had come up with this request.

However, Chen Ge knew the truth. The only reason Chen Ge could help Wang Xin was because he knew the past from the Pen Spirit, and the Pen Spirit herself had come to assist Wang Xin. The method could not be copied; it was specific to the case.

“Is it going to be a problem for you?” Doctor Gao saw the hesitation on Chen Ge’s face. “If it’s too much trouble, then forget I ever ask. After all, I’m just hoping for the best here. This child has immense talent, but if I put him under medication, it will cause great side effects on his body and mind; I’m afraid it will ruin his future.”

“It’s difficult but not impossible. If you want me to help, at least let me know a little bit more about him.” Chen Ge did not reject directly. One of them was the special visitor, and every special visitor was a hidden treasure who he must not let go easily.

“Then I will thank you in advanced on behalf of the child.” The smile returned to Doctor Gao’s face as he called Men Nan over. “Men Nan, come and tell us what has been bothering you.”

The young man kept his head lowered. No matter who he was talking to, his head remained in that posture, like someone was pressing him down on his skull.

Noting the young man’s silence, Doctor Gao sighed before filling in for him. “Three weeks ago, he suddenly came to see me, saying he suspected that he was suffering from depression. We are professionals ourselves, and after an afternoon of diagnosis, I discovered that his symptoms were different from normal depression. At most, he was feeling overly agitated and tired. At the time, I did not think too much of it, but his situation worsened. He would spend the whole day not saying a single word and get into altercations with the slightest provocation. I analyzed it for a long time before coming to a conclusion that he would not admit—he is afraid, very afraid of something that is hidden inside his heart!

“I suspect that he is suffering from a fear complex, but when I examine his surroundings, I cannot find anything that could cause fear. After I asked him again and again, he finally admitted the truth.” Doctor Gao looked at Men Nan with concern in his eyes. “Starting three weeks ago, he has been having the same dream every night.”

The mention of the dream made Men Nan shudder; this was something he was afraid of facing the most.

“What kind of dream?” Chen Ge had imagined many scary scenarios, but Doctor Gao’s answer surprised him.

“He dreamed about washing his hair.”

“Washing his hair?” Chen Ge did not know what to say.

“I’ll let him fill you in on the rest.” Doctor Gao placed his hand on Men Nan’s shoulder and nudged him slightly, probably to make him relax.

After a long time, Men Nan opened his lips. “It is the same dream every time, and it is becoming clearer and clearer. Soon, I’ll be able to see the person’s face.”

His voice sounded raw, like his throat had been burned.

“Who is this person? There’s another person in your dream?”

“Yes, he always appears beside me to watch me wash my hair. He looks scary and dangerous, as if the moment I close my eyes, he will rush over to strangle me.”

Chapter 111 - Getting Closer

Chapter 111: Getting Closer

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge and Doctor Gao were silent for a long time. Washing the head meant washing away bad luck and dirt. In dream theory, it meant a good thing was about to happen, but what Men Nan described had nothing good about it; it sounded like a nightmare.

“Can you still remember the face of the person in your dream and your surroundings?”

...

Men Nan was most likely the special visitor mentioned by the black phone. Therefore, the choice Chen Ge made could influence the final reward.

“The dream feels like it happened inside my rental’s bathroom; the placement of the things looked familiar, but I am not so sure.” Men Nan pushed down his head, and his voice weakened even more. “I haven’t been able to get a good look of the person standing beside me, but I am certain he is getting closer to me. These few weeks, I have been having the same dream, and with each passing night, the dream keeps getting clearer, and I have a clearer view of the man’s face.”

“What does he look like?”

“Soon, in the next dream, I will be able to see his face,” Men Nan said with his head lowered. When he spoke, only his pupils moved upwards; it looked creepy. What the young man said was very vague; there was no worthwhile information.

Chen Ge did not give up and continued to press him. “Can you give me more details? For instance, what was the man up to when you were washing your head? Or has he said anything?”

“The content of the dream is almost always the same.” Men Nan’s raw voice was shaking. “When I had this dream for the first time three weeks ago, it wasn’t that scary. In the dream, I woke up in the middle of the night to enter the bathroom. There were no thoughts in my mind then, and my body was merely moving on its own. It felt like some foreign force had taken over me.

“Initially the dream was fuzzy. I stopped before the mirror to fill up the basin with water before putting my head into it. When I bent over with my head lowered, I could see someone standing at the front door upside-down.

“At the beginning, he was standing far away from me. It was not until I finished washing my head that I realized he seem to have moved closer but only just a little bit.

“After the dream was over, I had other dreams, so I didn’t pay it much attention initially. But the next day, I had the same dream again!

“Everything was the same. I walked into the bathroom, stood before the mirror, filled the basin with water, and then bent over to put my head into the water. When my hair touched the surface of the water, I could see someone standing in the living room. When I was done, the person once again moved closer to me.

“The same dream kept repeating. Initially, it felt like every other dream, but as it repeated itself, everything became clearer and clearer. My brain was moving during the dream, and my senses were active, but the key issue was the man who came in from the door inched closer to me with each dream!

“In my dream, I’m scared out of my wits, but I simply cannot wake up. The moment I fall asleep, the dream continues. In the dream two and a half weeks ago, the man entered the living room; one week ago, the man appeared next to the toilet. In the dream four days ago, the man appeared beside me!

“He was standing beside me. The moment I bent down to push my head into the water, his body would lean alongside me with the fuzzy face inching closer.”

Chen Ge had chills just from Men Nan’s description. He could not imagine the trauma for the young man who had experienced it personally. Having the same dream for three weeks with an unclear man inching closer, no wonder he ended up in this state.

“The night before last, I had the same dream again, and it was also the last time.” Men Nan tried to raise his head, and Chen Ge saw that his eyes were darting about rapidly. “The man’s face was so close that I thought I could take a good look, but at that moment, he used his hands to strangle my neck. Then, I woke up, and I haven't gone back to bed since then."

Men Nan's situation was dire. The man in his dream was strangling him. If the dream was allowed to continue, who knew what would have happened. No wonder Doctor Gao came to Chen Ge; he was probably the last resort.

"Repetitious dream you say... and they are all in the bathroom." Chen Ge thought about it and said, "Could it be a problem with the apartment itself? I'm just stating a possibility, so don't be afraid."

"Go on."

"Is it possible that someone died in the room you rented, and the body hasn't been discovered, so the person appears in your dream, hoping you will call the police on his behalf?"

When Chen Ge finished, Men Nan's face was green. He took in a very deep breath. "There's a body hiding in my room? Impossible!"

His emotions started to go haywire. If not for Doctor Gao's hands on his shoulders, his illness probably would have kicked in. Doctor Gao added with a curious expression, "I've been to his rental room and examined the place inside out; there is nothing weird about it. Furthermore, one week ago, I did invite Men Nan to stay with me. He still experienced the same dream; it did not stop due to a change in location."

"When he had the dream for the first time, the man was standing at the front door, so the man probably came from the outside. This means that we cannot limit our investigation to Men Nan's room. We should expand the scope of investigation to include the whole apartment building." Chen Ge gave his opinion. Afraid of provoking Men Nan, he did not give the latter part of his suspicion. The ghost had probably attached itself to Men Nan, so it could not be solved by sleeping elsewhere.

"We are not police, so we don't have the right to search the rest of the building." Doctor Gao now had second thoughts about coming to Chen Ge. "We should focus on analyzing this dream. Men Nan kept repeating the action of washing his hair—perhaps we will be able to discover something if we understand what that action stands for."

Doctor Gao tried to advise Chen Ge, and Chen Ge did listen to the doctor's explanation patiently, but his speculation could not explain why Men Nan kept having the same dream.

“I can’t be sure for now, so why don’t we see what happens tonight? How about we go to Men Nan’s apartment? Perhaps a new pair of eyes might bring some new discoveries.” Chen Ge waited patiently for them to answer. He put his hands into his pockets—from the special visitor alert until now, the black phone had not reacted.

Chapter 112 - Sounds Familiar

Chapter 112: Sounds Familiar

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Doctor Gao seemed to have his own reservations. “I’m afraid Men Nan might not be able to survive until tonight; his condition is getting worse.”

With his head lowered, Men Nan maintained his weird posture. His pupils darting about but completely silent.

...

“But there’s no better option.” Chen Ge knew what Doctor Gao wanted to say. “His condition is completely different from Wang Xin’s, so I’m helpless as well. But if you trust me, let me go to his apartment to take a look tonight, and perhaps I will find something. Other than that, I have another question to ask him.”

Chen Ge walked to Men Nan’s side and slowly used his hand to swipe above the young man’s head and spine.

“What are you doing?” Doctor Gao was confounded.

“Doctor Gao, have you noticed that regardless of whether he was talking or walking, he kept his head lowered—it felt like there was something pressing on him on his skull.” Chen Ge had noticed this a long time ago, but he did not have the chance to enquire about it. “Men Nan, don’t you think it’s difficult to maintain a posture like that?”

Reminded by Chen Ge, Doctor Gao patted Men Nan on his back. “Are you still feeling uncomfortable?”

Men Nan waved his hands, but he kept his head lowered. Standing for quite some time in the crowd seemed to have taken a toll on him; he looked like he could lose control at any moment. Noticing this, Doctor Gao quickly led Men Nan to a darker location for him to rest.

The frequency at which Men Nan’s pupils move about is not normal. He kept looking around him, and he has a habit of rolling his pupils upwards like he is trying to see above his head.

Chen Ge looked at Men Nan's shadow, and the more he looked at the young man, the more confused he felt. If one was naturally a little bit hunchback, one's spine would be arched, but Men Nan's back was straight, and only his head fell downwards. It gave the impression that there was something heavy sitting on his head.

Washing his head, why would he experience dream like that?

There was still no reaction from the black phone. Chen Ge ignored it. A special visitor was an additional bonus; it was good if he could get it, but he would not feel bad if he did not either. After sending away two batches of visitors, Men Nan's situation improved. Doctor Gao was indeed an expert at counselling. Men Nan, who appeared like he was going to lose his mind, became sedated and calm around Doctor Gao.

He led Men Nan to see Chen Ge again. They seemed to have come to a decision, "8 pm tonight. We will see you at Hai Ming Apartments."

"Okay," Chen Ge promised, and the black phone vibrated. "Let him fall asleep normally tonight, and I will keep a vigil over him."

"I'll accompany you." Doctor Gao thanked Chen Ge before leaving with Men Nan.

Yet another weird case. Chen Ge roughly grasped the meaning of special visitor; they weren't ghosts per se but people trapped in the line between the two worlds. As soon as they left, he checked the black phone.

"The second special visitor has left. Through your effort, you have unlocked the mission information! Unlocked Hidden Trial Mission—A Room of Three.

"A Room of Three (1 Star Scream Factor): Arrive at Hai Ming Apartment before midnight and find out the reason behind the special visitor's illness.

"Mission Venue: Hai Ming Apartment Room 303.

"Mission Hint: He came from the Third Sick Hall.

"Do you want to accept the mission? Warning: The Trial Mission is only active for twenty-four hours. If you do not accept it within this time limit, it'll be taken as forfeit, and this scenario will stay locked forever."

Chen Ge did not pay much attention to this hidden mission, at least not until he saw the mission hint.

It's related to the Third Sick Hall? He came from the Third Sick Hall? Men Nan has been treated inside the Third Sick Hall?

Reading the mission details again, Chen Ge found a more curious coincidence; the number three was repeated many times. Could this be a coincidence? But what is the meaning of this Room of Three?

Either two ghosts were living in Men Nan, or Chen Ge, Doctor Gao, and Men Nan would make up the three in the room. In any case, since it was related to a three-star scenario, Chen Ge did not dare to be too careless. He memorized the mission details and made sure he did not miss anything before putting away the black phone.

He contacted Xu Wan to have her sell tickets while Chen Ge entered the Murder by Midnight scenario to act as the ghost. There was no accident. During lunch break, Chen Ge did not join Xu Wan at the canteen, but he moved alone to the park office.

After discovering the presence of Director Luo's daughter, Chen Ge had a few questions for Director Luo. He took the elevator to the top floor. The door to Director Luo's office was open; the man did not seem to like the idea of trapping himself in an enclosed room. Chen Ge knocked on the door lightly, and Director Luo soon came out to greet him, carrying several reports in his hands.

"Director Luo, I have a few questions for you, do you have some time?"

Director Luo put the reports down. "Problems with the underground parking lot?"

"No, it's not that but something else." Chen Ge placed Luo Ruoyu's bracelet and the paper left behind by his parents on Director Luo's desk. "These are the things I found in the underground parking lot beside a support beam."

"What is it that you wish to know?" Director Luo recognized the bracelet. "There are plenty of toys left in unnoticeable corners around the park. I left them there personally."

“Why would you do that?”

“All the toys are my daughter’s favorites. I placed them around the park so that when she returned, she would not feel so lonely.”

“Then did you place other things alongside the toys, like this?” Chen Ge pushed the bloodied note to Director Luo.

Director Luo shook his head after looking at it twice. “I have no recollection of this; it wasn’t me.”

After getting the answer from Director Luo, Chen Ge was slightly disappointed. He had assumed that, as the director of New Century Park, Director Luo would know a thing or two about his parents’ disappearance, but he was wrong. Director Luo did not even know about his own daughter’s return to the park; his parents seemed to have hidden a lot of secrets.

“Then, I’m sorry for disturbing you.” Chen Ge picked up the note and prepared to leave.

“Wait a minute!” Director Luo stood up slowly and signaled for Chen Ge to show him the note. “This is your father’s handwriting, isn’t it?”

“Yes, you can recognize it?” Chen Ge was surprised; not everyone would pay attention to people’s handwriting.

“The Third Sick Hall...” Director Luo read the words on the paper before confirming. “Right before your parents disappeared, I heard them mention this place.”

Chapter 113 - A Brave Idea

Chapter 113: A Brave Idea

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“You heard them mention that?” Chen Ge’s interest was piqued.

“Yes, the day before your parents’ disappearance, they came to me, saying someone wanted to give me a present. However, due to various complications, said person could not be there and thus entrusted the task to them.” Director Luo took a wooden box from the nearby bookshelf. After opening the box, it revealed a roughly-hewn roly-poly toy.

...

He held the toy in his palm. “Even though the making is rough, I appreciate the meaning. No matter the difficulty, it will stand up again.”

Chen Ge was anxious, and he urged, “What did my parents say after that? Where did you hear those few words?”

“Your parents left after they gave me the gift. Since I have a habit of not closing my office door, I accidentally overheard their conversation in the corridor.” Director Luo thought to himself before continuing. “At the time, they had not wandered far from the door. Your father said something like... ‘The door to the Third Sick Hall has been opened again.’ And your mother replied, ‘The door wasn’t closed in the first place.’”

“That’s it?”

“That’s all I could hear. They did continue the conversation, but I could not hear them clearly.”

After chatting for a few more minutes and confirming that there was nothing more Director Luo could give him, Chen Ge exited his office.

The door to the Third Sick Hall has to be something more than a literal door, could it be similar to the door in the Haunted House’s mirror? Could there be another world behind the door?

He could not understand why his parents would say something like that. He pulled out the black phone to read the mission hint again.

It said 'he' came from the Third Sick Hall. Does it mean that he came from the bloody world, similar to the mirror monster?

The day before their disappearance, Chen Ge's parents had been discussing the Third Sick Hall; did this mean that their disappearance was related to it?

He knew that his parents had disappeared around an abandoned hospital. The police had searched all the nearby buildings but found nothing. Now, Chen Ge suspected that his parents had entered the door and travelled to the other world.

It's still too soon to confirm the mission venue for the Third Sick Hall is the hospital that my parents disappeared in. Chen Ge patted his face lightly to force himself to calm down. Since it was related to his parents, his emotions were unsettled. The mission has three stars, so it must be dangerous. Even if I accept it now, I might not be able to complete it. I'd better focus on the immediate mission for now.

The Trial Mission at Hai Ming Apartments was related to the Third Sick Hall. Completing this mission would provide more understanding of the Third Sick Hall, so it was not a bad place to start.

At 4 pm, the number of visitors slowed. Chen Ge handed the key to the Haunted House to Xu Wan, and he crawled into the props room to prepare for the Trial Mission that night. The doll left behind by his parents was the park's guardian spirit, so it was only useful inside the park. Therefore, Chen Ge did not bring it along with him this time.

Looking at his choices, Chen Ge eventually settled on the phone charger, lighter, safety rope, and the incredibly handy multi-purpose mallet.

That should be enough. He thought about it before shoving the reward money that he had left from the Ping An Apartment case into his backpack. It's early. Perhaps I should go to the mannequin shop first. If the price is right, I can directly give the down payment.

The quicker he finished Mu Yang High School's Hidden Mission, the earlier he would reap the reward. After some cleaning up, when Chen Ge passed the dressing room, he accidentally saw Xiaoxiao, who was hiding behind the door. The fake blood was splattered all over the floor, and there was some on Xiaoxiao as well.

“What are you doing?” Chen Ge picked up Xiaoxiao and asked Xu Wan to help clean the place before returning to the staff breakroom. A roomful of fake blood, Xu Wan must have thought it was my handiwork. Will she think her boss has lost his mind?

Chen Ge used a towel to wipe the fake blood off Xiaoxiao’s body. He pinched her face, threatening, “If you continue to be naughty, I’ll...”

He was stuck because he could not figure out what Xiaoxiao was afraid of. Eventually, he huffed and shoved Xiaoxiao into his backpack as well. After everything was ready, Chen Ge exited the Haunted House and the park.

The park visitor number was dwindling, and the open air carpark was empty. There was not even a line at the bus stop.

Maintaining the park requires plenty of money; with so few visitors, it mustn’t be easy for Director Luo.

After crossing the road, Chen Ge looked for the mannequin workshop using the information on the internet.

He saw the sign hanging above a door that led underground. When he asked the hawker on the street, Chen Ge was told that the workshop was underground.

Walking down the steps, the walls on both sides were covered in scrawling that he could not appreciate, and at the end of the step was a glass door with the sign ‘FOR RENT/SALE’.

“Is anyone in?” Chen Ge looked through the glass room. The interior looked like an underground storeroom; the place was huge but empty. After waiting for some time, a slightly overweight man answered the door in his slippers.

He looked roughly the same age as Chen Ge. He was in very casual attire and had some baby fat on his face. The glass door opened, and Chen Ge was blasted in the face by the air conditioning.

“You are the boss? I wish to order a set of custom-made mannequins,” Chen Ge explained.

“Okay, come in.” The man invited Chen Ge into the shop. “How big do you want it? If it’s under thirty centimeters, you can get it under three days.”

“That’s too small. I want something the size of a real person, and the joints all need to be moveable; can you do something like that?” Chen Ge looked at the equipment inside the workshop; the place was more professional than it appeared on the outside.

“Similar size to a real person? With moveable parts?” Comprehension dawned for the man. With an understanding look, he asked, “How many do you want?”

“Twenty-four, when you can finish the order?” Chen Ge answered.

“Twenty-four?” the man asked in a raised pitch.

The shout scared Chen Ge. “Why are you screaming so suddenly? Is twenty-four too many for the workshop to produce?”

“All for your personal use?”

“What use would I have for the mannequins?” Chen Ge realized the man had misunderstood him, so he explained, “I own a Haunted House; the mannequins are part of the set design.”

“Okay...” The man sighed in relief. “If it’s for a Haunted House, I don’t suggest using too expensive filler. After all, the exhaustion rate is too high. We can make two types here, solid base and half-solid base. The most expensive 12,000, cheapest 3,000. Also, I have to remind you, all the workers have left, and I’ve been left alone to look after the place. So, twenty-four custom-made mannequins will probably take a month to be completed.”

Chapter 114 - Hai Ming Apartments

Chapter 114: Hai Ming Apartments

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The cheapest costs 3,000? Chen Ge coughed, and his hand moved involuntarily to the 20,000 or so in his backpack. He uttered in a calm voice, “Money is not a problem, but the new scenario will be open in a few days; I need the mannequins to be finished soon. You said that you don’t have enough employees to rush the order, but do you have the materials here?”

“I do.” The boss did not know why Chen Ge would suddenly ask that. “If you give us a few more days, I’m sure you’ll be satisfied with the result.”

...

“The Haunted House will open the new scenario for visitation the day after tomorrow; there can be no delay.”

“We’re not doing so well; did you not see the sign in the window? Before this, I was only responsible for the designs, and the workers would handle the rest. But since there have been no large orders, I sent them all away to save money.” The boss also did not want to give up on Chen Ge’s order so easily. “How about this, I will call the workers tonight, and I will have them rush the order for you in a week?”

“A week is still too long; I need them the day after tomorrow.”

The boss sighed helplessly. “Even if we work at full speed, I can only give you three or four mannequins the day after tomorrow.”

“You have enough materials but not the workers.” Chen Ge put down his backpack. “How about this, lend your workshop to me for twenty-four hours? You only need to prepare the materials for me.”

“Huh?”

As the conversation continued, it started to head down a weird direction. The boss did not quite react to it yet, “Then what shall I do?”

“Just stand to the side and watch.” Chen Ge moved his fingers and looked around the space. “After all, it’s not like you have other customers. After the place is sold, the stored materials will be disposed of or sold at a low price. Since that’s the case, you might as well lease the place to me for a day. Don’t worry, I will purchase the materials at market price.”

The man had a point, but something felt off! The boss thought about it and realized he had nothing to lose. Looking at the excited Chen Ge, he nodded with difficulty. “Alright, but you have to give me 10,000 as deposit. I’ll remove the material price from the deposit, and I’ll return the rest when you’re finished.”

“You have a deal.”

After paying the boss, Chen Ge entered the work space. The place was huge, and multiple tools covered the floor.

“You sure you want to do this yourself?” The boss was still hesitant. “If you need it, I can help. After all, I’m free.”

“Then, I shall thank you in advanced.” Chen Ge was familiar with the tools because he had spent his internship at a toy factory. He took a tour, and after a plan formed in his mind, he pulled out his phone to call Inspector Lee.

“Uncle Lee, I have a favor to ask; it’s related to Mu Yang High School.”

“The station has already closed the case. Why are you still so hung up over Mu Yang High School?” Every time Inspector Lee answered Chen Ge’s call, his heart would quiver in worry, afraid that he might hear some bad news.

“It’s not related to the case, I just want to...”

“Stop getting involved with the school.” Inspector Lee became serious. “According to the main city’s investigation, there might be a darker history there before the school was built.”

“A darker history?” Chen Ge did not press him. “Inspector Lee, you misunderstood me; I don’t intend to meddle in police business. Didn’t you tell me that a whole class got into an accident last time? I just want to ask if you have a picture of all twenty-four students?”

“Have you lost your mind? Why do you need something like that?”

“It’s very important, but I cannot tell you the reason for now. I swear it’s not for malicious use.” Chen Ge was planning to build bodies for the twenty-four lingering spirit to possess so that they would not be homeless anymore. In a way, he was doing a good thing.

The phone was silent for a long time before Inspector Lee said, “Don’t do anything stupid! Call me if you find out anything. I’ll take a look in a bit.”

After hanging up the phone, Chen Ge did not think too much of it, but he scared the boss speechless. The man hesitated for some time before sidling up to Chen Ge to ask, “Are you a cop?”

“No, have you prepared the materials?”

“Yes.” Even the tone used by the boss had gotten more reverential.

“Alright, it’s time to start working.” Chen Ge and the boss went to prepare the clay first. Ten minutes later, Inspector Lee sent a group photo with twenty-six people and said it was the only picture they had in the files. There was a bespectacled senior sitting in the middle of the photo, and behind him stood twenty-five students.

“It’s a lot easier with the picture as a guide.” Chen Ge thanked the boss before asking him to move away. He carved out a rough head shape from the clay before activating his skill, Dollmaker’s Talent.

Using the different types of carving knives, Chen Ge made a human skull that was similar to the face on the picture in less than few minutes. His pair of hands were as delicate as flying butterflies as he masterfully employed the carving knives. The ease with which Chen Ge conducted his work stunned the boss; it felt like he was watching an art documentary sped up thrice.

What is this person’s actual occupation? After he was done with the carving, Chen Ge used the wet sponge to carefully wipe down the skulls. His touch was so masterful that after he wiped the dust away, a skin-like consistency appeared on the clay body.

After a while, the clay body hardened, and Chen Ge sprayed it with sticky plaster. Then, there was nothing left to do but wait. The plaster needed at least one hour to dry. Utilizing this downtime, Chen Ge went to work on something else.

After one and a half hours, Chen Ge finished all the clay bodies. Then he retrieved the first few clay bodies from the hardened plaster. He slathered them with a layer of latex, which would act as the mannequin's skin.

After applying the latex, Chen Ge inserted a bendable stick into the clay body, this would act as the mannequin's spine. Finally, he injected the filler. Everything was completed in one fell swoop, Chen Ge only needed ten minutes to finish one fake mannequin head.

"It's getting late. Take this 10,000 as the deposit, and don't touch anything in the work area. I'll be back to finish the rest tomorrow." Chen Ge washed his hands and planned to leave for Hai Ming Apartments.

"Don't worry, I won't go anywhere near them." Looking at the twenty-four heads left on the counter, the boss shivered. He had seen many mannequins in his life, but the mannequins created by Chen Ge's hands gave him a different impression. They were exceptionally real, like they would wink at him at any moment.

Shrugging on his backpack, Chen Ge exited the underground workshop. He hailed a cab to head toward Hai Ming Apartments. It was about time for his meeting with Doctor Gao.

Hai Ming Apartments was situated at the older part of town where the buildings were not high. After crossing several busy streets, the surroundings turned quiet. With the directions given by the taxi driver, Chen Ge finally arrived at his destination.

Chapter 115 - Room 303

Chapter 115: Room 303

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge's shadow was quite long under the street light. There was not one person on the road other than the occasional street cat, which shuffled noisily across the street.

Who would have thought such a quiet street is hiding in the city? Chen Ge walked down the road between the buildings, deeper into the residential area. There was a light horrid smell in the air; the trash that littered the street had been left there for a long time. The trash spilled out of the trash bags, and some critters occasionally squirmed out from them. Compared to the few buildings that faced the road, the building Chen Ge arrived at looked more dilapidated. There were dirty stains on the building walls, and there was a lot of trash crowding the stairs.

...

Found it. Chen Ge looked at the six-story high apartment building. Based on the advertisement that stuck to the wall, this was the place he was looking for. The mission venue given by the black phone was Room 303, so that should be Men Nan's room.

Chen Ge glanced at the time; it was 7:54 pm. It might be rather inconvenient after Doctor Gao arrives, so perhaps I should go take a look around first.

He did not call Doctor Gao but entered the stairs directly. The ceiling of each floor was low; they were perhaps about 2.1 meters. The railings were made of iron, and at every interval, there was a piece of red string tied around it, but Chen Ge had no idea what purpose they served. After entering the building, a weird smell hit Chen Ge. It was very light, and it was not particularly smelly. Those who stayed there might have gotten used to it already, but Chen Ge was a first-time visitor, so he was sensitive to the smell.

It smells like food that has gone sour. Chen Ge stopped for a while at the first floor to search for the source of the smell but came up with nothing. The smell seemed to come from the building itself, seeping out from every brick. There was no light in the corridor, so Chen Ge took out his phone for light.

There were four rooms on the first floor, and it appeared very cramped. The sound insulation was not that perfect, so Chen Ge could hear the sound coming from within even though he stood outside.

Chen Ge snuck up to the third floor. He did not knock on the door to Room 303 but stood outside the door to listen in.

There were also four rooms on the third floor. The television in 301 was very loud. There was a man in 302 speaking on the phone, and it sounded like he was in a heated argument. Chen Ge could hear him repeat two sentences constantly—Stop forcing me. Do you two wish to push me to my death?

There was no sound coming from Room 303 and 304; they were very quiet.

After two minutes, Chen Ge tapped on the door to Room 303 lightly. Interestingly enough, when he did so, the television volume in 301 decreased, and the man in 302 got off his phone. The whole third floor became eerily quiet.

Chen Ge knocked on the door for a full minute, but there was no answer. He called out softly, “Men Nan? Are you home?”

There was no answer. Just as Chen Ge thought he had gotten the wrong address, the door to 301 opened.

An unshaven middle-aged man leaned against the frame, and the haze of alcohol formed a miasma around him. “Hey, who are you looking for?”

“Men Nan in 303, he’s a student at Jiujiang Medical University. I heard he’s not feeling well, so I came to visit him.”

“You got the wrong place. I have no idea who this Men Nan is, but I’m sure he is not living in 303.” The man scratched his face. His left cheek had been bitten by a mosquito, and the wound had been scratched until it was bleeding.

“But my friend told me he lives here.” Chen Ge tried to get some information from the man. “Furthermore, you said you don’t know Men Nan, so how can you be sure he doesn’t live here?”

“Someone died in Room 303 before, and ever since then, the room has been vacant.” The man moved his fingers before his face to look at the blood left underneath his nails. “Stop knocking on the door; it’s bad luck. You hear me?”

The middle-aged man then slammed the door in his face. However, Chen Ge realized the man did not return the volume of the television back to normal. The man was probably hiding behind the door to listen to his movements.

Chen Ge did not knock on the door anymore, but he had acquired an important clue from the man. Someone had died in Room 303, and ever since that unfortunate incident, the room had remained vacant.

He had found the mission venue, so the key now was how to gain entry before midnight.

The black phone hasn’t made any mistakes yet, so Men Nan’s illness is probably related to this room. Chen Ge looked at his watch; it was already 8 pm, so he called Doctor Gao.

The good doctor had been afraid that Chen Ge was not able to find his way, so he had been waiting outside the residential area to meet him.

After explaining the situation on the phone, several minutes later, Doctor Gao entered the corridor with Men Nan behind him. When he saw Men Nan again, Chen Ge had a shock. The young man now looked completely different from a normal person; he looked like a naturally deformed person.

His head was practically perpendicular to his spine, it looked as if someone was pressing down hard on his head. Chen Ge pointed at the door and tossed Doctor Gao a confused look.

Doctor Gao understood what he meant and shook his head slightly. “His condition worsened. The medication helped stabilized his situation for now. Let us go in first.”

Men Nan took out the key from his pocket, his head still lowered. The light in the corridor was dim. He tried multiple times, but he failed to get the key into the keyhole. His hands shook angrily, and it felt like he was going to act up again. Seeing this, Chen Ge immediately went over to help him open the door to Room 304.

When the three of them entered the room, Doctor Gao and Men Nan probably had gotten used to it, but Chen Ge frowned as a curious smell overwhelmed him.

It seems to seep out from the walls. Chen Ge looked around the room, the place was clean and neat. There was no rubbish in the waste bin, so he did not understand where the smell came from. Another body sealed inside a wall?

Chen Ge denied the thought quickly. The wall at the end of the third-floor corridor at Ping An Apartment had purposely been strengthened by Wang Qi. The wall of a normal apartment would not be thick enough to hide a body.

Doctor Gao noticed how weird Chen Ge was asking so he asked him, “What are you looking for?”

“Do you not smell a very weird odor?” Chen Ge stopped at the wall between 303 and 304; the smell was the most intense there.

“There is, but old buildings tend to have weird smell.” Doctor Gao led Men Nan to the bed, but the young man refused to go near it. He would rather stand than sit on the bed.

Chen Ge glanced at Men Nan, and he whispered to the doctor, “What’s going on with him?”

“He’s afraid of falling asleep. In the previous dream, the man was already strangling his neck. If he falls asleep again, he’s afraid it might be his eternal slumber.”

Chapter 116 - OCD

Chapter 116: OCD

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Men Nan refused to sleep and stood stubbornly in the middle of the room. He maintained that weird posture of someone trying to push his head off from his neck.

“I keep feeling there’s something pressing on top of his head.” Afraid of rattling Men Nan, Chen Ge kept his voice lowered. “Not a psychological threat but something that exists in reality.”

...

Doctor Gao waved his hand surreptitiously as he stayed beside Men Nan. He pulled out his phone and messaged someone with it. Since Doctor Gao did not reply him, Chen Ge wandered off to inspect the other rooms in the small apartment.

The place was just over thirty square meters, but it had everything: a bedroom, living room, and a standalone bathroom.

It does look like a normal rental apartment.

Chen Ge looked around and found no hidden corner; there was no place to hide a body. He exited the living room and pushed the wooden door that led to the toilet. To his surprise, there was a half-body mirror hanging on the wall directly opposite from the door.

The door is right opposite the mirror?

Due to the first Nightmare Mission, Chen Ge was very sensitive to the presence of mirrors. He walked slowly to the mirror and looked at his reflection. It’s rare for a room layout to have the mirror directly across from the door. Doesn’t it feel weird?

The mirror was clean, like it was cleaned often. There was barely a stain. He moved his gaze away. There was a sink underneath the mirror. This was the scene for Men Nan’s nightmare.

Chen Ge mirrored the pose mentioned by Men Nan. He bent his body

95 degrees forward, and his head could barely reach the faucet. From this angle, I can look at the situation inside the living room, so the scenario in his dream is entirely possible.

If when his head was under the faucet and he could not see into the living room or his gaze was blocked by something, Chen Ge would not have been so afraid; it would have proved that it was all just a dream.

However, he tested it out personally and realized that the things described in his dream could very well have happened in real life. With his head under the faucet, the world appeared upside down.

Men Nan said that in his dream, the man would get closer to him every time. This is weird, why wouldn't the person just harm him directly? He purposely chose this slow torment, is there some kind of history between them?

Chen Ge was thinking about this when he felt something chilly touch the back of his neck. He stood up immediately to touch the spot.

A water drop? Where did it come up? Chen Ge raised his head to look at the ceiling. It was not leaking; the water came from nowhere.

Could it be the mirror? An image of himself inside the mirror coming out to strangle him while he was washing his hair appeared in his mind.

The black phone says that this Trial Mission is called A Room of Three; the mission name itself is a big hint. Chen Ge looked at himself inside the mirror, and something cropped up in his mind. There are three 'people' inside this room; one is Men Nan, the man in his dream is another, but who is the third 'person'? Could this person be hiding inside the mirror?

Placing both his hands on the sink, Chen Ge looked around and discovered two empty bottles of hair shampoo inside the bathroom waste bin.

Men Nan hasn't been living here for long, and he already finished two bottles of shampoo? If he is only washing his hair in his sleep, why would the shampoo in real life be exhausted? The child has a habit of sleep-walking? Does he wash his head in the middle of the night? Chen Ge thought about it and discounted the idea. Doctor Gao had said that he once invited Men Nan to his own home and the young man's nightmares did not stop.

Temporarily ignoring the possibility of sleep-walking, if Men Nan consciously washed his hair until he depleted two bottles of shampoo, that is even weirder. Why did he waste so much shampoo washing his hair?

The cleanest normal person might wash their hair twice a day, but Men Nan had finished two bottles of shampoo in a short amount of time. Chen Ge then realized that a third bottle that sat on the sink was half-finished already.

Under what condition would someone wash their hair with such diligence? Dandruff? Skin disease? Or there is something they need to wash away? Chen Ge leaned against the wall to think. There are two times Men Nan got into an argument at school. Once was because of the animal prints on the curtain, and another was due to the number of sesame seeds on the biscuit, so it sounds like he suffers from serious OCD.

For someone with OCD, if they noticed something not right, they would try their best to fix it. If the mistake could not be fixed, they would be very uncomfortable. Chen Ge suspected the reason behind the obsessive hair washing was related to this.

Only Men Nan can answer this question. He probably has hidden something important from Doctor Gao.

Suddenly Chen Ge's phone vibrated. He took it out and was surprised to find a message from Doctor Gao.

"Men Nan's family situation is more complicated than I thought. When I told Men Nan's family about his situation, they accepted it a bit too easily. They said they will send enough money to Men Nan for his medical fees, but none of them plan on coming to Jiujiang to visit him. I did not tell you this in case Men Nan heard me, so I sent it to you on the phone."

"Their son is sick, and the parents didn't even want to come to see him?"

"I also didn't expect that. When I interviewed Men Nan's friends, they all told me they thought Men Nan came from a happy family. I've gone through his social media, and he has shared many posts about loving his family." Men Nan put up a front that felt like he lived in a warm, charming family and was an educated, happy, professional, and studious young man, but it was ultimately just a front.

After reading the message, Chen Ge revealed his discovery to Doctor Gao. Soon after that, he got a reply from Doctor Gao.

“There are four main types of OCD: Checking, Ruminations, Contamination, and Symmetry and Ordering. Based on my observation, Men Nan’s symptoms don’t fit any of these; his obsessive hair washing merely satisfies this need he has.

“Based on my observation, Men Nan appears to suffer from a different psychological illness called PTSD. For example, victims of an earthquake remain in a highly alert state even after the quake is long over. They have a hard time walking out from the trauma because the mind keeps sending them the wrong information, telling them quake will return at any moment.

“Men Nan’s symptoms are similar to PTSD. He is in a constant state of alert, and his eyes keep darting about, a sign for lack of security. It is like he is watching out for potential danger. In that case, the hair washing is probably a kind self-protective mechanism.”

Chapter 117 - Reason Behind the Hair Washing

Chapter 117: Reason Behind the Hair Washing

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge could not understand Doctor Gao's message. "How could washing one's hair be related to a self-defense mechanism?"

"PSTD presupposes an earlier trauma. Men Nan repeatedly washing his hair is probably to escape from a psychological trauma; this perhaps has to do with his past."

...

"His past?"

"Yes, something he has experienced in the past has left a great trauma in him. Whenever he is reminded of it, his body reacts. To ease the pain, he instinctively seeks out a method to make himself feel better. Based on my observation, that method is to wash his hair."

After a while, Doctor Gao sent another message. "At the beginning of the semester, I once asked Men Nan why he chose to study psychology. He told me that he wished to cure someone's illness, and I now realize that he was probably talking about himself."

"Looks like the problem resides in what happened to Men Nan when he was young. In that case, we have to ask him for more details. Only by knowing his history can we help him."

"If my diagnosis is correct, it is all the more reason that we cannot ask him. He has been trying to forget this past, so if we ask him about it, it might send him over the deep end."

"Then perhaps we can contact his family. The man is in such pain, but his parents do not care one bit about him? That doesn't seem right." Chen Ge wanted to snap a picture of Men Nan in his current state and send it to Men Nan's parents.

"I asked them about this when I made the call earlier. Men Nan has had this habit of obsessively washing his hair since he was young. His parents have gotten used to it and don't think it's anything to worry about.”

“Did they say why this happened?”

“No, when Men Nan was small, his parents did take him to visit a psychiatrist. The diagnosis then was OCD, something that was very rare for a child his age. Since he was still so young, there was no medication that could be prescribed. The psychiatrist merely advised his parents give him constant company.”

“Obviously, his parents did not take the doctor’s advice,” Chen Ge replied without second thought. If Men Nan’s parents cared about him, they would not have acted so coldly.

“A slight OCD is not a disturbance to daily life, so his parents did not take it to heart. Other than that, after some digging around, I found out that Men Nan’s biological mother died when he was five or six. His father remarried, and he gave Men Nan a younger brother from the second marriage.”

“Biological mother is dead? There’s such a history?” Chen Ge saw a ray of light in their investigation.

“His biological parents did not share a good relationship. His father was not home a lot, so his mother practically raised him alone. One day, a burglar entered the house. What happened next, Men Nan’s current parents are not sure; all they knew was the neighbor called the police the next day.”

“The next day?” Chen Ge’s heart skipped a beat. “Then, where was Men Nan during the time of the crime?”

“I’m not sure, but based on the testimony from the neighbor, when the police arrived, Men Nan was already at the crime scene; he was the first person to find his mother.”

Reading the message from Doctor Gao, a chill ran up Chen Ge’s spine. “Meaning Men Nan spent the night with his dead mother inside the house? He was only discovered the next morning?”

“I suppose one can see it that way. Perhaps the burglar took pity on Men Nan or was not awake during the time of crime. In any case, Men Nan survived the break-in; however, the sight of his dead mother must have left a deep psychological scar in his heart. I suspect his OCD and PTSD are both related to this murder, but what I don’t understand is why he insists on washing his hair? How is that related to the murder?”

Doctor Gao's reply was filled with confusion. It was the same question Chen Ge wanted to ask as well. He stood before the mirror and looked at his reflection. Washing hair? Self-defense mechanism?

The image of himself mimicking Men Nan appeared in his mind. Chen Ge touched the back of his neck, and he was suddenly reminded of something. The water drop!

He immediately messaged Doctor Gao. “At the crime scene, where was the body of Men Nan's mother discovered?”

“After the burglar killed her, he removed the damp-proof boards from the ceiling of the bathroom and shoved her up there. If not for the fact that the neighbor's kid went to school together with Men Nan, and thus both families shared a good relationship, the crime would not have been discovered so soon.”

“The space above the bathroom?” Chen Ge raised his head to look at the bathroom he was in. The ceiling of the place was low; he felt pressured standing in it. “I think I understand why Men Nan has the hair washing OCD.”

He used his phone to reply to Doctor Gao. “Is it possible that this was the real event that happened? After the burglar broke into the house, both mother and son discovered him. His mother asked for Men Nan to hide while she went to call the police but was unfortunately discovered by the burglar.”

“That's possible, but what does that have to do with hair washing?”

“Men Nan witnessed his mother's murder and hid away. After the burglar left, he went to search for his mother. When he entered the bathroom, his mother's blood happened to drip on his head.” When Chen Ge typed those words, he was not feeling so good. “Therefore, even now, whenever a liquid falls on his head or whenever he is reminded of that incident, he washes his hair again and again; he wants to wash the memory away. Doctor Gao, you were right; this is more than a simple OCD!”

After sending those words, Chen Ge looked out the bathroom. Doctor Gao's expression was written in shock. He caught Chen Ge's eyes, and they shared a look.

“The cause of the illness has been found!” Doctor Gao put away his phone and walked toward Chen Ge. "I'll bring him away now and provide the necessary post-traumatic treatment."

"I'm afraid it's not that simple." Chen Ge glanced at Men Nan, who stood where he was, and slightly shook his head. "Men Nan kept repeating the same action in his dream, but washing his head wasn't scary. The real scary thing was the man who kept approaching him. To help Men Nan, we have to find out everything about this man and chase him out of Men Nan's dream."

"Chase the thing out of his dream?" Doctor Gao looked at Chen Ge with a suspicious look before turning to look at Men Nan, who stood in a funny posture. In that short moment, he felt he was back at the mental hospital. "Are you kidding with me?"

"I already have a theory in mind; it'll be confirmed later tonight!" Chen Ge lined all the clues together, and he was sixty percent confident. "There are indeed three 'people' in this room. Two of them have been confirmed. We only need to solve the mystery of the third one."

Chapter 118 - He's Crazy

Chapter 118: He's Crazy

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“What are you talking about?” Doctor Gao was made even more confused by what Chen Ge said. He could not follow the man’s train of thought anymore. Of course, this was not Doctor Gao’s fault; only Chen Ge himself knew about the hint provided by the black phone. The most crucial hint was the name of the mission—A Room of Three.

Chen Ge would not reveal the black phone to anyone, so he did not explain himself to Doctor Gao but walked out of the room alone.

...

Men Nan kept experiencing the same dream, and the thing that he remembered most clearly was washing his hair. The dream itself could not be counted as a nightmare; even Men Nan had said at the park that when he experienced this dream for the first time, he did not feel fear. It was after the man had gotten close to him that he started to feel fear. So, in that case, the real threat to Men Nan was the man.

Men Nan’s description of the dream confirmed this. When he was washing his hair, he did not feel any threat, but when the man neared him, he felt hostility. In the last dream, the man had wandered to his side and strangled his neck; obviously, the man meant him harm.

Therefore, in the room of three, there was Men Nan—the victim—and of the remaining two; one wanted to protect him, and the other wanted to harm him. In traditional Chinese beliefs, washing one’s hair in a dream meant removing bad luck, so Men Nan’s dream could very well be warning him that danger was encroaching!

After uncovering Men Nan’s past, Chen Ge suspected that the person who wanted to protect Men Nan was his mother. They had only had each other when Men Nan was growing up, so his mother had no reason to harm him. On the other hand, the person who wanted to harm him should have been the ex-tenant in Room 303.

When Chen Ge arrived at Hai Ming Apartments for the first time, he had immediately noticed the red strings on the railings; they were knotted in a special way. It was a traditional method of warding off evil spirits. From that moment onward, Chen Ge had suspected there was a malicious presence in this apartment.

That combined with what the uncle from Room 301 had told him before entering Men Nan's room as well the mission hint from the black phone confirmed his suspicion.

To know the identity of the man from Men Nan's dream as well as to solve Men Nan's problem, I have to enter Room 303. Furthermore, this is related to the black phone's mission.

Harming people in their dream, the thing in Room 303 was definitely not a kind spirit; it was probably similar to the mirror monster Chen Ge had come across earlier.

Have to face those monsters again.

People were separated into good and evil; it was similar for the departed. Chen Ge would not hesitate to destroy these evil spirits.

The uncle from Room 301 said that someone died in Room 303 before, and it has stayed vacant since. This means that what remains in the room is probably the dead tenant's malicious specter. Chen Ge had seen several types of ghosts already. The weakest of them was the lingering spirits; they were not that powerful, just a lingering consciousness. Stronger than lingering spirits were the spirits like Xiaoxiao, and stronger than that was the mirror monster. Chen Ge believed that the thing inside the apartment should be as powerful as the mirror monster.

I wasn't afraid then, so why should I be afraid now? Furthermore, there are so many living people around me who can help at a moment's notice. Chen Ge walked toward Men Nan to ask about the location of the landlord. Then, he left Room 304. He returned to the first floor to knock on Room 101.

After a while, a fat woman in her fifties opened the door. She studied Chen Ge up and down before asking, "You want to rent a room?"

"Yes, my friend is living in Room 304, so I want to rent the room next to him: Room 303."

"303 is not for rent, find another room."

"The room is empty; why isn't it for rent?" Chen Ge asked.

“There are empty rooms on the fourth floor. If you refuse to take those, then leave.” The woman then closed the door, effectively ending the conversation.

Is she naturally that unsociable, or have I touched upon a sensitive subject? Either way, Room 303 sure has its secrets. The landlady naturally would not share the history of the dead person inside Room 303, so Chen Ge swapped his target and returned to the third floor to knock on Room 301.

The television volume lowered, and the man that stank of alcohol came to answer the door. “You again?”

“Boss, can I have a little bit of your time?” Chen Ge handed him a 100 note from his pocket. The man accepted the money, and his eyes that fell on Chen Ge seemed friendly. “What do you want?”

“I want to know about the things that happened in Room 303. The more detailed, the better.”

“Room 303, you say?” The middle-aged man did not exit the door but waved at Chen Ge to ask him to enter his room. The small apartment was filled with trash, and Chen Ge could barely find a place to stand.

After closing the door, the man turned the television volume up before saying, “You sure are an inquisitive fella, but listen to me, for the sake of yourself and your friend, move out of this place as soon as you can. Not everyone can stay here.”

“What do you mean? There’s criteria to the tenants?”

“Interestingly enough, it’s related to Room 303.” The man grabbed a random bottle off the table and took a slurp of beer. “Do you know what the name of the original tenant that stayed in that room was?”

“How would I know something like that?” Chen Ge tried his best to ignore the alcoholic breath that drifted out of the man’s mouth. It was difficult to tell whether the man was serious or merely making up a story.

“The man’s name was Wang Haiming; this is his apartment building.”

“But I saw the landlady earlier. She appeared to be a woman in her fifties.”

“That’s his ex-wife.” The man glared at Chen Ge, telling him to not interrupt him. “Wang Haiming was fortunate enough to land on a pot of gold. After that, he abandoned his wife to marry a woman from a mysterious background. A few years later, that woman left Wang Haiming with all his money and even registered him at a mental hospital. In the end, it was his ex-wife who pitied Wang Haiming and got him out of the hospital. She then arranged a room for him to stay in; that room was Room 303.”

“Wang Haiming was once in a mental hospital?” Chen Ge was reminded of the black phone’s mission hint—He came from the Third Sick Hall.

“Yes, regardless of whether or not the man was crazy before he entered the place, after he came out from it, he was definitely abnormal.”

“Abnormal? What do you mean?”

“I’ll give you a simple example.” The man pointed at his head. “Wang Haiming had the tendency to knock his head against the wall whenever midnight arrived. It was as if there was something that had drilled itself inside his brain, and he wanted to crack it open. He would scream and wail as well as have arguments with himself. Sometimes, he would not stop even when his head was already bleeding. No one was able to stop him. Occasionally, they even had to call the cops to apprehend the guy.”

Chapter 119 - He Has Returned

Chapter 119: He Has Returned

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Use his head to hit the wall? Like something had drilled into his brain?”

Chen Ge thought about what the man had said and realized that Wang Haiming’s condition was rather similar to Zhang Peng’s. They were both possessed by something, but Zhang Peng had chosen to cooperate while Wang Haiming had decided to struggle.

...

Midnight was the time of the day when the Yin energy was most concentrated and thus the time when those things were at their most active. It explained why Wang Haiming acted up every day near midnight.

Chen Ge decided to continue this line of questioning. “Boss, other than the nightly madness, did Wang Haiming perform any other weird actions?”

“When he first came out of the mental hospital, he felt normal, a little reticent if anything. However, after prolonged interaction, we discovered how weird he really was. He seemed fine in the day and sometimes would even greet others, but he changed into a different man as night fell. Banging his head against the wall, talking to mirror and the walls, strangling his own neck until his face was purple, but he still would not let go.”

Through the man’s description, Chen Ge discovered a thing or two about Wang Haiming’s past. Wang Haiming’s second wife cheated him out of all his money and sent him to a mental hospital. If this was a set up, then Wang Haiming had probably been totally normal before he entered the hospital. A normal person entered the hospital and came out not normal.

He probably brought the thing back from the hospital. An answer slowly settled in Chen Ge’s heart, and he asked another question, “Do you mind giving me the details of Wang Haiming’s death?”

The man raised the bottle in his arm to take a big gulp. "I don't know why you're so interested in a dead man, but listen to me, get out while you still can; the place is cursed."

"Thank you, but I know what I'm doing."

After more persuasion from Chen Ge, the man finally loosened his lips. "Before this, whenever Wang Haiming acted up, we could hear his screaming, and the tenants would go over to help or call the place. However, on the day of his death, none of us heard him. The next morning, when the landlady went to drop him food, his body had already gone cold."

"What did the scene of his death look like?" Chen Ge asked. This was crucial if he wanted to reconstruct what happened to Wang Haiming.

The man gave Chen Ge a curious look. He could not understand why this young man was so interested in these things. "At the time, I was also there. There was a large hole on Wang Haiming's forehead, and blood was splattered all over the wall between 303 and 304. His face was purple like he had died from asphyxiation. There were finger prints around his neck, but according to the police, they came from Wang Haiming himself."

"So, he strangled himself to death?"

"The room was locked, and he was alone. The door and windows weren't tampered with, so that seemed like the logical conclusion." The man finished the beer and tossed the empty bottle away. "You done? Since the sun is still up, I want to go down to buy some beer."

"Since the sun is still up?" Chen Ge glanced at the darkening sky and finished the conversation. "One last question, after Wang Haiming's death, have there been any weird happenings around here?"

Chen Ge noticed the man's face shift when he asked that question. The man glanced at the money in his palm and whispered to Chen Ge, "Many old tenants swear that they have seen Wang Haiming return."

"But isn't he dead?"

Before Chen Ge had finished, the man pushed him out of the room.

"Hey! Explain yourself!"

The man had already turned down the corridor. After some hesitation,

Chen Ge walked toward the first floor, the landlady's room. Since Wang Haiming had probably come from the Third Sick Hall, this meant that he had probably carried some information on the Third Sick Hall on him. Chen Ge would not give up on that trail. After all, the Third Sick Hall was the clue left behind by his parents.

After the landlady knew of Chen Ge's intention, her reaction was surprisingly intense. She warned Chen Ge that if he did not get off her premises soon, she would call the cops.

The steel door slammed in his face, and Chen Ge was feeling rather helpless, standing in the corridor. The landlady refused to cooperate no matter what Chen Ge said.

If I use my mallet to break down the lock of Room 303, that landlady will probably call the police.

Chen Ge returned to the third floor to discuss this with Doctor Gao, but he stopped when he reached the door.

Why is the person in Room 302 still on the phone? A young man's voice drifted out from behind the door, and the most repeated sentence was—"Are you trying to push me to my death?"

It has been more than half an hour since I left Men Nan's room, and the young man still hasn't finished his phone call? It was normal for a phone call to extend for longer periods of time, but it was weird for him to repeat the same few sentences with similar meanings again and again.

Who is he arguing with? His voice is the only one I hear, and now that I listen closer, it doesn't sound like he's talking on the phone at all. Chen Ge leaned against the door to listen in. He was reminded of what the middle-aged man had said—When Wang Haiming acted up, he would argue with himself.

This person is suspicious. He knocked on the door, and the sound of arguing stopped immediately. Ten seconds later, the door opened a sliver, and a young man's voice came out from behind the door. "How can I help you?"

"Regarding this Room 303 next to you..."

"Don't know."

Before Chen Ge finished, the door already closed. He had asked everyone he could, and Chen Ge was running out of options. He returned to Room 304 and nodded at Doctor Gao before walking over to the door to lean against it.

The mission venue given by the black phone is Room 303. I'll need to enter it and check it out before midnight. Chen Ge rubbed his eyes before walking to the window and pushing it open. Room 304 and 303 were adjacent to each other, and their windows were about one meter apart.

I should be able to get over it. Chen Ge pulled over a chair and placed it beside the window to give it a try. The window to Room 303 was not locked, so he could pull it open from the outside.

Getting over there is no problem, but what about the thing that might be waiting inside it? Climbing over the windows to get back might take too much time. Chen Ge lowered his head. The height of three floors was not quite short or tall. However, different from Ping An Apartments, the courtyard of Hai Ming Apartments was not a grass field but hardened concrete.

Chapter 120 - Rusted Key

Chapter 120: Rusted Key

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Should be fine if I'm careful.

Chen Ge opened his backpack and placed Xiaoxiao in his shirt pocket before picking out the flashlight and the mallet.

...

“What are you doing?” Doctor Gao heard the commotion, so he came out of the bedroom. He saw Chen Ge’s weird get-up, and he felt a headache coming.

“You’re just in time.” Chen Ge dragged Doctor Gao to the window. “We’ll keep in contact. You stay in Room 304, and I’ll go take a look in Room 303.”

“Why are you going into Room 303?” Doctor Gao’s gaze swept the mallet in Chen Ge’s arm before falling on the doll in his chest. His eyes twitched.

“The source of Men Nan’s problem should reside in Room 303. I plan to go take a look before midnight arrives.”

“You plan to go in this get-up? With a doll?”

“If I’m doing this alone, I might hesitate, but with you as back-up, I have confidence.” Chen Ge called Doctor Gao’s number and placed the phone in his shirt pocket. “Keep in touch.”

Doctor Gao nodded reflexively. He held the phone in his hands, and the pressure on his shoulders tightened because now he had to look after the safety of two ‘patients’.

“Be careful!”

Chen Ge climbed out the window. He placed the mallet in his pant pocket and leaned into the wall. With one leg hanging on Room 304’s window, he used his other leg to kick the window to Room 303 open.

“Doctor Gao, don’t end the call. Get help if anything bad happens.” Then, Chen Ge leaned out the window and reached his leg toward Room 303’s windowsill. His center of gravity was still leaning toward Room 304. When his leg found purchase, his hands that gripped Room 303’s window loosened, and he slowly leaned toward the other window.

When most of his body leaning toward Room 303’s window, he angled his body right at the opening, released his left hand, and used his right hand to grab the windowsill. With a pull on his right hand, Chen Ge moved his body toward Room 303.

“Climbing into the neighbor’s room to solve the patient’s illness?” Doctor Gao wanted to stop Chen Ge, but the man had already disappeared into Room 304’s window. He had been in this field of work for more than a decade already, and this was the first time he had faced something like this during a diagnosis.

Chen Ge slowly angled his body downward and slid through the open window. I’m finally in.

Room 303 had been left vacant since the incident, so the interior design had been left the same. The room was covered in dust, and there were dirty patches all over the walls. The room was dark, and the floor was uneven. After turning on the flashlight, Chen Ge noticed that there was an old and sullied carpet covering the floor of the room.

None of the other apartments, including the landlady’s room, are carpeted, but this room is? This anomaly attracted Chen Ge’s suspicion. A horrible stench was wafting out from underneath the carpet. Chen Ge gripped the edge of the carpet and tore it back.

There was not anything scary underneath it; there were merely some old clothes. All the clothes were for gents, and their sizes were about the same, so they probably belonged to the same person.

The smell of moldy clothing shouldn’t be that pungent. Chen Ge used the mallet to move the clothes away and soon he discovered something creepy. Several dead sparrows were hidden underneath the clothes.

The bodies are intact, so they couldn’t have died more than a week ago. When Chen Ge mastered the Dollmaker’s Talent, some rudimentary knowledge about dead bodies had also entered his mind. This room hasn’t been rented after the incident, but someone has come in within this past week to hide these things under the clothes.

The problem had become more troublesome, and this shifted his speculation in a different direction.

Wang Haiming died in this room. Unfortunately, I have no clue about the actual location, but that shouldn't matter too much. I shall search the whole room; I'll eventually come up with something. Chen Ge did not find anything else in the living room, so he jumped over the pile of old clothes and entered the bedroom.

A metal wire bedroom was leaning against the wall. There were several ancient bookshelves near to the bed, and some books were left on them. The pages were all moldy from the moisture, and they were also releasing a weird smell.

Chen Ge examined all the drawers and cupboard. He found nothing and finally walked into the bathroom. The layout of all the rooms in the apartment building were similar. As he opened the bathroom door, the mirror was staring back at him.

With only the light from the flashlight, the Chen Ge in the mirror looked rather different from real life. He did not enter the bathroom but merely leaned in to look from the threshold.

There do not seem to be any more clues in this room. The room was small, and Chen Ge had glanced over all the corner already.

Standing in the middle of the living room, Chen Ge looked at the pile of clothes hidden under the carpet. This is weird. All these clothes have blood stains on them. These few small sparrows would not be enough to soak through so many clothes.

With the aid of Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge's sight was better than most, and he soon discovered something weird.

There's something wrong with the clothes.

With the mallet in hand, he slowly examined each item of clothing. Finally, he found a very normal gray jacket that was lying at the bottom of the pile. There was dried blood on the shoulder and the back of the clothes. Wang Haiming had probably worn this jacket when he cracked his head on the wall. Only via blunt force trauma to the head would the blood splatter have appeared like this.

What is this? Chen Ge shook the jacket and found something jiggling in the pocket. He reached into it and felt cold steel on his touch. He pulled it out and saw it was a rusted key.

I've seen the keys to these apartments. They are flat copper keys, and this key is much larger than those. Chen Ge could not understand why a patient from a mental hospital would possess a key that did not unlock the door to his room.

Did he pick it up somewhere outside? But if he did, it doesn't explain why he kept it with him. Chen Ge temporarily did not understand the use of this key, so he held onto it for now. When he turned to leave, his flashlight hit the open window. The glass of the window reflected the shadow of an individual. The tenant in Room 302 was leaning his head out of his window to sneak a peek at what was happening over in Room 303.

Why would he care that I've entered Room 303? Chen Ge pretended not to notice and focused on replacing the pile of clothes. However, his mind was spinning. Only the tenants in Room 302 and Room 304 can enter this room without using the front door. Men Nan in Room 304 is the victim, so the sparrows were probably left here by the young man in Room 302.

But why? Has he been possessed by the creature in Room 303 as well?

Chen Ge was reminded of the weird actions of the young man. Talking to himself and arguing with the wall, it was so very similar to Wang Haiming's symptoms.

Chapter 121 - Sleepwalking?

Chapter 121: Sleepwalking?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Wang Haiming was possessed by something inside the mental hospital, and the thing followed him out when he exited the hospital. Both parties were constantly fighting over the control of his body. Wang Haiming decided to die rather than compromise.

The man's weird death and the actions that happened at midnight supported Chen Ge's speculation.

...

After Wang Haiming's death, the thing he carried out with him from the mental hospital probably stayed back in this room. When his body was carried away, there were plenty of police and spectators, so the monster definitely did not show itself. When night came, Room 303 was sealed, and the monster had no chance to go look for a new target.

Normally speaking, the monster should have been trapped inside this room, but it seems like some contract has been formed between the monster and the young man in Room 302 through an unknown method. Having learned the lesson from Wang Haiming, the monster did not attempt a hostile takeover of the man's body; both parties are in a symbiotic relationship.

Chen Ge looked at the sparrows on the floor. The blood has soaked through most of the fabric, something that is not possible with just these sparrows. The contract was probably made a long time ago.

He was reminded of the words he heard the young man say. He once yelled, "You guys need to stop forcing me," and the sentence could reveal a lot of information. First, he was forced to do something against his will. Judging from the situation in Room 303, the monster had probably forced him to bring it a living sacrifice.

A few sparrows would not be able to satisfy the monster, so its demand would increase to like stray cats, stray dogs, or even human.

The second point was the young man's verbiage. During the argument, he used the term "you guys", plural, so he was probably facing more than one monster. This confused Chen Ge; just what kind of creature had Wang Haiming led out of the mental hospital?

After replacing everything, Chen Ge walked toward the window. Due to the issue of the angle, the young man from Room 302 did not know that he had been found out. He saw Chen Ge's shadow walk toward the window, and he quickly retreated into his room.

One more individual to look out for tonight. Chen Ge climbed out of the window, and his hands gripped the windowsill. As he was about to turn, the corner of his eyes swept the bathroom of Room 303. Behind the half open door stood a long shadow with two different faces.

"Who's there?" Chen Ge's hands almost slipped. When he focused his eyes, the thing had disappeared. There was nothing in the bathroom, but a shadow seemed to flash across the mirror.

Hanging off the window, it was quite dangerous without safety devices. Chen Ge did not stay and quickly moved back into Room 304.

"Did you find anything?" Doctor Gao asked out of politeness.

"Look at this." Chen Ge retrieved the key from his pocket. "Doctor Gao, are there any locks at your hospital that require a key like this?"

Doctor Gao accepted the key from Chen Ge and turned it in his hand. The key was slightly larger than a normal key. "It doesn't look like the key to the office or the surgery room. I'm not so sure."

Chen Ge put the key away since he could not get an answer from Doctor Gao. He would give it a try when he was ready to enter the Third Sick Hall.

"That's all you discovered? A key?" Doctor Gao ended the call. He had not known what to expect when Chen Ge climbed out the window, but he definitely had not expected him to return with a key.

"Don't underestimate this key; it might be the key to what is happening." Chen Ge glanced into the bedroom. "Has Men Nan fallen asleep?"

"I don't suggest for him to sleep in Room 304; he's afraid of this environment. After he falls asleep here, his mind might give him additional pressure, thus increasing the possibility of a nightmare." Doctor Gao was worried about Men Nan. "Since we have confirmed his illness was due to childhood trauma, we should focus on that and provide the necessary counselling.”

“Things are not as simple as you think,” Chen Ge explained to Doctor Gao patiently. The doctor had not been exposed to the other world, so his way of thinking was restricted. “If Men Nan is suffering mainly because of his childhood trauma, then why did his illness surface only after he moved into this apartment?”

Doctor Gao had no answer to that question.

“The childhood trauma is part of the manifestation of the problem that lies in this apartment. Something here has seriously triggered him, causing him to fall ill; that is the real source.” Chen Ge tried his best to explain the situation without referencing the other world too much.

Doctor Gao nodded. Even though he still had reservations with regards to Chen Ge’s methods, but it was undeniable that the man had cured Wang Xin. Standing from a scientist’s standpoint, he wanted to know more about Chen Ge’s various ideas and methods, but from the doctor’s standpoint, he merely wished for his patients to be cured.

Chen Ge could see the hesitation in Doctor Gao’s face, and he knew it would be hard to convince the doctor. “Even if we move him away, the nightmare will still happen; haven’t you tried that already? In that case, why not we just let him fall asleep here. The two of us will be by his side, and when he shows any sign of pain, we will wake him up immediately.”

Psychological therapy was a long and arduous process, and after some consideration, Doctor Gao finally agreed. Following some more discussion, they entered the bedroom, and to their surprise, Men Nan was already on the bed. The young man was exhausted; with his chin on the pillow, he had fallen asleep leaning against the bed.

After getting Men Nan into the bed, Chen Ge wanted to examine Men Nan’s forehead and neck but was stopped by Doctor Gao. “Let him sleep.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge pulled two chairs over. “We’ll do this in rounds. One will stay up until midnight, and the other will take over. Whenever there’s something wrong, we’ll wake him up immediately.”

“You should go and rest for now. Leave this to me.”

Doctor Gao had Chen Ge sleep on the living room sofa while he stayed in the bedroom to look after Men Nan.

Before he arrived, Chen Ge had spent the whole morning working inside the Haunted House and the afternoon making the mannequin heads, so he was tired. He switched his phone to vibrate mode and set the alarm for midnight. Lying on the sofa, with Xiaoxiao beside him, he soon fell asleep.

...

In his dream, he felt a vibration coming from his palm. Chen Ge sat up on the sofa. He looked at the phone; it was midnight.

He entered the bedroom and saw the deep frown on Doctor Gao's face. Before he said anything, Doctor Gao made a shush motion at him. The two stood beside the bed quietly. After about five minutes, Men Nan, who was sleeping in bed, suddenly straightened his arms underneath his body. It seemed like he was trying to sit up.

He failed after a few attempts, and the arms flapped weakly beside him like everything that happened earlier was just a dream.

"Sleepwalking?" Chen Ge whispered to Doctor Gao. The latter shook his head and pointed at Men Nan's eyes.

Chen Ge followed Doctor Gao's finger and realized that Men Nan's eyes were open, but only a quarter of his pupils could be seen. The rest was all white.

Chapter 122 - Wake Him Up!

Chapter 122: Wake Him Up!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Men Nan honestly looked quite scary, like he was possessed. After about ten minutes, his arms reached forward once more to try to push himself up. After several failures, Men Nan finally managed to sit up.

His eyes were fully white, and Men Nan sat on the bed, his head slightly lowered.

...

“Doctor Gao, has he woken up?”

Chen Ge and Doctor Gao were standing about one meter away from Men Nan, but the young man did not seem to notice them as his eyes stared forward. His pupils were rolled back to his head, so they could only see white of his eyes.

“Probably not.” Doctor Gao signaled for Chen Ge to take a step back. Both of them leaned against the wall to avoid running into Men Nan.

“Then, is this sleepwalking?” This was the first time Chen Ge had seen something so weird as well.

“Sleepwalking is a type of common sleep impediment, but if it was just pure sleepwalking, his pupils would not have rolled back so far.”

The two communicated softly. Men Nan sat on the bed for a while, and without warning, he slowly stood up.

“Should we wake him?” Their original plan had been to wake Men Nan when he did anything weird, and this was already past the definition of something weird.

“No, if we wake him now, we might break his already fragile mind.” Doctor Gao paused before adding, “I’ve been watching Men Nan’s face and following the changes to his expression. Even if we are forced to wake him, we should wait until there’s a drastic change in his emotions.”

The two exited the bedroom and stood outside for observation. Men Nan stood beside his bed for a few minutes before slowly turning to face the living room. His head was still lowered, and his eyes were open, but they were mostly white. In such a condition, he moved his legs to walk out of the bedroom.

Chen Ge nudged Doctor Gao lightly. “What is he doing now?”

“I’ve treated a child who sleepwalked before. He suffered from slight OCD, and every night he fell asleep, he would spend more than half an hour fixing the mattress to make sure the four edges lined up perfectly. After he fell asleep, he would sleepwalk in the middle of the night to again fix the edges before going back to sleep.” Doctor Gao looked at Men Nan, and his face was full of worry. “That kind of sleepwalking that eventually return to bed is not so bad; we’re most afraid of sleepwalkers who attempt things that are unexpected.”

After Men Nan exited the bedroom, he did not stop or hesitate and head for the bathroom directly. The wooden door was pushed open, and without turning, he walked toward the mirror.

The faucet was turned on, and the bathroom was soon filled with the sound of rushing water.

“Is he planning to wash his hair?”

Chen Ge looked at Doctor Gao, who looked back at him with equal shock. “Don’t look at me; this is the first time I’ve seen this as well.”

The sound of water intensified, and Chen Ge as well as Doctor Gao rushed to the bathroom. Men Nan, who stood before the sink, was slowly bending down.

His head lowered, and they both caught a glimpse of Men Nan’s upside-down face. Even then, his pupils were nowhere to be seen. His head touched the water and Men Nan’s expression finally changed. His face twitched slightly like he had seen something incredibly scary.

Chen Ge quivered under his gaze. He turned back to look, but there was nothing inside the room.

“Has he spotted something in his dream? Reality and the dream are connected?” Men Nan had once mentioned the man entered the room from outside and stood beside him.

His hair was wet, and Men Nan masterfully grabbed the hair shampoo and squirted a generous amount on his head. He scrubbed his scalp mechanically, but his eyes were fixed in a certain direction.

The shampoo slid down his hair, and he instinctively wanted to close his eyes when the shampoo reached his eyes. At that moment, various negative emotions like fear and panic all surfaced at once!

“Quick! Wake him up!”

The moment Doctor Gao shouted this command, Men Nan reached out to strangle himself!

The veins on his arms popped as he tried to snap his own neck. His body lost balance, and he collapsed to the floor, the shampoo and water splashing everywhere.

“Wake up! Men Nan!” Doctor Gao and Chen Ge both tried to pry his arms away, but no matter how loud they yelled, the young man did not respond. He continued to strangle himself and tried to use his head to knock against the sink.

“Detain him!”

Doctor Gao had probably faced similar patients before. He expertly asked Chen Ge to hold Men Nan’s upper body while he whipped out his belt to tie Men Nan’s wrists together.

“Men Nan, this is Doctor Gao.” After his hands were tied, Doctor Gao held Men Nan’s head with his palm on his forehead to stop the young man from knocking his head into the wall. “It’s alright now; it’s alright now.”

Doctor Gao’s voice was gentle and kind; it had a trustworthy quality to it, but it did not seem to be at all effective on Men Nan. The young man’s condition did not improve but only got worse. He opened his jaws to bite at the people around him, and when that failed, he bit on his tongue and soon blood seeped out of his lips.

“Get me the towel!” Before Doctor Gao shouted that command, Chen Ge had already stuck the towel into Men Nan’s mouth. By then, Men Nan should have woken up already, but he had not. His pupils kept moving upward, and Chen Ge was suddenly reminded of something. He had seen the young man do the same thing before at the park.

He’s looking upwards! The thing is on his head! Chen Ge tried to grab above Men Nan’s hair, but there was nothing there.

“Let’s get him onto the bed first.” Doctor Gao also did not know what had happened in Men Nan’s dream. Both he and Chen Ge cooperated to haul Men Nan off the floor. His hands were bound, and a towel was stuck in his mouth, but Men Nan still tried his best to hurt himself.

His head wiggled about violently. Chen Ge was afraid that he might knock into the mirror, so he walked forward to steady his head, but when he raised his head to look into the mirror, something shocking was reflecting in it.

Chen Ge’s pupils narrowed, and a man was lying on Men Nan’s back in the mirror. The man was as thin as twig, but his face was uneven on both sides, like a line was split down the middle and two faces were sewn together to form one.

The man was strangling Men Nan’s neck and attempting to enter his body, but another force from within Men Nan was stopping the monster, causing it to slow down. Both parties were fighting over Men Nan’s body, and that was the main source of his pain. The sight in the mirror was scary, but Doctor Gao could not see it. Now, only Chen Ge could help Men Nan.

When I left Room 303, I saw a shadow escaping into the mirror; this monster is probably of the same type as the mirror monster that I’ve dealt with before, so breaking the mirror should be able to hurt it somewhat. Chen Ge did not discuss this with Doctor Gao. He took out his mallet and swung it at the mirror!

The mirror pieces shot everywhere, and the sound shattered the night’s silence; the whole building had probably heard that. As the mirror crumbled, Men Nan, who was trapped in the nightmare, finally showed signs of waking up. He screamed, and his pupils slowly returned to normal.

At the same time, a shadow glided across the floor as if it was trying to escape.

Chen Ge pushed Men Nan toward Doctor Gao, and he jumped up holding the mallet. By the time he exited the bathroom, the shadow had already reached the front door. Chen Ge picked up Xiaoxiao, who had gotten a little misshapen from being his sleep buddy, and threw her at the shadow!

Chapter 123 - Escape

Chapter 123: Escape

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The ragdoll stained with fake blood arced through the air before knocking into the shadow. Weirdly enough, when the formless shadow was hit, it stopped at the door, the doll biting on its arm.

“Well done!” Chen Ge aimed his flashlight at the shadow. Under the bright light, the shadow started to twist, and its color dimmed. Without the refuge of the mirror, the monster was weaker than Chen Ge had expected. It abandoned part of its body and escaped into Room 302.

...

The parts that the monster abandoned soon disappeared; it was unclear whether it had dissolved into thin air or been eaten by Xiaoxiao.

Eating these things appears to be beneficial to Xiaoxiao. Chen Ge placed Xiaoxiao into his pocket and used the mallet to bang on Room 302’s door lock.

“Come out!” The old steel door shook, shedding dust and rust; even the frame itself was shaking. The commotion was so loud that all the nearby tenants were alerted. The door to Room 301 opened a sliver.

“What is all this commotion about?” the middle-aged man roared with the beer bottle in his hand, but he did not step out completely from his room. The door to Room 302 was suddenly pulled open from within, and the young man living in it held a cleaver in his hand and slashed at Chen Ge madly.

The mirror monster has entered his body? The corridor was narrow, so there was only so much room for Chen Ge to maneuver. Chen Ge took a step back and realized that the door to the middle-aged man’s room was open. He fell into it and slammed the door shut.

The sound of a cleaver chopping on the door was eerie. The young man had completely lost his sanity; his eyes were filled with streaks of blood. His face was in a mad grimace, and he said no words, like all his energy was being channeled into cleaving the door of Room 301. It felt like he was planning to chop Chen Ge into pieces.

Then again, it was understandable. It had planned this for weeks, and finally, it had almost gotten into Men Nan's body but was stopped by Chen Ge at the last minute. On top of that, it had lost parts of its body in the struggle. The corridor was filled with the sound of the cleaver slashing on the steel door.

"What's going on?" The middle-aged man inside the room was stunned beyond belief. His calves weakened, and he collapsed onto the shoe racks.

"Help me!" The room door was not locked, and the young man could have burst through at any moment.

"I... I'll call the police!" The middle-aged man did not dare go near the door. He placed the bottle on the table and hurriedly went looking for the phone. In his hurry, he knocked over the empty bottles, and they clattered noisily.

"I said come help me with the door!"

As the sound of the cleaver reverberated through the halls, the rooms lit up one after another, and many tenants leaned their heads out the door.

In Room 304, after Doctor Gao deposited Men Nan on the living room sofa, he heard Chen Ge's cries for help. He ran out of the room with a stool in his hand.

The young man from Room 302 had gone berserk; his focus was fully on Chen Ge. Doctor Gao made use of this opportunity to sneak up on him from behind. When he was one meter away from the man, he raised the stool to knock at the upper part of the young man's spine. Doctor Gao's target was probably the head, but for some reason, his aim was off.

The young man lost his balance and staggered forward, his body knocking into the door. Gripping the cleaver, his neck twisted unnaturally around, and the young man glared at Doctor Gao with bloodshot eyes.

A roar bubbled from his throat. As the young man planned to turn to attack Doctor Gao, Chen Ge saw this opportunity and kick the door open. The door slammed into the man, and without giving him the chance to recover, Chen Ge picked up a bottle from the floor and swung it at the young man's head.

The bottle shattered, and blood flowed down the man's head. Chen Ge charged forward and knocked into the young man, holding him down on the floor. Doctor Gao also ran forward to grab the cleaver away from the young man.

The young man tried to resist until the other tenants also came out to help detain him. It was then that he finally gave up on his resistance. With his cheek pressed into the cement floor, the young man's eyes focused on Chen Ge, like he was trying to memorize Chen Ge's features.

Three minutes later, the young man's pupils rolled backwards, and he fell unconscious. At the same time, the young man's shadow that was reflected on the wall suddenly moved and dashed down the stairs.

Many people present saw that, but before they could react, the shadow had disappeared into the night.

"What was that?" Doctor Gao's eyes widened; many strange things had happened that night.

"I'm not so sure." The vengeful eyes that the young man had shot Chen Ge before he fainted were very familiar; it reminded him of the Haunted House's mirror monster. Could it be that both of them came from the same world inside the mirror?

Chen Ge climbed up from the floor and was about to give chase when he stopped at the staircase. The landlady blocked the staircase with a stern face.

Has this person been taken over by the monster? Chen Ge took several steps back. Then again, he was the cause of the problems that had happened that night at her apartment, so he was feeling rather unsettled.

"What are you guys up to so late at night?" The landlady walked up to the third floor, and a few of the elder tenants followed behind her. Just as Chen Ge was wondering what to say, the middle-aged man in Room 301 ran out with his phone. He had been hiding in his room until then.

"Sis! It feels like brother-in-law has returned," the man whispered into the landlady's ear. "Xiao Du in Room 302 used the cleaver and attacked people indiscriminately; it was completely the same as brother-in-law's situation."

When he said that, the tenants who had gathered around started to disperse. A few ran back into their rooms and locked the door tight.

"Wasn't everything going just fine?" The landlady looked at the chaos in the third-floor corridor. She had her brother carry the young man to the hospital while she moved to talk to Chen Ge and Doctor Gao.

"We were merely defending ourselves; the kid from Room 302 almost killed me."

"I know." The landlady paused before saying directly, "I still need to rent this place. Making this more complicated than it is will not be good for business, so how about we let this be? I will pay the child's medical bills, and we will not get the police involved; the child is still young, and I don't want to ruin his future."

Hearing the landlady, Chen Ge realized that she knew a thing or two about the secret in Room 303 as well as the reason behind Room 302's young man's madness.

After balancing the pros and cons, Chen Ge realized there was no benefit to pressing this further. After all, he had completed the black phone's mission. Chen Ge discussed this with Doctor Gao, and both of them agreed with the landlady.

After the landlady left, Doctor Gao returned to Room 304 to look after Men Nan while Chen Ge waited in the living room. He still had plenty of questions left for the young man.

Chapter 124 - Possible Red Specter

Chapter 124: Possible Red Specter

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

One hour later, the middle-aged man came back to Hai Ming Apartments with the young man from Room 302. The young man had a bandage on his head, and his pupils were still quite unfocused.

“You’re finally home.” Chen Ge walked out from Room 304, his hand still holding the mallet. “Don’t worry, I’m not going to hurt you, I just want to ask you some questions.”

...

The young man’s eyes darted about evasively before opening the door to his room. “Come in then.”

There was a thick stench in Room 302. Even the middle-aged man whose room was far from tidy had his hand over his nose. “How long has it been since you cleaned this place? Has some food gone sour or something?”

Chen Ge was confused. The room looked tidy, and the young man kept up his appearances; he did not look like a sleazy type of person.

“The things that have happened to me for the past two months felt like a dream.” The young man walked to his bed holding his head. He pulled out a black plastic bag from underneath it. It was filled with the carcasses of small animals. “It’s true, like a nightmare that I could not wake up from.”

Chen Ge glanced into the bag before his gaze fell back on the young man. “Now that your nightmare is over, you can tell us the things that you’ve been hiding.”

The young man dropped the bag aside and began with apology. “When I moved into this room three months ago, the landlady said that if I didn’t feel comfortable or ran into something weird, I could move out freely. That first night itself I had a nightmare; I dreamed about a leaking window. In the dream, I went to close it and saw a man standing inside the room next door.

“Initially, I didn’t pay it much attention, but after this dream repeated itself for a few times, one day, I suddenly realized that the man who was supposed to be in the room next door had entered my room. I tried to resist, but I couldn’t do anything. However, the man didn’t hurt me. He told me that he merely wanted some help from me.

“After that dream, my focus was lost for the whole morning. In the end, I decided to spend a night over at a friend’s place, but the man seemed to have attached himself to me. This time, in my dream, he appeared directly beside my bed.

“The man told me that there was no way I could escape. He said that as long as I helped him, he would stop bothering me. I believed what he said, so I started following his demands to capture some living small animals and threw them into Room 303. They were alive when I dropped them in, but when I went to take a look the next morning, the animals were all dead.

“There were no visible wounds on their bodies, so I had no idea what had killed them.” The more he continued, the more afraid the young man became. “I wanted to escape from the man in my dream, but his appetite grew. Initially, he just wanted a sparrow or a rat, but one week later, he asked me to leave him stray dogs, and the last time, he asked me to lure a living person into Room 303 after midnight.

“When I refused, he started to force me, threatening to kill me in my dream. I was at my wit’s end.”

The young man’s eyes were red and he lowered his head. “I told my friends about the dream, and the few of us entered Room 303 late at night, but nothing happened that night. Then, they stopped believing me, thinking I had lost my mind.

“I had no one to turn to, and the man’s presence became more solid. Even in the morning, I could feel him standing beside him, watching me.”

The young man’s hands moved to grip the bandage on his head. “At the time, I only wanted to get rid of him, so I did try to lure someone into Room 303, but it was too difficult.”

When he felt better, he continued. “After a few days, I accidentally saw an ad at school asking for a place to rent, and I guess you know what happens next. Due to personal reasons, Men Nan did not want to stay at the school dormitory, and due to his limited budget, I recommended Hai Ming Apartments to him.”

“So, you are the reason Men Nan moved into Room 304?” Chen Ge did not expect that would be the case.

“I did remind him of the danger, but like me, he paid it no heed.” After saying everything on his mind, the young man felt better.

“All of that is in the past, so we will not pursue any charges, but we will need to wait for Men Nan to wake up first.” Chen Ge took out the rusted key from his pocket. “Now I have a few questions for you. I need you to answer them honestly. If you don’t know, then just tell me, don’t make stuff up.”

“Okay.”

“Have you ever seen the man’s face in your dream?”

“Seen it once,” the young man admitted after a long hesitation. “He has two faces, like two personalities sewn together, and they communicate and argue with each other.”

“Other than giving you their demands, did they talk about anything else?” This was the best opportunity to know about the other world.

“The thing they did the most was argue with each other. There was this one time where one of the faces angrily said that if not for the fear of the Red Specter, he would rather have died than share an existence with trash.”

“Red Specter?” Chen Ge frowned at the familiar term. He took out the black phone and clicked onto the affection page. Under Xiaoxiao’s name, it read Baleful Specter, but under Zhang Ya, it specifically read Red Specter.

It might not have seemed important, but because of these two words, Zhang Ya had her own personal page on the black phone. Chen Ge fell into deep thought. The creature that had followed Wang Haiming out of the Third Sick Hall knew of the Red Specter, so there was a high chance that a Red Specter resided in the Third Sick Hall!

A specter on the same level as Zhang Ya. The thought brought a headache to Chen Ge. The first mirror monster that he had encountered was a toy for Zhang Ya. Therefore, a normal ghost was powerless before the Red Specter. He sighed before signaling for the young man to continue.

“Other than the Red Specter, I realized that there were a few weaknesses to them. I planned to use those when things got too serious.” The young man sat on the bed, not at all minding the stench from inside the bag. “The monster rarely appeared during periods other than midnight, it was afraid of light, noisy environments, and most importantly, it seemed weirdly afraid of cats.”

“Afraid of cats?” Chen Ge was curious.

“Yes, the man in my dream asked me to prepare many living animals, but cats were the only exception, so I believe it is afraid of cats.” The young man had a point, but it was ultimately just speculation. If possible, Chen Ge did not want to be the first one to try it out. Perhaps I can test it out somehow back at the Haunted House.

The young man did not dare to speak since Chen Ge did not comment. However, the eyes of the middle-aged man, listening to their conversation, were as round as the moon.

Chapter 125 - Take Your Mannequins Away!

Chapter 125: Take Your Mannequins Away!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Before doing the Trial Mission for the Third Sick Hall, perhaps I should place a stray cat inside Mu Yang High School scenario to test the theory. If it works, then it'll be an additional way to deal with creatures from the other side. Even with this information alone, Chen Ge felt that his journey that day had been worth it. Glancing at the young man, he passed the rusted key to him. "Have you seen this key before?"

"I have." The young man nodded. "Every sunrise, I would return to Room 303 to clean the animal carcasses, and there was this one time when I found this key in one of the items of clothing."

...

"Did the man in dream mention anything related to this key? Like a special door or room?"

The young man thought about it before saying, "When they were talking to themselves this one time, I believe they mentioned something related to a key."

"What was it?"

"One of the faces said that he had left something important behind in the third room and that the pathway hidden behind the cupboard wasn't locked. They shouldn't have left through the front door; that way, they wouldn't have been exposed." The young man had a vague recollection of the memory; after all, he had heard all this in his dream.

"The third room?" Chen Ge was reminded of the paper note left behind by his parents.

The third room in the third sick hall!

Could they have been talking about the same place? If they were, then this information is invaluable! The pathway behind the cupboard is not locked; this can be my escape route when necessary!

Chen Ge could not tell whether the young man was lying or not. He maintained the same expression while he memorized all the information. After asking a few more questions, making sure there was nothing else he could have known, Chen Ge exited Room 302 and returned to Room 304.

“How is Men Nan doing?”

“He’s asleep, but he’s running a fever. I’ll bring him to the hospital tomorrow and try to reach out to his family.” Doctor Gao sat beside the bed. “You’d better go and rest; I’ll stay here and look over him. I’ve placed the doll on the sofa. There are some bandages under the table, so remember to take care of your wounds.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge realized that Doctor Gao was a nice person who knew how to take care of others. He walked to the sofa and saw Xiaoxiao that was lying on her back with her stomach poking out like she was unable to move from eating too much.

“This little thing.” Chen Ge set the alarm for 7 o’clock. Hugging Xiaoxiao, he soon fell asleep. For some reason, he had a restless sleep that night. He kept repeating the same dream, and in the dream, he was trapped inside a maze-like building and was being chased by something. There was imminent danger. He held a key in his hands and tried it on all the doors, but none of them worked.

...

“Wake up.”

Chen Ge’s eyes flew open because someone was shaking him. He saw Doctor Gao standing beside the sofa holding a weak-looking Men Nan. Chen Ge looked out the window; the sun was coming up. It was about 6 am.

“Men Nan’s temperature is still running high; we need to take him to the hospital. This room feels weird, so I think we’d better leave together.” Doctor Gao had not slept, so his condition was not so good, and Men Nan was even worse; it seemed like he could collapse at any moment.

“Okay.” Chen Ge shoved the stuff into his bag and reached out to hold Men Nan’s other arm. “Be careful.”

“Thank you for your help last night...” When they exited Room 304, Men Nan suddenly turned to Chen Ge to say and repeated, “Thank you.”

“You’re welcome,” Chen Ge answered reflexively, but then he realized that Men Nan’s tone and mannerism seemed weirdly feminine. When he turned back to look, Men Nan had lowered his head.

When they arrived at the hospital and ensured that there was nothing dangerous about Men Nan’s situation, Chen Ge left. Sitting in the taxi, Chen Ge took out the black phone. He had received the message; he had completed the mission.

“The player reached the mission venue on time, found the victim’s cause of illness, and managed to survive until sunrise. One-star Trial Mission completed! A new scenario has been unlocked. Player can manipulate the props inside the set freely using the interface available on the phone!

“Trial Mission completion rate more than ninety percent, unlocked this mission’s hidden item—Self-perceptive Key.

“Self-perceptive Key (13 Malice Points): Mental patients are often lacking in the power of self-perception. They are unable to tell their current mental health condition, causing them to think they are fine, thus refusing treatment. When similar symptoms appear in you, this key can help you once.”

The hidden item for this mission is the key I found? Chen Ge placed the rusted key in his palm. What does it mean by saying similar symptoms appear in me? Is it telling me indirectly that I have a mental illness?

When Chen Ge reached New Century Park, it was around 7 pm. The difficulty of one-star missions is not that hard; I don’t feel as tired as I normally would.

It was still early, so he decided to pay the mannequin workshop a visit. The mannequin heads that he had made should have been ready. Chen Ge sent a message to the boss, and to his surprise, the reply came back surprisingly soon. The boss asked for Chen Ge to come immediately.

Did something happen? Perhaps it is because I did not follow the Dollmaker’s Talent fully; after all, I was missing some tools then.

This was the first time Chen Ge had used that skill. He was afraid of an accident, so he rushed over immediately.

When he arrived, he saw the boss standing alone outside the glass door, holding the key, but he appeared to be afraid to walk in.

“You’re already here? Then, why won’t you go in?” Chen Ge walked toward the man. If some outsiders saw this, they would probably think that he was the boss.

The fat on the boss’ face jiggled as he reached out to point inside the workshop. “Can I cancel your order?”

“No way, you’ve already accepted my down payment.” Chen Ge looked through the glass into the workshop. When his eyes swept across the counter where he had left yesterday’s half-finished products, his breath caught in his throat.

The twenty-four detached heads with weirdly humanlike expressions were all turned to stare right at the entrance. Chen Ge almost grabbed his mallet to swing at the door. This scene was indeed impactful; no wonder the boss did not dare go in alone.

“They do look realistic.” Chen Ge patted the boss’ shoulder. “Open the door, will you? After finishing the bodies, I’ll leave.”

“You sure are humble. Twenty-four heads, each with different expressions, and all turned toward the door, but realistic is all you have to say? When I came early in the morning, I almost lost my soul being scared by them!” the boss said with a pout. “I came early to check on your filler and leakage but... sigh . I’ll probably be reminded of this scene every time I open the door; now I’ll need to rent the place no matter what.”

Chapter 126 - A Brave Idea

Chapter 126: A Brave Idea

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

When Chen Ge left, the paint job on the fake heads had not dried yet, so they had been unfinished products. They did not look so scary then. After opening the glass room, Chen Ge and the boss walked over to the counter.

“Look at this quality... Residing in a Haunted House is a waste of your talent.” The boss followed behind Chen Ge. He picked up a female student’s head from the table.

...

Initially, he had been afraid, but after he got used to it, he was slowly attracted by the bodiless heads. They were incredibly humanlike; the girl’s eyes seemed to be filled with emotions, and the normal dullness of a mannequin head was absent.

“You are indeed the best dollmaker I’ve seen.” The boss studied the girl’s face closely for a full minute before moving his gaze away. There seemed to be something on his mind. After some hesitation, he placed the girl’s head back where it had been and tapped the busily working Chen Ge lightly on his shoulder. “Brother, I came so early today also because I wish to discuss something with you.”

Brother? The boss’ sudden change in attitude and term of endearment unsettled Chen Ge.

“Tell me, if I can help, I will.” Chen Ge was working on the design of the mannequin body.

“It’s a deal that will benefit both of us.” The boss picked out a name card from his pocket and gave it to Chen Ge. “We should keep in contact with each other.”

“Qian Guigen?” Chen Ge did not know what the boss was up to. He was suddenly so friendly. After Chen Ge accepted the name card, the boss said mysteriously, “Before this, my main focus was the design of mannequins for shops and parks, but with the advancement in technology, especially 3D imaging, the demand for mannequins has decreased. To keep the shop afloat, I've been considering changing to another field, but the shape and form of this industry has been fixed; a sudden or drastic change in field will be too difficult."

"It's going to be difficult in any field. My suggestion is for you to stick to what you know in case you lose even your capital." Chen Ge used clay to form a student's body and was wiping away the surface with a wet sponge. The force underneath his fingers was just right; the surface that he touched came alive like actual skin, smooth and slightly glossy. He did not pay much attention to Boss Qian; he just wanted to finish the job as soon as possible and deliver them to the Haunted House.

"That's what I thought before meeting you, but after meeting you, it's as if I've seen a ray of light through the mist. You have given me a brilliant direction." Boss Qian stood beside Chen Ge. Looking at the mannequin heads with different expressions, he suddenly said, "I have a brave idea!"

"Mind getting me the 16th carving knife?"

"Hey, do you mind paying some attention? If this is successful, perhaps our monthly income will be greater than what you earn in a whole year from the Haunted House!" Boss Qian slammed his palms on the table and looked at Chen Ge seriously.

The talk of money made Chen Ge stop working. "I'm not one to be swayed by money, but I am interested in your idea."

"Small dolls won't get a high price, and large mannequins no longer have the market, so I plan to go into the high-end, personalized market!" Boss Qian picked up Chen Ge's mannequin head carefully. "This is the first time I've seen such a realistic doll, and you're using a lesser quality material. If we get higher quality materials, does this mean you can make mannequins that are no different from actual humans?"

"Theoretically, I suppose so," Chen Ge answered, conveniently skipping over the fact that he could make an actual living doll provided he had enough materials.

"That talent will be our road to riches!" Boss Qian took out his phone to look for some doll pictures. "These adult sex dolls sold for 8,000 plus on the internet despite their rough quality. If we can provide to-scale dolls with perfect skin and features, the asking price will be over five digits. I have done the necessary research; the market is untapped and will remain that way for the next few years.”

“Well, your idea definitely is brave.” Chen Ge shook his head and continued to focus on his clay body.

“Just imagine the income! With your speed, we can easily make twenty of those in three days; that’s two hundred in a month. The market hasn’t seen a mannequin of your quality before, so the initial price can be set at 15,000. Even with the most expensive materials, we’ll gain 10,000 in profit! That’s 2,000,000 in a month! Why are you still so hung up over the Haunted House?” Boss Qian had expected a far more enthusiastic response from Chen Ge.

“I will not do anything illegal. Making dolls according to the pictures provided by clients is a violation of privacy.” Chen Ge knew that he was using the Dollmaker’s Talent to make these mannequins. There were certain latent dangers, and he did not want to wake up to headlines like ‘Sex dolls found responsible for young man’s death.’

“Why are you so stubborn?” Boss Qian started to berate Chen Ge. “Every single one is a lonely island; even married couples will have arguments, but dolls are different. In fact, I believe that many will choose to spend their lives with dolls if given the chance. There would be so much less pressure in life. No matter who it is, if you dump your problems on them, they will get annoyed, but a doll won’t. Making dolls for these lonely souls hurts no one. In fact, you will be helping them, helping them seek a safe harbor in this lonely world.”

“I feel like you’re in the wrong field. You should go sell insurance instead.” Chen Ge lowered his head to focus on the clay body. The world was not as innocent as the boss made it out to be. If his mannequins were mass produced, things could get out of control, and he would definitely be involved.

“If there’s a brave idea, then we have to give it a try! How about you make two dolls today? I will go around to promote them. If that doesn’t work, then forget I said anything.” There were those pictures on Boss Qian’s phone, so obviously, he had come prepared.

“Boss Qian, have you considered this situation? You’re in bed with a doll, but after you fall asleep, the doll slowly opens its eyes.”

“Why would a doll open its eyes?”

“If you don’t believe me, you can come experience it yourself at my Haunted House. The mannequins I design are different from normal mannequins, and I mean more than their appearances.” Chen Ge did not go into further detail. The boss felt like a nice person, just a little forward in his thinking.

After listening to Chen Ge, Boss Qian looked at the fake heads on the counter, and he shivered. However, he did not give up. “When you have thought it out, give me a call.”

Chen Ge finished the clay body and repeated the steps from yesterday.

At 9 am, Chen Ge placed all the fake heads into three large paper boxes and called a taxi to drive them to New Century Park.

The mannequin bodies will be ready tonight. This means that I can officially open Mu Yang High School for public visitation tomorrow morning.

Chapter 127 - Equipment Upgrade

Chapter 127: Equipment Upgrade

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The taxi stopped at the park entrance and Chen Ge called Xu Wan to help him haul the boxes into the Haunted House.

“Boss, what’s inside these? They are so heavy.”

...

“Mannequin heads.” Chen Ge did not explain further. “Don’t open them if you’re easily scared.”

“Understood.”

After placing the boxes, Chen Ge had Xu Wan go to the dressing room to prepare herself while he stood at the entrance to sell tickets.

With the opening of Mu Yang High School scenario tomorrow, I’ll need to solve the issue of workers. If worst comes to worst, I can ask Director Luo to lend me a park worker to act as the ticket-seller.

A man who looked about thirty interrupted Chen Ge’s thoughts. “Mr. Chen? I’ve finally found you.”

Chen Ge was rarely addressed this way. He looked at the person. The man was wearing a casual suit and holding a black suitcase. He had a refreshing short hairstyle, a face full of smiles, and shining white teeth. “You were looking for me?”

“I haven’t missed a single one of your livestreams; they’re too good.” The man started with praise, but Chen Ge knew the quality of his livestreams. His content was unique, but due to a lack of good recording devices, the livestream experience could still be improved.

“You’re too kind.” Chen Ge still had no idea what the man was there for. “You’re a viewer?”

“I’m your loyal fan. Ever since your first video entered the midnight popular ranking, I have been following you. Later, when Qin Guang copied your content, it was me who posted your video on the forum, exposing his plagiarism.” The man said that he was Chen Ge’s loyal fan, but he was very calm, and the smile on his face was a professional smile. It felt more like he was in a negotiation than meeting his idol.

“Thank you.” Chen Ge did not believe him fully, but the man did not seem hostile; at least he knew right from wrong. “Since you’re a fan, I’ll give you a fifty percent discount for the ticket.”

“I don’t want to disturb your business; why not let the visitors behind me go in first?” He stepped aside to allow the people behind him to walk into the Haunted House. When Chen Ge had dealt with the visitors and took a breather, the man moved forward to continue. “I hear the people from Qin Guang’s studio came to cause you trouble, but you managed to teach them a lesson?”

“Those are just rumors. Qin Guang’s people have no moral bottom line; they purposely sent two mental patients, and after they acted up inside the Haunted House, they pretended to be the victims to slander my name. How shameless!” Chen Ge hissed through ‘gritted teeth’.

When the man heard him, his expression shifted. He added a smile but said, “I also think they were trying to frame you. It was just a visit to a Haunted House; why would they end up in the hospital? They should have come up with a better excuse.”

“They ended up in the hospital?”

“Yes, they also promised that they would take revenge by sealing up all your recommendation channels but were stopped by another studio.” The man looked at Chen Ge with a wide grin like a fox waving his tail. “After all, the platform belongs to everyone, not just Qin Guang.”

By then, Chen Ge had understood everything already. This man before him had come from this other studio. It looked like they had some bad history with Qin Guang’s studio, or else they would not have sided with Chen Ge when they realized Qin Guang was conducting plagiarism.

The viewership and recommendation channels for a platform were limited. If Qin Guang dominated all of them, it would cause a slow decline for the other creators.

“You’re here to seek collaboration with me, right? How shall I refer to you?” Chen Ge studied the suitcase in the man’s hand, imagining it to be filled with money.

“Actually, I’m also a host. You can call me Liu Dao.”

“Liu Dao?” Chen Ge nodded. “Then, what kind collaboration do you propose?”

“Lately, supernatural livestreaming has achieved surprising popularity, and naturally, we want a part of it as well, but our studio doesn’t have the right candidate to spearhead such a project. Even if we focus all our resources on a selected host, the popularity won’t be higher than Qin Guang’s. Even though there is much to be desired about Qin Guang’s work ethic, his livestreams are interesting and funny, and the man is charismatic.”

“So, you came to find me? I don’t think a normal guy like myself has more charisma than Qin Guang.”

“That’s where you’re wrong. I’ve seen your livestream. Perhaps you don’t notice this, but your livestreams are different from most.” Liu Dao dropped his smile and turned serious. “With just one glance, people will normally be able to tell the livestream is fake, and this includes Qin Guang’s livestream. It has the name of a supernatural livestream, but it was merely listening to the host make up stories.

“However, yours is different.

“The atmosphere and anxiety were pitched throughout the livestream like life-threatening danger was around every corner. The viewers would experience fear alongside you, and just with that point alone, I’m already mightily impressed.”

That’s because it’s all real! Chen Ge felt like even if he told the truth, Liu Dao would not have believed him. “Perhaps I am a good actor.”

“You’re too humble. That feeling of dancing between life and death, that is something I haven’t seen in professional actors.” Liu Dao seemed to admire Chen Ge greatly. “I feel like only your livestream has a chance of fighting Qin Guang. If you promise to cooperate with us, we will fight tooth and nail to help you gain more resources.”

“Then what am I supposed to do?” Contribution and reward were give and take; Chen Ge knew this well.

“We will find you locations that look scary and abandoned and set up the scene there. We will also design some scary features beforehand. You’ll only need to conduct your livestream there and push some advertisement in your livestream room for our studio.” Liu Dao was afraid that Chen Ge might reject him, and he pulled out a file from the black suitcase. “The set needs to be prepared and the script as well. We will conduct a supernatural livestream every ten days, and this aligns with Qin Guang’s studio’s schedule. Here, you can take a look at our selected set locations and the rundown for the script.”

These people are too conservative with their choices. Some of the sets are just next to a residential area; just a move of the camera, and it'll be exposed.

“You think they’re not suitable? Don’t worry, I promise you that they’re completely safe. All the set locations will be inspected beforehand, and during your livestream, we will assign an auto camera to follow you.”

“You think these can beat Qin Guang?” Chen Ge sighed sadly. He returned the file to Liu Dao. “None of these sets are interesting, and the scripts are too predictable. How about I give you my recommendation.”

“What is it?”

“Have you heard of the Third Sick Hall?” Chen Ge turned on his phone and entered the name. Soon, many creepy, cruel, and insane headlines appeared on screen. “I plan to go here for my next livestream.”

Liu Dao saw the articles that appeared on screen. The unfiltered pictures caused the man’s Adam’s apple to wiggle. He wiped the sweat off his forehead before saying, “You sure? Isn’t this pushing it a bit too far?”

Chapter 128 - Stray Cat

Chapter 128: Stray Cat

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Disappearance of the hospital director and patients. An anonymous letter claims that there are bodies left in the hospital.”

“A changing bloody message, moaning from a closed room, who opened the locked doors at midnight?”

...

“What have they seen to cause them to go crazy in one night? Who is the patient, and who is the doctor?”

“Screaming, cutting, sewing, the twisting of human nature, the hospital where the sun will never rise.”

Liu Dao only glanced at the headlines, but his heart started to race, and his breathing became uneven. “Are you sure about this?”

Before he arrived, he had worried about Chen Ge rejecting him due to salary or location safety, so he had prepared many different proposals. He had come up with many different negotiation tactics, but after talking to Chen Ge, he realized that things were already out of his control from the beginning.

The Haunted House boss not only did not worry about safety but also complained about their locations being too fake. He even had selected an abandoned hospital that sounded creepy from the internet searches alone!

Is this person insane? Liu Dao grumbled internally as the smile froze on his face. “Mr. Chen, the people from our studio might not be brave enough to enter the location that you selected. If you think the script is not suitable, we can still edit it.”

“It’s alright.” Chen Ge waved him off.

“Thank you for your understanding, shall we discuss the script?”

“I don’t need people to follow me; I can enter it alone.”

“Have you misunderstood me?” Liu Dao was covered in cold sweat. He formed his thoughts clearly before asking, “Do you really plan to livestream at this type of location alone at midnight?”

“Is there a problem?”

Looking at Chen Ge, Liu Dao felt like the proposals that he had spent days and nights preparing had all gone to waste. “No, of course not. Please take a look at the contract; if there’s any request, do name them.”

He pulled out a temporary contract from the suitcase. Chen Ge skimmed through it. The contract was lax. This was their first cooperation, so it was just a trial, testing the waters. Chen Ge needed to promote Liu Dao’s studio in his livestream room, and in return, they would fight for more recommendations and exposure from the platform.

“I’ve seen all of your livestreams; the content is perfect, but the equipment is not that professional.” Liu Dao opened the black suitcase again when Chen Ge was reading the contract. He placed it between them. “This is the livestreaming equipment that we can lend you, namely a GoPro carry-on waterproof camera—it is normally used for shooting extreme sports like air-gliding or deep-water diving. This beside it is the anti-slip chest bracket camera and arm camera. Then, these are wireless earphones. When you’re ready for the livestream, we will have professionals help you retransmit the footage, and you can look at the livestream through your own cellphone.”

Liu Dao introduced the items in the suitcase one by one. “I suggest you go and familiarize yourself with the equipment as soon as you can. Qin Guang’s next livestream has not been announced yet, but it will definitely be within the next three days. We will set our livestream at the same time as him, and the result will be fully dependent on this crossfire.”

After all, this was going to be a battle with the most popular host on the platform, and Liu Dao had no confidence that they would win, so the contract he provided was temporary. It would be void after this first livestream. Avoiding risk was the nature of a business—Chen Ge understood that. After signing the contract, Chen Ge accepted the suitcase from Liu Dao.

“When I confirm Qin Guang’s livestream schedule, I’ll contact you. Hopefully you’ll be ready then.” Liu Dao extended his hand toward

Chen Ge. "Happy cooperation, and be careful."

After sending Liu Dao off, Chen Ge walked to the staff breakroom with the suitcase before returning to the front door to sell tickets. The sky suddenly started to darken, and at around 2 pm, it started to rain.

The rain chased away the few visitors the park had. Looking at the deserted New Century Park, Chen Ge did not feel so good. The number of visitors who came to the Haunted House was slowly increasing, but the overall number of park visitor was dropping. If New Century Park was forced to close, his Haunted House would be affected as well.

"The number of scenarios is not enough to use the Haunted House to support the entire Haunted House." Currently, New Century Park was still surviving because there was no competition in Jiujiang, but after the new park was built, the visitors would abandon New Century Park.

"Boss, what's on your mind?" Xu Wan came out with umbrella and stood beside Chen Ge.

"Nothing really." Chen Ge turned to look at Xu Wan. "Thank you for your work today; you can go home now. I need to go to the workshop to finish off the mannequins anyway."

After cleaning the place, Chen Ge locked the Haunted House and walked to the mannequin workshop. Before he reached the workshop, Chen Ge could see that Boss Qian was squatting by the roadside talking to the hawker stall cook.

"Why are you standing outside?"

Boss Qian saw that it was Chen Ge and stood up with some difficulty. "Brother, have you considered the high-end doll offer? I have a feeling you'll lead a revolution in the industry."

"Not interested." Chen Ge entered the workshop to focus on his work.

"Just think about it. You could be the next king of adult sex dolls!"

...

All the mannequins were done by 9:30 pm. The twenty-four headless mannequins stood in the workshop, creating a harrowing scene.

“They’re so realistic; it’s like art.”

“I’ll leave them for the night, and I’ll come to take them tomorrow morning.” Chen Ge patted Boss Qian on his shoulder. “Watch only from afar, and please don’t touch them.”

After a few more words, Chen Ge left with his umbrella. He came out from the workshop, and the rain was still pouring.

How am I supposed to drag twenty-four mannequins to the park? I should call Uncle Xu for help tomorrow. He opened the umbrella and walked down the street. The shops on both sides of the road were packing up their stuff. Several shop owners were calling their children home, and they were planning to close already.

Chen Ge did not notice it until he passed a small alleyway, and he heard a child crying. He turned to look and saw several young boys tossing rocks and empty bottles toward a specific corner. One of the boys had scratched his finger, and as he cried, he picked up debris from the ground to toss it in the corner.

The boss of the lottery ticket shop next door came out to yell, “Jia Ming, Jia Bao, stop playing; it’s time to go home.”

“Dad, little brother was scratched by a stray cat!” one of the boys screamed.

“Scratched by a cat? Let me see!” The man rushed into the alley. After some hesitation, Chen Ge followed. When the man saw the wound on his boy’s finger, he hugged the crying boy and kept consoling him. When he saw his father, the boy cried even louder.

“Don’t cry, Daddy will help you take revenge. Is it this cat that scratched you?” He picked up a nearby brick and tossed it at the poor creature. The brick landed on flesh, and a whimper could be heard.

Chen Ge used his calf to block the brick. He stood in the middle of the alley looking at a broken paper box left in the corner. Inside the box was a white cat whose body was covered with bleeding wounds. The cat was fierce; its claws and teeth showing. Even though blood was flowing down its head, it still refused to leave the paper box.

“Why won’t it run away?” Chen Ge took one step forward and saw that there were four kittens inside the box, but all of them were no longer breathing. The chaos created by the boys littered the area around the box. However, inside the paper box was clean.

“What’s the matter with you?” The man grabbed a broom and pushed Chen Ge aside. “Move it!”

His calf was still hurting. When the man pushed him, it felt like something had come over Chen Ge. He grabbed the man’s arm and toppled him over. With his hand on the man’s head, he pressed his face into the muddy ground. His pupils narrowed to become incredibly scary; it felt like it was a gaze from beyond the grave.

Yin Yang Vision!

The man tried to struggle initially, but when he saw Chen Ge’s face, a chill covered his entire body; even his teeth were chattering.

“Chill, we can talk this out.” The man tossed the broom aside. With his face pressed into the ground, he said in a shaking voice, “There are surveillance cameras all over the area. A stray cat is not worth it. I’ll leave immediately.”

Chen Ge released his grip on the man as his gaze slowly returned to normal.

“Jia Ming, Jai Bao.” The man jogged off in a hurry, and the boys quickly followed after him.

Peace returned to the back alley. Chen Ge glanced at the broken paper box in the corner. He was about to walk closer when the injured white cat arched its body and lowered its ears. Its eyes narrowed into slits as if it was about to attack.

It was afraid and cautious of any living humans.

Chen Ge slowly bent down. He did not do anything that might make the cat feel threatened. Instead, he opened the umbrella and placed it over the paper box.

Chapter 129 - The Cat That Can See Them

Chapter 129: The Cat That Can See Them

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Dark clouds hung low in the sky, and the rain drenched Chen Ge's jacket. He squatted before the cat, his mind a mess. Earlier, he had seen fear on the man's face. Normally, shouldn't the party with the weapon have resisted instead of surrendering so easily?

There was such a change to the boss' attitude, and this made Chen Ge wonder, what had he seen?

...

When I gripped him earlier, there was a chill radiating from the eye; that should be the Yin Yang Vision in effect.

The description the black phone provided on the Yin Yang Vision was very vague, and Zhang Ya had even blown half of the mirror monster's body into his eyes. Yin Yang Vision seemed to have evolved, but what was the effect of the evolution? Chen Ge could not really tell for sure.

I acted almost instinctually earlier. It's probably caused by the pent-up stress from all the things that have happened recently.

Ever since obtaining the black phone, Chen Ge had not had a good rest. He spent his days either completing daily missions or the more dangerous Trial Missions. However, they came with rewards. At least, number of visitors and reviews for the Haunted House had increased.

After staying for a while longer in the alley, Chen Ge realized the white cat still refused to let him get near. He did not force it. He found a nearby spot to hide from the rain and planned to leave after the rain receded. He waited for ten minutes, but the rain still showed no sign of slowing down.

Chen Ge used the flashlight in his phone to shine at the corner. In the darkened alley, the ground had started to get flooded. The paper box was soaked, and a huge hole was forming at the bottom. Chen Ge walked forward to take a look. The injured white cat could not hold on any longer; it was already lying down alongside the four kittens whose bodies had already gone cold.

I can't just leave it to die, can I? Chen Ge removed his jacket to wrap it around the cats and ran to catch a cab to rush to the nearest pet store. Ten minutes later, Chen Ge arrived at his destination, and a girl in uniform was locking up the place.

“Wait a minute!” Chen Ge did not even open his umbrella and rushed directly toward the girl.

“I’m sorry, but we’re closed. Come back tomorrow.” The woman saw Chen Ge, and she took an involuntary step back to maintain a safe distance.

“This cat won’t be able to wait until tomorrow. Money is not a problem, please save it.” The rain had soaked Chen Ge’s clothes, and he looked rather worse for wear.

The woman looked at Chen Ge’s arms. The white cat was covered with mud, and a long wound ran down its face. “A stray cat?”

“Yes.”

“Stray cats are naturally wild and will often lash out at humans. It seems like these injuries were human made, probably because it had hurt someone. Are you sure you want to save it?”

“Yes,” Chen Ge confirmed. “A few boys probably killed the kittens, and the cat kept its vigil beside the kittens despite the barrage of broken bottles and bricks. It was horrible.”

“If you insist on saving it, come in.” The woman unlocked the door and accepted the jacket from Chen Ge. “The four kittens cannot be saved, but if you want to keep this cat, I suggest you bury the kittens beside your house.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge glanced at the woman’s nametag. She was the owner of the pet store; her name was Zhao Wen. She started nursing the white cat’s wound after they entered the store. Chen Ge sat in the store, staring at the cats and dogs in the cages.

Weirdly enough, after Chen Ge entered the pet store, all the animals became curiously quiet.

Is it something on me? Or is it because of Zhang Ya? Chen Ge wandered to a nearby cage. The cat inside it was huddled in the corner, curled up in a ball. With this comparison, Chen Ge was even more impressed by the white cat.

When he first approached the white cat, it did not show fear but gnashed its teeth, looking like it was trying to fight to the death with Chen Ge.

This stray cat might bring me some surprises. The young man in Hai Ming Apartments' Room 302 had told Chen Ge that the weakness of the mirror monster was cats, so this was one of the reasons Chen Ge had decided to keep the white cat.

Zhao Wen came out hugging the white cat when it was around 11 pm. She also held a small basket in her hands—inside it lay the four kittens. “I’m quite surprised at how pretty the cat is. Unfortunately, the gash on its face cannot be removed or it would be prettier.”

Chen Ge could not even recognize the snow-white cat Zhao Wen was holding. Its fur was soft and luscious. However, the key feature of the cat was its eyes, red and blue.

“Why would the original owner abandon such a pretty cat?” Chen Ge thought the cat was pretty as well.

“I’m not trying to scare you, but it is not a good practice to adopt stray cats, especially one like this who looks like it came from a good line and background. The original owner abandoned it probably because of some taboo or something bad that happened.” Zhao Wen passed the cat to Chen Ge. “In any case, now that you’re its owner, you have to be responsible. There are plenty of small wounds on its body. Remember to check them daily for infections.”

After paying, Chen Ge returned to New Century Park with the cat and kittens.

“This will be your home in the future.” Chen Ge only opened the gate when the originally sedated suddenly perked its ears up.

Such a reaction before even entering the Haunted House; this cat might really be useful to me. Chen Ge placed the white cat at the door and walked into the Haunted House with the basket of kittens. The cat howled for a long time before following unwillingly. Chen Ge wanted to give this cat a try, so he led it around several scenarios.

The white cat acted normally inside the Minghun, Murder by Midnight, and Night of the Living Dead scenarios. However, when Chen Ge pulled the wooden boards back to enter the Mu Yang High School scenario. The fur on the white cat stood on end as it jumped on the steps leading downwards to block Chen Ge.

Mu Yang High School's mission hasn't been completed yet. It might still hide more secrets. Chen Ge had no idea what the white cat had sensed, but the fact that it had blocked him meant that Chen Ge was not wrong to have saved it.

Closing the board, Chen Ge went over to hug the cat, but the cat jumped away. It seemed to despise human contact.

Carrying the basket, Chen Ge returned to the staff breakroom, and the white cat followed. It was not until Chen Ge closed the door that it calmed down. The white cat jumped onto the chair and spotted Xiaoxiao, who was hiding underneath the table.

“Such a mischievous thing, you.” Chen Ge pulled Xiaoxiao out from underneath the table. He waved Xiaoxiao before the cat, saying, “This is our friend, so don’t hurt her.”

The white cat did not react in any way. Perhaps it was because the enemy was too weak, so it was not even interested.

At the very least Xiaoxiao is a baleful specter... but she was ignored so completely by the cat. Chen Ge rubbed Xiaoxiao’s head, feeling weirdly sorry for her.

Chapter 130 - Welcome to Mu Yang High School

Chapter 130: Welcome to Mu Yang High School

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge placed Xiaoxiao on the table. This naughty ragdoll who always tried to sneak out was surprisingly well-behaved. Chen Ge could sense fear from her. Xiaoxiao had not shown that emotion when facing the mirror monster. Is the cat too special or Xiaoxiao too weak?

Curled up on the chair, the white cat looked at the four kittens in the basket; it did not seem to be concerned about anything else.

...

Since I've decided to adopt it, I should give it a name—I can't call it white cat forever.

This was the first time in his life that Chen Ge had adopted a pet. He sat down on the floor and studied the white cat. "We met at night in the middle of a rain, so how about I call you Night Rain?"

The cat did not move, but Chen Ge could sense its displeasure.

"Well, if you don't like such a pretentious name, how about 'Fortune'? You know, for good luck." The white cat turned its head away like it did not want to have Chen Ge in its view.

"Still don't like it? Hmm... You're completely white, so how about Snow? Milky? Rice..." Perhaps because Chen Ge was physically too close, giving off a threatening aura to the cat, it gnashed its teeth. Its whiskers flickered, and the wound on its face started to bleed again.

"Christ, you sure are wild." Other people's cats were all cute and cuddly, but this one was as wild as a tiger. Chen Ge looked at the scary wound on the cat's face, and he moved cautiously backwards.

"You're not one bit like a cat, more like a tiger. How about I just call you white tiger?" Chen Ge then realized how weird it was to call a cat the name of a different animal. He was about to change it when the white cat on the chair suddenly stood up. With its ears perked up, it jumped down from the chair and clawed at the breakroom's door madly.

What's going on? The cat was acting strangely; it seemed desperate to leave. Chen Ge noticed this and quickly opened the door. It didn't even act like this when we were in Mu Yang High School. It must have sensed something!

After the cat exited the room, it headed right for the first-floor bathroom. Its claw leaving a deep scar on the wooden door.

First floor bathroom? Chen Ge's heart skipped a beat. He glanced at the time—it was midnight!

The mirror! He rushed in behind the cat and pulled the black cloth off. Inside the mirror, the red door had appeared punctually, but this time, there was some notable difference. Blood red liquid seeped out from the sides, and the door in the mirror shook every few seconds like someone was pushing it from the other side!

Chen Ge did not dare act too rashly. He turned back to look at the door in the real world. The door in the real world and the mirror shook at the same time. At midnight every night, this normal-looking door seemed to become the link between the two worlds.

There's someone behind the door! Chen Ge grabbed the nearby mop nervously as his eyes focused on the dancing lock. He was relieved that he had remembered to lock the door last time or else the thing would have entered the Haunted House already.

The force of the shaking grew. The only thing Chen Ge could do then was wait, wait for one minute to be over. He did not want to provoke the monster behind the door, and he had no interest in knowing what it was. He just wanted to manage his Haunted House in peace.

The door lock wiggled violently. It felt like it would not hold on for long. Chen Ge gripped the mop tightly, preparing for war. The white cat lowered its head and arched its back, ready to pounce.

Nothing scary happened. One minute later, the bloody door in the mirror disappeared, and the door in real life returned to normal.

Everything's fine now. Both Chen Ge and the white cat sighed in relief. Interestingly enough, the white cat seemed to glare unsatisfactorily at Chen Ge as if it was saying, 'I've been here less than an hour, and you have given me two scares already. Is this any place for a cat to live?'

“You dare to glare at me?” Chen Ge was about to hug the cat when it jumped out from his arms and rushed back to the staff breakroom.

Didn't even allow me to touch. Such a cold-hearted cat. Chen Ge stood in the bathroom alone. He found the key and opened the cubicle door to peer in. The door on the other side showed signs of being rammed into, and the lock had become loose.

Looks like I'll need to find a sturdier door. Chen Ge considered breaking the door directly, but he was afraid that even after he broke down everything, the door would still remain.

When the door appeared for the first time, there was nothing wrong; when it appeared for the second time, there were weird noises coming from behind the door like a body being dragged; this is the third time, and someone was trying to burst through the door. Chen Ge placed the black cloth over the mirror. He looked at the covered mirror and commented internally, My parents once said that the door of the Third Sick Hall has been opened again. Could the door they mention be similar to the door in this bathroom? Has the Third Sick Hall become a lair for these monsters?

No one could answer Chen Ge's question, and he could only rely on himself. Chen Ge went to the props room to grab some wooden boards to increase the door's stability. When he was done, it was already 1 am.

I need to go to sleep because I need to go get the mannequins early tomorrow morning. He grabbed a quilt to place beside the white cat while he climbed into bed to sleep.

Chen Ge was woken up by the alarm at 7 am. The white cat woke up alongside him. The white cat was on high alert; the smallest commotion would cause it to tense up.

“It's time to work.” Chen Ge called Uncle Xu to borrow the park's lorry to haul the mannequin's body from the workshop. The white cat guarded the basket. Chen Ge could not get near the four dead kittens, so he left them be for now.

After two trips, Chen Ge finally brought all the mannequin bodies back to the Haunted House. The corridor was filled with headless bodies. Uncle Xu only took a glance at it before escaping with a random excuse.

Are they that scary? Chen Ge pulled open the wooden boards. He marked the heads and the bodies before screwing them together. Then he moved them into Mu Yang High School scenario.

After placing them in the sealed classroom, Chen Ge put the clothes on the mannequins one by one. When he put the clothes on the last mannequin, he felt the black phone vibrate.

“Completed Two-Star Scenario Mu Yang High School’s Hidden Missions—finished building the bodies for the twenty-four spirits in the sealed classroom!

“Congratulations for obtaining the mission rewards—The Returners’ Goodwill. You can now give them simple instructions through the phone!

“Warning! Once the lingering spirit leaves the scenario, they will go berserk! Please be careful!”

All the hidden missions in Mu Yang High School had been completed; the two-star scenario could be officially opened.

Should I call He San to give him a free go? The child might say he doesn’t like it, but I think that he’s enjoyed himself every time.

Chapter 131 - I Know What I'm Doing

Chapter 131: I Know What I'm Doing

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The dolls created using the Dollmaker's Talent looked incredibly creepy. With twenty-four dolls inside the sealed classroom, either standing or sitting, even Chen Ge did not have the heart to stay for too long.

I must not release Mu Yang High School's scenario to the public easily. If these twenty-four lingering spirits go mad, they will probably scare someone to death. Chen Ge had created all the mannequins himself, so he could acutely feel the change that happened to these mannequins after the school uniforms were put on them. It felt as if all the mannequins had acquired a soul, like the things that stood before him were not props but actual people.

...

Due to limitation in budget and workers, rarely would a Haunted House place more than ten actors in the same scenario. The lack of help was also something that Chen Ge had been worried about, but now this problem had been easily solved. A small scenario alone had twenty-four professional actors—now that was a high-end Haunted House!

Gosh, even I am getting excited about this. This two-star Mu Yang High School scenario might be able to help me make the Haunted House a household name!

After finishing the arrangement of the sealed classroom, Chen Ge placed the student nametags that littered the lectern inside the paper box.

There is no exit inside Mu Yang High School, and there is only one entrance. The original plan of finding the escape is no longer useable. I will need to come up with a new rule for the game. Chen Ge narrowed his eyes before coming up with the solution. He could go around Mu Yang High School scenario to hide the twenty-four nametags in various corners. To clear the game, the visitors will have to find all twenty-four nametags in under twenty minutes. The winners will get a full refund of their tickets on top of a cash price. This way it will provide incentive for visitors to enter the Haunted House and will also increase the fun factor and interactivity.

Chen Ge's Haunted House was rapidly expanding. He had been trying to figure out ways to make his Haunted House more inviting and interesting. This treasure hunt for the nametags was, for Chen Ge, worthy of a trial run.

I will need to include more interesting elements in the future. The aim is not to create a scary Haunted House but a whole park themed around scares and horror.

When Chen Ge was hiding the nametags, he realized that Mu Yang High School's scenario had grown bigger. There was a new junction at the end of the corridor. There were an additional three adjacent old-looking rooms. There were room numbers hanging on the doors—302, 303, 304.

The Room of Three One-Star Trial Mission had unlocked three new rooms beside Mu Yang High School. They merged perfectly together, but the corridors did appear to be much narrower.

All the scary scenarios will expand close to each other. Eventually, the whole underground parking lot will be filled with my scenarios. The routes will overlap with each other, thus making an actual Maze of Terror.

Chen Ge retraced his steps and returned to the Haunted House's first floor. He fixed his dusty outfit, exited the Haunted House, and opened the gate. The sun shone warmly on his skin; it was a good day to go out to play and enjoy the weather.

Xu Wan arrived at the Haunted House at around 9 am. Chen Ge had her go and prepare her make-up before sending her into the Minghun scenario. As the number of visitors increased, Chen Ge's Haunted House became the only attraction at New Century Park that required the visitors to line up. To smoothen the process, Chen Ge gave Uncle Xu a call, asking him to assign a free worker to come help him sell tickets. Who would have thought that, after a while, it was Uncle Xu himself who came?

"There are not many free workers to go around, and since I am free, I came to help. Do you need me to go inside this ticket counter to sell ticket?"

"No need, just do it whichever way is most comfortable to you."

After leaving the ticket sales to Uncle Xu, Chen Ge returned to the staff breakroom. He pulled out a wooden board and used fake blood to write down the introduction and game rules for Mu Yang High School on it. When he exited the Haunted House with the wooden board, there was a contained commotion among the crowd.

“A new scary scenario to experience!”

“This introduction sure is creepy.”

“A school horror story! This, I like!”

The crowd’s attention was attracted immediately. Since the ticket price was the same, the few who stood at the front of the line all requested to experience the new scenario.

“Everyone, please listen to me.” Chen Ge placed the wooden board upwards by the door. “This new scenario is very scary! Inside, we have professional actors and the nation’s top equipment as well as props. When I offered this scenario for a trial run, a set of workers from a horror studio accepted the challenge. They attempted to plagiarize my content by video-taping it, but they accidentally captured something incredibly scary! In fact, the two that went in to experience the scenario are still in hospital!”

Uncle Xu, who stood to the side, did not know what to say, seeing Chen Ge list this dark history so proudly. He could not understand what there was to be proud about scaring people to their death.

“Tell us, what they have captured on film?”

“You think we are that gullible to believe people might get sent to the hospital from a visit to the Haunted House?”

“Boss, don’t waste your breath! We are playing this scenario!”

“If I do not enter this scenario today, I am not a man!”

After the visitors settled down, Chen Ge continued. “The reason I brought this up is because I wish to tell all of you that this scenario is not open to everyone. Only those who have completed the earlier scenarios can enter this one.”

Chen Ge’s meaning was clear. To enter Mu Yang High School, they either had to finish Minghun or Murder by Midnight scenario first. Delineating the scenarios according to their scream factors was something he had decided from the very beginning.

“This is daylight robbery!” The moment Chen Ge announced the new policy, there was instantly the sound of protest. “Entering every one of your scenarios requires us to purchase a new ticket. If this is not forced expenditure, I do not know what is!”

“Has the success gotten to your head?”

“I came because of the good online review, but what you are doing is incredibly immoral!”

“So many rules to visit a Haunted House, I will just give up! Now, are you happy?”

Chen Ge had expected this type of reaction from the crowd. When the visitors had their say, Chen Ge slapped the wooden board and said, “Trust me, I do not intend to cheat you out of your money. The ticket price of only 20 is the best proof. To prove my sincerity, how about we have a bet?”

He took out the reward money that he had not used yet and placed it beside the wooden board. “This here is 20,000 in cash! I have hidden twenty-four student nametags inside the Mu Yang High School scenario. If any of you can find all twenty-four nametags in under twenty minutes, this 20,000 is yours!”

“Ticket price is only 20, but reward is 20,000? That’s almost a 100,000% increase!”

“How do we know how many nametags you have actually hidden inside the scenario? What if you have only hidden twenty-three nametags? Doesn’t that mean no one will win the reward?”

A visitor pointed out this valid question. Chen Ge was too lazy to argue, so he merely said, “If any one of you can walk out of the scenario normally, I will answer your question.”

The twenty-four nametags were hidden in extremely secluded places, and a few were hidden in places that people would least expect.

“Such conceit!”

“Why is that even though I know this is a cheap trick, I still have the urge to give it a try?”

“Let me!”

The atmosphere was thus brought up to a boiling point. Chen Ge asked Uncle Xu to look after the money for him.

“Today marks the first day a new scenario and a new rule are officially put into use! Due to a lack of promotion, many people still do not know this yet, so just for today, the new scenario is open for all! There is no need for you to go through the previous scenarios first. I have already stated the reward that awaits the winner. Only one person can enter at a time, and everyone can only experience it once. The placement of the nametags will be changed each day. Alright, who wishes to come forward to take this 20,000?”

Earlier, everyone had been incredibly noisy, but when Chen Ge officially extended the invitation to the crowd, they looked at each other, but none dared step forward. Chen Ge scanned the crowd and realized that there was a group of six at the end of the line huddled together like they were discussing something. After a while, five of them came toward him.

“Boss, we do not want to challenge the game; we just want to visit the scenario. Can the five of us enter at the same time?” the leading young man asked Chen Ge. The six of them had obviously come together. Five of them were going to scout the new scenario, and after obtaining all the necessary information, the sixth would come forward to accept the challenge and find all the nametags with the information provided by the five.

Chen Ge knew what they were up to; the six of them were trying to cheat the system, but he did not seem to mind it. “Sure! All five of you can enter together, but I have to remind you—please do not use your phone to take pictures or videos inside the Haunted House because they might scare our friends from the other side.”

“Five of us, so here is 100,” the young man said with a smile. He did not pay Chen Ge’s advice any attention.

After accepting the money, Chen Ge flashed the five visitors a ‘professional’ smile before saying, “Thank you. Now, please come with me.”

Chen Ge’s smile was quite comforting; the five visitors did not think too much of it, but next to them, Uncle Xu shivered involuntarily and, after some contemplation, decided to walk over to stop Chen Ge.

He whispered into Chen Ge's ear, "These are normal visitors. They have no history with us; you have to be careful. Please try to make sure everything is safe and sound!"

"Uncle Xu, do not worry. I know what I am doing."

Chen Ge pushed Uncle Xu gently aside. However, the park manager was made anxious by this promise that he made. "Who are you trying to kid? That was what you said the last time, and those two poor children are still lying at the hospital! That one by the name of Fei Youliang can be heard screaming every midnight. He does not stop asking who his wife will be, and almost everyone at the hospital knows about him!"

Chapter 132 - Uncle Xu Has a Point

Chapter 132: Uncle Xu Has a Point

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Uncle Xu was worried about Chen Ge. “We will let the visitors enter happily and then escort them out safely, what is so bad about that?”

“Okay, okay. Don’t worry, everything is within my control.”

...

With Uncle Xu’s repeated advice, Chen Ge led the five visitors to the underground parking lot.

“Please sign these disclaimers first.” Chen Ge passed a few copies to the visitors. “All the notes and warnings are written there. Feel free to browse through them.”

“This is quite official.” The leading young man signed the agreement without even reading it. His name was Wang Hailong; he was about 1.85 meters tall and roughly the same age as Chen Ge.

“Boss, will you renege on the promise of the reward money? If someone really manages to find all twenty-four nametags, will you give him the money?” There was slightly shorter man standing next to Wang Hailong. They appeared to be siblings. His name was Wang Wenlong, but their personalities seemed to differ.

“Of course, where would I be today without honoring my promises?” Chen Ge replied with a professional smile.

“20,000, 1 person, twenty-four nametags. Since we have five people, if we manage to find all the nametags, can you give us 4,000 each?” The person who spoke was Wang Hailong’s girlfriend. She wore a thin shirt and hot pants. The buttons of her shirt were not tight, and there was a fluttering butterfly tattooed on her collarbone. The girl’s name was Dou Menglu—a pretty girl but horrible handwriting.

“Why not? The aim is to have fun. If you can manage to find all the nametags in twenty minutes, you’ll each get not a penny less than 4,000.” Chen Ge continued to smile.

Wang Hailong dropped the pen and promised, “Nice! I’ll definitely call my brothers to come support you next time.”

“Then I shall thank you in advanced.”

Such a kind visitor. Chen Ge was touched. “After signing the agreement, please come with me. A word of advice, don’t stay too long in the sealed classroom.”

The group walked to the end of the corridor, and Chen Ge pulled the boards away. “There are many rumors about the abandoned school. Whether you believe them or not, be careful. Remember, no cameras when you’re inside. You’ll be responsible for the consequences.”

“It’s underground?” The five looked at the dim tunnel which felt like someone was walking on it.

“F*ck, what was that?” The fatty who had not spoken suddenly screamed as he staggered back. He had a beer belly and beady eyes. He did not seem to be that courageous.

“Pei Hu, you’re scared before we’ve even gone in?” Wang Hailong grabbed Pei Hu’s bouncy arm. “It’s all fake. If you’re that scared, hide behind Meili.”

“Stop whining. Are you going in or not?” This time, it was the other woman who spoke. She had a perpetual frown on her face and was short in stature. Even though she already tried her best, standing beside Menglu, she was like a green leaf accompanying the bright flower. Chen Ge glanced at her agreement; this girl’s name was Xia Meili.

“What’s the hurry?” Wang Hailong winked at Chen Ge. “Boss, remember to start the countdown only after we’re in the tunnel!”

“Sure.” Chen Ge took out his phone to prepare. After the five visitors entered the tunnel, he closed the boards and put his phone away.

Countdown? What was that?

If they could walk out on their two legs, it was already good enough. Inside the dressing room, Chen Ge put on Doctor Skull-cracker’s outside and skin mask before going to the control room. He looked at the list of background music and decided against putting Black Friday on a loop.

Uncle Xu is right. We're in the service industry; we should put our customer first. He moved the cursor to lower the volume and added Wedding Dress to the playlist. Listening to the same music again and again will bore the visitors.

...

The boards above their heads were sealed. The five visitors stood in the dim corridor looking at the half-opened classroom doors as shuffling noises drifted into their ears.

"This place is huge." Pei Hu nudged backwards to stand beside Meili.

"Isn't that a given? How else was he going to hide so many nametags? The boss isn't dumb." The slenderest man among them, Wang Wenlong, took the first step. "Let's get moving. Five of us should be able to find all twenty-four nametags. After we win the 4,000, we shall go for hot pot and karaoke."

"Since we're already here, let's finish this. My little brother is right." Wang Hailong took large strides. When he passed the first classroom door, he stopped. This sudden movement spooked the others.

"Hailong, what have you seen?" Dou Menglu whispered.

"Look at yourselves! What is there to be afraid of?" He kicked the classroom door open, and the nametag that sat on the doorframe fell to the ground. "This is easy!"

He picked up the nametag, and a girl's name was written on it—Chen Yalin.

"This nametag was placed at such a conspicuous location. It's probably to help us recognize the shape and size of the nametags." Wang Wenlong took the nametag and gave it a look. "Every nametag should have a student's name then. The edges are yellowed; this looks old and wouldn't be easy to replicate."

"What has that got to do with us? We've been in here less than ten seconds, and we've already found one. As long as we're not afraid, finding the remaining twenty-three should be easy." Wang Hailong took the nametag back and continued moving forward. The easy success also relaxed the remaining members.

Wind made the blank test papers that littered Mu Yang High School flutter. None of them realized that even though all of them were wearing shoes, there were fuzzy bare footprints that appeared on the papers. The temperature lowered, and in the darkened corridor, a creepy children's lullaby began to play. It sounded like crying and laughing all rolled into one.

The atmosphere turned weird, and there seemed to be something hiding inside the classrooms on both sides. It was as if pairs of eyes were looking at them in the dark.

"There's nothing to be afraid of, but how come I feel weirdly unsettled?"

The five separated to find the nametags faster. Xia Meili and Wang Wenlong went into the classroom on the left-hand side to search while the rest searched the ones on the right. They searched a few rooms but came up with nothing.

"This boss is smarter than we gave him credit. Let's move forward, we cannot waste any more time." Wang Hailong walked at the forefront. When he passed the sealed classroom, he halted.

"What's wrong, Brother Long? Did you discover another nametag?" Pei Hu turned his head in the direction Wang Hailong was looking. He only took a glance, and a chill surged through his body. There was someone standing by the classroom window, and he appeared to be smiling.

The scariest part was, behind him, there were twenty more mannequins who were sitting or standing in the classroom!

Their bodies did not move, but their necks were twisted in weird angles, and all of them were turning to smile at the visitors outside the window!

Chapter 133 - Nightmare Difficulty

Chapter 133: Nightmare Difficulty

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The blanched Pei Hu staggered back a few steps before he stabilized himself.

“Are you alright? What happened?” Wang Wenlong and Xia Meili behind them rushed over immediately.

...

“Don’t mind him. It’s nothing.” Wang Hailong’s legs were shaking, and his face was slightly twitching, but he forced himself to appear calm. “It’s just a bunch of mannequins.”

Even though they were mentally prepared, the other three still got quite a shock when they looked into the classroom. The sudden appearance of twenty or so mannequins was scary enough, but to have them all looking in the same direction, with some of their necks twisted 180 degrees? Who would be able to prepare for a sight like that?

“I was wondering why the previous classrooms weren’t scary. It was to prepare for this ‘surprise’.” Wang Wenlong was probably the most collected of them all. He turned on his phone to use the flashlight.

“Wenlong, the boss said to not use the phone inside the scenario,” Xia Meili warned.

“What he doesn’t know won’t hurt him.” As Wang Wenlong directed the flashlight into the sealed classroom, the light reflected on the mannequins’ shiny bodies. “Should be all mannequins. None of them blinked when the light hit their eyes. Wait! I saw nametags; there are two of them!”

“Where?”

“Hanging on the mannequin’s uniform!” Wang Wenlong pointed his flashlight, and everyone turned to look. The mannequin in the middle of the classroom had a nametag hanging on its uniform’s lapel while the other nametag was on the innermost table. To obtain these two nametags, one had to move through the rows of mannequins.

“This boss sure is immoral!”

“Thankfully, all five of us came in. If we followed his rules and came in to find the nametags alone, of course, that person would be scared witless.”

“Fine, time to stop praising others and lowering our own morale.” Wang Hailong walked back and forth several times until his legs did not feel that numb anymore. “There’s still time. There should be more than two nametags inside this classroom. We not only have to go in, but we also need to search the place carefully to find all of the nametags!”

“Brother Long, please think about it! There’s no reason to put our lives on the line for 4,000!” Pei Hu still had not recovered from the scare earlier, and his brain was still a muddled mess.

“Is it as serious as you’re making it out to be? Stop talking nonsense, come here!” Wang Hailong dragged Pei Hu to the entrance of the sealed classroom.

“Why do I need to enter first?” Pei Hu showcased his survival instinct.

“I’m afraid that you’ll leave us behind if I don’t watch over you!” Wang Hailong shoved Pei Hu into the room and turned around to tell Dou Menglu and Xia Meili. “The three of us guys will go in first. If anything happens, come in to get us.”

“Okay, be careful.”

“It’ll be fine. Didn’t Wenlong say it just now? They’re all mannequins.” Wang Hailong and Wenlong also entered the classroom. The three of them stood at the lectern and looked over the classroom. Goosebumps instantly formed on their skin.

“This is just wonderful. The mannequins have taken up all the space; there’s not even room for us to move.”

“Pei Hu, since you’re so scared, you go and take the nametag in the middle of the room. Wenlong, you check the drawers, and I’ll go and grab the furthest nametag.” Wang Hailong acted like a real big brother. Even though Pei Hu did not feel that satisfied, there was nothing he could do about it.

Before getting down from the lectern, Pei Hu jumped back again. “Brother Long, these mannequins look weird; their eyes seem to move!”

“Would it kill you to be a little bit quiet?” Wang Hailong was also made anxious by Pei Hu.

“This is called the Uncanny Valley effect. Things that are too similar to humans will naturally elicit a negative reaction,” Wang Wenlong explained, but he did not seem to buy his own explanation.

“Both of you be quiet! The boss has already started the countdown, and we need to find all the nametags in twenty minutes to win. Stop wasting time.” Wang Hailong forced himself to walk toward the innermost table.

“Brother Long, don’t be angry.” Pei Hu moved toward the middle table with some hesitation. Due to his large size, when he got down from the lectern, his stomach knocked into a nearby standing mannequin, causing it to move.

“The person who designed this Haunted House must have experienced some kind of trauma to be able come up with something as sick as this...” Pei Hu grumbled, but before he finished, he suddenly felt someone knock into his back. “Wenlong?”

He turned to look, and Wang Wenlong was several meters away from him.

“Who touched me?” He looked around before his gaze fell on the mannequin that was still trembling. The mannequin was very lifelike. If one did not take a closer look, one would be prone to believe it was a real person. “This mannequin touched me?”

Pei Hu shivered. He did not dare stay to find out and hurried to the centermost table. It was a girl who sat at the table. Her uniform was different from the others’ and was drenched in blood like something horrible had happened to her at the last moment of her life.

Pei Hu stared at the nametag on the lapel and took a deep breath before reaching for it. When his fingertip was about to touch the girl’s neck, the head that was turned toward the window suddenly moved.

“F*ck me!” Pei Hu instantly pulled his hand back like he had been shocked by electricity.

“It really moved? Could this be a real person?” He looked around. Wang Hailong was still moving toward the innermost table, and Wang Wenlong was near him. His friends were close, and this gave Pei Hu some degree of courage. He reached out once more and finally grabbed the nametag.

“I did it.” Even though it was not anything impressive, Pei Hu felt incredibly happy. However, when he was about to retract his hand, he realized that someone had strung a piece of string around the nametag, and the string was tied to a noose around the girl’s neck.

“F*ck! Is this really necessary?” He felt like cleaving the boss in two then. He gripped the nametag and moved around the mannequin. The classroom was dark, so he needed light to undo the knot. He took out his phone for light and bent down to get close to the girl.

When the phone’s light hit the girl’s face, the mannequin’s expression shifted, but Pei Hu did not notice that. Holding the phone in his hand, he stood behind the girl and had his head lowered to focus on the knot.

However, as he was fully focused, he heard Wang Wenlong suddenly take a deep breath and whisper, “This is weird, how come I feel like this mannequin has been following me?”

“You’re probably overthinking it.” Pei Hu, who found progress with his objective, laughed. He wanted to turn back to continue undoing the knot when he suddenly realized that the girl sitting before him had turned her head around, and the two faces, one living and one inanimate, were only half a finger away from each other.

Chapter 134 - Brother Long Cried!

Chapter 134: Brother Long Cried!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The young face was covered with purplish bruises. She had a pair of dancing eyes and thin lips. She looked gorgeous when she smiled. This was the first time Pei Hu had been in such close contact with a girl. Looking at the head that had twisted 180 degrees, his mind was blank.

“What is happening? I wasn’t rejected, and I didn’t give up from fear; these two things should bring me more happiness. It should be a dream-like happiness waiting for me... but why? Why did everything change?”

...

The head that sat on the mannequin’s shoulders at impossible angle blinked lightly, and the clear skin turned black and blue as if from asphyxiation. Looking at the protruding set of eyes, Pei Hu’s entire person was shocked beyond belief.

“Help!” A shrill male voice echoed throughout Mu Yang High School as Pei Hu gripped the nametag and ran out of the classroom. The nametag was tied to the mannequin’s neck, so the mannequin was dragged along with him. The tables in the room were messed up, and all the mannequins started to move. Pei Hu dashed toward the entrance like his life depended on it. The huge commotion startled Wang Wenlong, who thought the mannequin was following him, and without a second word, he headed for the door as well!

They neared the classroom door, one running at the front, the other at the back. Poor Wang Hailong was still moving toward the innermost table. The whole room of mannequins was toppled, heads flying everywhere and limbs collapsing; it felt like they had all come to life!

“F*ck! What’s happening!” Brother Long, who cowered in the corner of the classroom, felt like he had entered hell; this scene was one that he would not forget for life!

“Wait for me!” He grabbed the nametag that was left on the table and half-crawled his way through the maze of mannequins. Before he got out, he heard Pei Hu scream, “Don’t follow me! Don’t follow me!”

Pei Hu had forgotten that the nametag in his hand was tied to the mannequin’s neck. In his panic, he had dragged the mannequin along with him to the door.

“Stop chasing me!” He felt like something was collapsed onto his back. When he exited the classroom, without a second thought, he slammed the door shut behind him!

“F*ck! Wait for me!” Brother Long’s face was twisted in anger. Unable to stop the momentum of his full speed sprint, he rammed into the door!

He collapsed onto the floor, and the mannequin heads rolled around on the floor. He realized a roomful of eyes was staring at him. Various mannequin faces flickered before Wang Hailong’s eyes. He felt the energy draining out of him; his body was frozen solid, and there were tears in his eyes.

“Pei Hu, you damnable f*cker...”

Outside the sealed classroom, Pei Hu and Wang Wenlong were leaning against the wall, gasping for air.

“That was hella scary. This classroom is definitely cursed!”

“The mannequin moved! She winked at me!”

“Pei Hu, behind you! Look behind you!” the two girls screamed together. Pei Hu turned around and saw that the girl mannequin was hanging on his back. He shivered from fear and hurriedly extricated himself from the mannequin before tossing it down the corridor.

The mannequin slammed against the floor, and the beautiful head detached itself from the body. The face with a curious smile rolled before it stopped at the corner of the corridor.

“It was this mannequin that smiled at me earlier. I didn’t think it would follow me,” Pei Hu groused weakly. “How about we just surrender now? This Haunted House is too much. No wonder the boss is offering a 20,000 reward, no one will be able to win!”

“You want to give up after four minutes? Have you no shame?” Wang Wenlong complained. “The classroom should be the hardest scenario. We have found the nametags inside, so the rest should be easy.”

“If you want to stay, go ahead. I’m leaving.”

“Wait.” Dou Menglu looked into the classroom before asking, “There are only the two of you—where is Brother Long?”

“Brother Long?” Pei Hu and Wang Wenlong looked around, and their faces dropped. “He... he should be still inside.”

The two of them opened the classroom door quickly. Brother Long was collapsed next to the lectern, and there were tear stains on his cheeks.

“Brother Long! Why are you still inside?”

His lips were slightly purple. When he heard this question, Brother Long almost blew his top off. “You two still have the face to ask me that question? I also want to know why I was left in here! Quick, come and pull me up!”

After a few attempts, Wang Hailong finally found his footing. He cracked his knuckles to work some warmth into them.

“Brother Long, should we just give up? We’ll just sit at the entrance for another twenty minutes then we’ll leave. That way, it’ll seem like we stayed for twenty minutes,” Wang Wenlong whispered.

“Your mind is only filled with horrible ideas like that.” Wang Hailong rubbed his eyes surreptitiously. “That would mean that we have surrendered to this Haunted House. Remember, there are no actual ghosts in this world; everything is a trick created by the boss. He’s probably looking at us through the surveillance camera now.”

“Brother Long is right. If we go and sit at the entrance and the boss suddenly opens the wooden boards, can you imagine how embarrassing that will be?” Xia Meili stood with Brother Long.

“But even now, we don’t know how big this place is. If we run into something scarier later on, what shall we do?” Pei Hu was on the verge of tears. “We have not seen a single actor, but we’re already so spooked. I still think we should not be so stubborn and put ourselves through this misery for the sake of face.”

“Stop talking nonsense. I still haven’t decided what I am going to do with the both of you for abandoning me inside the classroom, and now you’re trying to go against my orders?” Wang Hailong glared at the two of them. “Look at the two of you, even worse than the two girls.”

“But it wasn’t the two of us that cried earlier...” Wang Wenlong grumbled softly.

Wang Hailong pretended not to hear him and said, “We have to pick ourselves back up. I believe we have around ten minutes left. Let’s get moving—we still have a chance to find all the nametags.”

Then, he opened his palm to reveal a nametag. “This is the one I found inside the classroom. Combined with the one Pei Hu found and the first one, we already have three nametags.”

“Make it four. I found this inside one of the drawers.” Wang Wenlong showed his discovery.

“Good, even though the process was tumultuous, the result was good.” Wang Hailong put all the nametags into this pocket. “Actually, if you think about it, there is nothing scary about a bunch of surprisingly lifelike mannequins. The key is we must not scare ourselves, especially you, Pei Hu. Man up a bit.”

“But I really did see the mannequin wink. Her face also changed like she was dying from asphyxiation!” Pei Hu grumbled with dissatisfaction.

“That’s enough out of you. If you’re that scared, go stand behind Meili and keep your mouth shut.” Wang Hailong waved impatiently as he walked deeper into Mu Yang High School.

“But it’s true.” Pei Hu trailed behind the group as they proceeded forward. None of them realized that the mannequin that had been left in the corridor was slowly crawling toward the detached head.

Chapter 135 - Bottom of the Well

Chapter 135: Bottom of the Well

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

When Chen Ge heard the scream coming out from Mu Yang High School, he opened the boards and rushed into it. It was first day that Mu Yang High School had been open to the public, and Chen Ge was afraid that mannequins might take it too far.

Chen Yalin's nametag by the entrance has been taken already... weren't these people afraid it might be a trap? Hopefully, that nametag won't pressure the Pen Spirit to do anything dumb.

...

Chen Ge walked down the corridor until he reached the sealed classroom. The mannequin on the floor was hugging its head. It seemed like it was trying to reattach the head, but it could not find the proper location.

Why is this mannequin outside? Chen Ge looked into the classroom. The tables were a mess, and several mannequins were missing their heads. Based on the conditions, they probably had the fright of their lives, so they wouldn't be daring enough to bring this mannequin out.

Chen Ge picked the mannequin up from the floor and leaned her against the wall. Then he helped her reattach the head. He looked at the mannequin in her eyes. Perhaps it was the light, but he felt like there was soul in this mannequin; in fact, he could sense a trace of shyness and respect.

After taking out his black phone, Chen Ge looked through all the pages. There was no option related to controlling the mannequins' lingering spirit, so he told the mannequin, "You can leave the classroom, but you cannot leave the Mu Yang High School scenario, understood?"

The mannequin did not respond, but Chen Ge did not care whether she got it or not. He placed her on the side of the corridor and entered the sealed classroom to reset all the mannequins.

There are four nametags in the classroom, and they have taken three of them; this group of people is not bad. Chen Ge moved swiftly, and when he passed the table in the middle of room, his feet knocked into something. Why is there a phone here?

...

"Did any of you hear the sound of talking coming from behind us?" Pei Hu's legs were shaking, and he turned back to look every three steps. Even Xia Meili was tired of the man's cowardice.

"Poor kitty, if you're that afraid, just stay here and wait for us to come back."

"Who are you calling a kitty? Meili, you did not see what happened inside the classroom. The place was dark, and I had to use the flashlight on my phone to even get a good look of what was happening. When I was focused on undoing the knot, the mannequin's head suddenly creaked and turned around!" Even thinking about it now, Pei Hu was still afraid. He waved his hands in the air for a long time, and when he reached into his pocket, he gasped. "F*ck! I was too focused on grabbing the nametag that I left my phone in the classroom!"

"Then, go and take it back, why are you telling me this?" Xia Meili gave Pei Hu a side-eye.

"You want me to go back alone?" Pei Hu glanced behind him with a bitter expression on his face. The darkened corridor was like the open maw of a monster. "So be it, I'll ask the Haunted House worker to get it for me after we're out."

He ran after the rest of the group, and the five stopped at the first junction.

"Just how big is this place? The path splits, and we can't even see the end of the corridors!" Pei Hu squeezed beside Wang Hailong. "Brother Long, there's still time for us to turn around!"

"Get away from me." Wang Hailong was getting nervous, too, but he did not dare show it before Dou Menglu. "About a third of the time has passed, and we still have twenty nametags to find. Moving in a group of five slows us down greatly. How about this? Wenlong and Pei Hu, you go down the left path, and I'll take Menglu and Meili down the right. What do you think?"

“We have no issue with that,” the two girls said.

“Same with me,” Wang Wenlong said with confidence. “This time, even though we failed the challenge, we would have explored the entire scenario; it’ll be good information for our brother.”

“Then it’s decided. The two of you’d better stick close to me.” Wang Hailong led the two girls down the corridor that led to the girls’ dormitory.

“F*ck! No one even asked for my opinion?”

“Come on, Pei Hu, you’re with me.” Wang Wenlong departed, and even though Pei Hu did not want to follow, it would be worse if he was left behind all alone.

“There doesn’t seem to be anything scary here.”

Wang Wenlong and Pei Hu reached the end of the path. The two looked at each other and saw the surprise reflected in each other’s eyes. The corridor split in two again!

At the narrow end of one path was an old well, and the other led to a room with the number 303 hung on the door.

“Let’s go together.” Pei Hu grabbed Wang Wenlong’s arm tightly.

“Okay.” Wang Wenlong looked into the distance. “Why do you think there’s a well at the end of the road?”

“An actor playing a ghost probably hides in there.”

“Most likely. The Haunted House’s boss likes to hide the nametags in scary places, so I believe there has to be at least one inside the well.” Wang Wenlong was certain. “Come on, let’s go take a look.”

The two of them walked to the well and peered in. The well was about two meters deep. Wang Wenlong took out his phone to shine the light into the well. As he expected, two nametags sat at the bottom of the well.

“This is too easy.” Pei Hu took a step back. Jumping into the well to take the nametags was definitely not something he would do.

“Be careful. We didn’t come across any scares along the way, so this well must have its own traps and secrets.” Wang Wenlong leaned against the well and shone the flashlight at every corner, but he did not find anything weird looking. It really did look like a normal, old well.

“Have I overestimated the boss?” Wang Wenlong let his guard down. After all, there were so many nametags; to set a trap for each of them would be too difficult.

He passed the phone to Pei Hu. “You stay above the well and hold the light for me. I’ll go into the well to collect the nametags.”

“Okay.” Pei Hu sighed in relief. As long as he did not have to go down the well, he was good with anything. After all, with his size, it would be difficult for him to even get down the well.

Wang Wenlong’s frame was small but fit; it looked like he trained daily. “Pei Hu, if you dare run away on your own when I’m down there, I’ll skin you alive after we leave this Haunted House.”

“What kind of person do you think I am? Do you think I would do something like that?” Pei Hu looked insulted. “You guys keep underestimating me. I’ll prove myself, and you’ll see.”

Before he finished, Wang Wenlong jumped into the well.

The dark well looked deeper from the inside. This observation was the most obvious to Wang Wenlong. “Is it me or had this well gotten deeper?”

He had a soft landing because the bottom of the well was covered with sand. “Looks like I was right. The Haunted House’s boss planned for people to jump inside the well or else he wouldn’t have placed the layer of soft sand to soften the impact.”

He examined the well wall. Some places were slippery while other spots had claw marks like someone had been buried alive and left the marks behind as they tried to claw their way out.

“This is quite creepy.” Wang Wenlong looked above him and suddenly it felt like the mouth of well had moved further away from him.

Chapter 136 - What Happened to Our Friendship?

Chapter 136: What Happened to Our Friendship?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Something’s wrong!” Standing inside the well, a weird feeling came over Wang Wenlong. It felt like he had sunk into the deep ocean and his body was slowly submerging. His chest felt congested. He did not dare dawdle. He bent down to pick up the nametags.

When his fingers brushed the bottom of the well as he picked up the nametags, Wang Wenlong discovered there was something underneath the sand. It was about the size of a thumb.

...

“Is this some kind of trap?” Wang Wenlong was cautious. He did not touch the thing that protruded out of the sand but moved the sand around the thing away.

“What is hiding underneath here?” His fingers had made contact, and the touch was different from the slippery sensation of sand. It was something softer and colder. As the sand fell away, a human face surfaced, and the thing that had protruded earlier was the tip of face’s nose.

“F*ck!” Wang Wenlong quickly pulled his hands back. He had looked around closely before he jumped in and did not find anything weird. “The boss sure is immoral. He hid this underneath the sand!”

If he knew there was a ‘body’ hiding underneath the sand, Wang Wenlong would not have jumped into the well, at least not alone. He panicked and tossed the two nametags out of the well, yelling, “Pei Hu, pull me up quickly! There is mannequin inside the well as well!”

“Mannequin inside the well?” Pei Hu shone the phone into the well, and the face within the sand looked up at him. He shivered and reached into the well. “This is weird, when you jumped in, the well did not seem so deep.”

Wang Wenlong gripped Pei Hu’s arms, and his feet climbed up the clawed wall. Just as he was trying to pull himself up, he felt something cold touch his ankle. His legs gave, and he fell back into the well.

“Wenlong, what’s wrong?”

“Something touched me earlier.” Wang Wenlong looked at his ankle, but there was nothing there.

“Could it have been a lizard or tiny bug?”

“No clue.” Wang Wenlong looked around him and realized that even without his intervention, the sand around the ‘body’ would slip away on its own. Soon, half of the mannequin’s upper torso was revealed—it felt like the mannequin was trying to sit up.

“It knows how to move on its own? This can’t be an actor! It would have made some noise when I fell on it earlier if it was a real person.” Wang Wenlong’s mind started to get muddled. “Pei Hu, quickly pull me up!”

Outside the well, Pei Hu heard his voice and quickly reached down. “Grab onto my hand!”

This time, Pei Hu acted courageously. With one hand on the flashlight, he extended his other arm into the well. The thick arm looked weirdly comforting.

“Okay!” His teammate’s voice made Wang Wenlong feel much better. He grabbed Pei Hu’s hand and started his climb out of the well. He leaned against the wall and tried to jump out in one go. When his body had almost reached the mouth of the well, his legs that were in the air were gripped tightly by something!

“F*ck me!” He was pulled back into the well. Wang Wenlong turned to look behind him with disbelief, and the scene that he saw caused chills to run all over his body. The face in the sand was looking at him with its eyes open!

“It was the mannequin who dragged me down?” Wang Wenlong looked at the mannequin in the sand, and for some reason, he felt the eyes were following him.

“This is too much.” His body leaning against the wall, Wang Wenlong looked above him. The light at the mouth of the well seemed to have moved further away from him. “I can’t stay here any longer! Pei Hu!”

“Will you please be quiet? I feel like someone is coming our way.” Pei Hu reached both of his chubby hands into the well to hold Wang Wenlong. “Let’s give this another go.”

Pei Hu pulled with all his might, but some other accident seemed to have happened to Wang Wenlong.

This time, he was cautious. When he discovered the force on his ankle, he turned to look down. There was nothing on his ankle, but under the spot that he had been standing on earlier, a female ‘body’ had surfaced.

“There are two mannequins inside the well? Meaning I’ve been standing on the woman’s head?” A chilling feeling surged through his heart. “Are there more mannequins inside the well? The person who designed the Haunted House must be mad! Buried the mannequins inside the well and waited for people to jump into it...”

Gripping Pei Hu’s hands, he wiggled his legs in the air, trying to kick the force on his ankle away.

“Stop moving about! I cannot hold on any longer!” Pei Hu pulled again, and his face was red from the effort. He put one of his hands on the edge of the well as support, and while he gave another pull, the bad feeling increased.

Pei Hu kept looking around, and when his eyes swept the corridor that they came from, his heart froze. A girl with her head lowered stood at junction that separated the dark corridor. The uniform that was dark with blood amplified the fairness of her skin.

“That’s the mannequin that I carried out of the classroom!” Even the air that he breathed into his lungs was chilly, and his arms were shaking. “Didn’t she lose her head? Was it the worker who fixed it for her and placed her in the corridor? It has to be—a mannequin wouldn’t be able to move on her own!”

“Pull! Quick! The mannequins have opened their eyes!” Wang Wenlong yelled from inside the well. It sounded like the man was crying.

At the same time, the mannequin at the junction lifted her head creakily, and the face that was purplish with blood spots turned to look in the direction of the old well.

“There is probably some hidden mechanism installed inside the neck.

That explains the movement of the head.” Pei Hu sucked in a deep breath and turned back to the well. “I mustn’t be distracted; no matter what, I have to save Wenlong first!”

He tried to focus, but his eyes kept wondering toward the corridor, and when he did, Pei Hu’s heart almost jumped out of its chest. The girl who was supposed to be standing at the junction had moved into the left corridor!

She stood in the middle of the corridor and was looking at him with a smile. Pei Hu’s breathing raced, his palms sweated, and the fat on his body started to jiggle.

“What are you doing spacing out?” His calves felt like they were entwined by seaweed. Wang Wenlong tried his best, but he could not shake the shackles on his ankles off. He panicked when he saw the man and woman mannequins inside the well open their eyes. His only wish then was to get out of that damnable well. “Pull me up!”

Pei Hu yanked Wang Wenlong up another few centimeters. A cold draft came from the corridor, and a light creak entered Pei Hu’s ear. He turned to look out of the corner of his eyes.

In the dark corridor, the mannequin had toppled over, and the head with the weird smile was rolling speedily toward the old well like it was being pushed by an invisible hand!

The face of the girl who had died from asphyxiation slowly approached. Pei Hu’s face was twisted beyond recognition by fear. This time, he heeded the sound of his heart. He let go of Wang Wenlong’s hands without hesitation and rushed into Room 303 with a speed that was disproportional to his size. He then slammed the door shut behind him.

Without the support, Wang Wenlong slipped down the well, and as the surface that was inches away disappeared from his grasp, an expression of abject fear froze on his face!

Chapter 137 - Pair of Eyes

Chapter 137: Pair of Eyes

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

” Pei Hu! ”

Chen Ge was fixing the heads onto the mannequins in the sealed classroom when he suddenly heard a man’s scream coming down from the far end of corridor. The scream was a mixture of complicated emotions.

...

That doesn’t sound like the scream of fear. It is mixed with surprise, anger, and terror. Chen Ge fixed the last mannequin and exited the classroom. This batch of visitors sure is energetic.

...

Pei Hu, who had rushed into Room 303, had his back against the door, and his forehead was covered in cold sweat.

“Damn, Wenlong is still inside the well!” Pei Hu’s palms were slick with sweat, and he looked at Wenlong’s phone in his grasp. “I’ve even taken his phone away. The well is so dark, and there seems to be mannequins buried underneath.”

Pei Hu did not dare continue that thought. He looked around the room. Room 303 had retained its original look; there was a bunch of dirty laundry sitting in the middle of the room, but the stench was missing.

“Why would they leave a pile of clothes in the middle of the room? This place gives me the creeps. To be safe, I’ll just stand by the door,” he mumbled to himself when someone knocked on the door behind him. However, curiously enough, the source of knocking came from the spot that was around his feet.

“People normally wouldn’t knock at that spot, so this definitely isn’t Wenlong.” The only thing that could walk outside the corridor... other than Wang Wenlong, there was only one other option left. Pei Hu’s face fell, and he stared at bottom of the door, which was creating the knocking sound. “It’s the head! The mannequin head is knocking on the door!”

The thought caused Pei Hu’s legs to go weak. He wanted to lock the door and realized with horror that the lock was merely a decoration. A slight push, and the door would be opened.

“There should be a window inside this room, right? But what if the mannequin head enters the room after I leave the door?” Pei Hu scratched his chin in thought, but it would not work if he just stood there, blocking the door throughout the night either. The knocking continued, and each knock resounded in Pei Hu’s head. “I need to figure out a way to get out of here.”

Pei Hu started to look around the room and then walked over the pile of dirty laundry. After an examination of the room, he came up with nothing. “It’s a thick cement wall outside the window; there’s no exit. Will I have to stay here until the game ends?” Pei Hu stood in the middle of the room. “How did a visit to the Haunted House turn into something like this? The winking mannequin, buried bodies in the well, and a detached head that chases people around. Is the boss a magician? How did he manage all this?”

Before Pei Hu could get an answer, there was a loud bang on the door.

“The force has suddenly increased? Is it the mannequin? Has she found her head?” The thought of it chilled Pei Hu. He looked around, and in the urgency of the moment, he hid inside the bedroom.

“Why doesn’t this bedroom even have a door?” He regretted it after entering the room, but everything was already too late. The only hiding place inside the bedroom was under the bed. He shone the phone underneath the bed, and after seeing that there was not anything weird, he crawled into it.

Please just leave me be! He snuck under the bed, pocketed the phone, and focused his pair of eyes at the room door. The darkened room was very quiet, and the smallest sound was amplified. A few seconds later, the living room door was pushed open. After a tense silence, a very light sound reverberated through the living room.

Sounds like something is rolling on the floor... The thought flashed through Pei Hu’s mind, and one second later, his legs froze, and a chill travelled from the balls of his feet to the top of his head. I seemed to have forgotten one thing!

The rolling sound neared, and when Pei Hu turned his head toward the door, a detached mannequin head that was smiling rolled to a stop at the bedroom door!

Two pairs of eyes looked at each other, and time seemed to stop.

...

Wang Hailong led Xia Meili and Dou Menglu to the female dormitory. Even though Brother Long had cried earlier, before his girlfriend, he had to act tough and calm. He walked ahead of the girls. They looked into the bedrooms before stopping at the one with the Pen Spirit.

"This room looks different." A few chairs were placed in the middle of the room, and there was a piece of white paper that had something written on it. Brother Long picked up the piece of paper and read it out loud. "The Pen Spirit knows the location of three nametags."

"No wonder this feels so familiar; it's the Pen Spirit game." Dou Menglu wandered closer out of curiosity. "I've seen this in the movies many times, but I didn't expect to run into one in real life."

"It's all fake, just a gimmick." Wang Hailong tossed the paper back onto the chair. "But we mustn't miss out on three nametags. Do either of you know the rules?"

"I do." Dou Menglu sat on one of the chairs and had Wang Hailong sit beside her. "Just follow my lead."

"Could you two be a bit more careful? Playing a game like this inside a Haunted House might attract some unwanted spirit." Xia Meili stood at the door. Looking at the banter between Dou Menglu and Wang Hailong, she was feeling rather uncomfortable.

"If a Pen Spirit really appears, that would be awesome. I want to ask whether I'll be Brother Long's future wife." Dou Menglu grinned as she picked up the pen that was glued together with clear tape and held it in the middle.

"Ask away." Wang Hailong did not seem to mind. Ignoring the fact that Xia Meili was there, he grabbed Dou Menglu's hand directly. Xia Meili pouted, and she turned to walk away. "You two have fun; I'll go take a look around."

"Don't wander too far, Meili."

“She knows how to take care of herself. Now, listen to me, Brother Long, there are several taboos to the Pen Spirit game. One, you mustn’t ask about death; two, you cannot stop the game abruptly...”

When Xia Meili exited the room, even the air felt fresher. That room stinks of sour sweetness; I hope the Pen Spirit teaches them a lesson.

She walked to the end of the corridor, and the place became even creepier. Xia Meili was about to turn back when she heard Wang Wenlong’s scream coming from the other end of the corridor.

What happened? Based on the scream, Wenlong doesn’t sound scared but more like he’s angry. Xia Meili retraced her steps, but this time, she entered the other corridor.

Where are they? There’s another split in the road? Which way should I go? Xia Meili stopped at the junction between the old well and the few rooms from Hai Ming Apartments. She hesitated. Pei Hu has lost his phone, so I should call Wenlong to ask for an explanation.

The phone’s ringtone came out from one of Hai Ming Apartments’ rooms, but no one answered it.

They’re inside one of these rooms? The ringtone sounded weirdly creepy in the Haunted House. Xia Meili ended the call and walked toward the three doors.

Chapter 138 - It's Hiding Here

Chapter 138: It's Hiding Here

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Wenlong? Pei Hu?” Xia Meili called out twice at the door, but there was not even an echo inside the Haunted House; it felt like the sound was swallowed by some monster hiding in the dark.

What happened to the two of them? She did not want to return to the lovey-dovey Wang Hailong and Dou Menglu, but she wanted to explore the place alone even less. Don't tell me something happened to them? But that scream from Wenlong does not sound like he was in danger.

...

Xia Meili stood at the doors for some time before finally pushing the door closest to her open.

304? Why is there a number on the door? What is the meaning? Xia Meili peered inside. It was different from she expected; the room was very clean.

Why do I feel so worried even though the place is so clean? She stood at the door and called her friends' names twice. The more she called, the more worried she became. Where could these two large men have wandered off to?

She took out her phone to shine some light around, but the light only made her surroundings look darker, and there appeared to be something moving in the corridor behind her.

It's too dangerous standing outside. I'd better go in first. Xia Meili entered room 304 and closed the door behind her. This room looks very normal, like a typical rental room, but the more normal it seems, the higher the chance there's something scary. The Haunted House's boss would not build a set like this just for decoration.

She was cautious and braver than most girls. With her body against the wall, she looked around the room before taking the first small step. Xia Meili finished examining the room after a few minutes and found nothing weird.

There's nothing scary in the living room, so the danger is probably in the other two rooms! Wenlong and Pei Hu probably let their guard down and fell for the trap that was placed in the other rooms. Xia Meili gripped the phone tightly as she moved to the bedroom.

The bedroom does not have a door, so there will not be an actor hiding behind it. However, there are still blind spots behind the door frame. I need to be careful. She moved slowly, but her heart beat ever faster. When she reached the bedroom room, Xia Meili activated the video recorder on her phone and reached the phone into the room and turned it around.

After taking a full video, she examined it on the phone. The video was dark, but it was enough to confirm that there was no one hiding in the bedroom.

There's no one in the bedroom? Ah, I almost forgot! I haven't checked the area under the bed. She retreated back to the living room, selected a specific angle, squatted down, and aimed the flashlight on her phone at the space underneath the bed.

There's really nothing. Looks like I've watched a few too many scary movies. Xia Meili relaxed slightly. If I was the designer, of course, I would not waste this precious spot that is under the bed. I would put some trap on it to make a mannequin jump out when someone sits on the bed.

Then Xia Meili wandered into the bedroom. There really were no traps or tricks. There was, however, a light scent of detergent.

Even the table cloth has the scent of detergent to it; looks like the tenant has a strong obsession with cleanliness. After exiting the bedroom, Xia Meili turned to look at the last available room. The toilet is also a prime location, but this toilet is small and has no cubicle. There's not even a place for a person to hide.

Xia Meili treated the visit to the Haunted House as some sort of survival game. She was very careful and took deliberate steps. This type of visitor was horrid for Haunted House proprietors because they would come up with all kinds of solutions to undo the traps set up by the Haunted House. When the traps were exposed beforehand, the scary effect would greatly dwindle.

The layout of Hai Ming Apartments' toilets was interesting to say the least. The mirror was facing the toilet door, so whether the resident was passing the toilet or entering it, their attention would be pulled to the mirror. It was the same for Xia Meili. Looking at her reflection in the mirror, she felt uneasy. Is this the environment or a trick of the eyes? How come I feel like the person inside the mirror is not me?

She stood at the door and shone her phone on the mirror. It reflects light, so it is an actual mirror, not an actor standing behind it to scare people.

She held the wall as she entered the toilet. The space inside was small, and soon, she found herself standing before the mirror.

Either there is no a trap to this room or the people hiding inside this place left after they scared Wenlong and Pei Hu. Xia Meili reached out to touch the mirror, and her tensed feelings relaxed. It's just a fake scare. This is all Pei Hu's fault; I've been infected by his cowardice.

She looked at herself in the mirror, and upon closer inspection, it looked much more normal. This is just a regular Haunted House; we have been scaring ourselves for naught. Since Wenlong and Pei Hu aren't in this room, they should be in one of the other two rooms.

Xia Meili tried calling Wang Wenlong again. The sound seems to be coming from next door.

She leaned to her side to listen, and right then, a drop of water fell from the ceiling and landed on the edge of the sink. Xia Meili's focus was fully zeroed in on determining the source of the ringtone, so she did not wonder why water was leaking from the ceiling.

It's definitely coming from next door—Room 303.

Another droplet of water fell from the ceiling. This time, it fell on the tip of Xia Meili's shoes. Before she could react, the third drop fell on her nose, and it slid down her face. Finally, Xia Meili noticed it. This Haunted House is leaking?

She frowned and turned her head up. In the partition above her head lay a woman who was completely drenched. Her face that was twisted from pain looked at Xia Meili quietly. A head of black hair fell down her face, and it would soon reach Xia Meili's eyes!

No wonder I could not find anything... it was hiding up there.

Something more viscous than water fell on Xia Meili's face. She wiped at it and realized it was as red as blood. Her body weakened, and Xia Meili collapsed to the floor with a thud.

...

Chen Ge exited the sealed classroom. Where is the mannequin that I left out here?

The girl mannequin had disappeared, and Chen Ge rushed toward the entrance. He remembered the warning on the black phone. Once the spirits left the Haunted House, they might go berserk.

Chen Ge examined the wooden boards at the entrance, and they were unmoved. He sighed in relief. It's almost time to get them out already.

He did not even grab the iron mallet and entered the scenario with just a bloodied shirt. He was halfway down the corridor when he heard an ear-splitting female scream coming from the direction of the female dormitory!

That sounds like it came from the Pen Spirit's room, but the Pen Spirit doesn't seem aggressive enough to have caused something like this.

Chen Ge increased his pace and soon saw a woman in hot pants who had lost her heels running his way at full speed.

Chapter 139 - I'm Inside the Fourth Cubicle

Chapter 139: I'm Inside the Fourth Cubicle

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Her hair was a frazzled mess, and her delicate features were twisted from fear. Her face was blanched, and one of her heels was missing. The sexiness and softness that she had displayed before entering the Haunted House had completely disappeared.

“Dou Menglu?” When Chen Ge saw Dou Menglu, this racing woman also saw Chen Ge. However, unlike Chen Ge’s calm attitude, she started to scream shrilly like she had seen a ghost and turned back to run away.

...

Standing where he was, Chen Ge touched his own face. Is it because of the mask?

The two consecutive scares had exploded the latent potential within Dou Menglu. Her slender legs carried her away like the wind, and she disappeared from Chen Ge’s view in the blink of an eye.

What has gotten into her? Chen Ge pulled off the mask and walked deeper into the scenario. But why is she alone? Were the others separated?

When he reached the first junction, Chen Ge still had not found Dou Menglu. So be it, I'll go to the Pen Spirit's room first or else I'll have another vomit case on my hands.

He was about to move when the phone in his pocket rang, and the ringtone travelled far down the corridor.

...

Inside the fourth cubicle of the bathroom, Dou Menglu had given up on maintaining her image. She was lying on the floor, her eyes looking out through the bottom opening of the door.

He didn't chase after me. Good, good.

Her chest rose and fell unevenly. Dou Menglu leaned against the wall, and there were still tears in her eyes. The images from the Pen Spirit game appeared in her mind. The game had begun smoothly, but when she asked who would be Wang Hailong's future wife, a scene like it had come out of a nightmare appeared.

What was with that hanging girl? That couldn't have been an actual person, but it did not look like 3D imaging either. The more she thought about it, the more afraid she became. She hid alone in the cramped toilet cubicle and fear gripped at her heart like a pair of invisible hands.

I have to contact the others; we'll need to group up to save Brother Long. Rubbing tears dry, Dou Menglu called Wang Wenlong's number. It rang for a long time, but there was no answer. What happened? Did something happen to him and Pei Hu as well?

After hanging up, Dou Menglu called Xia Meili. There was still no answer, and this made Dou Menglu feel even more helpless. She retreated deeper into the corner. Have they all fallen victim to the Haunted House? But there are five of us!

With shaking fingers, Dou Menglu did not give up, and with the last bit of hope, she called Pei Hu.

Pick up, fatty! Didn't you say you like me? Why are you leaving me to die on my own? Due to extreme anxiety, green veins bulged on Dou Menglu's snow white skin, and she looked quite harrowing at that moment.

Three seconds passed, and Dou Menglu's heart sank. What happened to all of you?

Five seconds passed, and she gripped her fists tightly as if holding the last bit of hope in her palms.

Ten seconds passed, and Dou Menglu felt like crying.

However, at the thirteenth second, the phone was suddenly answered!

"F*ck! Fatty, why did you wait for so long before answering my call?" Dou Menglu was on the verge of tears. Like a drowning victim finding an emergency raft, she had seen that bit of hope just as despair was about to swallow her whole.

"Why aren't you talking? Brother Long fainted from the scare, and I'm currently hiding in the fourth cubicle in the bathroom, quickly come save me!” After thinking a moment, Dou Menglu warned, “I saw a bloody monster wandering the corridors earlier, so you have to be careful when you come here!”

In her urgency, she blurted out everything. However, she waited for a long time, and there was still no response.

“Pei Hu? Are you there?” Dou Menglu gripped the phone with both her hands and placed it beside her ear. “You are scaring me. If you can hear me, please say something.”

After several seconds, there was finally a response from the other end, but it was not Pei Hu’s voice. It was a completely unfamiliar, gravelly voice that said, “Okay, I will find you now...”

The phone slid from her fingers. When she heard the voice, Dou Menglu was stunned, and her heart skipped a beat.

Who did I call?

Who answered the phone?

Who is coming?

She looked at the phone on the floor, but she did not dare touch it, treating it like it was some kind of cursed object.

I’d better leave before he arrives! Dou Menglu burst through the door and rushed out of the cubicle, abandoning her phone. As she staggered toward the bathroom room, Chen Ge entered the bathroom in the bloodied outfit.

Dou Menglu screamed and tripped onto the floor. She crawled back into the bathroom. “Go away! Go away!”

“Don’t be afraid, I’m just...” Before Chen Ge could say anything, Dou Menglu had climbed up from the floor, rushed into the nearest cubicle, and used her body to block the door.

Chen Ge did not have the time to stop her, but when he saw that Dou Menglu had entered the fifth cubicle, he immediately rushed toward her. “Hey, that cubicle is off-limits!”

Dou Menglu, who was on the verge of mental breakdown, did not even have time to recover when she opened her eyes to see the pairs of eyes looking at her. The impactful sight caused goose bumps to rise all over her skin, and she lost the ability to talk.

It wasn't like this earlier...

Dou Menglu fell backwards. Chen Ge quickly rushed forward to grab her by the shoulders and slammed the door of the fifth cubicle shut. "Are you alright? Didn't I warn you not to use cell phone inside the Haunted House?"

Chen Ge slid the phone on the floor into Dou Menglu's pocket, but Dou Menglu used her last bit of strength to toss the phone out. "Take it away from me. I'll never use that phone again."

"Don't be crazy. Go rest by the door. I'll go find your friends." Chen Ge dragged Dou Menglu to the bathroom entrance. "By the way, you people sure are courageous to split up and wander off on your own."

After consoling Dou Menglu, Chen Ge ran to the female dormitory. Wang Hailong was collapsed on the chair with tears in his eyes. He looked like he was going to faint at any given moment.

The main power of the Pen Spirit is fortune-telling. She's weak when it comes to other aspects, so it looks like this big bloke is another paper tiger.

Chen Ge picked up the ball pen, and when he saw that the pen wasn't injured, he placed the pen back and dragged Wang Hailong away.

This is exactly the shock I want to see on the first day the new scenario is open for visitation.

Chen Ge reunited Wang Hailong and Dou Menglu. Then Chen Ge entered the other corridor and looked in every room.

After rescuing the unconscious Xia Meili from the toilet of Room 304, Chen Ge pushed the female mannequin back into the ceiling partition. Then, Chen Ge dragged Pei Hu out from underneath the bed in Room 303.

To his surprise, this cowardly fatty had the best mental state of the group of them. When Chen Ge arrived, he was in the middle of a staring contest with the mannequin head by the door. According to the man, before Chen Ge arrived, he had been exchanging gazes with the head for about ten minutes already.

With Pei Hu leading the way, Chen Ge arrived at the last scary stop.

He stood beside Pei Hu at the edge of the well and peered into it.

Chapter 140 - The Different Levels of Scary Scenarios

Chapter 140: The Different Levels of Scary Scenarios

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Wang Wenlong sat in the old well with his fists punching the air before him. It looked like he was in the middle of a boxing match.

“Stand here and don’t move. I’ll go and pull him out,” Chen Ge told Pei Hu. Wang Wenlong heard him and stopped moving. Like a traumatized victim, he lifted his head upwards dumbly. When his pair of lifeless eyes caught Pei Hu, they started to focus.

...

His body shaking with anger, Wang Wenlong seemed to escape from the thing that had taken hold of him earlier, and he yelled at Pei Hu, “You f*cker! You dare come back to face me?”

“Listen to me. It was a dangerous situation. If I didn’t run, we both would have been in danger.”

“You lie!”

“It’s true! I used myself as bait to lure the scariest threat away! If you don’t believe me, ask the boss!”

Pei Hu felt wronged. Being targeted by a mannequin head and frozen under the bed for ten minutes, those who had not experienced that before had no idea how scary it was.

“Keep your voices low. You can continue the argument outside.” Seeing how spirited Wang Wenlong was, Chen Ge sighed in relief. “Come, give me your hand.”

Wang Wenlong stopped shouting when he saw Chen Ge. “I can’t. My lower body is numb.”

“Numb?” Chen Ge jumped into the well, and with Pei Hu’s cooperation, they hauled Wang Wenlong out. After saving the guy, Chen Ge did not hurry to leave. He had inspected the well when he placed the nametags that morning. Other than the two mannequins, there was nothing particularly scary about.

Outside the well, Wang Wenlong and Pei Hu had started the argument anew. Chen Ge squatted down to examine the mannequins' faces. The male mannequin's eyes were open, which was different from that morning.

The mannequins buried inside the well should represent Fan Yu's parents. If they are baleful specters, it would not be so easy to deal with.

Thankfully, they are just lingering spirits. Chen Ge was reminded of what had happened to Fei Youliang. His body had been taken over by the Pen Spirit, who wanted to escape, but he had been stopped by the twenty or so spirits in the sealed classroom.

The spirits had entered his body and controlled him to walk to the deep well. They had seemed prepared to punish the Pen Spirit but stopped at the last moment.

The mistake lay with the Pen Spirit. The other spirits dragged her to the well to punish her, did they plan to throw her inside the well?

Chen Ge looked at Fan Yu's parents, who were buried in the sand, and his suspicion was confirmed. The old well seemed to be some sort of prison for evil lingering spirits.

Now that I think about it. The lingering spirits in the sealed classroom have quite a strong sense of justice.

All the spirits had been orphans when they were alive. They had been adopted by the old headmaster, and they treated Mu Yang High School as their home. Now that Chen Ge's black phone had reconstructed Mu Yang High School inside the Haunted House, these lingering spirits probably just wanted to have a stable and peaceful life here.

As long as you do not do anything out of line, my Haunted House will be your new home.

Chen Ge looked at the mannequins buried in the sand and jumped out of the well. When he turned back to look inside the well, the eyes of the two mannequins were closed again.

"Come, it's time to walk you out." Chen Ge helped Wang Wenlong get up from the floor. The fear in his eyes had not dissipated. The only reason he could appear so spirited earlier was because his anger at seeing Pei Hu had suppressed all the other emotions.

After wasting a ton of energy, Chen Ge finally managed to drag these five people out of Mu Yang High School. When the curtains to the Haunted House opened, the surrounding visitors all took a cold gasp. They had heard the incessant screaming coming from inside the Haunted House, but they had never envisioned things being so bad.

“What have these people experienced?”

“It was only half an hour...”

Uncle Xu, who was serious in his role as the ticket seller, felt everyone’s eyes focusing behind him. He had a bad feeling, and when he turned around, his hair stood on end.

“Damn! What happened to them?” Uncle Xu abandoned his post and ran over to help Wang Hailong and Xia Meili.

“Just a little scare, it’s nothing serious.” Chen Ge released his grasp on Wang Wenlong’s arm. “Can you walk on your own?”

When they heard Chen Ge, the visitors all took a step back.

“He could not even walk, and you say that’s a little scare?”

“Are you trying to lie to us?”

Wang Wenlong was embarrassed with the crowd watching him. He waddled forward two steps like a baby learning how to walk.

“Wenlong, Pei Hu!” A large fella in a tank top pushed through the crowd. He had the tattoo of a wolf’s head on his shoulder. He rushed over to support Wang Wenlong. “What happened to all of you? I heard your screams from outside.”

Chen Ge glanced at the man; he was the group’s sixth member. According to their plan, now was the time for the man to challenge the Haunted House alone.

“Were we that loud?” Wang Wenlong prayed for a hole for him to hide in as he brushed the man’s hands off him. Since Wang Wenlong did not seem like he want to explain, he turned to Chen Ge, “What have you done to my brother?”

“Brother?” Chen Ge thought the man’s tone was a bit weird, but he did not take it to heart. He took one step forward to face the crowd. “I told all of you before they entered that the scenarios are separated into levels! Only by passing the earlier scenarios will you be able to stomach the fear levels of the later scenarios, but they refused to listen to me and insisted on trying it. You can see the result of that for yourselves.”

Standing before the Haunted House, Chen Ge ignored the muscular man, and his expression turned serious. “When I suggested to delineate the scenarios into levels, many suspected I was trying to cheat you out of your money, but that is really not the case. I simply want to protect my customers because the newly opened two-star scenario is not suitable for everyone. Its scare factor is much higher than other Haunted Houses available on the market!”

Chen Ge gripped the gate of the Haunted House. “Western Jiujiang’s Haunted House has been in operation for several years already, and from the beginning until now, our rating has never dipped under 90 percent, and that is because we put our customers first. As long as you are willing to try, we will give you the scariest time you’ll experience in your life!

“But have you considered this? Everyone’s fear threshold is different. We strive for the ultimate scare, but for those who haven’t visited a Haunted House before, certain scenarios might be a bit too much. Thus, after much consideration, we decided to set the rules to split the scenarios into levels.”

The new rules had to be accepted by the visitors, and what Chen Ge was doing then was introducing the rules to the visitors and making them accept the rules. On one hand, he used reward money to make people want to challenge the hard scenario; on the other hand, he made use of Wang Hailong’s group as a lesson to warn future visitors of the consequence from not following the rules.

“If you want to win the reward, then you have to follow the Haunted House’s rules. Start with the low-level scenarios before you challenge the scarier ones.”

Once this rule was put into place, all of the scenarios inside the Haunted House would be put to good use. And most importantly, as long as he could unlock more scenarios with higher Scream Factors, the level of attraction it would have for a certain type of visitors would increase, and this would lay the foundation for the scary theme park.

Chapter 141

Chapter 141: Who Speaks First

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The live example of Wang Hailong's group lent credibility to Chen Ge's words.

"This is the first time I've heard of a Haunted House being delineated into levels, but the boss' explanation is indeed professional."

...

"I know it is for our own good, but I still wish to try the scariest scenario."

The visitors talked among themselves before accepting the new rules. Chen Ge sighed in relief and led Wang Hailong's group to the spot where the medical students had once fainted. "How are you feeling? Shall we call the doctor?"

"Thanks, but we're feeling much better." The one who spoke was Wang Hailong. His lips were purple, and his face was white. His eyes were unfocused, and they were covered with a film of mist.

"At least you're conscious enough to speak, so you're indeed alright." Chen Ge squatted down beside Wang Hailong. "Actually, you're lucky. The last person who tried this scenario is still in the hospital."

Brother Long flashed a bitter smile. "Are you trying to console me?"

"I'm just telling you the truth." Chen Ge took the nametags away from them and turned to tell Uncle Xu, "Let's go."

Looking at this familiar scene, Uncle Xu was considering building a rest stop beside the Haunted House. Making the visitors keep lying on the floor was not good for the park's image. He was quite angry initially; however, after listening to Chen Ge's explanation, he felt the young man had a point. With the separation of levels, the cases of fainting visitors would decrease.

After examining Wang Hailong's condition personally and making sure they were alright, he followed Chen Ge.

“Xiao Chen, did you plan this beforehand? Are you sure you want to separate the scenarios into levels? This will increase the Haunted House’s overall income, but have you considered it might lose some potential customers?”

“This must happen.” Chen Ge stood firm on his position. “I’ve explained why I’m doing this. This is a protective measure for the visitors. There will be more scenarios in the future, and some of them might be too much for normal visitors.”

“Since you know they might be too much, why don’t you edit them? After all, the aim is to serve the majority of people.” Uncle Xu’s argument was not wrong; it was just a little conservative.

“Some things can’t be edited. You’ll understand in the future.” Chen Ge walked for a while before remembering something. “Uncle Xu, do we have any extra surveillance devices in the park storage?”

“We have some spare ones but not many. Why?”

“I wish to borrow a few to install them in the underground parking lot. The new scenario currently has no surveillance, and I don’t feel that good about it.”

“Borrow the surveillance devices? Just what kind of person can come up with something like that?” Uncle Xu shrugged. “Lending them is impossible, but selling them to you at a second hand price is doable. However, I cannot touch anything in storage without permission. I’ll go ask Director Luo this afternoon. Your Haunted House has the potential to be this park’s top attraction, so I believe he will agree.”

The two returned to the Haunted House. Uncle Xu continued to sell tickets while Chen Ge replaced all the nametags before entering the Murder by Midnight scenario to act as the murderer. There were a few groups who challenged Mu Yang High School, but most of them did not even dare enter the sealed classroom. Mu Yang High School did not have a steel door but only wooden boards as entrance, so if the visitors were afraid, they could leave at any moment. There were not many who were as courageous as Wang Hailong’s group, so there were no further accidents.

During the lunch break, Chen Ge removed the outfit and walked out of the Haunted House. Wang Hailong and his brother were walking toward him. “Why are you two still here? Want to give it a second go?”

Chen Ge was only joking, but the siblings shook their heads vehemently. “No, not that. We acted rashly this morning—I hope you don’t mind.”

“Your tone is completely different from before. Tell me, what do you want?” Chen Ge was not someone who had just entered society.

Wang Hailong, who was normally so direct, appeared so bashful suddenly. “Actually, Wenlong and I have a younger brother called Wang Shenglong. Before he was five, he was just like any other kid, very playful. However, for some reason, when he turned five, he suddenly went mute. He refused to speak. Our father has tried many ways, going to the doctors, even visiting fortune-tellers, but none worked.”

“What is your point exactly?” Chen Ge was confused about why a five-year-old would suddenly turn mute and what that had to do with him.

“Long story short...” Wang Hailong made sure no one was eavesdropping before he leaned in toward Chen Ge. “Boss, I saw a scary girl in your Haunted House earlier. She was hanging behind my back, her feet stepping on my shoulders. This scenario was exactly the same as my little brother’s description of the night before the strange thing happened to him!”

Wang Wenlong leaned in as well. “It’s true. That night, the three of us were sleeping in the same room. After midnight, our little brother suddenly sat up in bed, saying someone was standing on his shoulders, begging us to move the person away. At the time, we thought he was toying with us, but the next morning, he had forgotten how to speak. He could make sounds but could not finish complete sentences.”

Wang Hailong touched his shoulder and continued in shaking voice. “Since he lost his voice, we had him write down what he wanted to say. The thing he wrote was... scary to say the least. He saw someone outside the walls the previous night, and the person was staring at him. For some reason, the person then entered the house.”

“That’s scary?” Chen Ge had experienced worse.

“When we were young, we stayed at a village. The walls were 2.5 meters tall. If there was really someone staring at him from the wall, the person had to be at least 2.6 meters tall!”

“Is that even a person anymore?”

“That’s the point!” Wang Hailong tried to explain it. “The scariest thing was that the person entered the house easily and asked our little brother to play with him. If he rejected, then he would take something away from him.”

“Did your brother reject the person? His voice was taken away?” Chen Ge guessed.

“No, it’s not that. My little brother agreed to play. The game they played is called—Who Speaks First. After my little brother nodded, the monster climbed on my little brother’s shoulders, and it became even taller.”

Chapter 142 - All Roads Lead to the Same Place

Chapter 142: All Roads Lead to the Same Place

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

It did not sound that scary on paper, but upon closer inspection, it was quite creepy.

“The monster climbed on top of your little brother’s shoulders, and it grew taller?” Chen Ge could not picture a 2.6-meter-tall person standing on top of a child’s shoulders.

...

“That is what our little brother wrote. We even asked him to draw a picture, and he did.” Wang Hailong took out his phone. “This is the picture he drew from memory when we took him to the doctor last time.”

Chen Ge glanced at the phone; it was a weird picture. At the bottom of the picture, there was a fat and short child, he took up about a tenth of the paper. The other ninety percent was dominated by the weird thing on his shoulders.

“What is this?” Chen Ge looked at the thing on the child’s shoulder. It looked like a woman with unruly hair, but the body looked male. Very skinny, like two bamboo poles covered with a white cloth.

“Can’t you recognize it? I saw something similar in your Haunted House. There was a girl who stood on people’s shoulders, and at the time, I was reminded of my little brother’s story.” Wang Hailong took back his phone. He glanced at the Haunted House and residual fear pooled in his eyes. “Since you created this scenario, you have to have experienced something similar. Also, when the girl was stepping on my shoulders, it felt very real. If not for my sanity, I would have thought I’d run into a real ghost.”

“Our Haunted House utilizes the latest 4D technology and special techniques to stimulate the customer’s five senses; that was why you felt something on your shoulders.” Chen Ge lied shamelessly. “The whole standing on the shoulders thing is just a coincidence.”

“Fine.” But Wang Hailong did not give up. “Then, can you tell me what it is that inspired you to create such a scene?”

This Wang Hailong was a stubborn fellow.

Chen Ge thought about it and said, “There are no ghosts in this world; those are all part of human imagination. I know that you are worried about your little brother, but I’m not even a doctor. Instead of asking me, why don’t you consult a psychologist? In fact, I can recommend one.”

The park could close in another two months, so Chen Ge did not want to waste time on unimportant stuff. He was also doing this for Wang Hailong’s brother’s sake. After all, he had no official psychological training, so it would be better if this was handled by a professional.

“My dad has taken him to psychologists since he was young. In fact, there was a mental hospital beside our old house, and my little brother was admitted for a period of time, but the effect was lacking.” Wang Hailong hesitated.

“Brother, let me.” Wang Wenlong held his brother. “For some weird reason, our little brother has a weird aversion toward doctors. He screams and struggles or even turns violent when he is near people in a doctor’s garb. Because of this, we have to notify the doctors beforehand whenever we visit a new doctor.”

“Aversion to doctors?” Chen Ge found the second anomaly about Wang Hailong’s brother. “Could it be that the thing on your brother’s shoulders is afraid of doctors? So it harms the boy whenever a doctor is near?”

“We do not know the actual reason. Before he was admitted to the hospital next door, he was fine, but after he was released from it, he started to get afraid of doctors,” Wang Wenlong added. This was a secret they had shared for years.

“The sudden change must have a reason.” Chen Ge tried to help them by analyzing what he knew. “Could it be that something the doctor did during his treatment scarred him for life?”

“That’s impossible. Shenglong was very young when he sought treatment at the hospital, so the family was at his side at all times. The doctors treated him well.”

“Since it’s not the doctors, then perhaps it might have been the environment. Perhaps you can return to this old hospital, maybe you can find some clues there.” Chen Ge gave his suggestion and then turned to leave for lunch.

“The hospital closed down a long time ago. The third hospital building Shenglong stayed at is now completely sealed, so we cannot gain entry even if we want to.” Wang Hailong sighed. “I’m sorry to unload all this on you. Too many things happened today that reminded us of our little brother.”

“The third building?” Due to the black phone’s mission, Chen Ge was very sensitive toward the word ‘third’. “What is this hospital?”

“It was the hospital next to our old house. It was in the next district. We were poor back then, so we could only afford that place. After things got better, we transferred him to another hospital.”

“That’s not what I meant. What is the name of this hospital?” Chen Ge’s eyes that looked at Wang Hailong were rather scary.

“Jiujiang Third Psychological Convalescence Centre, commonly known as Third Centre. If I’m not mistaken, it has been abandoned for five or six years already.” Wang Hailong and his brother could not understand this change in Chen Ge.

“Is there a place called the Third Sick Hall at this center?” Chen Ge was lining up the dots in his mind.

“That’s what you meant. Some referred to the third building my little brother once stayed in as the Third Sick Hall. They are the same place, just different names.”

“I understand.” Chen Ge took in a deep breath. “I know the best doctor in Jiujiang. If possible, can you bring me to meet your little brother tonight?”

Afraid that he might be rejected, Chen Ge immediately started to toot Doctor Gao’s horn.

“No problem, but you have to be prepared, my little brother is... how shall I put this? Is not that normal looking.” Wang Hailong forced a smile. “If the doctor you mention is coming along, remind him to wear casually.”

Then, he pulled out a black name card from his pocket. On the front, it was written ‘ Long Hu Fang ¹ ‘.

“You are?” Looking at the uniquely-designed name card and the tattoos that covered their body, it finally dawned on Chen Ge.

Are these gang members? This was the first time Chen Ge had interacted with such individuals in his life.

Noticing the shock on Chen Ge’s face, Wang Hailong whispered, “It is as you thought. Long Hu Fang’s Szechuan Steamboat is owned by my family. The contact number is on the back of the card.”

Chen Ge flashed a bright smile as he accepted the card. “Do you have a more specific address?”

“Come to the old district’s Hai Ming Apartments tonight. Shenglong and my father stay there.”

Chapter 143 - Three Personas

Chapter 143: Three Personas

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

When Wang Hailong mentioned the name of the location, Chen Ge was stunned. “Are the Hai Ming Apartments that you mentioned situated in the deepest part of a residential area? With rubbish piling up outside and a very old looking building?”

This time, it was Wang Hailong and Wenlong who were shocked. “You’ve been there?”

...

“I just came back from the place the night before yesterday.” Chen Ge also did not think things could be so coincidental.

“Nice, this means that you know the way there. We’re going there tonight. My father has a stubborn disposition, so it will be better for us to meet up downstairs first before going up together.”

After drafting the plan, the brothers left.

Wang Shenglong’s old home is next to the Third Sick Hall. Could the monster he saw that night have escaped from the hospital? After he was admitted into the Third Sick Hall, his problem deteriorated; everything seems to lead back to the mental hospital.

Chen Ge watched as the pair of brothers walked away.

There’s a monster that came out of The Third Sick Hall residing in Wang Haiming, and there appears to be another monster in Wang Shenglong, and they both chose to live at Hai Ming Apartments...

Suddenly, Chen Ge was reminded of the words mentioned by the young man in Room 302. He had once overheard the two voices in Wang Haiming argue, and one of them said that if he was not afraid of being captured by the Red Specter, he would have killed the other entity already.

Could the thing that the monster in Wang Hailing was afraid of be the monster within Wang Shenglong? If that is true, doesn't it mean the monster in Wang Shenglong is on the same level as Zhang Ya? Wang Shenglong is the scariest entity at Hai Ming Apartments?

This question was too complicated. Chen Ge skipped lunch and sat on the steps before the Haunted House to think. The monster on Wang Haiming had been afraid of tearing away from Wang Haiming because it had felt something. It had forced the young man in Room 302 to capture living creatures it, starting from the initial sparrows, stray dogs, and finally a living human. It slowly broadened its appetite as if feeling out the bottom line of a certain presence.

It was similar to the mirror monster, but the one at Chen Ge's Haunted House had acted so brashly. In comparison, the monster at Hai Ming Apartment was cautious. Obviously, the monster was afraid, so from this hypothesis, even if the monster on Wang Shenglong was not a Red Specter, it was much stronger than normal ghosts.

Just how scary is this Third Sick Hall? There's a presence much stronger than the mirror monster, and from the looks of things, these were the two that escaped; there are probably more monsters sealed in that place!

Chen Ge rubbed his temples. A three-star scenario is already like this. Just how scary will the four-star School of the Afterlife be?

Standing up, Chen Ge gave Doctor Gao a call. He was unsure whether Doctor Gao was free or not, but if the doctor was too busy, he decided that he would go alone. The call was picked up after two rings, and Doctor Gao said, "Chen Ge? How can I help you?"

"It's nothing really. I'm just calling to ask about Men Nan? How is he doing?"

"After a day of rest, he is getting better, but his condition is not that optimistic. In fact, I fear his situation is worse than I expected." Doctor Gao sounded severe on the phone.

"That shouldn't be." Chen Ge was confused, he had already helped Men Nan solve the issue in his heart. He had completed the mission given by the black phone, so his condition should have improved.

"Listen to me, after Men Nan woke up, I reinitiated another psychological diagnosis, and I happened upon a startling discovery."

Doctor Gao paused, and it sounded like he was walking over to a more private area before continuing. "There are three personas hiding in Men Nan's body. One is a growing persona, which is the normal Men Nan we see daily. Another persona he has adopted is his dead mother. This persona sees herself as Men Nan's mother. I suspect the appearance of this persona is a method of self-defense created by Men Nan's consciousness after witnessing his mother's murder at a young age."

"What about the third?"

"The period of appearance for this third persona is very short, so we still don't have much information on him. The only thing that I can confirm is that he does exist. This persona is unique; he will not grow, staying stasis at the age when Men Nan was still a child. I cannot communicate with him, and he shows up only for a short period of time. However, whenever this persona takes control of the body, Men Nan's acumen for psychology doubles!"

"Meaning Men Nan's talent is related to this third persona?"

"Yes, I've not come across a more talented person." Doctor Gao had high praise for Men Nan. "However the need to preserve his talent means that the process of recovery will be very difficult. Normal medication will strengthen his normal persona and weaken the others. I'm afraid this will ruin his talent, so I'm discussing his case with other experts. Hopefully, we'll be able to come up with a treatment specifically designed for Men Nan."

When he was cured, his talent would also disappear. It was unknown whether this was a good or bad thing for Men Nan. Since Doctor Gao sounded so busy on the phone, Chen Ge did not bring up Wang Shenglong. He did not want to bother the good doctor anymore. "Alright, hopefully Men Nan will have a speedy recovery. Goodbye."

When he was about to hang up, Doctor Gao said, "Wait, you must have called me for a reason. Men Nan is currently too weak to undergo any psychological treatment, so I am not that busy at the moment. If you have a problem, feel free to ask me."

Since Doctor Gao had said so, Chen Ge did not hold back and told him everything he knew about Wang Shenglong. Doctor Gao was silent before saying, "Okay, I will come with you tonight. After all, Men Nan's daily effects are still in Hai Ming Apartments; I have been meaning to find time to go fetch him for him."

"Thank you, Doctor Gao."

“There’s no need for thanks. I’ve heard all about you from Ru Xue. As a psychology aficionado, you are more than willing to put your knowledge into practice to help others. To be honest, you make me feel ashamed of myself.”

“Psychology aficionado? That’s what Gao Ru Xue said about me?” Chen Ge did not know whether to laugh or cry. He had a feeling that the other party had misunderstood him somewhat.

“Your Haunted House makes use of many psychological tricks, and it shows you have been reading up on psychology.” Doctor Gao laughed. “If there’s a chance, I shall pay it a visit.”

“You flatter me.” Chen Ge wiped the sweat off his forehead. The thought of placing the suit-wearing Doctor Gao in his Haunted House to scare for half an hour spooked Chen Ge. His whole characterization would collapse after something like that.

Doctor Gao’s voice soon returned to normal. “There are plenty who self-study psychology, but there aren’t many who are willing to do something for the patients. You have helped Wang Xin with her problem, and to be honest, when you called me to ask for help, I was touched. Only those who have experienced psychological trauma will understand the pain involved. Actually, I’ve been trying to thank you on behalf of Wang Xin and Men Nan. It is because of you that they were able to break free from their psychological shackles and breathe a breath of fresh air.”

Chen Ge was praised so much by Doctor Gao that he did not even remember ending the call. After all, this was the first time someone had praised him thusly. Chen Ge realized then that he was quite a noble person.

Chapter 144 - We Are All Monsters (1)

Chapter 144: We Are All Monsters (1)

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After lunch, Chen Ge returned to the staff breakroom. When he opened the door, he saw Xu Wan squatting by the door. “What are you doing?”

“Boss, when did you get this cat? It’s so pretty, but it doesn’t let me touch it!” Xu Wan grumbled, “I just want to give it a hug.”

...

“Don’t think about it. The cat is a stray and is hostile toward human.” Chen Ge entered the room and placed the boards back. When the cat saw Chen Ge, it did not hiss angrily, but it did jump away like it did not want to be physically close to him.

“Then why isn’t the cat hostile toward you?” Xu Wan was confused. Whenever she neared the cat, it would assume a hostile posture.

“Perhaps it knows I’m a trustworthy, noble person.” Sitting on the bed, Chen Ge stretched lazily. “Do you want to take a rest?”

“It’s alright. You can take a short nap; I’ll wake you at 1:15 pm.” Xu Wan looked at the white cat with captivated eyes. “By the way, what is its name?”

“I’ve tried given it many names, but it didn’t like any of them. When I called it White Tiger, it was weirdly responsive, so I’m considering calling it White Tiger from now on.” Chen Ge looked at the white cat and considered it seriously.

“You want to call a cat White Tiger?” Xu Wan thought that Chen Ge was kidding with her, but he didn’t look like it. “Well, as long as you’re happy.”

After Xu Wan left, Chen Ge continued to study the white cat on the chair. This cat could see those monsters, and even a baleful specter like Xiaoxiao was afraid of it. If he could make use of it, this cat could be a useful trump card for Chen Ge, but it was a living creature with its own consciousness. However, making it obedient to Chen Ge's orders would take some time. At least after a night of interaction, the cat was no longer that hostile toward Chen Ge. The cat was clever; it knew who was good and who was bad.

"Your kittens are no longer with us; even if you continue to guard them, nothing will change." Chen Ge thought about it and stood up to grab the basket. The white cat followed behind him, and the pair walked out the Haunted House.

Chen Ge used his hands to dig up a hole next to a tall tree. Then, he placed the kittens within. When he did those things, he kept an eye on the white cat, afraid that it might suddenly become frenzied.

"I understand your pain and know how important they are to you, but you have to understand..." Chen Ge squatted on the floor and slowly filled up the hole. "Everything dies, and when it does, it is returned to nature. Only by burying them can their souls return to the Great Cycle."

He did not know whether the white cat understood him or not, but the cat kept watching the mound of dirt. Staring at the four kittens that slowly disappeared from view, its pair of different colored eyes danced slightly. It did not attack Chen Ge or lose its rationality; it just sat there quietly.

When Chen Ge dropped in the last handful of dirt, the white cat hid inside a tree hole. No matter how hard Chen Ge tried to get its attention, there was no response. The lunch break was soon over, and the visitors returned. It was then that the white cat left the hole, but it just jumped higher into the tree's canopy.

Chen Ge could not force the cat to do something it did not want to, so after a quick cleaning, he opened the Haunted House for business.

With the new two-star scenario, many visitors instantly lined up again after experiencing Murder by Midnight or Minghun scenarios. The effect of the level delineation had slowly come into play. The greater the limitation, the more they wanted to try it. For thrill-seekers, the unknown scenario had an unparalleled attraction.

Chen Ge was busy until New Century Park closed. Before he had a chance to rest, Chen Ge followed Uncle Xu to the park storage to retrieve the surveillance devices. He told Xu Wan and Uncle Xu to leave first before entering Mu Yang High School alone. He installed the camera at few key locations.

The installation took longer than Chen Ge expected. When he was finished, it was already 8 pm. After washing his face, Chen Ge called Doctor Gao and Wang Hailong before taking a taxi to Hai Ming Apartments. When he arrived, Doctor Gao and Wang Hailong were already there.

The steady Doctor Gao who had a deep appreciation and understanding of psychology easily won over the affection of the Wang brothers. Without the introduction from Chen Ge, they were already happily chatting among themselves.

“My dad and Shenglong live on the sixth floor. I’ve informed them of our visit this afternoon.”

When the three entered Hai Ming Apartments, Chen Ge frowned slightly. That stench had returned. This stench was heaviest when they passed the third floor, but the others did not seem to smell it. They acted normally, discussing Wang Shenglong’s condition.

What is the source of this smell?

Initially, Chen Ge thought it was the bag of animal bodies from Room 302, but those carcasses should have been taken care of by now, so how come the stench still remained?

They reached the top floor, and Wang Hailong knocked on the door for Room 601. It was a man in his fifties who answered the door. He had peppery hair and a deep frown on his face.

“Dad, this is the Haunted House boss who experienced something similar, and this is the best psychologist in Jiujiang.”

“Please, come in.”

There were many everyday items in the room. The room was not designed to fit that many people, and it appeared a bit small.

“I’ve been told of your intention. Shenglong is inside the bedroom. If you can cure his illness, you will not worry for your financial future anymore.” This old father looked far more ancient than his actual age.

“Can we meet Shenglong?” Chen Ge stood at the very back. When the door was opened, the stench hit him like a wall, but weirdly enough, none of the others reacted in any way to it. It appeared that only he could smell this stench.

“Okay, but I hope you are mentally prepared.” Wang Shenglong’s father pushed the bedroom door open.

A stronger stench wafted out from the room, and Chen Ge rested his finger surreptitiously on the tip of his nose. It was not smelly per se, but it was a smell that made him feel uncomfortable. He instinctually wanted to escape when the smell hit him. The smell was like a voice telling him, ‘do not get close, this thing is dangerous.’

Looking through the bedroom door, the small bedroom did not have any furniture, just a thin carpet covering the floor and several pillows in the corners. Other than these, the most eye-grabbing feature was the person who sat in the middle of the room.

He was a squat person, perhaps only about 1.5 meters tall, and incredibly overweight. His legs were misshapen from the pressure, and he looked more like a meatball than a man.

When he saw people walk in, the man grinned harmlessly at the door and raised his hand with difficulty in an attempt to wave.

Whenever a new outsider saw Wang Shenglong, his father’s heart felt like it was slashed by a knife. “Shenglong doesn’t know how to speak, but his other faculties are totally normal. Ask him anything, and he will answer by writing on the board.”

Chapter 145 - We Are All Monsters (2)

Chapter 145: We Are All Monsters (2)

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Wang Shenglong's father observed Chen Ge and Doctor Gao out of the corner of his eyes. He knew how unusual his son looked, and whenever someone judged his child with a weird gaze, there was an indescribable pain in his heart. However, this time was different. Both Doctor Gao and Chen Ge acted normally.

"Exercise can help stave away heart problems and release stress. Try not to keep him cooped up at home." Doctor Gao removed his shoes and stepped into the room. He sat down beside Wang Shenglong without a trace of disgust or condescension. Wang Shenglong did not show fear at Doctor Gao's approach; if anything, it felt like he wanted the company.

...

He wiggled his large body with difficulty like he was trying his best to show his welcome. Wang Shenglong and Doctor Gao shared a peaceful relationship, but when Chen Ge prepared to enter the bedroom, everything changed.

He followed Doctor Gao and removed his shoes, but when he stepped into the bedroom, the smiling Wang Shenglong suddenly stopped. His expression turned serious. He glared at Chen Ge, and it felt like he was a lion who felt some other dangerous beast entering his territory.

Doctor Gao, who was sat beside Wang Shenglong, felt this most directly. He looked at Chen Ge with confusion. Chen Ge himself felt this. Wang Shenglong's reaction was abnormal to his eyes.

What did the man sense on me? Is it the residual smell of the stray cat, or can the monster on him sense the presence of Zhang Ya? Chen Ge stopped moving and took a seat further away from Wang Shenglong.

"Perhaps it's the sudden influx of strangers that has unsettled him." Doctor Gao tried to smooth over the situation and started chatting with Wang Shenglong. He was a professional. He did not bring up anything related to mental disease. It felt like he was merely chatting with a friend, and Wang Shenglong slowly relaxed, using the board to respond to Doctor Gao's occasional questions.

Chen Ge did not say a word, and he focused fully on listening. Doctor Gao was tactful with his speech. It might have seemed like small talk, but unconsciously, he had drawn out many secrets from Wang Shenglong, including the darkest memory from his childhood and his daily habits as well as his history with doctors.

The conversation continued for forty minutes, and the longer the conversation went on, the more Doctor Gao felt this was not a psychological patient. Wang Shenglong's mind was clear and bright. He was willing to communicate with others and showed desire to receive treatment. Listening to their conversation, Wang Shenglong's family was gratified. Despite his looks, they knew Wang Shenglong was a kind and harmless child.

After the conversation ended, Doctor Gao exited the bedroom. He pulled Wang Shenglong's father to the side to ask, "The child acts very normally. It doesn't seem like he is tormented by psychological illness. I can't help but suspect he is hiding something from me."

Mental patients, for the most parts, were like normal human beings. It was only when their illness acted up that they would commit actions that normal people would not understand.

"The child has never hurt anyone and has not done anything weird. Other than the refusal to speak and move, he is just like a normal person." Wang Shenglong's father fetched a glass of water for Doctor Gao.

When Doctor Gao conversed with Wang Shenglong, the latter had told him about the childhood nightmare. "A normal child suddenly lost his power to speak, could the story he was telling be real?"

Wang Shenglong's father shook his head with a sigh. "We have no idea whether it's real or not. We've seen so many doctors, but none of them could confirm or deny it."

"Whether it's real or not is not that important. The important part is even after so many years, Shenglong can still recount it in such detail; this means that the incident has impacted him greatly. As long as we can solve this problem, he should be able to regain the ability to speak."

"But if this incident is completely made up, how are we supposed to help him solve it?" Wang Hailong asked.

"Even if it is fictional, every single detail in it has a real meaning to Shenglong, just like how dreams often reflect real life." Doctor Gao took out his phone to show that he had recorded his conversation with Wang Shenglong. "We cannot take everything at a surface level. Temporarily, I cannot promise you anything, but I will try my best."

"Doctor Gao, as long as you can cure Shenglong..."

"I don't have much confidence either. After all, his language power must have regressed since he hasn't spoken for so many years." Doctor Gao looked back into the bedroom. "But the most stressing issue is not his psychological problem but his physical issue. He is seriously overweight, and this puts his life in danger."

"We have talked to him about this, but he dislikes exercise. He prefers to just stay inside his bedroom. He doesn't even want to move out to the living room." Wang Shenglong's father was also frustrated.

"Try to communicate with him and tell him that this is normal to change his worldview and perspective. Then his action might change."

Doctor Gao discussed the situation with Wang Shenglong's family outside the bedroom. Inside the bedroom, Chen Ge sat across from Wang Shenglong. By then, the smile on Wang Shenglong's face had disappeared. His beady eyes that almost disappeared among his folds of fat narrowed into slits as he studied Chen Ge.

"Wang Shenglong, I want to help you, so I hope you will stop hiding things from me." Chen Ge maintained a safe distance from Wang Shenglong. The man was very cautious of Chen Ge, and Chen Ge refused to get any closer because of the stench that came off the man. However, it appeared like only Chen Ge could smell it.

Grabbing the board, Wang Shenglong wrote, "I'm not hiding anything; I've told you everything."

"You know whether that is true or not." Chen Ge lowered his voice. "Their focus is on why you aren't talking, but I'm different. I'm more curious about the other memory that you most detest. What happened to you when you were inside the Third Sick Hall?"

The mention of the Third Sick Hall caused the flesh on Wang Shenglong's face to shake violently. His chubby hands clenched into fist, and his body shook unevenly.

“Your aversion to doctors occurred after you left the Third Sick Hall, so what happened to you inside that hospital?” Chen Ge held Wang Shenglong’s fists. “You are a normal person, but you are under the threat of something abnormal. Tell me the truth, I can help you.”

Wang Shenglong rejected Chen Ge’s offer. He suddenly went berserk and shoved Chen Ge away with powerful force.

Catching his breath, Wang Shenglong glared at Chen Ge. After a long time, he wrote this down on the board.

“We have both transformed into monsters. Instead of worrying about me, you’d better worry about yourself.”

Chapter 146 - Livestream Time Confirmed

Chapter 146: Livestream Time Confirmed

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The smile on Wang Shenglong's face had long since disappeared. He rubbed the words off the board and pain flashed across his beady eyes.

"We have both transformed into monsters?" Chen Ge knocked into the door, and pain radiated from his back.

...

Hearing the commotion in the bedroom, Doctor Gao and Wang Shenglong's family ran in. "Chen Ge, what happened?"

"I accidentally slipped and knocked into the door." Chen Ge rubbed his back as he stood up.

"Is it serious? I have some ointment somewhere." Wang Shenglong's father did not doubt Chen Ge, and he turned back into the living room to go look for the ointment. However, Doctor Gao seemed to have noticed something. His eyes scanned the unruffled carpet but did not say anything.

"It's alright, not so serious." Doctor Gao helped Chen Ge up. They left the bedroom together. Things were not going as smooth as he had hoped. Wang Shenglong had hidden the biggest secret from everyone else; he seemed to be cooperative on the surface, but that was merely a ploy to distract everyone away from the real cause of his illness.

But why would Wang Shenglong do that? He has his own difficulty? Chen Ge remembered the expression on Wang Shenglong's face when he wrote down that sentence. It was filled with helplessness and pain, but the key problem was that he did not seem to want to change. Chen Ge moved his shoulders and realized that Wang Shenglong was actually more powerful than most adults.

He looks innocent but is actually very dangerous. Wang Shenglong did not want to tell the truth, and Chen Ge could not force him before his father and brothers. Even if he did decide on force, Chen Ge had no confidence that he could overpower Wang Shenglong.

In the end, Chen Ge asked Doctor Gao if they could leave. He wanted to ask Doctor Gao to discover the secret Wang Shenglong was hiding. Wang Shenglong's father walked them to the door. When they were leaving each other with their contact information, through the open bedroom door, Chen Ge saw that the devastated Wang Shenglong had picked up the board again.

He seemed to know that Chen Ge was watching him. He drew quickly and turned the board towards the open door.

What was he drawing? A few small people was sitting inside the house. The smallest among them had a monster standing on his shoulders. The monster had its back bent as it surveyed its surroundings, like it was prepared to jump onto other people.

Is he trying to give me a hint? Chen Ge memorized the drawing and left the apartment with Doctor Gao. When they left, they went down to Room 304 to grab Men Nan's stuff.

Chen Ge closed the door and after making sure the Wang brothers didn't follow them, he opened his lips to ask, "Doctor Gao, do you think Wang Shenglong has a big problem?"

"He is indeed a bit not normal." Doctor Gao placed Men Nan's sheets and pillows in the middle of his quilt and rolled them up. "According to Wang Shenglong's father, his condition should be very serious, but from my initial diagnosis, the man is fine. He has an open, clear, and logical mind. However, this contrasted greatly with the blank smile on the man's face. A normal person would have the ability to control the expression on his face. I am sure he is hiding something from me. This patient is very smart and is an expert at hiding his feelings, but he is being too obvious about it."

Chen Ge was surprised Doctor Gao had spotted it as well. "After all, you're the professional, but since you have noticed that, why didn't you tell his father? Wouldn't that help with the treatment?"

"How to navigate the relationship between the doctor and the patient's family is a complicated skill. Wang Shenglong's father might have been kind to us today, but if anything happened to his son, he would definitely be on his son's side, and he would block our access to Wang Shenglong in the future." Doctor Gao picked up the bundle to carry out of the room. "Come and help me. Grab the books and notes in Men Nan's drawer and place them in the box. They are very important to him."

Chen Ge entered the bedroom and took out the books one by one from the drawer. When the drawer was almost empty, Chen Ge saw a picture sat at the bottom of the drawer. A woman was lying in a hospital bed with a patient's garb. A shy-looking boy sat beside her.

"Is this a picture of Men Nan and his mother?" Looking at the picture, Chen Ge was shocked. Men Nan's mother in the picture, even though she had no make-up on, was incredibly beautiful. "Men Nan's father still had an affair even though he had such a beautiful wife."

Chen Ge's first love letter in his life came from a baleful spectre, so he did not know much about romantic relationships. He felt perhaps something was not right about Men Nan's father. After placing the picture in one of the books, Chen Ge placed all the books in the box and left Room 304 with Doctor Gao.

After exiting Hai Ming Apartments, Chen Ge took a deep breath. "Finally, don't need to take in that stench anymore."

"Stench? If you're talking about stench, isn't it stronger out here?" Doctor Gao asked as he pointed at the rubbish that piled as high as small hill.

"Didn't you smell a weird stench in Wang Shenglong's room?"

"No, his house is very clean; the old father has taken good care of him." Doctor Gao sighed. "Actually, the child can be considered lucky. At least he has his family's support, and they all wish for him to get better."

"His family is indeed very kind." The worry between family members could not be faked, and Chen Ge could feel that. He took a few steps before stopping suddenly. "Family?"

"Yes, some patients' family dropped them at the rehabilitation centre and left them there." Doctor Gao had misunderstood Chen Ge. He was thinking about another issue. In Wang Shenglong's last drawing, there were a few small people sitting in the drawing. The one with the monster standing on the shoulders seemed to refer to himself, so the people around him should have been his family. The monster was prepared to jump to other people, so could this be why Wang Shenglong refused to seek treatment? If he did anything wrong, the monster might harm his family.

Wang Shenglong's drawing also proved that even after so many years, the two-meter-tall monster was still standing on his shoulders, and their game was still ongoing.

“The stench should originate from the monster, but why only I can smell it?” After solving the first problem, more problems surfaced. Chen Ge realized that he would need to enter the Third Sick Hall to answer all the questions. After placing all of Men Nan’s stuff in the trunk, Doctor Gao drove Chen Ge back to New Century Park.

When his feet stood on firm ground, Chen Ge received a call from Liu Dao. “Brother, Qin Guang’s next livestream schedule has been announced; it’s tomorrow night!”

“So soon? Then do you know where the location will be?”

“Mu Yang High School.” Liu Dao mentioned a familiar name.

“However, this time, Qin Guang has learned his lesson. He hired someone to write a script based on your livestream, so he can now be considered paying homage and not plagiarising, so even the platform cannot do anything to him.”

Chen Ge was silent for a long time, so Liu Dao thought that he was angry. “Certain things are helpless, but as long as we work hard, it’ll be fine.”

“It’s not that, but if you have the chance, please help me send a message to Qin Guang.”

“What message?”

Chen Ge looked at the Haunted House in the dark. “Tell him to stop following me. If he does not, I have no guarantee what will happen to him.”

Chapter 147 - The Approval of the White Cat

Chapter 147: The Approval of the White Cat

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Are you serious? That sounds like a threat.” Liu Dao did not think that Chen Ge was kidding. He did not know Chen Ge that well, but he did know that the man was... a bit different from normal.

“No, it’s sincere advice. Just tell him what I said.” Chen Ge’s voice was calm. He was already praising himself for how kind-hearted he was. “At the end of the day, we are merely competitors. Even though he is rather shameless, I do not want to see him walk toward his death. Furthermore, his livestream involves such a large crew; they are innocent lives, so he should think about them.”

...

Competitor? Death? Innocent lives? Are we talking about the same topic? Liu Dao felt like one of them was drunk. To tell Qin Guang that if he continued to copy Chen Ge, he would die... how was he going to say that?

“Chen Ge, I know you are angry, but please calm down. We can use our content to surpass him; there is no need to rely on threats. If anything, this might make them sue us.” Liu Dao tried to advise him. After all, the contract had been signed, and their first official cooperation began tomorrow, so he did not want Chen Ge to do anything stupid at such a crucial moment.

“You will not understand even if I explain it to you.” Chen Ge walked to his Haunted House. “If there’s nothing else, I’ll see you tomorrow afternoon.”

“Remember to come early. There are many details we wish to discuss with you.”

“You got it.” After hanging up, Chen Ge was feeling low. He did not think that the livestream was that important; be it Qin Guang or the popularity, those were added bonuses. He only cared about one thing, which was to survive and find the clues left behind by his parents. Chen Ge glanced toward the canopy of the tree next to the Haunted House, but the white cat was nowhere to be seen.

Eventually, it has left. Chen Ge had grown quite attached to that cat. Multi-colored eyes are not common for a stray, but it is still a life; things can't be forced.

Chen Ge was rather saddened upon realizing that the white cat had left. He entered the Haunted House and found himself alone in the long corridor. The Haunted House was rather lifeless at night. He switched on the corridor lights, and his lonely shadow extended down the corridor. It looked quite lonely, but he had gotten used to this already.

He went into the bathroom to wash his face before turning toward the staff breakroom. Before entering, he noticed something weird. Why is the breakroom door open?

There were two sets of keys to the breakroom; he carried one on himself, and the other was hidden above the door frame. It was to make it convenient for other Haunted House workers. This hiding place was only known to those who had worked at the Haunted House before.

If it was Xu Wan, she would have locked the door before she left. Looks like an outsider has snuck into the breakroom. Chen Ge took a detour to the props room to grab Doctor Skull-cracker's iron hammer.

He pushed the breakroom door open. The room was dim, and there was no one in sight.

The key wasn't on the door frame. Has the thief has taken away the key? Chen Ge glanced around the room, and he realized the only difference was there was an unwashed jacket lying on the table.

I remember hanging this beside the bed when I changed out of it this morning. Why is it on the table? He turned the light on and used the hammer to peel the jacket back.

Underneath the dirtied jacket lay a pure white cat. It moved its head with impatience, its pair of different-colored eyes shining with resentment. Chen Ge looked behind it, and a dirty ragdoll was lying on its tail. The small ragdoll appeared like she was trying to grab onto the white cat's tail, but she did not expect that Chen Ge would come in so suddenly. Her body froze from the scare, and very instinctively, she pretended to be dead.

“Xiaoxiao?” This scene surprised him. Couldn’t these two not stand each other?

White cat, jacket... Chen Ge glanced at the jacket, and it dawned on him. When he took the cat to the doctor that night, he used his own jacket to wrap the cat and the kittens.

The smell of the four kittens probably lingered on the jacket. The jacket and the basket that carried the kittens were all in the breakroom, but the room was locked.

The key hidden above the doorframe was a secret to most, but for Xiaoxiao, who wandered about the Haunted House daily, she must have been privy to it. If anything, Xiaoxiao probably knew more about the Haunted House than Chen Ge by then.

Chen Ge pulled Xiaoxiao up by her leg and shook her twice in the air. A copper key then fell from her pocket.

“Are you trying to be the Haunted House’s manager?” Chen Ge did not know to laugh or cry. He placed Xiaoxiao beside the white cat and returned the key to on the door frame. Standing in the cold corridor, Chen Ge felt the breakroom was weirdly bright and warm.

Xiaoxiao lay beside the white cat on the table. The cat gave her a cold shoulder, but it did not push Xiaoxiao aside. It lay lazily on the table and did not seem like anything was going to affect it.

Looking at this, Chen Ge’s lips curved upwards. I used to stay here alone, but it has gotten quite rowdy now.

After closing the door, Chen Ge sat on the chair. He took out the black phone and started to inspect his daily missions. The three missions were respectively to hire more workers, perform safety inspection, and install a sturdy door for the Mu Yang High School scenario.

All the missions are imminent problems that the Haunted House needs to solve. Chen Ge updated the Haunted House’s information on the internet by introducing the new scenario and adding in the information of the reward money. After that, Chen Ge posted a recruitment post online. There was only one demand—the person had to be brave.

I must be picky with the recruitment. If Uncle Xu continues to help me sell ticket, we can still barely manage to get by, so this can be delayed for now. But as the Haunted House grows bigger, the issue of security cannot be ignored; I should pick the security option as my daily mission.

Chen Ge stood up again. He checked all the safety hazards in the Haunted House and came up with new rules, but the black phone did not say that he was done.

What's the problem? I've checked all the scenarios, why isn't the mission completed yet? Chen Ge stood there with the black phone. He might need to conduct a three-star Trial Mission tomorrow, so he needed time to prepare. He had no time to waste on a daily mission.

Wait, could it be the mirror in the bathroom?

Chapter 148 - Nine Patients, Ten Rooms

Chapter 148: Nine Patients, Ten Rooms

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge pushed open the bathroom door. The mirror on the wall was covered up by a black cloth, and the cubicle door was sealed up.

The visitors come to visit during the day, but the blood door only appears at midnight.

...

Normally, these two parties should not interact, unless someone sneaks into the Haunted House at night and accidentally opens the cubicle door, like Zhang Peng.

Chen Ge removed the black cloth and stood before the window.

He had no clue about the blood world behind the mirror. He did not even know why the door appeared, much less the way to destroy it.

My parents once said that the door of the Third Sick Hall has been opened again. This means that it was originally closed. Maybe the Third Sick Hall will have clues to closing the door; perhaps the door in the mirror and the door of the Third Sick Hall are connected. Then this Trial Mission will that much more important to me.

Chen Ge waited until midnight, and as the second hand passed twelve, the blood door in the mirror appeared on time. In just that one minute, various weird noises came from behind the cubicle. Compared to before, it felt like more things had gathered around the door.

Perhaps when I return from the Third Sick Hall, this door will be permanently closed.

Chen Ge returned to the staff breakroom, but he could not sleep. He sat on the chair and wrote down a list of the things he needed to prepare for tomorrow's livestream. A cleaver that has tasted years of blood, a live cock, salt...

He worked on the list until 1:50 am. Chen Ge still did not feel sleepy.

Every few minutes he looked at his watch, and an indescribable anxiety was spreading through him.

It's still not too safe. The difficulty of the three-star Trial Mission should be multiple times harder than the two-star Mu Yang High School.

Furthermore, I'm going in alone; I have to be more prepared. Chen Ge inspected his life and suddenly his phone rang. Who is calling me at 2 am?

Chen Ge glanced at the caller ID and answered it immediately. "Doctor Gao? You're looking for me?"

"I'm so sorry to disturb you so late at night," Doctor Gao said politely before cutting straight to the point. "I've managed to get Wang Shenglong's medical history from his father, and when I cross-referenced it with our own patient's history, I discovered something weird."

"What is it?" Chen Ge sat up straighter. For Doctor Gao to call him so late at night, it had to be very serious.

"This Wang Shenglong is more dangerous than he appears. In fact, when he was very small, he was involved in a murder."

"A murder?" Chen Ge could not believe that the chubby kid could have been involved in something so sinister.

"Listen to me, this case is complicated." There was the sound of typing from the other end of the phone. "Wang Shenglong received his first treatment when he was six, and the hospital he received the treatment at was called Jiujiang Third Psychological Convalescence Centre. It was a private center. It was far from the city and has been closed five or six years ago."

"I've heard Wang Hailong mention this hospital before. At the time, they were poor, and the place was close to their old home, so they admitted Wang Shenglong there. But how is that related to the murder?" Chen Ge asked.

"When he was first admitted, Wang Shenglong, who was only six at the time, showcased extreme mood swings. Unable to control himself, he would attack the doctors and family members."

"No matter how unruly the six-year-old was, he couldn't harm an adult, right?"

“That was what I thought, but the files showed that in one of his crazed moments, he bit off the finger of a fellow patient who shared the same room. I have the picture.” Doctor Gao sent over the picture. The gruesome parts were not even censored. Chen Ge glanced at the file; it was a patient’s file. The diagnosis on Wang Shenglong was he was extremely dangerous, and the suggested treatment was quarantine and isolation.

“But that was only the beginning. To ensure the safety of other patients, the doctors quarantined the six years old Wang Shenglong into the third sealed building, and things only got worse from there.” Doctor Gao clicked on the screen. He selected the few pages that would not violate the patient’s privacy and sent them to Chen Ge. “In the second month after Wang Shenglong was moved into the quarantine hall, there was a harrowing murder. A nurse on duty was murdered, and after the police investigation, they confirmed that the murderer wasn’t a single person. It felt like all of the patients of the third hall had cooperated to commit this murder!”

“The patients collaborated to kill a nurse?” Doctor Gao was revealing information about the Third Sick Hall, and this was all inside information, so Chen Ge paid full attention. “Doctor Gao, can you tell me about this case in more detail?”

“That’s all I have. I’m a doctor not the police.”

“Then, can you find more information on the other patients in the Third Sick Hall?” Chen Ge wanted to know everything about the Third Sick Hall.

“Why would you want to know about that?”

“Just curious. Don’t worry, I will not leak the information to anyone else.” Chen Ge made a few more promises before Doctor Gao finally agreed.

“There were ten sick bays inside the Third Sick Hall, and there were nine patients. All of them were diagnosed to be extremely dangerous, so they were quarantined for specific treatment.

“The patient in room 1 was Wang Shenglong, diagnosed as suffering from Happy Puppet Syndrome or the Angelman Syndrome. The symptoms include constant smiles, spasms, loss of speech, and mental retardation. He was the youngest at the Third Sick Hall and deemed the least dangerous.

“The patient in room 2 was a woman, but the name is blacked out. There is no picture, and there was only an old patient’s list. She suffered from heavy depression caused by Dorian Gray Syndrome. Her symptoms include over-obsession with her personal image and over-reliance on make-up. She had undergone plenty of plastic surgery and was averse to the natural aging process. In fact, many female celebrities suffer from this.

“The third patient’s room was supposedly empty, and I can’t tell whether it housed a patient or not.”

Chen Ge was suddenly reminded of the note left by his parents. It had specifically pointed out the third room in the Third Sick Hall. “Having no records does not mean that it didn’t have a patient!”

“You have a point, but the patient’s room was arranged according to their danger level, so even if the room was occupied, the patient was not that dangerous. Perhaps this was a error by the hospital.” Doctor Gao paused to take a sip of his water before continuing.

“The patient in room 4 suffered from Phantom Limb Syndrome after losing his arm in an accident. After the amputation surgery, he felt the arm was still on his body and could sense pain and temperature through it.”

Chapter 149 - The Most Dangerous Patient

Chapter 149: The Most Dangerous Patient

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“The man living in Room 5 was called Xu Tong. He suffered from Fregoli Delusion Syndrome. He thought that all the people around him were disguised by a similar individual, and he lived in a made-up world.

“The patient of the Room 6 was called Han Bao’er. She was a midnight show type of host. There is no picture of her in the files, but her main doctor wrote down this sentence at the bottom of her patient’s record—Just how harsh must God be to have made a woman as beautiful as this?

...

“Han Bao’er only stayed at the place for two and a half months before she was taken away. She suffered from a rare disease called Body Dysmorphic Disorder. She had the tendency to exaggerate the imperfections on her body, and she could not accept the slightest flaw. When she was hospitalized, she once tried to chop off her fingers simply because the nails on both hands failed to be symmetrical.

“The name of the patient in Room 7 has been lost, but he suffered from Cotard’s Syndrome or the Walking Corpse Syndrome. He believed that he was already a dead man, telling the doctors that his organs had all decayed. He announced to whoever would listen that he had seen the real world and that the reality we are living in isn’t real at all.

“Room 8 had a reinforced steel door, and the patient inside was called Xiong Qing. This patient was once the doctor of the Third Sick Hall. It was believed that his mind snapped after dealing with too many tortured souls. He was diagnosed with Hemineglect when he was thirty. This type of patient fails to be aware of items to one side of space. When asked to draw the picture of a man, he would miss out the half of the arms and legs. When asked, he said this was the real perfect form.

“Technically, this disease was not serious, but Xiong Qing was a perfectionist, so when he saw patients with a full set of limbs, he could not control himself from wanting to fix it.

“The patient in Room 9 was called Wu Fei. There was not a clear diagnosis on this patient even when the hospital closed down. Some of the doctors thought that he suffer from Asperger’s because he had exceptional memory and superhuman intelligence. Normally, he would not converse with others—perhaps he thought that everyone around him, including his doctor, was too much of a dummy to communicate with.

“During treatment, he confessed to have done many crazy things, and some of them had involved the police, but after investigation, most of them were faked, and for the real cases, the real murderer had been caught and sentenced; they had nothing to do with Wu Fei. Wu Fei had not hurt anyone when he was hospitalized, but the hospital still decided to lock him in Room 9. This was something the hospital and the police decided on after much discussion.

“According to how the hospital kept their patients, the patient in Room 10 should have been the most dangerous, but the patient is not named. I’ve looked through all the patient’s records, and the space for name was only filled with a 10. The doctors never mentioned him by name, and they often referred to him as the Devil.

“This patient suffered from Lesch-Nyhan Syndrome or Juvenile Gout. When he acted up, he would use all sorts of equipment available to ruin his own face. His perception of reality was different from normal, and he had a highly destructive tendency. Patient 10 spent most of his time tied to the bed. When he was out, he would be chained to the wheelchair with people looking after him.

“Actually, those with Lesch-Nyhan Syndrome rarely live beyond the age of twenty, so this Patient 10 is probably dead now.”

Doctor Gao listed the information on all the nine patients, and Chen Ge used a pen to jot everything all down. Looking at the recorded information, Chen Ge felt a chill up his spine. “Doctor Gao, do you know what happened to these nine people after they got transferred out of the Third Sick Hall?”

“Other than Wang Shenglong, Xu Tong, and Han Bao’er, who had records from other hospitals, the rest of them seemed to have disappeared.”

“Then do you have ways to contact the three of them?” Chen Ge wanted to know more about the Third Sick Hall before starting the livestream.

“The contact numbers on the files are mostly useless now, so even if I give them you, it’ll be pointless,” Doctor Gao rejected Chen Ge tactfully. “I’m calling you so late at night mainly to tell you that Wang Shenglong might be very dangerous. Mental patients morph into a different person when they act up. Do not purposely go and provoke them. If you are hurt, the law will not be on your side because these people are mentally unhealthy.”

What Doctor Gao meant was simple. After Chen Ge fell down, he had noticed the carpet was flat, so he suspected that Chen Ge did not trip and fall but was pushed by an outside force. He had made this midnight call to warn him of the possible dangers.

“I understand. I’ll be more careful.” Chen Ge thought about it before adding, “Doctor Gao, if you find out any more information about the Third Sick Hall, please tell me. I’m very interested in that hospital.”

“Your hobby sure is unique. Alright then, rest well. I will inform you when I come up with a new development.”

After hanging up, Chen Ge arranged the pieces of paper on the table, his brain mulling over the nine patients. Ten rooms but nine patients, why? If the rooms are arranged according to their danger level, why did the hospital keep Room 3 empty? Has the room been empty from the very beginning, or was the room left empty for a patient who died in it?

Chen Ge did not know when he fell asleep, but when he woke up, it was already morning. Looking at his watch, he saw it was 6 am. He washed his face, exited the Haunted House, jumped on his bicycle, and headed for the nearest morning market.

The market was already busy even though the day was just starting. Chen Ge was quite conspicuous amid the crowd of middle-aged aunties and uncles. He first went to buy a live cock and then went to the stall that sold pork. He stood beside the stall with his eyes open wide.

When the proprietor was finally free, he moved forward. The proprietor was a man about forty. He had noticed Chen Ge a long time ago. “What do you want?”

When Chen Ge named his request, he felt weirdly embarrassed. “I want to buy your cleaver.”

“You want to buy my cleaver?” The man’s face fell, thinking that Chen Ge was ridiculing him.

“I’m serious.” Chen Ge placed the money on the counter. “Give me a price.”

After a long explanation, the man finally understood why Chen Ge wanted his cleaver and laughed. “It’s not that I don’t want to sell you this, but nowadays, we have special machine to put the pigs down. You’ll need to go to a butcher to find the kind of cleaver you’re looking for.”

Chapter 150 - The Second Lucky Draw

Chapter 150: The Second Lucky Draw

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The middle-aged man also did not know how to respond. He had managed his stall for half his life already, and this was the first time he had come across such a request. “If you have nothing else, go. I don’t sell the kind of cleaver you want.”

“Then, can you sell me the cleaver you normally use?” Chen Ge was determined. Before the livestream, he had to obtain a cleaver regardless of whether it turned out to be useful or not.

...

“How am I going to operate this stall if I sell you my cleaver?” The middle-aged man just finished when a young man with dyed hair pushed through the crowd. He looked about nineteen, and his jacket was tied around his waist as he yawned. When the young man appeared, the middle-aged man slammed the cleaver on the cutting board. He wiped his hands on his apron and walked toward the young man. “You still know your way back home? Where were you last night?”

“Karaoke with a few friends, then the internet café.” The young man put on his earphones like he was trying to tune the man out.

“Then, why didn’t you answer your phone?” Years of chopping pork meant that the middle-aged man was much more muscular than the young man. He yanked the earphones out directly. “I’m talking to you!”

The young man used his hands to cover up his ears instead. He stood before the middle-aged man and said nothing.

“Have you gone mute? I’m asking you why you didn’t come home yesterday night! Didn’t even answer your phone, what were you thinking?” The middle-aged man was loud, and the customers even started to persuade him. The young man glared at the middle-aged man before finding an opening to grab the earphones and run out the market.

“Come back here!” The middle-aged man could not chase after him since he had a business to run. He picked up the cleaver and cleaved a bone in half angrily. Looking at how angry he was, Chen Ge very understandably took back his money and left with the chicken.

After leaving the market, Chen Ge was looking for his bicycle when he was approached by the young man from earlier. “I hear you’re looking for a cleaver?”

“Yes, but not a new one. I need one that had been used for a long time already.”

“I have one at home. Follow me, but don’t let my father spot us.” The young man led Chen Ge to a building near the market. He asked Chen Ge to wait him outside and soon came out with an object wrapped in red cloth.

“My grandfather was a butcher, and he planned to carry this knife with him to the grave, saying he was not going to let his children do the same job as he did. However, my stubborn dad insisted on keeping the cleaver. From then on, bad luck has followed us. He lost his business, and my mother passed away. In the end, he had to sell pork at the market to make ends meet.” The young man gave Chen Ge the cleaver. “The cleaver is cursed, so I’m not going to ask for much. A hundred, and it’s yours.”

Chen Ge was intrigued by what the young man said. He pulled the red cloth back and took a close look at the cleaver. His Yin Yang Vision twitched like his eyes were pricked by needles. They only recovered several seconds later.

The red cloth wrapped around a forty-centimeter-long single blade. Perhaps because it had tasted too much fresh blood, the blade was a dark red color. There were grooves running down the blade, and the wooden handle looked like blood veins with lingering red lines.

Chen Ge tried the cleaver, and it was heavier than expected. “This cleaver sure is unusual.”

The blade was no longer sharp, but the air around it had not changed.

“When I was small, I saw my grandfather enter the pig sty with this cleaver, and none of the pigs dared make a sound.” The young man looked at the red cloth and extended his hand toward Chen Ge. “If you’re satisfied, pay up.”

“Not bad, this is the kind of cleaver I’m looking for.” Chen Ge passed the young man a hundred and left the young man his phone. “If your father asks about the cleaver, tell him to call me.”

“What does this have to do with him?” the young man asked emotionlessly and entered the room with the money.

“Your father is quick with his words and temper, but it must be difficult on him as well. Based on my knowledge, there are no butchers near Jiujiang. To ensure fresh stock, he has to wake up every day at 3 am to get the ingredients from outside of Jiujiang or he might miss the opening of the morning market.”

...

With the chicken and cleaver, Chen Ge returned to New Century Park. He still had some time, so Chen Ge looked at the list he had prepared the previous night.

A live cock, a cleaver, and salt... I have those already. The three-star mission will be dangerous. If I cannot return safely, all this is pointless. Chen Ge tried to bring as many trump cards as he could. He took out his black phone and scrolled to the very bottom. His eyes landing on the Wheel of Misfortune.

Honestly, he was scarred by this specific feature on the black phone. When I finished the expansion mission, I earned a lucky draw chance. The Haunted House has been in business for a while already, and I have collected enough screams to trade for another lucky draw chance. I won't be so unlucky as to get a Baleful Specter twice, right?

Chen Ge had always stayed away from this kind of game, which depended fully on lucky. If not for the pressure from a three-star mission, he probably would have continued to ignore this function on the black phone.

Two chances, perhaps I might really get something that'll save my life. Chen Ge's finger tapped on the screen, and the wheel started to spin. As the wheel spun, Chen Ge clasped his hands together. Please, not another Baleful Specter!

“Ding!” The needle finally stopped. “Congratulations for winning a unique item—The White Valentine’s Candy (Seven percent chance of this appearing when Zhang Ya’s affection level has reached ‘Crazy about you’).”

“Sincerity, Purity, Clarity, Romance. When you receive this present, your relationship will advance to the next level.

“White Valentine’s Candy: The sweet taste dances on your tongue. When you finish the candy, Zhang Ya will appear.

“You have received the present Zhang Ya was unable to gift when she was still alive. Zhang Ya’s affection toward you has increased slightly.”

Chen Ge had a bad feeling in his heart. He sat on the steps. I’ve received the present Zhang Ya was unable to gift when she was still alive. Goodness, this sounds so weird.

A draft blew against Chen Ge’s neck, and he turned back to see a candy package was sitting behind him. The design of the bag was similar to the one Chen Ge had found in the dance studio at Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy. He opened it, and there was one piece of white candy inside. Weirdly enough, the candy had the face of a crying girl on it.

This face looks like one of Zhang Ya’s roommates. Don’t tell me she has made one of her roommates into candy!

Putting the candy back into the bag, Chen Ge felt like he needed to evaluate his situation. Even though I didn’t get a Baleful Specter, it is still related to one. Is it because I’m close to the Haunted House that I keep getting this weird stuff?

He patted the dust on his body as he stood up. He washed his face, placed the chicken in the room, and then left New Century Park on the bicycle.

According to the introduction on the black phone, there are many kinds of rewards I can get from the lucky draw. In terms of probability, it’s about time I get something good. Chen Ge stood before the rising sun and tapped on the screen. The wheel turned rapidly and stopped after a few seconds.

What is it? The sun fell on Chen Ge, gilding him.

“Congratulations for winning a rare item—The Crying Tape (Three percent chance of winning!).

“When he played the tape for the first time, he realized that something was wrong. The empty tape was filled with white noise that could not be erased. He tried every method to remove the white noise, and he heard the sound he made before he died.

“Lucky Specter’s Favored, you have won another Rare Baleful Specter!

“Note: After winning five Baleful Specters, the title of Specter’s Favored will be upgraded!”

...

Chen Ge sat on the roadside with a cigarette dangling on his lips. Looking at New Century Park, which was 3,000 meters away, he sighed. “I shouldn’t have wasted my energy to come so far.”

Chapter 151 - A Certain Death!

Chapter 151: A Certain Death!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge stood up after finishing the cigarettes. Does anyone even listen to cassette tapes these day? Where am I going to find a player?

After much difficulty, Chen Ge finally had reached a stable relationship with Zhang Ya, but now he had another one to deal with. Chen Ge really did not expect that he would one day be troubled by being too popular.

...

The Haunted House is big enough for the brother inside the tape as long as he doesn't create trouble. Chen Ge noticed a detail provided by the black phone. The chance of drawing the crying tape was three percent while the chance of drawing the cursed love letter had been 0.3 percent. According to that probability, the specter inside the tape should not be more powerful than Zhang Ya. His strength was probably between a normal Baleful Specter and a Red Specter.

Weaker is not so bad—easier for me to come to a negotiation with him.

After all, Chen Ge was rather alarmed by Baleful Specter that had their own personal page like Zhang Ya. Pushing the bicycle back to New Century Park, some visitors had already arrived. Uncle Xu and Xu Wan were already standing in front of the Haunted House.

“Chen Ge, where have you been so early in the morning? And why are there chicken feathers stuck to your clothes?”

The number of visitors was not that high, and Uncle Xu was considered half a Haunted House worker now. When he was free, he would stand outside the Haunted House to sell tickets.

“A morning joke.” Chen Ge dusted the chicken feather off naturally and opened the gate to prepare for business. That morning, Chen Ge kept spacing out, the messages from before crowing his mind. He was walking in the mist, and he could see an opening before him, but he was unable to tell whether it led to the exit or to the maw of a monster. At 4:30 pm, Chen Ge gave Xu Wan an early leave. He closed the gate and entered the staff breakroom.

It's time to start the preparation. He placed his backpack on the table and shoved the mallet, the cleaver wrapped in red cloth, packets of salt, a lighter, and a flashlight into it. Six packs of salt should be enough.

Chen Ge then took out another large bag. He planned to bring the white cat and Xiaoxiao with him.

Let me see what else I'm missing.

Opening the drawer, Chen Ge saw the cassette tape sitting inside. It did not have any markings other than an irregular bloody handprint like someone had gripped it with a bloody hand.

Such an item that has already been lost in time has appeared in the Haunted House's drawer.

Naturally this was the black phone's doing. Chen Ge did not know much about the tape, and since he was afraid that the thing inside might ruin the Haunted House when he was not around, he dropped the tape inside his bag as well.

That's all, I suppose. Chen Ge found Xiaoxiao and the jacket with the kittens' odor and placed them inside the bag. He negotiated with the cat for a long time before it jumped unwillingly into the bag.

Stay here for a moment, I'll be right back. Chen Ge walked into the props room and saw Doctor Skull-cracker's hammer lying in the corner. This thing has a certain presence to it, maybe I'll be able to use it.

To fit the hammer inside his backpack, Chen Ge had to remove the mallet and three packs of salt.

The salt might not be useful, so there's no reason for me to bring so many. The multi-purpose mallet, though, has helped me a lot, so I have to bring this with me.

However, there was indeed no space, so Chen Ge tied to the mallet to the outside of the backpack.

Including the black suitcase with various livestream equipment, the table before Chen Ge was full. It still feels like I'm missing something.

Chen Ge thought about it, exited the staff breakroom, and entered the Mu Yang High School scenario. For this three-star Trial Mission, he could not be too prepared. He entered the female dormitory and picked up the broken ballpoint pen. “Pen Spirit, I want to use today’s fortune-telling chance, please help me answer a question.”

Chen Ge started playing the Pen Spirit game. “Will you tell me what kind of danger I will run into at the Third Sick Hall?”

The pen quivered lightly, and after a long time, the pen started writing. “A certain death!”

As if to stress, the Pen Spirit used extra emphasis, and the pen almost tore through the paper.

“A certain death?” Looking at Pen Spirit’s answer, Chen Ge’s face fell. “Pen Spirit, I asked about the type of danger, why are you giving me this answer?”

Ahead of his departure, his confidence was already wavering. The Pen Spirit did not answer. Chen Ge’s brows creased heavily. “Hopefully you’re wrong, or it’s over for all of us.”

Then, he planned to shove the pen inside his pocket. After all, as a part of the Haunted House, how could the Pen Spirit sit this one out?

The Pen Spirit did not expect things would develop like this. Just as Chen Ge’s arm was leaving the paper, it quickly scribbled the earlier answer out.

There’s still a fighting chance?

Chen Ge was full of anticipation, but the Pen Spirit wrote another line down. “Don’t bring me with you!”

“Don’t bring you?” Chen Ge pocketed the pen and waltzed out of Mu Yang High School.

Everything is ready; it’s time to go! Chen Ge took out the black phone. After completing three Nightmare Missions, he had the chance to unlock a Trial Mission.

“Congratulations, Specter’s Favored, you have unlocked the Trial Mission for the Third Sick Hall!

“The Third Sick Hall (Three Stars Scream Factor): This abandoned hospital makes strange noises at night, and you’ll need to find out why.

“Mission Venue: The quarantine sector of Jiujiang Third Psychological Convalescence Centre.

“Mission Requirement: Arrive at the Third Sick Hall before midnight and survive until dawn.

“Mission Hint: The antonym of good is evil, and the antonym of right is wrong, so what is the antonym of human?

“Do you wish to accept this mission? Warning: Trial Missions are only available for twenty-four hours. If they are not accepted within these twenty-four hours, the scenario will never be unlocked.”

Chen Ge had made all the necessary preparations for this moment. He clicked on accept, and the interface changed. A clock appeared in the upper left-hand corner of the screen. If Chen Ge did not enter the Third Sick Hall before midnight, the Trial Mission would be considered a fail.

The Third Sick Hall... after I finish this mission, I should be able to find more clues about my parents. Chen Ge left the park with all the bags and called Liu Dao. Liu Dao told Chen Ge to wait for him at the park, and he would personally fetch him.

When Liu Dao saw Chen Ge, he also received quite a shock. However, the man very cleverly did not ask for more details. He started the car and drove Chen Ge to Jiujiang Third Psychological Convalescence Centre.

“Qin Guang’s livestream starts at 10 pm. The response to his previous livestream was positive, so the platform gave him its full support again. We have tried our best and have sacrificed the posts of two hosts to gain a not-so-bad channel and recommendation for you. Please do your best tonight.”

Chapter 152 - A Unique Charm

Chapter 152: A Unique Charm

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

At 7 pm, after taking two wrong turns, Liu Dao and Chen Ge finally arrived at their destination.

“Come on, I’ll introduce you to the other workers of our studio.” Liu Dao parked the car and walked into the nearby brush.

...

“We’re at the outskirts of the Jiujiang district, yes?” Chen Ge inspected the content of his backpack before getting out from the car. The road was filled with holes from lack of maintenance, and there was a small mound of rocks in the way like someone was purposely blocking up the road. The trees that lined the road were tall and lush, probably planted decades ago.

The canopy blocked out the moonlight completely, and after entering the brush, it was as dark as night. Chen Ge turned on the flashlight and followed behind Liu Dao. They had been trekking for ten minutes already, and they were still trapped among the trees.

“Brother, are we lost?” Chen Ge looked around him, and there was no trace of any human activity.

“Don’t fret, don’t fret.” Liu Dao made a call before turning down a small lane. “This area is very complicated. There’s nothing for us to refer to, so it’s very easy to get lost. You’re entering the mental hospital alone, so be careful. I advise you to mark some trees as you move toward the building.”

After a few more minutes of walking, Liu Dao and Chen Ge finally exited the brush. A large tent appeared before their eyes.

“This is the only open ground nearby and the place with the best signal.” When they spotted Liu Dao, the people inside the tent walked over.

“Brother Liu, where have you been? You know we are lacking in manpower; are you trying to work Sister Lee and myself to our death?" a young man who had a crew-cut and the head the shape of a pot lid grumbled. He looked about twenty and was forward with his words.

"Why did we let him go fetch the person knowing he's horrible with directions?" Sister Lee asked. Her skin was rough, and she was more muscular than most men.

To diffuse the awkward situation, Liu Dao dragged Chen Ge over. "This is the host who will be livestreaming inside the Third Sick Hall alone—Chen Ge. There's still some time before the livestream. You can teach him how to use the livestreaming equipment and camera techniques."

"This is Chen Ge?" Sister Lee pushed Liu Dao aside and started studying Chen Ge alongside the teen. When they saw Chen Ge's get-up, there was a flash of confused shock in their eyes. Isn't he going to do a supernatural livestream? Why did he bring a chicken with him?

They wanted to mock him, but since this was their first meeting, they held their tongues.

"I'm Zhang Pin, and this is Sister Lee. We'll be responsible for helping you relay your livestream." The teen led Chen Ge into the tent. There was plenty of equipment inside. He taught Chen Ge how to use it all and then had Chen Ge open the black suitcase. He explained each piece of equipment's usage one by one.

Outside the tent, Sister Lee whispered, "Ol' Liu, you sure this kid can work? We have sacrificed the slot of two hosts with 100,000 viewers to earn a level two platform recommendation. The platform is afraid of earning Qin Guang's ire and purposely making this difficult for us."

Liu Dao lit a cigarette. The platform's recommendation could be delineated into five levels; one was the best, and five the worst. The highest they could wrangle for a newbie was a level two.

"He only has a level two recommendation while Qin Guang has three level one recommendations and a featured ad on the front page. It's obvious who will lose." Sister Lee did not have confidence in Chen Ge, and that feeling only heightened after seeing Chen Ge in person. To be a famous host, one either had to have unnaturally good looks or immense charisma. Chen Ge seemed to have neither. He was just a normal guy, going about his life normally. He was not over the top but calm and collected. Compared to a host, he felt more like a doctor.

“You’re only seeing his surface. If you chat with him, you’ll realize this person has a unique charm to him. His understanding of fear is different than most.” Liu Dao was reminded of his first interaction with Chen Ge. He was led throughout the conversation, and his mind screamed, Crazy person alert!

Later, he reflected on it and realized that it was because their thinking was not on the same level.

“It’s not that I look down on him, but we have invested too much on him.” Sister Lee sighed. “Also, the fact that we’ve helped him gain a recommendation will definitely get Qin Guang to target us. Now that the platform is pushing Qin Guang as their featured host, when Qin Guang’s power is solidified, it’ll be hell for other hosts from our studio.”

Liu Dao hushed Sister Lee so that their conversation was not overheard. “Have some faith in Chen Ge! To be honest, both of Qin Guang’s previous livestreams were copies, and this man before us is the real deal.”

“But he has no script, props, or actors. This kind of dull livestream will get viewers?”

“I’m not going to argue with you. In any case, do your work and make sure that there are no technical problems tonight.” Liu Dao composed himself and entered the tent. He greeted Chen Ge and took out his laptop. He opened the bookmarked website and said, “Chen Ge, come and take a look at this.”

Chen Ge thought it was going to be a script, but it was actually a news article.

“Writing scripts will be easily exposed, and it’ll seem fake, so we’ll leave it to you how you want to go about the plot.” Liu Dao pointed at the news. “But here is some inspiration. These are three things that are most discussed online about the mental hospital. The first is the missing hospital director; his existence remains unconfirmed to this day, and no one knows whether he is still alive or dead. The second are the weird noises that reverberate through the buildings every midnight. The third is the appearance of the bloody words that seem to appear out of nowhere. Some people swore they have seen them appear at night, but as dawn arrived, the words disappeared. Focus on these three things, and the effect should be good.”

Chen Ge nodded. After reading the articles in detail, he had a better understanding of the mental hospital.

“Let’s take a break for dinner first. Then we’ll discuss some of the details.” Sister Lee took out a few rice boxes from an insulated cabinet and passed them around. At 9:30 pm, Liu Dao went out to make a call. When he returned, he told Chen Ge that it was time to start.

Zhang Ping took out the equipment from the black suitcase, and Chen Ge was making his final preparations. He opened the bag, and with the crowd watching curiously, he snatched the jacket away from the cat and put it on.

The jacket had the smell of the kitchen, so only by wearing this jacket would the white cat follow him into the mental hospital.

“Why are you looking at me like that?” Chen Ge stuffed a ragdoll inside the jacket’s pocket and released the white cat. “Isn’t it normal for a supernatural livestream to have a cock, a doll, and a white cat?”

Chapter 153 - Jiujiang Third Psychological Convalescence Centre

Chapter 153: Jiujiang Third Psychological Convalescence Centre

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The people from Liu Dao's studio were speechless because this was a question they had not faced in their life before. In the end, it was Liu Dao who walked over to say, "You have to be careful tonight. Safety first. We took a look around the mental hospital when the sun was still up."

"You've been inside the place? What did you find?" The way Chen Ge focused on Liu Dao made him feel uncomfortable.

...

"We just took a stroll outside and didn't dare go in. But I've downloaded a map of the mental hospital for you. According to the rumors, it was drawn by one of its patients." Liu Dao opened a file on his laptop, and it showed a very rough map. "There are three buildings inside the hospital, and they are interconnected.

"The first and second sick halls housed normal patients, and the entrance and windows faced the sun. The third sick hall is a bit more mysterious; it was the quarantine hall. It housed the more dangerous patients, and its door and windows faced away from the sun.

"You have to be exceptionally careful when you are inside this third hall. According to the description of the artist who drew the map, the third hall was forbidden for normal patients, and whenever a normal patient was discovered to be near the place, they would be given a horrible punishment.

"Therefore, I suggest you skip the third hall tonight. If you take it slow, the first two halls should provide us with enough content already."

Liu Dao pushed the screen toward Chen Ge to make him memorize the map.

"Is this Third Sick Hall that special? Did you manage to find more details about it online?” Chen Ge’s expression was serious.

“Not much, and some sounded made-up. Some said that the patients in there had killed a doctor, and the incident was exposed only after a few days. Some even said that the place did not house normal humans but strange creatures.” Liu Dao laughed. “It has to be made-up, right?”

Closing the laptop, everyone there noticed the change in Chen Ge’s presence. He seemed to be greatly worried about something.

“Check the camera, we do not have much time left.” Chen Ge carried his backpack and equipped the chest camera, wrist camera, and audio recorder. After testing all of them, he headed out of the tent.

“If it becomes too dangerous, just turn back and run. Remember to mark your way as you head toward the place and set my phone number as your emergency call,” Liu Dao shouted from behind Chen Ge. “I will call you one minute before the start of the livestream. You’ll be able to see the situation inside your livestream room. Lastly, no one has been to that place in a long time, so I cannot guarantee what you’ll find inside. Be careful!”

Chen Ge did not expect that the man would be so worried about him. He stopped at the entrance to the tent and set Liu Dao’s phone as his emergency call before everyone. He waved and said, “Remember to stay inside the tent. Do not wander off, and don’t come to find me no matter what you see or hear. Understand?”

“But if...”

“Take care of the equipment and leave the content to me.” The man and the cat disappeared into the darkness.

Watching Chen Ge walk away, Sister Lee, who was dubious of him, had her arms crossed before her chest. She said under her breath, “This kid, at least his back is kinda handsome.”

Chen Ge was more nervous than anyone before entering an actual three-star scenario. He understood how dangerous this place was and knew how real those stories that Liu Dao thought were made-up were. The patient did not make up those things; perhaps it was because he could see things that normal people could not, and that was why he was treated as a patient.

Following the memorized map, Chen Ge reached the end of the brush, and an old building appeared before his eyes.

“This mental hospital occupies a large area.” Initially, when Chen Ge heard it was a private hospital, he had thought that the environment would be horrid and would not be big enough to fit many patients, but when he was there in person, he realized how wrong he was.

The hospital was surrounded by thick brush, and there was only one entrance. It was sealed, and thanks to the tall cement walls, Chen Ge temporarily could not see anything more than that. When he got close, Chen Ge noticed something that unsettled him.

The hospital’s cement walls were filled with many senseless sentences, but they shared a similarity—they all mentioned someone’s name. When Chen Ge saw this for the first time, he tried to memorize the names, but there were simply too many sentences and too many names. Some even repeated, so in the end, he gave up.

Are these names of the patients at the hospital?

He could not understand the meaning of those sentences, but he did think that they are very weird.

These sentences definitely weren’t written by a normal person. What is it that they are trying to communicate?

Looking at the walls, Chen Ge felt weirdly anxious, like the sentences were curses directed at him. “White Tiger, don’t stray too far from me.”

Now that they were alone, Chen Ge did not feel that shameless about referring to the cat by that name. When they got close to the hospital, the white cat showed obvious hostility. This cat, which was sensitive to those things, had felt something.

“Don’t worry, we also have our trump cards.” Chen Ge raised the chicken, which was tied by the claws, and took out the mallet. He did not rush in but waited patiently for Liu Dao’s call.

“The equipment is working well; the picture is clear and stable. We’ve started the livestream. You can check it out on your own phone.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge logged into the platform, and the first thing he saw was the ad for Qin Guang’s livestream. He clicked on it. Qin Guang and his team had a little accident outside of Mu Yang High School. It sounded like the equipment car had driven into a ditch. Qin Guang was making a personal apology on the livestream. He said that the driver saw something collapse on top of the windscreen, and he lost his focus.

This bunch of people really did go to Mu Yang High School. Looks like he didn't heed my advice. Then again, even this apology video has about 400,000 views. He cannot be underestimated.

Chen Ge then entered his own livestream room. Thanks to the platform's recommendation, the number of viewers had climbed up to 250,000 people in a short amount of time.

The video was split into different screens. The largest one was the footage from his chest camera. It had the highest definition. There was a smaller video in the bottom left corner, which corresponded to the camera on his wrist. Like a watch, the angle could be monitored freely, and by raising his arm, he could see his own body on the video.

It's 10 pm. Time to start.

He pointed the camera on his wrist at himself and looked at the chatlog that continued to roll. "I didn't expect that I'd be doing something so crazy tonight."

After patting his backpack and helping the cat onto the wall, Chen Ge climbed over the wall into Jiujiang Third Psychological Convalescence Centre.

Chapter 154 - Dog Cage?

Chapter 154: Dog Cage?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“A mental hospital and normal hospital offer different kinds of treatment, and there is a bigger stigma toward the former. Normally, people unconsciously skirt around them,” Chen Ge said to the camera. “No one can refute that. After all, no matter the argument, the people who are treated here are different from us, but sometimes, it is hard to tell whether they are wrong or whether it is us who are not that normal.”

Chen Ge’s started to focus when his feet landed on the ground. “This hospital before me is the place where many horrific rumors took place. When the day went quiet, weird screams could be heard coming from the hospital. Words written in blood would appear on the walls of the corridors where no live people still tread. The director has disappeared without a trace, and some suspected he is still hiding in a dark corner of this hospital.”

...

Chen Ge glanced at the chat log, and most of the viewers did not buy what he said; some even made a direct comparison of his livestream to Qin Guang’s.

“Supernatural livestream, yet another actor trying to lie to us.”

“Even through the screen, I can already tell your future. Some hosts are only mention such stories to survive in our memory.”

“I can understand what you’ve said, but do you mind telling me why there is a chicken in your hand? Are you trying to combine a supernatural show with a cooking show? Is this some new direction?”

“Visiting a mental hospital at night? Based on that, you got my like!”

The viewers were chatting and joking; there was a noticeable lack of fear.

“A live cock will be able to defend against negative energy. Tonight, I'll let you experience the real sensation of fear. In fact, we took a two-hour drive before we managed to locate this hospital, aren't any of you afraid?" Chen Ge explained patiently, but the viewers still did not buy it.

"What is there to be afraid of? The last host who said that is now fixing his car."

"Wow! That is such a cute cat..."

This helped Chen Ge calm down. After chatting for a while longer with the viewers, he finally started exploring Jiujiang Third Psychological Convalescence Centre. The mental hospital spanned a large area, and the whole hospital was surrounded by a cement wall. There was a large courtyard probably for the patients to move around in, but after years of neglect, other than the few patches of cement, the other places were overgrown with weeds that reached up to the knees.

Chen Ge moved forward some more, and he finally saw the three buildings that were connected to each other. The buildings were arranged into the form of the character '品'. The second building was the one that protruded to the north, and all the buildings were connected with hallways.

"The first and second sick halls face the sun, and the one facing away from it should be the third sick hall. This is a weird design. Are there some patients that couldn't see the light in the third sick hall?"

From the layout of the place alone, this place gave him the creeps. There has to be a reason for this kind of design. Be it for the Trial Mission or to get the clues left behind by my parents, I'll need to enter the Third Sick Hall tonight.

Chen Ge walked forward, and the white cat followed behind him. The moon was full that night, and it colored the cement ground a milky white. Chen Ge took the steps that led him to the first sick hall. The entrance was made from steel. He tried to push it once, and it swung open easily.

"The lock is broken." The previous Trial Missions had given Chen Ge plenty of experience. He shone the light on the lock. "The spring has snapped; it was a forced entry."

Chen Ge looked down the dark corridor, and a question cropped up his mind. "Who busted the lock?"

Someone had returned after the hospital closed. Was it the patients or his own parents?

Director Luo had overheard his parents mention the Third Sick Hall before they disappeared, and the note left in the park did also point to this place, but how was this place special? Chen Ge had no idea.

Director Luo had heard them mention this place before they disappeared while the bloody note only appeared after his parents' disappearance. What happened to them at the Third Sick Hall?

Chen Ge pushed open the steel door wide. The corridor was filled with trash and abandoned beds. It gave one a glimpse into the past. The place had been crowded when it was still in operation, and many patients could only rest in the corridors.

Unlike certified hospitals, mental hospitals did not have that many specialized rooms. Along the crowded corridor were rooms of unknown usage. Chen Ge sniffed the air and could smell a stench in the air. This stench was familiar because he had once smelled it in Hai Ming Apartments; it was similar to the stench that stuck to Wang Shenglong.

"The negative feeling is already so strong even before I enter the place." This was also Chen Ge's first visit to a mental hospital. The rough map drawn by the patient was his only guidance.

"The design of the three sick halls should be similar. The danger level of the first sick hall should be the lowest. I should familiarize myself with the surroundings first before moving forward." He only took one step when the white cat jumped onto his shoulder. It seemed to want to communicate something to Chen Ge, but Chen Ge could not understand what.

"This is the first time the cat has willingly been so physically close to me. What has it sensed? Is this a sign of fear or something else entirely?"

As he walked down the hall, Chen Ge kept feeling like something was crunching underneath his footsteps. He lowered his head to look, and inside the cracked tiles were plenty of carcasses of unknown bugs. The hospital had not been used for year, so it could not be the effect of bug spray, so what killed these bugs?

All the doors to the room in the first sick hall were open, and the interior design in each room was almost identical. Other than some single beds in a cramped room, there was nothing else.

“Just how many patients did this hospital admit when it was still operating?” Chen Ge walked into one of the random rooms to feel it out. Four wooden beds filled up the already small room, and there was only a standing place left for Chen Ge to even turn around.

“Living in such a claustrophobic space day in and day out, even those who were normal would turn insane.” Chen Ge exited the room and soon reached the first junction. There was a place that looked like the nurse’s station. On top of the wooden counter, there were several empty pill bottles and cards with patients’ names on.

“Looks like the patients would need to come here to get their medicine daily.” Chen Ge looked into the station and found two things that should not have been there.

There were two iron-welded cages inside the station. They were not big, just large enough to fit a medium-sized dog.

“What are these two cages for?” Chen Ge jumped into the station, and when he shone the flashlight at the cages, he made a startling discovery. One of the cages had a half-cooked and half-feathered duck inside it.

“There’s no sign of decay, which means that the duck was recently put inside the cage.” Chen Ge gripped the mallet and leaned against the wall. “There are people inside this hospital other than myself.”

Chapter 155 - More Than One Person

Chapter 155: More Than One Person

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After exposure to open air over a certain period of time, cooked meat would harden. Chen Ge aimed the camera on his chest on the duck as he reached out to touch it. The surface was tender, and it had some warmth to it.

“This duck was cooked less than an hour ago.” He nudged his body as he pulled the duck out from the cage. “The innards weren’t properly cleaned, and the neck was snapped by brute force. The head is missing.”

...

Chen Ge examined the duck closely. There was a bite mark on the half-cooked meat, and the stomach had been torn open. There were no duck feathers on the floor, so it meant that the creature that tore the duck apart had eaten the feathers along with the meat.

“The iron cages are used to keep large dogs?” Placing the duck back, Chen Ge looked at the other end of the cage. Placed outside the cage were two plastic bowls, and they were both filled with a colorless liquid.

“Why are there two bowls placed inside the cage? This cage houses two dogs?” The bowls looked similar, and Chen Ge raised them to his nose to sniff. One of them had no smell; Chen Ge believed it was normal water. However, the liquid in the other bowl had a slightly pungent smell to it.

“Smells like rat poison.” To prevent rats from munching on the set pieces, Chen Ge had purchased rat poison before, so he was familiar with the smell.

“Two similar bowls, one filled with water, another mixed with rat poison. Isn’t the owner afraid that the pets might accidentally drink from the wrong bowl?” The scene before him was indeed weird. Chen Ge captured everything with the camera. He glanced at his phone, and the chatbox was updating fast. One of the comments flashed before his eyes—it mentioned in passing cage and page.

Chen Ge did not have the time to climb the wall of text. He checked the iron rods of the cage and realized that the exit of the cage was dyed with a large splattering of paint like someone had been gripping it tightly, unwilling to let go.

“Could it be that the cage is not for animals but humans?” Empty pill bottles littered the abandoned nurse station, and there were little bags with patients’ names written on them. Some of them still had weird looking pills inside. “Someone is living at this mental hospital that has been abandoned for five years, and there looks to be more than one person living here.”

Chen Ge became more careful. All the preparation he made was to deal with ghosts; he had not prepared to face dangerous occupants at the hospital. Chen Ge examined the walls on either side as he walked out from the nurse’s station.

The person in the iron cage was forcibly dragged away. Their hands were dirty with paint, so they had to have left some traces during the struggle. Chen Ge took a few steps and saw signs of the walls being clawed at, and the peeling paint was daubed with blood.

“Injured?” Chen Ge followed the trail up to the second floor. There, the corridor spilt into two: one led further into the first sick hall while the other connected to the second sick hall. As mentioned earlier, the three buildings were interconnected.

Chen Ge used twenty minutes to finish inspecting the first sick hall. There were not any hidden corners for people to hide in. He failed to find the person trapped in the cage and did not find any other evidence of people living there.

“Could the person have been dragged to the other sick hall?” Chen Ge was walking down the stairs when his phone vibrated. It was a call from Liu Dao.

“Yes?” Chen Ge was so tense that even the smallest interruption influenced him greatly.

“Chen Ge, you’re moving too fast! We plan to livestream throughout the night, and you have finished exploring the first sick hall in just twenty minutes. What are you going to do for the rest of the night?” Liu Dao had been following Chen Ge’s livestream. “Qin Guang’s livestream has broken 600,000 viewers, and you’re barely breaking 50000 viewers. Don't just focus on the exploration—try to communicate with the viewers.”

Chen Ge listened to Liu Dao as he wandered back down to the first floor. When he looked down the first-floor corridor, his pupils narrowed. “Wait, who closed the entrance? I remember leaving it open when I came in.”

“What did you say?” Liu Dao paused. “In any case, don't feel too much pressure. Be careful.”

“Okay, I'll talk to you later.” Chen Ge pocketed his phone and ran toward the entrance with his mallet raised. When he passed the nurse's station, he glanced into it out of habit. “Something has changed.”

However, since he was worried about the front door, Chen Ge did not jump into the nurse's station. He ran to the door and shook it with all his might. “F*ck! It's locked! When did that happen?”

Chen Ge looked through the gap and saw that there was a new lock on the door outside. He slammed into the door, but it remained unmoved.

“The speedy change of the lock means that this is not the first time the culprit has done this.”

There were people living in the abandoned hospital, and Chen Ge believed that it was the patients who had returned. They were not mentally retarded. If anything, from a certain perspective, they were cleverer and more dangerous than normal people. Chen Ge could not underestimate them.

He tried to pry the door open with the mallet, but it was to no avail. He walked into the rooms next to the front door, and the windows were sealed up with iron netting. At that moment, Chen Ge could understand the feeling of the patients who were sent into the mental hospital; this place felt like a giant jail.

Ask for help? Call the cops? Chen Ge looked at the phone, and the viewership was still climbing. If he left down, this livestream would be over. Furthermore, he had the Trial Mission to complete; he had to survive inside the Third Sick Hall until dawn. If he involved the police, that would also fail.

“I remember that there wasn't any netting on the second floor windows. That's an opening if I need to escape. Temporarily, there's no need to call the police." To complete this Trial Mission and find the clues to his missing parents, Chen Ge did not hold back.

Returning to the nurse's station, Chen Ge finally realized what had changed. The plastic bowls outside of the iron cage had been toppled, and the liquid had splashed all over the floor.

"They're worried that I might discover one of them is poisoned?" Chen Ge could not understand the meaning of this. When he was about to stand up, he noticed rows of small handwriting that was written under the wooden counter. To take a closer look, Chen Ge twisted around and leaned his head into the space under the counter. Before he got close enough, something touched the top of his head. It felt like little worms that were trying to burrow into his hair.

Chen Ge reached out to touch it, and he felt something touch the back of his hand. He turned his head around, and his heart skipped a beat.

Heavy strands of hair were taped to the bottom of the counter!

Some were long, and some were short, but it was unclear where they came from. "Why is there hair here? Did it belong to the person inside the cage?"

Suddenly, a cat's shrill purr could be heard from outside the nurse's station, and Chen Ge immediately crawled out from under the counter and looked out. The white cat was gnashing its teeth at the stairwell that led up to the second floor, its multi-colored eyes staring in a particular direction.

Chapter 156 - Who Is Following Me?

Chapter 156: Who Is Following Me?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Who’s there?” Chen Ge rushed down the corridor without a second thought with the mallet raised. He did not want to give the other party the chance to react.

“Come out!”

...

The front door was already locked, so his trail had been exposed. He had nothing else to lose.

The man and the cat ran to the corner of the stairwell, but it was complete darkness up the stairs; there was nothing there.

“Where has it disappeared to?” Chen Ge had tested the white cat at the Haunted House. It was sensitive to those things and had never made a mistake.

The white cat didn’t go berserk but only showed aggression, so that thing’s danger level should be lowered than Mu Yang High School.

The white cat had acted up twice inside Chen Ge’s Haunted House. The first was when it was inside Mu Yang High School scenario, and the other was when the blood door appeared in the toilet. According to the cat’s reaction, Chen Ge made a gauge of the danger threat.

But the key issue is, I have no idea whether that thing was human or ghost.

Returning to the nurse’s station, Chen Ge demolished the counter with the mallet and pried the whole counter board out. The thing that he saw was rather scary. Strands of hair that were tied together by string were nailed to the wooden board. “Why would someone nail hair to a wooden board? What is the meaning of this?”

All the strands were neatly tied up with string. One was soft, dark, and luscious; it probably belonged to a young woman who took care of her hair. The other was rough, white, and had split ends; it probably belonged to an elder. Chen Ge deduced that there were hair samples from four different individuals after comparing their color, quality, and length.

“Of these 4 people, at least one of them has to be alive.” Chen Ge looked at the two large iron cages, and their uses slowly came to him. “I’m dealing with actual crazies.”

He placed the wooden board aside and squatted down again. This time, he got a better view of the handwriting on the wall—I will repay everything that you have done to me.

The handwriting was small, and there were other senseless sentences. It felt like the person was interrupted mid-sentence and started to write nonsense.

“When some patients act up, they mumble something incoherent to the air, quite similar to how normal people would talk in their sleep.” Chen Ge tried to make sense of those words, but they were incomprehensible.

Reading the words sent a chill up his spine. They reminded him of the sentences written on the outer walls of the mental hospital. There was a mention of a name in each sentence, and they came from different handwriting, meaning they were probably written by different people. It was understandable if a few patients acted like this, but to have the whole hospital act this way...

“Looks like all the patients in this hospital have some unresolved business.” Chen Ge took out his phone to snap a picture of the words written under the nurse’s station. He then tied the cock to his backpack. “Then again, the greater the number of individuals, the greater the chance of them making a mistake. It’s time for me to move onto the second sick hall.”

Chen Ge jumped out of the station and took out a pack of salt from his bag. He tore open a small opening and left a line of salt around the nurse’s station. This was not to prevent bad luck but to lay a trap for the hidden madman. With salt in his hand, Chen Ge walked to the hallway that connected the first and second sick hall. When he was about to enter the second sick hall, the white cat suddenly jumped onto the window and scratched on the glass.

“Careful, you’re going to fall down.” Chen Ge stood beside the window. The hospital was surrounded by a thick brush, and there was light in sight.

“Who would have thought that such a building existed in the middle of nowhere?” Chen Ge did not notice anything weird, but the white cat refused to leave the window. It kept its head raised and kept meowing.

“Something wrong with the window? Above us?” Chen Ge opened the window and looked up. Just above him, at the window of the third floor, a twisted face was looking down at him. Facing away from the light, when the person heard the sound of Chen Ge’s window opening, he leaned back quickly and disappeared without even closing the window.

“That face...” Chen Ge also did not expect the enemy to suddenly appear above him. They had shared a look that was less than 0.1 seconds. He definitely did not get a good enough look, but he knew the face looked weird, different from normal, but he could not pinpoint what was weird about it.

Chen Ge stopped and focused on his hearing. He did not hear any footsteps, so he knew the person had not run in a certain direction. “I have a feeling that face is perhaps uneven on both sides, but it should be a person.”

Chen Ge entered the second sick hall. He had thought that the first and second sick hall were going to be the same, but when he entered the second sick hall, he realized that the layout was completely different. The second sick hall was larger and emptier than the first. There were no crowded beds, and between individual rooms, there were chairs, tables, and table lamps.

“The environment here is definitely better than the first sick hall.” Chen Ge dumped a handful of salt near the staircase before entering the first room that was closest to him. The mattress was torn open, and its innards were littered all over the place. The chamber pot was placed next to the eating utensils, and there were plenty of characters gouged out with fingernails left on the wall.

“It mustn’t have been easy for the doctors and nurses to take care of patients like this daily.” Chen Ge exited the room and continued to move forward.

The room types in the second sick hall were more varied than the first. There were specialized quarantine rooms, entertainment rooms, chess rooms, and shower rooms, and there was even a small hall with a stage at the end of the corridor, but the decoration inside was rather weird.

The hall was not used to host parties or balls. The windows were sealed shut and draped with extra thick curtains. All the decorations were either black or white, creating a weird style. Opening the door, before even stepping in, Chen Ge noticed the large black and white picture placed on the middle of the stage.

The picture was hanging on the wall, and it was sliced in half by an unknown culprit. However, from the remaining half, one could see that it was a middle-aged female nurse. She was of a large frame and had a scowl on her face.

“An enlarged black and white picture, thick curtains, rows of wooden chairs. Why is this place decorated like a mourning hall?” Chen Ge could not understand why such an event would occur at a mental hospital, and if the event was hosted by the hospital, what was the meaning of it?

“Could this female nurse have been a victim of the Third Sick Hall? But if that’s the case, why is her picture in the hall of the second sick hall?”

Chen Ge did not stop after memorizing the face of the female nurse. He closed the door, left a line of salt at the door, and ran up the stairs to the third floor.

Chapter 157 - Victims

Chapter 157: Victims

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

There was a stench in the air, and the closer Chen Ge got to the third sick hall, the more obvious the stench became. The hallway between the second and third sick hall was locked. A steel door separated the two sick halls.

Through the small gap in the door, Chen Ge could sort of see into the third sick hall. The tables and chairs were overturned, and a mess of mattresses littered the hallway. They were bloated up like they were covering something underneath.

...

Chen Ge stood beside the rusted steel door with his eyes locked on the keyhole.

“A double-sided lock?” Most mental hospitals used double-sided locks. In an emergency, the door could be locked from either side to prevent entry to seal up an entire area.

This was something inconspicuous, but it had garnered Chen Ge’s attention. He took out the key left behind by Wang Haiming from his pocket and tried it with the lock. Due to a lack of maintenance, the lock was rusted shut, and the key could barely fit.

“I knew it would be extremely lucky if it fitted.” After comparing the keyhole and the height of the key as well as the teeth, Chen Ge pocketed the key again. When he entered the hospital, he noticed that most rooms had single-sided lock, and their keyholes were small, too small for the key to fit in.

Wang Haiming brought the key out from the third sick hall, so the lock it fits should be inside the Third Sick Hall as well. If I dare make a speculation, there are nine patients living in the Third Sick Hall that has ten rooms, so could the missing patient from Room 3 be Wang Haiming?

Chen Ge could not confirm his speculation. Then again, Doctor Gao had searched through all the records, and there was nothing on Room

3. Just a Wang Haiming shouldn't be enough for the hospital to delete all the records.

The mystery at this hospital was deep. Chen Ge was not interested in what happened here five years ago; he merely wanted to find the clue left behind by his parents and the way to close the 'door'.

Chen Ge held the flashlight in his hands as he entered the third-floor corridor. He walked past the rooms carefully. "Could the person I saw earlier be hiding in one of these rooms?"

At the end of the long corridor, Chen Ge stopped at the door to a room with an unknown purpose. A heavy scent of mildew drifted out from behind the door, and the door looked different from other normal sickbays. There was also a brand-new lock that hung on the door.

"There is no rust on the lock. Similar to the lock that appeared on the first sick hall's front door, this is new." Chen Ge tried Wang Haiming's key, and it still did not fit. He turned back to look down the dark corridor. After making sure there was no one around, he raised the mallet and slammed it at the door.

"Thankfully, it's a wooden door. I wouldn't be able to get in if it was a steel door." As the door fell away, a heavy smell of mildew hit Chen Ge. The room was stuffed with patients' clothing and mattresses that formed a small hill.

"This appears to be the laundry room for the second sick hall." Chen Ge straightened up, and the camera on his chest recorded everything, including the words that left his lips. Due to the dangerous environment, he did not dare let his guard down to chat with the viewers. All he could do was vocalize everything he was thinking and seeing like a real life supernatural documentary.

The smell of mildew overwhelmed the stench that lingered at the sick hall itself. It made Chen Ge feel sticky and uncomfortable. Suppressing the discomfort, Chen Ge walked into the room.

The room was large. There were several laundry machines and special anti-bacterial machines lined up by the wall. Other than that, the room was occupied by dirty laundry and old mattresses.

"This room looks normal, so why is it locked?" Chen Ge focused his attention on the mountain of dirty laundry. Holding his breath as much as he could, he used the mallet to move the layers of cloth aside. "I have a feeling something is hiding underneath here."

Chen Ge increased his pace, and as he peeled off the stained clothes, the mallet hit something hard, and it created a metallic clink.

“An iron cage?” He moved the layer of mattress aside, and the sight that appeared caused his heart to skip a beat. There was a young woman whose head was shaved trapped inside an iron cage!

Her mouth was gagged with a dirty pillow case, and her hands were tied to the cage. Her mental condition was unstable, and she kept shaking her head at Chen Ge, waving her tied hands as her legs kicked outwards at the cage.

Chen Ge was stunned. He definitely did not expect to find a living person under the mountain of dirty laundry. The livestream exploded, and the chatlog went berserk. In fact, there were so many comments that the livestream itself had lagged.

Chen Ge took a quiet step back. Even then, he was calm. He closed the door and moved a laundry machine to block the door. He was afraid of being assaulted from behind. It was only after he blocked the door that he dared move close to the iron cage.

“Can you understand me?” When Chen Ge neared the cage, the woman started to resist. There was no way to communicate with her. “There are no wounds on her body and no oil stains on her lips. This woman isn’t the person who was moved from the first sick hall. Perhaps there are some other people here.”

Chen Ge rummaged through the other laundry, and the horrible stench hid 3 iron cages. The iron cages were arranged in the form of the character ‘品’, similar to how the three buildings at the mental hospital were arranged.

The woman was placed in the middle, and to the left of her was an old man about seventy. He was incredibly thin, and there were oily stains on his lips and fingers. To the right of the woman was a pale middle-aged man who appeared like he had not seen the sun for a long time. This man was the only one who looked at Chen Ge. His gaze was complicated, and it was filled with a mixture of excitement, disgust, and fear.

“Three victims?”

Things were greatly out of Chen Ge’s expectations. A thought appeared in his mind. He gripped the mallet and retreated to a safe distance from the three iron cages.

When one came across strangers in a dangerous situation, the safest method was to not believe what they said and try to not get too close to them because the real murderer might be hiding among them.

Chen Ge walked around them. The cages were small; they were definitely not designed for humans. With a living person, they could not even turn their body inside the cage.

“Three cages, but only the woman is gagged and tied up.” More questions surfaced. If they were all victims, why was only the woman, the weakest of them, apprehended in such a manner?

The old man had a blank expression, and the middle-aged man had a changing expression. Their limbs were not tied, but they also did not ask for help. They just sat quietly in the iron cages, looking at Chen Ge.

Comparing the explosive livestream, Chen Ge was calm. He stood before the three cages and asked, “How long have you been kept here?”

Chapter 158 - Two Bowls of Water

Chapter 158: Two Bowls of Water

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Hearing Chen Ge's question, the three people in the cage had different reactions. The old man kept licking his fingers silently like he was trying to recollect the pleasant taste of the food he had just eaten, whereas the young woman widened her eyes and struggled in the cage like a fish out of water. The middle-aged man had the most unusual reaction; he was the only one out of the three who kept his eyes on Chen Ge.

"Why are these three people kept at the mental hospital?" Chen Ge walked to the old man's cage first. Inside the cage sat two plastic bowls. The old man realized that someone had gotten close to him, but he did not show any sign of fear. He sat in the middle of the cage and continued to suck on the oil stains on his finger.

...

"The person who was transferred from the first sick hall is him." Try as he might, Chen Ge could not see anything particularly special about the old man. "His hair is growing unevenly. Someone has recently shaved him, and this clump of hair should be new."

Seeing that Chen Ge was reminded of the hairs that were nailed to the nurse's station. One of the strands had white hairs mixed in black hairs; they likely belonged to this old man before him.

"His hair is so long even after a shave. Looks like he has been trapped here for a long time already." When Chen Ge was comparing the hair samples, he had decided that they came from four different people, but there were only three before him. "One is still missing."

Chen Ge's eyes scanned the young woman before stopping on the middle-aged man. His hair was long and unkempt. "This person's head doesn't seem to have been shaved before."

Chen Ge became more careful. Shaving seemed to be the killer's weird habit. Perhaps it was a way of toying with his victim, but why would he let the middle-aged man be? Did the man know the killer, or was he the killer?

Chen Ge was shocked by his thought. In the hallway that connected the first and second sick hall, Chen Ge had caught a glimpse of an unfamiliar face; it had been an uneven face, a face that was twisted.

To be able to walk around the sick halls freely and follow Chen Ge, the twisted face should have been the killer, but there was now this suspicious, middle-aged man. It was possible that there was more than one crazed killer who liked to trap their victims.

Chen Ge gripped the mallet, and a worse scenario appeared in his mind. What if everyone in this mental hospital, other than me, is a killer?

Of course, the chance of that was low. He paused to think before stopping to look at the young man. Both of the men showed no sign of answering him, so Chen Ge tried to remove the gag from the young woman's mouth, hoping to get some information from her.

"Don't worry, I'm here to save you." Chen Ge tried the lock on the iron cage. Without a key, with just the mallet, he would need to work for who knew how long before he could release the three people.

The young woman seemed to have a natural fear toward living people. The moment Chen Ge got close, she started to mumble, shake her head and hands.

"Stay calm, I'm not going to hurt you." Chen Ge walked to stop before the young woman. When he was about to remove the gag from her, the middle-aged man, who had remained silent throughout, suddenly spoke.

"I advise you to keep her gag on; she is very noisy."

Turning around, Chen Ge was greeted with a pair of dark and fully guarded eyes. It was unknown whether the middle-aged man treated everyone like this or just Chen Ge. There was a natural disgust that radiated off the man, like the things Chen Ge was doing heavily repulsed him.

"She is very noisy?" Chen Ge was not afraid of talking to them. What he was afraid of was their refusal to communicate. As long as these people were willing to talk to him, he had a chance of getting useful information from them.

"Yes, very noisy," the middle-aged man answered succinctly. He seemed to think that communication was something disgusting as well.

“Can you tell me why? Was she traumatized in some way?” Chen Ge asked two consecutive questions, but there was no answer from the middle-aged man.

It was not until Chen Ge reached his hand into the cage to remove the woman’s gag that the middle-aged man said, “Don’t know.”

“Then, what do you know? Since you don’t know this woman, do you know the old man in the first cage?” Chen Ge asked the question that was on his mind. “Why does his cage have two plastic bowls but yours and the young woman’s only have one?”

“I can tell you, but in return, I hope that you won’t remove the gag from that woman; she is very noisy.” The middle-aged kept repeating that, and Chen Ge was curious why. In any case, he agreed to the trade, at least on the surface. “Okay, but only on the condition that you do not lie to me.”

“I never lie.” The man sat in the cage and began the story in a gravelly voice. “The old man’s body is bad, but his temper is very worse. After his wife left, he was left at home alone, and his life depended on his son. His son was a doctor, and even though his salary was not high, it was enough to keep two people afloat. However, who knew what got into the old man’s head because he found himself a widow and remarried. His son did not protest. He moved out and continued to mail his father money every month.

“Unfortunately, bad things happen to the best of us. According to rumors, extended exposure to mental patients turned the son, who was a psychiatrist, insane, and he ended up injuring a few of his patients. The son lost his job, and his victims’ families pressed to sue until the son’s family had lost everything.

“The son needed money for treatment, and the payment for government mental hospital was 4,000 a month. This was an amount that he did not have. When he had no one to turn to, the hospital where the son once worked at came to the rescue. With a price that was much lower than the government hospital, they accepted the son as one of their patients.

“The once doctor was now the patient. This pushed the son even further over the edge, and until the hospital was closed, he remained an untreated patient.

“During the period the son was hospitalized, the old man’s body continued to deteriorate. He was too old to go work, and the government stipend was all spent on his son’s medical fees. Eventually, the new wife divorced him. He complained to his son, who was now home because the mental hospital had closed down. He hoped that his son would turn his life around and fight the mental sickness.

“Unfortunately, not long after that, his son was reported to have bitten someone from the same village. Once he acted up, the son would turn highly destructive. With no option, the old man built an iron cage and locked his son within.

“This continued for some time until even the old man himself fell ill. He could barely feed himself much less seek treatment for himself or his son.

“Looking at his son inside the cage, who had gotten worse with time, he came to a decision.

“He waited until his son was acting crazy and placed two bowls outside of the cage. One was filled with clean water and the other mixed with rat poison. He was going to let his own son decide whether to live or to die.”

The middle-aged man’s expression did not change when he told the story, but his face turned paler, like the speech had drained him. “This is why there are two bowls of water inside the old man’s cage.”

After listening to the story, Chen Ge was reminded of that sentence he saw at the nurse’s station—I will repay everything that you have done to me.

Chapter 159 - Patient Number 8

Chapter 159: Patient Number 8

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“He is taking revenge, with a specific plan and target in mind.” Chen Ge thought of many things in that moment. The middle-aged man’s story had revealed a lot of information, and it matched the clues that Chen Ge had kept in his mind.

The story fitted perfectly one of the patients who had been locked up in the Third Sick Hall. The once doctor who turned into a patient after witnessing too many tragedies. Similar to the main character of the middle-aged man’s story, he was highly destructive. Standing where he was, a name floated up Chen Ge’s mind—Xiong Qing.

...

This was Patient Number 8. He suffered from Hemineglect and was quarantined for treatment. He was diagnosed to be highly dangerous. Since Xiong Qing was once a psychiatrist, he had an intelligence that was higher than most, so the things that he did when he was crazy were also different from most.

“Could he be the killer hiding in the mental hospital?” This person was familiar with the layout of the hospital since he was both a patient and a doctor. He was fully capable of doing these things.

“The opponent has the geographical advantage, so this is going to be hard.” Xiong Qing was a dangerous person. Hemineglect itself was not dangerous, but to impose those perceived flawed perceptions on others made Xiong Qing extremely dangerous. In his mind, everything was wrong and twisted. Even if a perfect man was standing before him, he needed to snap half the limbs off before he felt things were right.

Most patients with Hemineglect knew about their condition and would try their best to fix their flawed perception, but Xiong Qing was different; he wanted to change others to fit into his flawed understanding of perfection.

If someone had lost a limb or two, while trapped inside this mental hospital, it definitely was the end for them. Chen Ge had found the hair of four people, but he had only found three living individuals—the missing fourth was probably dead.

“Before midnight, and even before entering the Third Sick Hall, there are already so many problems to deal with. It’ll be difficult tonight.” The difficulty of the three-star Trial Mission overshot Murder by Midnight and Mu Yang High School easily. One false step, and Chen Ge could lose his life.

One of the killers had been confirmed, but Chen Ge had not seen Xiong Qing in person. He had no idea whether the man with the twisted face was Xiong Qing or the middle-aged man trapped in the cage was Xiong Qing. He was familiar with the old man’s past, so the possibility of him being Xiong Qing was high.

Squatting down before the old man’s cage, Chen Ge examined the lock. The locks on the three cages were similar. Even if the middle-aged man had hidden the key, with Chen Ge watching closely, he would not be able to ambush Chen Ge.

Toying with the mallet, Chen Ge looked the middle-aged man in his eyes. After some thought, he decided to ask the question outright, “How are you so familiar with the old man’s life story? Could it be that you are his son?”

“Me?” The middle-aged man could hear the suspicion in Chen Ge’s voice, but he answered with something very weird. “I knew you’d never believe me. All of you never trust me, just like how I don’t trust all of you! Please leave me be, I’ve hidden myself here, so how did all of you manage to find me? Stop monitoring my life!”

“Don’t trust all of us? Monitoring your life? What are you talking about?” Chen Ge had a hard time following.

“Whenever I exposed you, you all gave me this innocent look! This is why I am disgusted with all of you; you have been exposed, so why do you insist on lying to me?” The middle-aged man remained very calmly as he made this series of claims that Chen Ge could not understand. “I wonder, should I refer to you as Wang Xin? Or Xu Fei? Lee Yichang? Ma Yong? Or have you changed to a new name?”

“What are you talking about?”

Chen Ge tried to get the man to calm down, but it only had the opposite effect. “Next, you’re going to say that you don’t know any of these people, including me, right?”

“But I really don’t know any of you.”

“Stop lying! All of you are one single person in disguise! Your fake smile disgusts me; stop this pointless game!”

“One single person in disguise?” When Chen Ge heard the man say that, he was reminded of another patient given to him by Doctor Gao. Patient Number 5 was called Xu Tong; he suffered from Fregoli Delusion Syndrome. He thought that everyone around him was the same person in disguise, and he was living in a made up world.

This middle-aged man’s reaction was similar to Patient Number 5. He could communicate normally, but the moment Chen Ge showed some suspicion, his latent disease started to act up. This was the first time Chen Ge had dealt with a seriously mentally ill person. He was fine one moment but completely incoherent the next.

Looking at the man inside the cage, another question bubbled up in his heart. Why did all the patients of Third Sick Hall return to this place? Is something attracting them here? Or are they all controlled by ghosts and have to return?

The easiest way to find out was to ask the middle-aged man directly, but his current state was not conducive for communication. Chen Ge had no choice but to turn back to the young woman.

Noticing his approach, the woman kicked the iron rods and tried to get as far away from Chen Ge as she could. Chen Ge shone his flashlight on the woman’s face. She looked about twenty and had average looks, definitely not fitting the descriptions of the two female patients in the Third Sick Hall.

“This girl’s and the old man’s heads were both shaved; they should be the real victims.” Chen Ge still could not understand why the culprit want to shave people’s hair. If it was revenge, then something similar probably happened to the culprit once.

“Relax.” Chen Ge reached his hand into the iron cage. The girl evaded him with all her life. After three minutes, she tired herself out from the struggle and finally surrendered.

“I don’t intend to harm you, believe me.” Chen Ge pulled on the pillow case in the girl’s mouth and yanked it out.

The moment the gag was released, the girl screamed at Chen Ge crazily, “HAND! HAND! HAND!”

“What?”

The woman was loud and shrill. Chen Ge did not know what she had been through to react in such a manner. Hearing the girl's voice, the dazed old man suddenly collapsed to the ground and played dead.

The middle-aged man also stopped acting crazy. He looked at the door with extreme focus, his eyes filled with terror.

“HAND! HAND...” The girl continued to scream, so Chen Ge had no choice but to insert the gag back into her mouth.

“She is also crazy.” There is not one normal individual at the mental hospital, and that unsettled Chen Ge.

Chapter 160 - It's Real?

Chapter 160: It's Real?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After stuffing the girl's mouth, the old man and the middle-aged man returned to normal. They seemed to be extremely sensitive to the term 'hand'. The term opened some kind of memory in their minds, and it brought out their darkest and scariest memory.

"Why are they afraid of 'hand'?" Chen Ge looked around the room and found nothing related to a hand. He looked at the three people, and there were no obvious wounds on their bodies, so the fear was probably psychological.

...

"Just what is it that has scarred them so?" Chen Ge's brain turned, and he landed on a possibility. In the information provided by Doctor Gao, Patient Number 4 lost his hand due to an accident, and he was diagnosed with Phantom Limb Syndrome after that, thinking his arm was still there. The patient had no name. Perhaps Doctor Gao had forgotten about it or the name had been purposely removed. "In my memory, only this person can be said to be related to a hand."

Phantom Limb Syndrome was not a scary disease, and it was not even considered a serious psychological problem; it was definitely treatable through medication and counselling. Chen Ge was familiar with this information, so the thing that scared him was... why would a patient with a seemingly harmless Phantom Limb Syndrome be kept at the Third Sick Hall?

What had he done to make the hospital think that he was a dangerous threat?

Chen Ge walked to the girl. The middle-aged man refused to communicate, and the old man seemed to be retarded, so his only opening was the young woman. He squatted down beside the iron cage and looked the girl in her eyes. Since he could not communicate with her normally, he was going to try something else.

With a voice he was sure the woman could hear, he asked, "Did you see many hands?”

The girl did not react in any way but shrunk further from Chen Ge.

“Did you see a man with only one hand?” Before he even finished, the girl in the cage started to shake her head vehemently, her head banging continuously on the iron cage.

The girl’s weird reaction answered many things. The thing that gave her the nightmare was probably the person with only one hand. Staring at the girl’s face, Chen Ge paid attention to the smallest twitch of emotion on her face. “That man was carrying a weapon?”

Her eyes widened, and veins popped on her forehead.

“What was he carrying? Saw? Knife? Or axe?”

“HMM!” The woman’s mouth was gagged. She was agitated but could not make a sound.

“Looks like it was one of those things, but what would he have done to you?” Chen Ge’s voice dropped. “Chop? Saw? Did he say you are creatures of imperfections, so he wanted to fix you? Or did he want to borrow your arm?”

“The number of victims is dwindling, so you should have been around when they were correcting the patients. You are the witness, and you have seen everything, yes?”

The woman’s face was twisted with popping veins, and tears flowed down her face. She continued to shake her head like she was saying that she did not see anything.

“You really don’t know anything? Then, why are you so afraid of that hand? Did the hand fall beside you, or did it once capture you when you were trying to escape?”

From Chen Ge’s perspective, even though the woman was beyond traumatized, the scary memory was also etched in her mind. Running away from fear was a human’s natural instinct, so when he mentioned something scary to the woman, her body would react to it instinctively, and the truth could be deduced from her expression and actions.

A person’s natural instincts would not lie. Chen Ge had confirmed part of his suspicion from the woman’s reaction. “Don’t be afraid. If you’re really innocent, I will save you. I came here tonight to uncover everything and make sure all these crazy people get punished by the law.”

The smell of mildew was heavy in the laundry room. Chen Ge stayed beside the woman for some time. It was unclear whether the woman understood her or not, but she did start to calm down. He reached into the cage once more and slowly pulled out the pillow case.

Cowering inside the cage, the woman’s face was etched in terror. Her lips fell open, and she kept repeating that word. “Hand... hand...”

“Just what kind of sick experience happened to her to scar her this way?” Chen Ge dropped the pillow case aside when he felt a push on the laundry room’s door behind him. The force was small, like the person planned to sneak in but did not expect there to be a laundry machine blocking the door.

“The laundry room is at the deepest end of the corridor. The rooms nearby are all locked and sealed, so it couldn’t be the wind.” Chen Ge picked up the pillow case and gagged the woman again. He then turned to look at the white cat submerged in the pile of dirty clothes. Perhaps the heavy mist of mildew had ruined its sense of smell, but it did not give Chen Ge a warning this time.

“Looks like I’ll need to depend on myself. I have to be more careful.” Chen Ge grabbed the mallet and focused on the door. Under his gaze, a hand reached into the room through the gap. The gap was small, and the person could only poke in several fingers, he was probably trying to see whether the lock was still working or not.

“The real culprit has arrived.” Chen Ge’s growth after two Trial Missions was obvious. He did not panic but slowly opened his backpack’s zipper. He took out the scary looking Doctor Skull-cracker’s hammer, removed the camera from his wrist, placed it on the counter facing the door.

The camera corresponded to the small window in the left corner of his livestream room. By placing the camera pointed at the door, he could see what was happening at the door via his phone.

After preparing, Chen Ge placed his backpack beside his leg, gripped the hammer, and hid in the corner beside the door. Not long after that, the laundry room’s door was pushed again. The person outside the door seemed to have lost their patience, and after a few attempts, they slammed heavily on the door!

The washing machine was toppled over, and the door fell open. Through his phone, Chen Ge could see two people standing outside the door!

One of them had a twisted face and was holding an axe with red stains on it. The other only had one arm and was holding an iron shovel. Neither of them noticed the small camera that was pointed at them. The single-armed man nodded at the twisted face, and he moved toward the door cautiously.

Before his body even got over the threshold, the tip of his shoe had just stepped into the room when he heard the sound of rushing wind beside his ear!

Chen Ge swung the hammer directly at the door when the single-armed man showed intention of entering the room. The timing was perfect. When the man realized what was happening, the hammer was already close to making contact with his chest.

The scary-looking hammer seemed to enlarge before his eyes. He used his remaining arm to block his chest, and with a speed several times faster than the speed he used to enter the room, he was sent flying out of it!

Chapter 161 - Scary Livestream

Chapter 161: Scary Livestream

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The single-armed man landed on his butt, and his arm lay weakly by his side.

“One on one is much fairer.”

...

Chen Ge turned to the twisted face with the iron hammer. This person was wearing the doctor's coat, and there were signs of skin grafting on his face, causing it to look twisted. Without preamble, Chen Ge's first reaction after seeing the twisted face was to hold the hammer and swing it at the man's shoulder.

The climax that night was the Third Sick Hall. Before entering that place, Chen Ge wanted to eliminate as many dangerous threats as he could. Technically, this was the first time that they had met, and the twisted face did not expect Chen Ge to be so cruel and enraged.

Such aggression scared even the real crazies. Twisted face took a step back and turned to run down the corridor. The single-armed man moved even faster. He had gotten used to life with just one arm, so his lower body was extremely powerful. He stood up with just a simple roll. Without turning back, he ran even faster than the twisted face.

The two did not even to resist and chose to escape with their lives. This came as quite a surprise to Chen Ge. However, he recovered quickly and made chase with the Doctor Skull-cracker's hammer.

The rushed footsteps shattered the quietness of the night. The ‘victim’ trapped inside the mental hospital was chasing after the two ‘culprits’ wielding a hammer. The chase was so intense that they barely had time to talk.

Chen Ge followed them from the third floor to the first floor. The two patients were familiar with the layout of the hospital, and they jumped into a secluded staircase. Chen Ge made to follow, and the three ran up from the first floor to the fourth floor. After some back and forth, when they passed the third-floor corridor, the two patients separated.

“They’re splitting up?” Chen Ge did not expect the two to strategize against him, but he made the decision easily. “I have incapacitated the single-armed man’s only arm, so he is much less dangerous than the twisted face. He should be my target. If I can incapacitate him, it’ll be much safer for me to enter the Third Sick Hall.”

Chen Ge’s mind was clear, but when he gave chase after the twisted face, the single-armed man stopped running and turned back around to block Chen Ge. Twisted face made use of this opening to run back to the fourth floor. He headed for the hallway that connected the buildings.

“The hallway connecting the second and third sick halls are equipped with security doors. The second floor’s was disabled from rust, and I haven’t checked the third floor’s. Does this mean the fourth floor’s can be used normally?”

Facing the single-armed man who was rushing at him, Chen Ge’s reaction was straightforward. He aimed the hammer at the man’s legs. With just a few seconds, he managed to shake the man loose and turned to run toward the fourth floor.

The twisted face’s eyes were twitching as he raced down the corridor. This was the first time he had come across such aggressive prey. Twisted face shoved open the steel door that connected the second and third sick hall, and he escaped into the third sick hall.

Looking at the twisted face that disappeared into the darkness, Chen Ge did not continue to chase. The dark corridor was like the maw of a monster; it gave him a very uncomfortable feeling, and the stench in the air thickened.

“The Third Sick Hall...” Chen Ge stopped at the corridor. He inspected the steel door that separated the corridor. The lock had been sawed off. “If these people have a saw with them, things will be horrendous if I’m captured.”

Chen Ge was feeling rather tired after the chase that lasted for more than ten minutes. He dropped a line of salt near the steel door as a mark. After returning to the second sick hall, Chen Ge dragged the totally incapacitated man to the laundry room.

The appearance of the man caused a change in the three people inside the cages. The one with the strongest reaction was still the woman in the middle. Her body knocked into the edges of the cage like she was trying to get away from this place.

“What have you done that shocked a normal person until she lost her mind?” Chen Ge had no sympathy for the twisted face and the single-armed man. This was one of the main reasons. These two were involved in some sick activities.

The single-armed man was lying on the floor unconscious, and Chen Ge realized something. When he whacked the man’s arm and legs, he had not made a sound.

“Can this man not feel pain?” Chen Ge was not crazy enough to test that theory. He grabbed some dirty laundry and tied the man to the hose that ran down the corner of the room. After doing that, Chen Ge picked up the camera that had fallen to the floor and reattached it to his wrist. “Now that I have the upper hand, it’s time to enter the Third Sick Hall.”

Chen Ge glanced at the livestream. He was shocked to see the viewership had reached over 80,000, and it was still climbing. It was probably due to the action-packed scenes earlier. The popularity of Chen Ge’s livestream had easily surpassed others.

“My livestream should be more interesting than Qin Guang’s. If this continues, I’ll be able to grab some viewers from him.” Chen Ge glanced at the chatlog. The popularity was high, but the chatlog was slowly going out of control.

He had people hiding under dirty laundry, smashing a single-armed man’s chest, and running crazily in a mental hospital with a large hammer for ten minutes. This was unheard of in the livestreaming world, and his livestream was close to exploding!

Some praised Chen Ge for his hardworking nature and attention to detail; others mocked him for the exaggeration; there was also a small group of morally upright viewers who wanted to call the police when they saw the people trapped inside the steel cages. Chen Ge did not expect the viewers’ reactions to be so exciting. He was thankful that he did not give a detailed livestream address, and he only mentioned that he was at a mental hospital shrouded in mystery.

80,000 people was a high viewer count, but compared to the number of national citizens, it was like a drop of water in the ocean. Even if there were a handful of Jiujiang locals, they might not have heard of Jiujiang Third Psychological Convalescence Centre. After all, this place had been abandoned for years.

Without an address, it was difficult to get a police response. Even if the viewers managed to locate Chen Ge through the clues on his livestream, it would be after midnight already. Hiding the scary-looking hammer behind him, Chen Ge chatted for a little while with the camera to calm the viewers down. He tried to move the conversation toward good acting and a well-written script.

In all honesty, it was hard for Chen Ge. All other hosts were afraid that their script might be exposed, so they paid good money to design original scripts and hire actors to create shocks and scares.

But for Chen Ge, the development was so real that even he himself was scared. The ‘scary surprises’ had not stopped, and each one was bigger than the one preceding it!

Chapter 162 - Xu Tong

Chapter 162: Xu Tong

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The ‘surprises’ Chen Ge gave the viewers were indeed too huge and too much. He looked at the popularity ranking. Qin Guang was number 1. When he started the livestream, he was at 96, and now he was 19.

This popularity ranking sat in the middle of the app’s front page, so those who managed to squeeze into the top twenty were big hosts with more than 400,000 followers and fans. The rocket-esque rise in fame attracted the attention of many viewers. They were confused. How could a newbie with fewer than 50,000 followers enter the arena meant for the most popular hosts?

...

To be honest, Chen Ge had no answer. He was merely playing the role of an ‘innocent victim’. He did not violate the law; it was all in self defense.

“Looks like my viewers are clever people. Under the corruption of money, a host like myself who pays such close attention to authentic content is a rare species.”

After inspecting the cameras on his chest and wrist, Chen Ge pocketed the phone and returned to the woman.

When he dragged the man into the room, the woman had gone crazy. She had knocked her head into the cage as she tried to escape. Chen Ge was afraid that she might have injured herself, so he picked up a thick layer of cloth to cushion her head.

“Just what has she seen to have made her so?”

His eyes scanned the three cages. The old man cowered inside the cage; his arms were shielding his head like an ostrich hiding its head in the sand. He did not dare look outwards. Of the three, the old man had been trapped there the longest and seen the most.

When he saw the single-armed man, he had closed his eyes. Obviously, he was afraid that he might accidentally see something that he should not.

The young woman in the middle had the most agitated reaction. She threw her head repeatedly against the cage, and the fear was practically pouring out of her eyes. The reactions of these two people were understandable. Chen Ge, though, was exceptionally cautious of the middle-aged man.

He was also showing signs of fear. His body was shaking, and his hands were gripped tightly together. His reaction and expression were flawless. If this was anyone else, they would definitely have been fooled—but not Chen Ge. It was not that Chen Ge had that great of an observation power, but he had managed to acquire the information on the patients of the Third Sick Hall before he arrived, and this middle-aged man was most likely Patient Number 5, Xu Tong.

The culprits came from the Third Sick Hall, so why did he end up as the victim? Starting from this point, Chen Ge slowly discovered more anomalies about the middle-aged man. For example, his relatively clean appearance. His head was not shaved, and his hands had been kept hidden under his clothes throughout. It was only when Chen Ge dragged the single-armed man into the room that the middle-aged man let it slip.

Chen Ge saw it clearly; there was a very deep wound on the middle-aged man's left hand. It was a bite mark, and it was still bleeding.

"Your hand is injured?" Chen Ge walked to the last iron cage holding the hammer. When he entered the nurse's station at the first sick hall, he had noticed the paint stain on the iron cage. Following the station, he had seen a splatter that was mixed with oil and blood on the wall outside of the nurse's station.

At the time, he had thought that it was left behind by the victim inside the cage, but he had inspected the old man's body, and he was uninjured, so now he believed that the blood came from the culprit who had dragged the old man away.

Oil was mixed with blood, so the most logical speculation was that the old man was gripping the wall, unwilling to be dragged away. The culprit tried to pry the old man's hands off the wall but ended up being bitten by the old man. It perfectly explained how both oil and blood could be left on the same spot on the wall.

When the door opened, Chen Ge noticed that neither of the twisted face nor the single-armed man's arms were injured. If there were no other residents inside this mental hospital, then Chen Ge could have guaranteed that the culprit who dragged the old man away from the first sick hall was this middle-aged man.

He was one of the culprits at the mental hospital.

When they discovered there were people outside the hospital, to prevent the old man from being discovered, they moved him to the second sick hall's laundry room urgently.

The iron hammer swaying before him, the middle-aged man's eyes that looked at Chen Ge were slowly filled with fear.

"I will not hurt you; I just want you to answer a few of my questions honestly." Chen Ge looked at the middle-aged man, and the other party was still pretending to be dumb, too afraid to communicate.

"Don't feel like talking?" Chen Ge removed the two cameras, placed them aside and blocked the cameras. He slowly turned back around and slammed the hammer into the iron cage. With just one knock, the iron cage became slightly misshapen.

"Still not talking?" Chen Ge continued to whack at the iron cage, and the rods twisted and turned until only three quarters of the moveable space remained.

"What... What do you want to know?" The middle-aged man saw the iron hammer that came closer and closer to him, and his expression fell. How come this man feels like he is even crazier than I am?

"I'm not one to force people to do things that they don't want to. I just have some simple questions." Chen Ge looked at the twisted iron cage and placed his hammer down. "What is your name?"

The middle-aged paused for about two seconds before speaking again. "Wang Haiming?"

"Wang Haiming?" When he heard this name, Chen Ge's heart skipped a beat, and a huge wave proceeded to swallow it. This man knows Wang Haiming?

The man probably just wanted to fool Chen Ge by giving a random name. He did not expect Chen Ge to know Wang Haiming!

“You’re lying.”

Without leaving a chance for the middle-aged man to explain, Chen Ge swung his hammer at the iron cage. The hammer cut through the air, and the hair on the middle-aged man’s body stood on end. “My name is Xiong Qing! My name is Xiong Qing!”

Chen Ge was in no time for games and continued to rain punishment down on the iron cage. The space within the cage continued to shrink, and the iron rods could have snapped at any moment. The middle-aged man screamed, “Didn’t you say you would not force people to do things they don’t want to?”

Chen Ge ignored him. After a few more minutes of heavy work, the iron cage was completely misshapen. Even with the key, it could not be opened anymore. It would require some time before Chen Ge could smash the iron cage into smithereens, but Chen Ge was lacking time. His pupils narrowed as he reached out to grip the middle-aged man’s calf. “I’m asking you one more time, what is your name?”

The man did not know what Chen Ge was up to, and he hesitated. Chen Ge was trapped inside a mental hospital with more than one source of dangerous threats. He could not continue to be kind. He placed the middle-aged man’s calf before him and aimed the iron hammer right at it.

A shrill scream tore through the night. Chen Ge had no sympathy for those who shoved living humans into cages. He picked up the iron hammer and pulled out the middle-aged man’s other calf.

As the iron hammer went flying down, the middle-aged man screamed, and he shrank away from the hammer. “Xu Tong! My name is Xu Tong!”

“See, was that so hard?” Chen Ge stopped. “If you would had been honest with me from the beginning, we could have skipped all that.”

Then he squatted down beside the iron cage. “Just now, you mentioned Wang Haiming. What is your relationship with him? Has he stayed at the Third Sick Hall before? Is that how you know him?”

Chapter 163 - Wang Haiming's Secret

Chapter 163: Wang Haiming's Secret

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Why would you ask that?” Xu Tong immediately regretted asking that question. He looked at the hammer in Chen Ge’s hands, and his mouth turned slippery again. “Wang Haiming was once a patient here. He was locked inside the Third Sick Hall multiple times due to repeated offenses. That man is very interesting.”

“Be more specific.”

...

“He was a low risk patient. He stayed on the second floor of the second sick hall, but the man had something wrong with his mind. He kept saying that he was not crazy.” A disgusting smile appeared on Xu Tong’s lips. “Actually, we all know that we are perfectly fine, but only an idiot like him would announce it out loud.”

To be called an idiot by a diagnosed mental patient, if Wang Haiming was still alive, Chen Ge wondered how he would have felt. A flash of wickedness entered Xu Tong’s smile. His perspective was different from normal people. Perhaps until now, he still believed he was not ill.

“And then?” Chen Ge realized how dangerous it was to communicate with mental patients, especially one like Xu Tong. He was wary of being unconsciously sucked into their world, influenced by their twisted worldview.

“Wang Haiming not only refused the treatment by the hospital, but when the doctors tried to administer the treatment, he started fighting with the nurses and doctors.

“Injuring the workers was the biggest mistake at this hospital. The day it happened, Wang Haiming was punished by the hospital.

“Initially he was just sent to the quarantine room, but it only made him worse. After he was released from the place, he got into a physical altercation with the nurse because he refused to take his medicine. He announced that he was a millionaire who could buy half of the hospital if he wanted to. He promised that he would make these doctors and nurses pay.

“After ten minutes, the idiot paid for what he said. The hospital workers came with a straightjacket and moved him into the third sick hall’s quarantine room.

“That was his first visit to the Third Sick Hall. We were happy to welcome a new friend, but he was very unfriendly. He even spat at me. He looked energetic, and as he was escorted, his mouth never stopped cursing. This poor newbie did not know what being sent to the Third Sick Hall meant, but he would know soon enough.

“The Third Sick Hall’s quarantine room has an alternative name—Electroshock Therapy Room. It is a common method to treat mental illness. The doctors who had used it all said it was incredibly effective.

“Of course, as a registered private hospital, to ensure patient’s safety and comfort, they would cooperate with aestheticians before beginning the treatment. The quarantine room has good sound insulation. When Wang Haiming exited the room, he was much more pliable. All of us thought the treatment had been highly effective.

“After a few days of peace, Wang Haiming got into argument with the workers for hiding medicine. This man had a natural instinct for adventure. Perhaps he was indeed a millionaire before being admitted into the hospital.

“When he exited the quarantine room for the second time, we all thought that he would finally admit to his fate, but the man planned a midnight escape, and to everyone’s surprise, he succeeded. Even though he was captured the next day, he made use of that one night of freedom to contact his ex-wife. We have no idea what he told her, but in less than a month, she arrived to arrange for him to leave the hospital.”

From Xu Tong’s lips, Chen Ge gained a deeper understanding of Wang Haiming. “How do you know so much about the man?”

“After he was captured, he was detained. The hospital had him situated in the Third Sick Hall’s Room 3, but he almost died in that room. Since there was no other option, the hospital workers arranged for him to temporarily stay with me.” The twisted expression on Xu Tong’s face slowly returned to normal.

“Then, do you know what happened to him in Room 3?”

“He saw many people; there were many people inside the room.”

“He told you all that himself?” Chen Ge did not think things would be so complicated. Wang Haiming once stayed inside the third room.

“Why would I talk to an idiot?” Xu Tong scoffed with condescension. “That idiot would mumble to himself every night, and I overheard his conversation.”

Chen Ge nodded. He needed to enter the Third Sick Hall personally to know more about its mystery.

“The second question, why would patients from the Third Sick Hall like yourself return to this place after the hospital was closed down?”

“Of course, we have our reasons. I cannot answer on other people’s behalf, but for me...” Xu Tong looked at Chen Ge. “Only by staying here can I escape from your surveillance. Only by staying here will you not disturb me.”

“It’s time for you to take your medicine.” Chen Ge stood up. He believed that Xu Tong did not lie to him.

The old man and young woman were shaking in fear when they saw the single-armed man, but they did not show any response when they were in Xu Tong’s proximity. The old man even dared to bite his hand. This went to show, unlike the twisted face and single-armed man, Xu Tong had not done those crazy things.

The iron cage was broken due to Chen Ge’s assault. He placed the hammer beside him and asked, “I heard a female nurse was killed inside the Third Sick Hall, do you know about this?”

“Yes. The hospital even organized a mourning ceremony in the second sick hall for her, hoping it would be a lesson for the patients, the patients’ families, and the workers.” Xu Tong seemed to expect what Chen Ge would ask next. He shrugged and said, “I really had nothing to do with the nurse’s death. The police asked me, and I stayed in my room that night. I didn’t say a word to her; I didn’t even see her that night.”

After nodding, Chen Ge asked Xu Tong questions about the hospital director. Unfortunately, Xu Tong’s knowledge of this was limited.

Xu Tong was an honest patient. His sickness prevented him from communication with living people, and the greater the number of people around him, the more unsettled he would be. He felt like everyone was same, and they were one person toying with him. However, if he was kept in a small room with a limited amount of people, he would be just like a normal person.

“Hopefully, everything you’ve said is the truth.” Chen Ge reequipped the two cameras and took out his phone to glance at it.

After such a long period of a black screen, his popularity did not drop. In fact, it had shot over 150,000 viewers.

“What’s going on?” Looking at the chatlog, Chen Ge realized that even though he had blocked the cameras, the audio recorder was still stuck to his lapel!

Xu Tong’s scream, the information about the nurse’s death, Wang Haiming’s history, and the mystery of the Third Sick Hall had all been broadcasted!

Due to this coincidence, Chen Ge’s livestream had continued to climb the popularity ladder. The chatlog kept refreshing.

“This is all too real!”

There were viewers who gave him likes and virtual presents.

Chen Ge did not even know what to say. Since things had reached this stage, Chen Ge decided to throw caution to the wind.

“Thank you everyone for the presents and likes. Thank you for tuning in to my livestream!” Chen Ge aimed the camera at himself. “What you’ve seen and heard might not be fake! Tonight, I’ll bring you a livestream that can never be replicated!”

Chapter 164 - The Devil's Bargain

Chapter 164: The Devil's Bargain

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge exited the laundry room to head for the second floor, to find the room Wang Haiming had once stayed in. There were two beds placed in the small room. The mattress and covers had been taken away, and only two bed frames remained. Perhaps due to safety concerns, there was nothing sharp in the room. Even the bed's edges had purposely been smoothened.

“Wang Haiming was sent into the hospital by his second wife. Perhaps there was something wrong with his head, but it shouldn't have been that serious. I believe this was a conspiracy against the man.”

...

Composing all the information he had, Chen Ge realized that Wang Haiming had led a complicated life.

His life had big ups and big downs, but he had never given up, never stopped resisting or struggling. Be it being forcibly sent into the mental hospital or fighting for his body with a monster after he left the hospital, he never stopped fighting. He was not a saint, either, considering he had cheated on his first wife, but from a certain perspective, he had already paid more than enough for his sin.

“Every door to the sick room is equipped with a single-sided lock, so even with the key, the door could only be opened from the outside. There are safety doors at every twenty meters along the corridor, and there were nurses and workers patrolling nightly, so how did Wang Haiming manage to escape?” Chen Ge sat on the bed frame and studied the window that was boarded up. “Jumped down from the window?”

Prying off the wooden boards, Chen Ge realized that the window was strengthened with steel netting; it was not the exit he was looking for. Furthermore, the hospital was surrounded by a two-meter-tall cement wall and a lush forest beyond that. Without a proper guide, getting lost was common. But under these conditions, Wang Haiming not only managed to escape, he also got in touch with his ex-wife to get her to save him. This whole process could have been made into a movie.

It's too difficult for Wang Haiming to have escaped this place alone. He should have relied on the power of that monster inside him as well. They managed to escape this hospital by working together. After all, their united goal was to leave this mental hospital. Chen Ge understood this, but another question remained. When did the monster enter Wang Haiming's body?

Remembering his conversation with Xu Tong, Chen Ge discovered something strange about Wang Haiming. Not long after his first shock 'therapy', he started to provoke the doctors and even physically assaulted a nurse, and the reason was simply hiding medicine. This could be understood for a crazy person, but Wang Haiming was not a crazy person.

Did he do this on purpose? He wanted to get back into the Third Sick Hall? Chen Ge examined this simple sickroom. The only spot that could have hidden something was behind the curtain and under the bed.

Standing up, Chen Ge moved the two bedframes. On one of the walls that was covered by the bed earlier, and he made a new discovery. Someone had used their fingernails to carve out a diary of sorts on the white paint. Due to the passage of time, most of the words were unreadable, but Chen Ge got the gist of it.

"Is it Wang Haiming's handwriting?" Chen Ge closed the door, shone his flashlight on the wall, and started to read the words on it.

"Have I really gone crazy?"

"Two workers and a doctor hauled me into the electroshock room. The bunch of animals locked the door, so technically, no one should have been able to come in.

"Why did I see four people in the room after the therapy?"

"Who was the one wearing the patient's garb?"

Wang Haiming probably left this behind. In a room without any entertainment devices, keeping a diary became his only entertainment. It was here, after plenty of rumination, that he realized he was different from those around him.

"Is it a hallucination caused by the shock? Why could he talk to me?"

Why can only I see him?

“He said that he can help me escape, but in return, I have to agree to one of his conditions.

“This is truly a devil’s bargain, but I have no choice.

“Perhaps something is wrong, could it be those pills? I find myself falling asleep easily like someone has poured lead into my brain. I have to leave this place.

“The devil doesn’t seem like he can leave the third sick hall. I’ll need to find him there if I want to escape from this hospital.

“The workers here are heartless animals! I will ruin this place, I swear!

“After entering that room for the second time, I agreed to his demand. After completing the ritual inside the bathroom, he entered my body.

“Have I really gone insane to believe there is a devil in this world and accepted his trade?”

The diary stopped here abruptly. After the trade, perhaps only Wang Haiming himself knew what happened to him.

The monster inside Wang Haiming probably came from the Third Sick Hall, and the ritual was completed in the bathroom. Could it be that the ritual required a mirror? In that case, the monster that possessed Wang Haiming was not some kind of devil but a common mirror monster. Chen Ge knew a thing or two about mirror monsters. They were not particularly strong but extremely cunning. There were no other clues in the room, so Chen Ge left.

The mirror monster on Wang Haiming came from the Third Sick Hall, and the tall monster on Wang Shenglong also came from the Third Sick Hall. Why wouldn’t the monsters stay there? Chen Ge needed more answers. He grabbed the hammer, whistled to get the white cat, and prepared to head into the Third Sick Hall.

He came back to the hallway connecting the two buildings on the fourth floor. Twisted face had used this path to escape into the Third Sick Hall.

“The salt hasn’t been moved, so no one has passed this way.”

Pushing open the steel door, Chen Ge felt submerged in the darkness.

The tiles under his feet were moving, and as he moved across the corridor in the Third Sick Hall, there was a bad feeling that settled over him. He felt cold, like some scary monster was staring at him.

Even the white cat, which was not afraid of anything, hid behind his ankle. If not for the jacket on Chen Ge, he believed that the cat would have run already.

The clue left behind by my parents is here. No matter what, I cannot turn back.

Chen Ge opened half of his backpack and pulled on the cleaver so that the handle was exposed. This way, he could grab it anytime he wanted.

“It’s about time.” Chen Ge looked at his phone; it was 11:51 pm. Another nine minutes, and it would be midnight.

Chen Ge experienced a strange feeling as he stepped into the sick hall. It felt like the entire Third Sick Hall was a large living entity, and the cold draft that caressed Chen Ge’s body was its breathing.

Chapter 165 - Who Is Playing Doctor?

Chapter 165: Who Is Playing Doctor?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Many mattresses littered the dark corridor. They were bulging like they were hiding something underneath. Chen Ge used his hammer to yank one open. Inside the decayed mattress was a fake person made from pillows and bedsheets. The workmanship was rough, but one could just about make out the shape of a person.

The scariest thing was that a human face, complete with eyes, nose and a wide mouth, had been painted on the pillow. It looked like the scribbling of a child, but it made the hairs on Chen Ge's arms rise.

...

"This shouldn't be." Chen Ge resisted the urge to smash it with the iron hammer and started to think. "No matter what, the twenty-four mannequins at the Haunted House are scarier and more real than these fake dolls. I felt zero fear being around those mannequins, but standing beside these dolls, I feel weirdly unsettled."

He nudged the doll, and on the back of the pillow, an unfamiliar name was written—Lee Chunyan.

"Why is there a name?"

These dolls were not unlike those used by girls when playing house. They would use dolls to act as their parents or to represent someone they knew in real life.

Chen Ge observed for about two minutes after spraying the doll's face with a handful of salt. The doll did not react in any way. Chen Ge walked away to peel out another mattress. Similarly, there was a doll made from bedsheets and a pillow.

"Zhang Qisi?" There was another name behind the doll. Chen Ge looked at the corridor that was filled with mattresses, and a chill ran up his spine. "There's a name behind each doll? Meaning they represent real people?"

The bloated mattresses looked like a mass grave, and Chen Ge's hand that gripped the hammer sweated. He felt like he would be much braver after completing this Trial Mission. He finished two packs of salt after walking just twenty or thirty meters. Reality proved that salt had no use against those haunted things. The uncomfortable feeling that suffused the corridor did not decrease. If anything, it had gotten stronger.

"I'll need to ration the last pack of salt. I can't be so cavalier with it anymore." Chen Ge would look over his shoulder every few steps. He was afraid of seeing a row of dolls following him as was often the case in the scary movies he had seen.

With his whole body tensed, Chen Ge made the decision that should a doll suddenly stand up, he would rush over and smash it into smithereens with the hammer and stab it with the cleaver.

"Calm down, there are many trump cards you haven't used yet." Chen Ge did not know whether he was saying this for the benefit of the viewers or himself. In any case, as he moved into the Third Sick Hall, the popularity of his livestream also climbed at a scary speed. In contrast, Qin Guang's livestream had reached a bottleneck, and his viewership was slipping.

The Third Sick Hall was different from the other two because every room was a single room, but curiously enough, none of the rooms had any beds. It was like the place had never been used as a hospital before.

"Doctor Gao said that the Third Sick Hall only has ten sick rooms and nine patients on record, so what are the purposes for these empty rooms?"

None of the rooms had a number, and they had the same bland white doors. They did not seem like they were used to house the patients.

"The first sick hall was so crowded that there were beds on the corridor, but the Third Sick Hall has so many empty rooms. The hospital would rather keep them empty than use them for the patients, why is that?"

Chen Ge was very careful. When he reached the middle of the fourth-floor corridor, the stench in the air suddenly became exceedingly heavy. Other than the cold wind, there was another sound in his ears. It was hard to describe. It sounded like the heavy breathing of a roomful of people. Chen Ge shone his flashlight around as the anxiety in his heart heightened. He stuck his back to the wall and took out his phone to glance at the time. "It's midnight!"

At that same moment, the sound of the door being opened came from one of the rooms under the fourth floor. The feeling was strange. The sound came from downstairs, but it sounded like it was just beside Chen Ge.

The blood door inside the Haunted House's mirror will open for a minute every midnight. Is there a similar door in this hospital? The door would appear at midnight, but it would not open on its own. When the door was pushed open, it only meant that something had come out from behind the door.

"Wang Haiming's diary said that he completed the final ritual in the bathroom; this proves that there is a large mirror in the bathroom of this hospital."

After midnight, the entire sick hall seemed to change like a sleeping monster coming alive. Standing in the deepest corner of the fourth floor, Chen Ge looked down the stairs. There was complete darkness. No one knew what was hiding in the dark. Something might come out at him from a hidden corner.

Chen Ge's eyes twitched. He held the hammer and stood at the mouth of the stairwell. After giving it some thought, he turned off his flashlight. Inside the Third Sick Hall, there were mental patients, lingering spirits, and the monsters from behind the blood door; there were danger at every step.

In such a situation, the light would expose himself, making him an easy target. Chen Ge closed his eyes before opening them again. He tried to make his eyes familiarize themselves with the darkness and stepped down the stairs to go to the third floor.

Even though the mission had not ended, Chen Ge had already acquired a reward. At least his relationship with the white cat had improved. Initially, the white cat did not even want to be close to him, but after they entered the corridor of the third sick hall, the cat actively jumped on his shoulder, its claws digging into his clothes and backpack. It looked like it would not let go no matter what.

"Don't be scared, everything is still under control." Chen Ge patted the cat on its head, and the cat strangely did not resist. Its pair of different-colored eyes look straight into the darkness.

The staircase seemed to have grown in the darkness because Chen Ge used two minutes to move from the fourth floor to the third floor. The windows were sealed, and the third floor was even darker. Chen Ge could barely see the mattresses that littered the corridor.

“The twisted face seemed to vanish after he entered the Third Sick Hall. There was not even a footprint. Where could he be hiding? Inside one of the rooms or the mattresses, preparing for an ambush?”

There was another nurse’s station at the corner of the third floor, but curiously enough, all the records and medicine were arranged neatly inside the station, and the counter was spotless, like it had recently been in use.

Jumping into the station, Chen Ge realized that there were many prescribed pills arranged on the table. The colorful pills were separated and placed inside white bags, and each bag was taped with a patient’s name.

“Lee Chunyan? Zhang Qisi? Wait, didn’t I read these two names on the dolls on the fourth floor? Someone comes here every night to give medicine to the dolls?”

A ridiculous idea popped up in Chen Ge’s mind. The Third Sick Hall was like a children’s game. The child had created the dolls to act as the patients and took on the role of the doctor to dispense them medicine.

“Who would do something so sick?” Chen Ge looked at the names on the counter, and he felt like he had missed something important.

Chapter 166 - Isn't She Dead?

Chapter 166: Isn't She Dead?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge examined the bags on the counter carefully, and his expression turned grim. He used his fingers to rub at the names, and he finally discovered the source of the problem. The writing on some of the bags was still wet; the names had been written recently!

Chen Ge whipped his head up and looked around; there was no hiding spot inside the nurse's station.

...

"The person who prescribed the drug should still be close. They probably haven't wandered far and are still nearby." Chen Ge could not tell if the other party had discovered him, but he knew he had to be more careful. He jumped out of the station and slunk into the room opposite the nurse's station. He pushed the door open a sliver, and Chen Ge looked out into the corridor.

"The names on the bags were freshly written, so the pills were probably just prescribed. Who would do something like this at night?" There were several candidates in Chen Ge's mind, and the foremost was the twisted face. He had once been a doctor at this hospital, and from the way he treated his father, he had a great need for revenge.

"He prescribed the drug to force-feed his victims?" Then again, if this was true, he would not have needed to write the patient's name down on the bag one by one, so things could not have been that simple. It was midnight, and things were at their most unstable. Chen Ge decided to stay a little bit longer to clear up the mystery about the medicine before moving.

About ten minutes later, there was a fuzzy shadow that appeared at the end of the third-floor corridor. It was so far away that Chen Ge could not tell whether it had appeared from one of the rooms or from the other floors.

"Which patient is it?" Chen Ge could not see the face, but he did not dare turn on the light. The only thing he could do was hide behind the door with the hammer ready. The shadow's gait was weird; it was staggering like it could trip and fall at any moment.

As it got near, Chen Ge made another weird discovery. The thing made no sound as it walked across the floor!

"Based on the way it limps, it shouldn't be silent."

The shadow got closer enough for Chen Ge to catch a rough glimpse of its clothes. The white nurse's outfit was rather conspicuous in the dark, and it was a contrast from the dirtied mattresses that littered the place.

"It's not the twisted face but a woman?" Chen Ge could not be sure. He leaned his upper body on the door, and his eyes attached themselves to the slit. He did not blink, afraid that he might lose any details. "It's coming."

The shadow with the nurse's outfit had its head lowered, and it was mumbling something quietly. When it neared the room Chen Ge was hiding in, the man finally got a good look.

The moving shadow was a monster wearing a nurse's coat. Its waist was broken, and its limbs were twisted at weird angles. It felt as if someone had rearranged the monster's body, and it had lost the correct shape of a normal human. The monster before him ruined the wonderful image of nurses that Chen Ge had maintained for the past twenty years. Through the door, his hands that gripped the hammer started to sweat.

The tangled black hair fell forward to hide most of her face, and when she passed Chen Ge's room, she suddenly stopped. At that moment, Chen Ge held his breath as he raised the hammer.

The female nurse seemed to have felt something. She raised her skull slowly, and the hair parted to reveal that familiar face.

It's her? The face could not have been more normal, but Chen Ge had the shock of his life because he recognized this face. He had seen it hanging in black and white in the second sick hall's activity room!

Isn't she dead? The large female nurse was the victim who had died inside the Third Sick Hall. According to Doctor Gao, after the police's investigation, they had concluded that the killer was one of the patients.

She's still wandering the halls after her death? Chen Ge understood why there were no footsteps. His hand reached for the cleaver in his bag. After a second's hesitation, the nurse turned her body around with difficulty. As if toppling over, her large body leaned toward the door that Chen Ge was hiding behind.

DONG!

Her head knocking into the door created a dull thud. Chen Ge jumped back and yanked out the cleaver. The door was not locked, and Chen Ge was prepared to hash it out with this monster.

However, right then, there was another sound of a door opening downstairs. Hearing this noise, the nurse was like a puppet being forced to turn around. She walked to the nurse's station and entered the small door next to it.

What was that? Chen Ge's back was drenched. The female nurse was probably the bottom feeder at the Third Sick Hall. She was a just lingering spirit without thought. The person who assigned her what to do was the real culprit

Chen Ge did not dare let his guard down. To not spook the nurse, he did not jump out with the cleaver lashing but hid behind the door to observe her quietly.

After returning to the nurse's station, the nurse took out a notebook with dirt and blood stains from underneath the counter. She followed the content of the notebook and started arranging the bags that were filled with drugs.

The nurse's station was opposite Chen Ge's room, so Chen Ge could see everything clearly. Her movements were quick and masterful. She soon picked up about ten bags and wandered into the staircase to head up to the fourth floor.

After the nurse had wandered off, Chen Ge exited the room. He jumped back into the nurse's station to examine the notebook that the nurse had been using earlier. The notebook was thick, and it was full of patient records and diagnosis reports.

Chen Ge looked through it randomly, and he realized that all the patients in the book shared a similarity; they were all dead. For all the reports, in the box for diagnosis result, someone had used a red pen to correct everything and write—Confirmed Dead.

Have the killers hiding inside this hospital been following the patients? Or have the patients who once received treatment here returned to this place?

Chen Ge saw Lee Chunyan and Zhang Qisi's names in the notebook. He glanced at the counter, and the bags with their names had been taken away by the nurse.

There are dolls on the fourth floor with these two names on their backs. All the patients who have passed away seemed to have a corresponding doll in the Third Sick Hall, and there is a 'person' who gives them their medication every night, like how it was when they were still alive.

The mental hospital had been abandoned for five years already, but the Third Sick Hall had remained in operation. It was just that the patients had changed from living ones to dead ones, and all these changes could be related to that mysterious door.

Could it be that the 'door' had been left open for so long that the world behind the door and the real world have overlapped?

Chen Ge did not read the notebook further before tossing it inside his backpack. Then he walked down the corridor. He wanted to go take a look inside the third-floor bathroom before the nurse returned.

Chapter 167 - Dresser

Chapter 167: Dresser

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After the nurse finishes handing out all the medicine, she will return. When she discovers that the notebook is missing, she will go searching for it, but it should be fine because I believe she is only slightly more powerful than Xiaoxiao and the Pen Spirit. If I face her in battle, I might not lose.

Chen Ge held the hammer and walked deeper into the corridor. If this was some other person, they would have been shocked silly already; they would not have been able to calculate and plan their steps. Opening the rooms one by one, Chen Ge made no new discoveries until he reached the door to the third-floor bathroom.

...

The sound of door opening came from downstairs, so this bathroom should not be where the 'door' is.

He could feel the anxiety coming from the white cat on his shoulder. Chen Ge tried to push the door open, and the bathroom was shrouded in complete darkness, swallowing up any sort of light.

The row of squat cubicles looked rather frightening in the dark. Different from the school, the cubicles had no locks, probably in case of accidents inside the bathroom. Chen Ge did a tour but found nothing strange. He eventually stopped before the sink that had a mirror, and he realized how interesting the design was.

There was a curtain draped on top of the mirror. With a pull, the mirror would be covered up easily. This little design quirk reminded Chen Ge slightly of his own Haunted House. Looks like there are some problems with the mirrors here as well.

Chen Ge pulled the curtain up, and the mirror was stained with smudges, like someone had run their hands over it. The surface was smudged with so many finger marks that Chen Ge could barely see his reflection.

The door is not here, Chen Ge confirmed after making sure the layout of the third floor bathroom. He came out from the bathroom and used the adjacent staircase to walk down to the second floor.

The closer he got to the first floor, the stronger the stench in the air became. The thing that surprised Chen Ge was that some curious things had appeared on the second floor's corridors and walls.

It was unknown whether it was caused by the building's old age or some other reason, but there were patches along the corridor where it protruded outward. The protrusions had red hues to them like the color of bruised skin. The cracked floor also had residual liquid that looked like it was blood. It was as if blood had once seeped from cracks and had now dried.

The second floor was completely different from the third floor. The danger rating had practically doubled. If the third floor was eerie, then the second floor was dangerous; it just made people want to turn and run.

Could this really be real blood? Chen Ge picked up something that looked like congealed blood off the floor and squished it in his hands. It doesn't smell bloody... probably just normal red soil.

The mattresses on the corridor were rather in the way, and as Chen Ge walked past them, he yanked some open. He realized that the closer he got to the first floor, the more authentic these dolls looked. It was not that they were visually more authentic, but they gave off a stronger feeling that they were alive.

When I enter the first floor, will the dolls in the mattresses crawl out on their own?

He was not kidding and was considering this possibility seriously. Walking past room after room as he proceeded down the corridor, Chen Ge noticed a few special rooms as he was about to turn the corner. All the patients' rooms had windows on their doors so that the doctors could see inside easily, but these few rooms were different.

The director's office? Chen Ge had pretty much finished exploring the mental hospital, and this was the first time he had come across a door with a plaque on it. He entered the room, and the space was huge. It had been made from breaking down the walls between three normal rooms.

There were several pots of dead plants against the wall, and next to them were empty bookshelves and an office table. There was also a resting area. It was about half the size of the working area, and it had a single bed and a disproportionately large dresser.

Closing the door behind him, Chen Ge stepped into the room. The floor was littered with a massive number of patient records, but these records were different from the ones in the nurse's notebook. They were unedited. In other words, these patients were probably still alive.

The mental hospital had been in operation for at least ten years, and the number of patients that came through its door was huge, at least much bigger than Chen Ge anticipated. Compared to Jiujiang's population of several million, the number of mental patients was probably very small, but Jiujiang only had two certified government mental hospitals, and even at their maximum capacity, they could only handle about a thousand people. This, combined with the fact that mental illnesses required repeated treatment, meant that there were not enough hospitals to go around. This was why there were private hospitals like Jiujiang Third Psychological Convalescence Centre.

It had the necessary certification, but at the end of the day, it was a private hospital. Their main focus was money, and their management was riddled with problems. Due to the nature of mental patients, many things were not treated with the seriousness that they deserved. Accepting Wang Haiming even though he was mentally fine was one such example.

After picking up a few of the patient's records, Chen Ge soon lost interest. The diagnoses given were pretty much the same—even the treatment methods were similar to each other.

"A real doctor is someone like Doctor Gao. These doctors were merely trying to silence the patients' wills and souls, transforming them into puppets without individuality."

Chen Ge continued his search. The bookshelves and table drawers were empty. Chen Ge entered the rest area and flipped the bed upside down. There was nothing. Finally, he turned toward the suspiciously large dresser. This was the only place he had not searched.

"This dresser is big enough to fit two adults. Could the missing director be left inside?"

Raising his hammer, he scanned the dresser. The dresser was sealed with police tape, and it had not been taken down since it was applied because the edges were untouched.

“Why would the police seal the dresser? Was it hiding the body?”

There were many other curious things about the dresser. Its four edges were taped with duct tape, and curious mantras were written on the corners. There were also red nails that were about half the length of a normal palm protruding out of the dresser.

“It just feels like this dresser carry something important inside.” Chen Ge hugged the white cat and placed it down by the door. He removed the police tape and used the mallet to pry the door open.

There was no scary scene, and the dresser was not filled with clothes or anything weird. Inside sat a few papers that were filled with words and several envelopes that had not been mailed. Picking up the top most paper, the first line that entered Chen Ge’s eyes made his heart jump.

“The kid inside Room 3 is acting up again. He is the first person to have seen the ‘door’, so I suspect the appearance of the ‘door’ is related to him.”

Wasn't Room 3 empty? Where did this kid come from?

Chen Ge continued to read, and the letters inside the dresser explained how the single ‘door’ had caused the ruination of the entire mental hospital.

Chapter 168 - The Patient in Room Three

Chapter 168: The Patient in Room Three

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Jiujiang Third Psychological Convalescence Centre was opened 23 years ago. It was the earliest private mental hospital in Jiujiang. From the name, it was clear that they were not a government body but a private convalescence center.

The center had three sick halls, and the admission fee at the first sick hall was much cheaper than government hospital, but the conditions were extremely bad. The second sick hall's fees were twenty percent higher than normal, but there were specialized nurses and doctors. The third sick hall was only open to a small number of patients. The fee was extremely high, several times the price of a normal room.

...

From the notes left behind by the director, the situation when the center was first built was completely different from how it was later. At the beginning, the third sick hall was not a sealed up area. In fact, it was the place with the best environment and highest price.

The center operated for three months before they received a special patient. The director recorded the scenario in detail. That day was probably a turning point for him.

A car with foreign plates arrived at the center, and two men helped an incredibly pregnant woman out from the backseat. The director came to welcome them personally. After some questions, he realized that the woman had a serious mental illness. Due to safety concerns for the mother and the baby, the director rejected their admission.

The man seemed to have predicted this, and he offered a fee that was ten times higher than the already high asking price of the third sick hall. He told the director that he would pay for half a year of treatment at once.

Looking at the mountain of cash on the table, the director and the doctors were swayed. After the center went into operation, the first and second sick halls were filled to the brim, but most of the rooms in the third sick hall were left empty. After all, most rich patients would select official government mental hospitals to seek treatment.

With some coaxing from the doctors, the director finally admitted the pregnant woman and assigned her the third room of the third sick hall. After making sure that the woman had settled in, the man left the director with his phone number and claimed that he was the woman's husband. However, when the director asked to see their marriage certificate, the man could not produce it.

Nevertheless, since he had accepted the money, the director could not do anything about it. It was too late for regret. All he could do was take good care of the woman. After the initial diagnosis, it was found that the pregnant woman did suffer from a mental illness, bipolar disorder. She refused to communicate and would cry one moment and be consumed by rage the next. She slammed things that she could see and would sometimes injure herself. To keep her safe, the doctors baby-proofed everything inside Room 3.

The woman's illness was unstable, but due to her pregnancy, most medication could not be used. The only thing the doctors could do was psychological counselling. Three months passed just like that, and it was close to her due date. The hospital hired several nurses to watch over her twenty-four hours a day.

It was unknown whether it was the coming baby that had elicited the woman's motherly nature or the effects of the counselling sessions, but the woman stopped acting up. She did not like human contact and spent most of her time touching her stomach, talking to herself.

Four months later, the child was born, and the woman's condition improved tremendously. The director and doctors sighed in the relief, and that day, they called the husband, but there was no answer.

A bad feeling appeared in their heart, and they hired a special PI to investigate the man's identity. It turned out that all of his documentation was fake. After a discussion between the director and the doctors, they decided that if the man failed to show up after his money had run out, they would call the police. Considering the woman's condition, they did not tell her about this.

The woman recollected her hope in life after the baby was born and started to provide her full cooperation. She wanted to get better for her child. She would also ask about her husband because in her mind, after she was cured, her husband would return.

However, half a year later, the man's money had dried up, and the man seemed to have disappeared off the face of the earth.

There were two different voices inside the hospital. Some doctors and nurses suggested to have the mother and son transferred away—taking care of both for free was too much work. The director, out of his compassion, asked them to wait a little longer, but the nurse who took care of the woman accidentally let this information slip.

The woman demanded to talk to her husband, and all she got was the emotionless machine operator telling her that the number she was calling was no longer in use.

Before sending the woman into the center for treatment, there appeared to have been a pact between the woman and the man. Now that the pact had been broken, the woman's condition deteriorated. She started to turn hostile to everyone around her. She was lost inside a dark maze and could not find a way out. To prevent the woman from hurting her own son, the doctor removed the baby from her care.

The woman lost her mind and refused to communicate. The baby was too small, and the hospital could not just adopt him for her. They tried their best to cure the woman, hoping to get information on the man from her, to make him pay for the remaining of the fee.

No one would have thought that this treatment would go on for three years. The woman's child grew up inside the mental hospital, and he learned how to walk and talk in this place that was filled with crazies.

The first three years of a child's life was called the baby period. It was when a human picked up the most information, and it formed the foundation for the child's future. The woman's child spent these formative years inside this twisted and complicated environment.

The money had already run out, so the hospital was taking care of them out of kindness. It was fine for one or two days, but as the days dragged on, the sound of complaints grew, and even the workers' eyes started to change when they saw the child.

The crazy mother was locked inside her room, and the thing the child did the most in those three years was ask the doctors or nurses to carry him to Room 3. He would lean against the window on the door and look into the room at the woman.

When the child learned how to walk, he would sometimes wander over to Room 3 on his own, looking at the door that was several times bigger than he was. Days rolled into weeks and weeks into months. Other children of his age had family and friends—their lives were filled with colors—but the world in this child's eyes were different. White-washed hospital walls filled most of his memory, and sooner or later, he acted different from how a normal child would.

Chen Ge had unwillingly read to the end. The letter was like the director's personal diary.

"This child's childhood is even sadder than mine."

He had thought that his own childhood of playing with mannequin heads and plastic bones was sad enough, but here was someone who had it worse.

Putting down the letter, Chen Ge turned to look at the not-yet-mailed envelopes. The envelopes had no stamps and were not addressed. They were yellow from age and seemed to have been written years ago. Chen Ge opened them according to chronological order. The first letter was written twenty years ago. At the time, the woman's child had only been two.

"Doctor Chen, this is the first time I've come across such a brilliant child. He picks up stuff at a superhuman rate.

"Being born in a hidden corner of the place, growing up in a sick environment, should I send him away?

"The child will definitely be a genius in the future, but his various reactions make me worry.

"Ever since he learned how to talk, just like his mother, he has talked to talk to himself. No, it feels more like he is communicating with something we can't see.

"The doctors and nurses are very busy, and there is no one who is free to teach him to speak other than me, but I keep hearing strange words coming from his lips. Did he pick those up from hearing the doctors and nurses? Or is someone else teaching him?

"I'm materialistic, but seeing what happened to the kid has swayed my conviction. According to rumors, a toddler can see things that adults cannot, is that true?"

Chapter 169 - Door!

Chapter 169: Door!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“I’m curious about everything with regards to this child, but I am also worried about knowing too much. The kid is like a swamp; the closer you get, the greater the alert in your mind.

“The mother has bipolar disorder, and only when she is in the company of her son will she not act up. To facilitate treatment, the doctors bring the son to see her often. Every child has a natural reliance on their mothers. Even though he is so small, he knows that is his mother.

...

“However, the weirdest thing was, when the child saw his mother, the first thing he said wasn’t mom or his own name but ‘door’.

“Initially, I thought that I was mistaken, or maybe it was just a meaningless mumble by the child, but when the nurse carried him away, he used his tiny finger to point at the door to her mother’s room and repeated the same word—door.

“He seemed to be telling us that he wants to get close to that door. This is the most curious thing because I’ve asked the whole hospital, and no one has taught him that word before!

“Without guidance, he managed to vocalize the word and even knew what it meant. Who told him this? Is there really something else inside the hospital?

“Then, it became even weirder. When the nurse who carried the child and I entered Room 3 to see his mother, the child looked down the corridor and waved his arms like he was greeting someone. I was sure that there was no one other than us in that corridor.

“Of course, if that was all, I wouldn’t have been so worried. The nurse also noticed this, so she asked him what he was doing. Who was he waving at?

“At the time, the child stammered this name—He Yajun.

“The nurse didn’t know what it meant and assumed that the child was just working on his vocal cords. She did not take it to heart and continued to carry the child away. At the time, I really wanted to stop her because He Yajun was a real person. Before the third sick hall was built, a construction worker had an accident, and that person’s name was He Yajun.

“This was something even the doctors and nurses did not know, so how did he come up with that name?

“I stood at the door and saw the nurse carry the child away. When she went up the stairs, the child once again waved at the corner that was empty. Honestly, I’ve treated many children with mental illnesses, but I’ve never been afraid. However, that day, in that corridor, I was gripped by intense fear.

“After that incident, I paid closer attention to the boy.”

That was the end of the first letter. Until the end, the director did not mention who the letter was addressed to. Chen Ge finished the whole thing, and the only thing relevant to the identity of the addressee was the Doctor Chen at the beginning.

Surname Chen? Could it be Dad? But he’s a Haunted House operator, not a doctor!

Chen Ge was initially glad that he had found a clue related to his parents, but he thought about it and believed that he was being a bit too optimistic. He opened the second letter, and the content was even more unbelievable.

“Doctor Chen, we have to meet in person. Things are getting slightly out of control.

“When the child learned how to crawl, he would actively go find his mother. No one in the third sick hall knew how he managed to leave the office and end up outside the door of Room 3.

“The other nurses and doctors have also noticed the weird behavior of the child. He rarely cries and smiles at random places. He gets more excited as the day darkens, and he is very much not acting like a normal child.

“He has great learning ability, and even at such a young age, he can vocalize his words clearly even though the things that leave his lips often make chills run down peoples' spines.

"Perhaps the world in the child's eyes is different from ours. He sees the patients who take tranquilizers and sleeping pills as toys, and the way he looks at them is like they are already dead.

"He also waves and face patients who have lost their mind, but he never looks them in the face. Instead, he looks at the area above their shoulder like there is something about the patient's shoulders.

"The weirdest thing is that he likes to go sit outside Room 3. He never goes into it; he just sits there, staring at the door. A whole afternoon could pass with him doing just that. Some doctors and nurses suggested that we send the child to an orphanage. They were spooked by this kid, but sending him away would influence the mother's recovery. We have used a year to stabilize his mother's condition, and we cannot give up now.

"I rejected the doctor's suggestion, and after several months, there was good news from the police. Using the car plate as a lead, they found the boy's biological father down south. At the time, the mother's condition had mostly been cured. We hired a lawyer to bring the father to court, demanding that he pay for the hospital and treatment fee and, at the same time, give the child's mother an official marriage and name.

"We won the case. It was unclear whether the fear of prison or guilt changed the father. Everything was improving positively, and the mother was getting better. The young woman showed exceptional strength when she was before her son.

"The treatment continued for another half a year, and the mother's illness had fully stabilized. She did not have many friends or family, so other than the few doctors who sent her away, her departure did not cause much of an effect. The child left with his mother, but the three years growing up at the mental hospital have left their scars already. The night before he left, he snuck back to the corridor and kept saying things that people could not understand to the door.

"After they left, I assumed everything was over, but who would have thought things would progress down a completely unexpected route?

"Just one year later, when the child was four, he was sent back to the center by his father!

“According to his father, the woman was killed at home, and the child witnessed the whole process. When I saw the child again, he had changed a lot. The only pillar in his life had crumbled, and his condition was similar to how his mother was when she first arrived.

“Due to previous reasons and history, our center didn’t dare admit him. We persuaded the father to send him to an official hospital instead. On the night that we rejected him, right at midnight, the white door of Room 3 started to leak blood.

“This lasted for one whole minute before it stopped. When I found out about this, it was one week later, and within that one week, many unbelievable things have happened at the hospital.”

The second letter stopped her abruptly. Reading the letters’ content and the director’s description, Chen Ge was reminded of someone who experienced the exact same thing.

He opened the third letter urgently, and inside was a picture with the mother and her son. When Chen Ge saw this picture, he was overwhelmed by emotion. This was because he had seen this picture before; it was the same picture he had seen when he was helping Doctor Gao pack up Men Nan’s belongings at Hai Ming Apartments!

A woman with the patient’s garb was leaning on the bed, and a shy little boy sat next to her.

Chapter 170 - Only One Solution

Chapter 170: Only One Solution

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The woman in the picture had no make-up, and she looked like she had just recovered from a big illness. There was a unique charm to her. Earlier, at Hai Ming Apartments, Chen Ge had criticized Men Nan's father for having an affair even though his wife was so beautiful, and now he understood why. Chen Ge moved his gaze to study the shy boy in the picture.

Is this child really Men Nan? An incredibly talented child when he was still a baby, but how come he could not handle a mere mirror monster after he grew up? Did his talent shrink as he grew older? The story told in the letter was real. Chen Ge did hear people say that toddlers could see many weird things that adults could not, but as they grew up, everything returned to normal, and the memory that they had disappeared.

...

It shouldn't be so simple. Chen Ge was reminded of what Doctor Gao told him. After a deep diagnosis, he discovered there were three personalities within Men Nan.

The first was a self-protecting personality that appeared in the shape of his mother. This was probably the lingering spirit of Men Nan's mother. She had attached herself to Men Nan to protect him whenever she could.

The second was Men Nan's main personality. This persona grew up with him, and it was the normal Men Nan that his friends knew.

The last personality hid in the deepest recesses of Men Nan's mind. According to Doctor Gao, this personality had stuck at Men Nan's childhood years. He refused to communicate, and the period when he appeared was extremely short. When the third persona appeared, Men Nan would display superhuman talent.

Is it possible that the third persona is the real Men Nan? Then what exactly happened to him? What caused this persona to appear?

Before entering the Third Sick Hall, Chen Ge had studied up on this. He was familiar with split personality disorder, and he knew that the appearance of each persona had a specific reason behind it.

Perhaps it was loneliness, or perhaps it was self-defense mechanism. Chen Ge had no idea why Men Nan's third persona had appeared, but he had a feeling that it was related to the door at the third sick hall.

Putting the picture back into the envelope, Chen Ge started to read the third letter.

"The door appears punctually at midnight. It stays for a minute before disappearing.

"I've sealed up the third sick hall and forbidden anyone from getting close to Room 3 at night. I've asked the nurses on night patrol to keep an eye on that bleeding door.

"Three days have passed, and the nurses told me there there was a weird noise coming from behind the door. When the door returned to normal, she pushed the door open, and the room was empty. There wasn't a rat as she had expected.

"On the fourth day, I stayed vigil by the door personally. There were indeed movements behind the door, and I could hear the sound of chewing.

"On the fifth night, the thing behind the door seemed to have sensed something. There was knocking coming from behind the door. There was knocking from a room that was confirmed to be empty. If not for the fact that I have just concluded a mental test, I would have thought I was crazy.

"I used wooden boards to seal up the door, and on the tenth night, there was urgent banging on the door.

"Fresh blood seeped through the door, dying it red. It was like a scene from a nightmare. I've contacted the workers to remove the door and asked a few doctors to watch the door outside Room 3.

"On the midnight of the eleventh day, everyone present could hear the door being opened. The sound came from Room 3 even though the door was already gone.

"When the sound occurred, I saw the door frame dyed red. I managed to take a close look. It was not blood but something that looked like blood vessels. One minute later, everything returned to normal, and one of the doctors said that he saw a shadow crawl out of the room.

“Said doctor handed in his resignation that afternoon. The hospital was running low on staff, so I denied his request. It only made his emotions run wild; there was no room for negotiation at all.

“Removing the door was useless, so I asked the workers to seal it up with bricks. In the initial few days, the method seemed to be effective, but one week later, there was a new problem with Room 3. Whenever midnight arrived, Room 3, even the walls next to it, started to turn red like bruised skin. The red was spreading, and I fear that, one day, it will cover the entire hospital.

“I’ve used every method that I can think of, but I cannot stop it. This room was fine, and everything happened after the accident that befell the child’s mother. Do you think I should find the boy? To find the solution or reason from him?”

Chen Ge’s face was dark after reading the third letter. This door was much more troublesome than he had anticipated. The old director had used all sorts of methods, but he had still failed. He had not only failed to close the door, but he had exacerbated the situation.

“But there has to be a solution or else the center would have closed ten years ago and not just five years ago.”

Chen Ge picked up the last letter, and his expression turned serious. This was because the last envelope had something others did not: an address. It was addressed to Linjiang New Schistosomiasis Control Station.

“Chen Ge, I’ve followed your instructions, and thankfully, the door is temporarily closed. But I don’t understand, why can Men Nan close the door?”

The letter was short, but it revealed two important facts to Chen Ge. One, the door could be closed; two, Men Nan was the key to closing it.

Looks like I'll need Men Nan's help if I want to deal with the door in the mirror at my Haunted House.

Chen Ge read the short fourth letter again.

At the very end, the old director has shown interest in the world behind the door. Could the reason for his disappearance be related to that?

The center had been closed five years ago, and before it was sealed up, the director had disappeared. These two incidents had to be related. Replacing the letters, Chen Ge looked at the dresser.

“Something is not right. The letters weren’t stamped. The earlier three letters did not even have an address, so they could not have been mailed. How did the director communicate with this Doctor Chen?

“Furthermore, why would the mailed letters return to the director’s office?”

Chen Ge narrowed his eyes as several possibilities entered his mind.

“Could it be that the director also suffered from split personality disorder and one of his personas was this Doctor Chen? Or had the mysterious Doctor Chen who received the letters returned to the hospital after the director’s disappearance and purposefully left the letters here? But why would he do that?”

Chen Ge only ended up with more questions.

“Who is this Doctor Chen?”

Chen Ge thought about it before putting the letter with the address into his shirt pocket.

Chapter 171 - Something Wrong with Qin Guang

Chapter 171: Something Wrong with Qin Guang

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

There was nothing else in the dresser. After closing the door, Chen Ge snapped a few pictures of the dresser.

“There are four blood red nails on the four corners of the dresser, and every gap was sealed with clear cellophane. The fact that the cupboard could be preserved in the Third Sick Hall for so long has got to do with this unique setting.”

...

Chen Ge tried to yank the nail out, but he failed after giving it a try. The four nails were stuck deep into the corners—it was as if they were already joined to the dresser.

“There is something unique about these four nails. I should return in the morning to pull them out.”

Chen Ge had stayed for far too long inside the director’s office, so he had no idea what was happening outside.

When he stepped out from the resting area, the white cat jumped onto his shoulder and refused to get down no matter what. Chen Ge nudged himself carefully toward the office door. He did not dare to go out directly, afraid that the nurse or the twisted face was hiding at the corner to ambush him.

With the hammer raised, Chen Ge leaned against the door to listen for weird noises coming from outside. Ten seconds passed, and he did hear something weird. The sound of doors opening and closing reverberated down the corridor, like someone was inspecting the rooms one by one.

Chen Ge pushed the office door slightly, and in the corridor that seemed to reach into the endless dark, there was something swaying in the inky darkness. The shadow gradually gathered its shape as it flitted in and out of the rooms.

“That’s a white nurse’s outfit. Is she looking for her notebook?” Chen Ge gripped the hammer. He was considering whether to face the nurse head on or temporarily retreat. The nurse’s body was very twisted, and this caused her to have a staggering gait since she could barely maintain her balance. Even so, she was moving at a quick speed. Viewed from afar, it was quite scary.

“She appeared to have discovered me on the third floor. If not for the opportune sound of a door opening, we would have been involved in an altercation. Keeping her around means another dangerous element for me to worry about. In that case, I should use the notebook as bait and take care of her while I still have the element of surprise.”

Chen Ge was as calm as he could be. He was coming up with the solution that was the most beneficial to him.

“The director’s office is large. Even if I fail to kill her with one hit, there’s enough space for me to continue the aggression. It’s also the perfect opportunity to see whether the cleaver is useful against these things.”

Chen Ge placed the notebook before the dresser, put away the letters, and climbed into the dresser to hide with the cat. He adjusted himself until he found a comfortable position. After several minutes, the door to the office was opened.

The nurse saw the notebook easily. However, she did not rush in to take it immediately. She seemed to be cautious of the dresser. She hesitated for quite some time before staggering into the room.

Chen Ge’s eyes caught the nurse’s every movement. When she bent down to take the notebook, Chen Ge saw his opportunity, blasted the door open and swung the hammer right at the nurse. The hammer fell on the nurse, and her already misshapen body became even more distorted.

Not giving her a chance to recover, Chen Ge grabbed the cleaver from his backpack. The red cloth fell to the ground as Chen Ge stuck the blade into the nurse’s outfit. There was a sharp sound beside his ears. The nurse’s clothes were split open, and even though there was no blood, it was clear that a part of the nurse’s body had gone missing.

“This cleaver is useable!”

The nurse’s dead face changed. It was filled with pain and anger. She opened her jaws wide to bite at Chen Ge’s face, shrieking.

Chen Ge raised the cleaver to defend himself, but he had underestimated the nurse's aggression level. This thing was different from a normal human being. Even though the cleaver struck her body, her movement did not slow; if anything, she moved faster.

The cleaver dealt some damage to the nurse, but the nurse also got close to her target. Her ugly face was inches away.

Chen Ge was seconds away from certain death. At that moment, the white cat on his shoulder suddenly jumped onto the nurse's face. The stray cat was vicious. The nurse's attack was halted, and she changed target to bite at Chen Ge's arm.

The nurse was very aggressive. Chen Ge weaved left and right to evade her attacks. There was a cling on his wrist like something had fallen off. He did not pay the sound any attention. He focused fully on doing damage to the nurse's body using the cleaver.

Even though there was no blood, the nurse's size was visibly shrinking, and her form started to waver. After who knew how many cuts, the nurse completely disappeared, and the torn up nurse's outfit fell to the floor.

"It's over?"

Before he could celebrate, there was commotion coming from the corridor. Something seemed to be heading his way, and the number of new pursuers sounded to be quite high.

"Can't stay here any longer. I'll be dead if I'm surrounded here." Chen Ge grabbed his backpack, and holding the cleaver and hammer on each hand, he made a hasty retreat. He ran until he reached the staircase. He was about to catch his breath when the phone in his pocket vibrated.

Mission success alert? Chen Ge saw the message, and he felt cheated. The vibration was a call from Liu Dao. I'll need to remind them not to call me during my livestream. This might be the cause of my death if I'm not careful.

Chen Ge answered the call with a whisper. "I'm hanging up if there's nothing important."

"Quick look at your livestream room!" Liu Dao sounded quite excited.

"Huh?" Chen Ge clicked his page open, and he got quite a shock when he saw the number. His viewer count had shot up to 300,000! And the number was still climbing. It would pass 400,000 in just a few minutes.

“What’s going on? Is something wrong with the platform?” Seeing the rising number, Chen Ge decided to change the livestream’s name to the address of his Haunted House and added an explanation in the information box.

“Nothing’s wrong with the platform, but something’s definitely wrong with Qin Guang! After entering a classroom in Mu Yang High School, his visual suddenly turned black. No one knows what happened. I initially thought this was some kind of special effect, but the screen stayed black for as long as twenty-five minutes. For a professional livestream, even five minutes without an image is a tragedy. This can only mean one thing; some kind of accident must have happened to his team!”

The more he said, the more excited he got. “This is a gift from the heavens! The entire platform planned to promote a supernatural livestream because of him, but most of the viewers only got a black screen. They went to search for similar content, and since only the two of you are doing this, and the key point being that your livestream content and quality are much higher than his, most of the viewers came and never left!”

After hearing the cause and effect from Liu Dao, based on the trajectory of the viewership so far, getting to 500,000 was not impossible, and that was a dream for a newbie host like Chen Ge.

Chapter 172 - The Monster Behind the Door

Chapter 172: The Monster Behind the Door

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

A rocket rise in popularity was something that Chen Ge did not expect.

I've already given Qin Guang the warning, but he refused to listen, so I can't be blamed. Thankfully, Mu Yang High School isn't that dangerous, and the ghosts there aren't evil, so he should be fine. Chen Ge still felt like he was a kind person. Hopefully, he'll speedily recover and will think twice before plagiarizing other people's content again.

...

Chen Ge made use of this opportunity to promote his Haunted House. He believed that many viewers would remember the name of Western Jiujiang's House of Horrors from this livestream. Popularity was like rising bread; in the foreseeable future, there should be a continuous stream of viewers who would come to pay him a visit.

"Chen Ge, I'll need to talk to you about drafting a new contract. Also, I have a question to ask." Liu Dao did not hang up. He was under a lot of pressure as well. "You have arranged this entire livestream, right? The whole setting is controlled and operated by the team at your Haunted House?"

Liu Dao did not know that much about Chen Ge even though they were partners. He knew that Chen Ge owned a Haunted House, so it was not uncommon for the boss to know professional actors and have the ability to design the most authentic scary experience. For someone who did not believe in the occult, he had to explain the situation with logic when he came across supernatural incidents.

"I suppose so." Chen Ge gave a vague answer. He did have a team back at the Haunted House, but other than Xu Wan, the rest of the cast could not be revealed.

"I knew you are not in there alone." Liu Dao sighed. "Earlier, the camera on your wrist fell. After you ran out, the camera on the floor suddenly started to move, and after Sister Lee saw it, she thought an actual ghost had arrived.”

“What?” Chen Ge whipped his head to look at his wrist. Indeed, the camera had fallen, probably when he was tussling with the nurse.

“Look, it’s moving again!”

Chen Ge silenced the chatlog and turned to look at the video on the right-hand corner. The video corresponded to the wrist camera. The video was moving forward, and the camera seemed to be hanging on the nurse’s outfit. It was moving toward Chen Ge!

“It’s still alive after the punishment I put her through? Is it due to the unique environment?”

Liu Dao did not know how serious it was and gave Chen Ge some serious advice. “You’d better contact your friend and tell him to not appear before the camera. This will give the viewers a greater sense of anticipation.”

“What anticipation?” After hanging up, Chen Ge ran up the stairs immediately. The livestream showed two different camera angles, and one was running away from the other.

This was something new for the viewers and for Chen Ge as well. He rushed into the third-floor corridor. After running a few feet, Chen Ge lowered his head to glance at his phone. He saw his back!

“She has caught up to me!”

Without a way to deal with the nurse permanently, Chen Ge ran into the staircase and down back to the second floor. After losing the nurse, he changed his direction and flew down to the first floor.

The nurse was chasing after him on instinct. After losing Chen Ge, she repeated her action of inspecting every room.

The nurse is different from the mirror monster; she has no will. It is as if she has melded herself with the environment.

After the nurse left, Chen Ge climbed out of his hiding spot. This level was where everything started. The stench is now even thicker.

The corridor of the first floor was different from other floors. In the cracks on the ground, there was things that looked like worms wiggling. There were faded red bruises on the walls, and after peeling a section of the wall off, Chen Ge discovered that the red had seeped into the wall. It felt like he was examining the skin of a living person.

“The director’s letters mentioned something similar, but he said that the weird changes were limited to the walls adjacent to Room 3.”

There were ten rooms on the first floor, corresponding to the ten patients. Chen Ge nudged closer to the door nearest to him. The door to Room 10 was made of steel. Instead of a sickroom, it looked more like a prison. Chen Ge tried many ways, but the door did not even budge.

“The quality is good. Even after so many years, there are no signs of it getting loose.”

The patient in Room 10 was known as the Devil. Even though Doctor Gao said that the patient probably would have died from his disease already, there were always exceptions to the rule.

That night, Chen Ge had met quite a few patients from the Third Sick Hall already, perhaps Patient Number 10 was still alive.

Room 8 and 9 were also equipped with steel doors. Chen Ge could not open them without creating a huge commotion. It was no time for sightseeing, so Chen Ge rushed to Room 3.

The wall was peeling off, and something that looked like blood was leaking from inside the walls. The dolls were half exposed from underneath the mattresses. It felt like they would reach out to grab his legs at any moment.

Every corner of the corridor was filled with bruises, and when Chen Ge touched it, lines that looked suspiciously like blood vessels appeared. It was a weird feeling; it felt like it was the building itself that was bleeding.

The stench in the air was so thick that it had gotten uncomfortably pungent. Suppressing the rising nausea, Chen Ge walked toward Room 3. When he was close enough, he finally saw the door.

It was a door that was completely dyed red with blood. It was half-open, and there was a no-entry sign hanging on the door knob.

“This is the ‘door’ that has ruined this hospital.”

It was not until when he saw the door that it dawned on him how dangerous his situation was. Chen Ge moved his legs forcibly forward, the cleaver and hammer in his hands giving him zero security. Every cell in his body was screaming for him to leave, but there was also a voice at the back of his brain calling him to move forward, hurrying him.

With the hair on his body standing up, Chen Ge finally stopped at the door of Room 3. In the dark corridor, a door sat quietly amid the blood-dyed walls. It was like the heart of the Third Sick Hall, and everything revolved around it.

Will this happen to the door in my Haunted House if I leave it be?

Chen Ge looked into Room 3 through the gap. The ceiling, walls, bed... everything Chen Ge could see was red. Even though it was just a door, it was the separation between two drastically different worlds.

He reached out to touch the door, hoping to close it. However, when he moved the door, a familiar noise entered his ears.

He had heard this noise at the Haunted House before. It was the sound of something heavy being dragged.

Chapter 173 - Wake Him Up

Chapter 173: Wake Him Up

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

When he heard this sound, Chen Ge did not hesitate and slammed the door closed. With his hand around the lock, a chill snuck into his palm and spread throughout his body. He froze outside the door and focused his attention on locating the source of the noise.

“It definitely came from inside the door, but I’m unable to ascertain which direction.” The image of a masked monster dragging a body down the corridor appeared in Chen Ge’s mind. The sound drew closer until it suddenly stopped.

...

Chen Ge’s muscles were tensed. It was a curious feeling. The door before him was like a mirror. The two worlds reflected each other, and the monster was standing where Chen Ge was. There was just a door between them, and neither party dared do anything rash.

Eerie winds blew down the corridor. Four minutes later, there was the sound of a door opening coming from the second floor. The female nurse seemed to have caught up to him. Things were not looking good for Chen Ge. The nurse was coming, but he was caught in a situation where he could not move an inch. The monster on the other side of the door had sensed probably him. If he made any abrupt movements, the monster might come out from the door.

This was a silent competition. The monster inside the door was hesitating. Outside the door, Chen Ge did not have a plan to face the monster yet. His biggest goal then was to find something to temporarily close the door and survive the night at the hospital.

The nurse, who had finished inspecting the third and second floors, finally arrived at the first floor. The nurse seemed to have been a vengeful person when she was alive because when she saw Chen Ge, she started running toward him in her tipsy gait.

In a dark hall within an enclosed sick hall, a madwoman in a tattered nurse outfit was charging at him; this was a scary scene indeed. Chen

Ge's arms were covered in green veins, and he looked at the encroaching nurse out of the corner of his eyes.

"I've already given you the notebook, so why are you still chasing me?"

If this was another place and another time, Chen Ge would not have panicked, but the monster inside the door had put him under too much pressure.

He had heard the voice and had never seen the monster behind the door, and the fear of the unknown was always the biggest.

The nurse was relentless. With her claws lashing, she soon arrived within ten meters of Chen Ge. The wounds caused by the cleaver had recovered, and the nurse's misshapen body had solidified plenty. Chen Ge could even see the camera hanging on the nurse's lapel.

"Don't push it."

When the nurse was five meters from Chen Ge, he made a quick decision. Between the two, he picked the weaker one. He would deal with the nurse first before taking on the thing inside the door.

Chen Ge slowly pulled his hands back from the door, and when the nurse was close enough, Chen Ge rammed into her with a speed that was faster than she was. The hammer swung freely, and Chen Ge assaulted the nurse like he was a crazed person. In reality, other than being a little bit hard to kill, the nurse was not that powerful.

When the cleaver cut into the woman's body, Chen Ge did not continue his aggression. He knew that the bigger threat came from behind him.

While Chen Ge and the nurse were caught in the altercation, the door to Room 3 started to bleed. Something that looked like blood slid down the door before disappearing when it hit the ground. A powerful force was nudging the door open from the inside. The door creaked as it slowly opened.

"The thing is coming out!" Those few seconds were not enough to fully deal with the nurse, and Chen Ge found himself caught between a rock and a hard place. The nurse seemed to hate him a lot as she curled her twisted body around him, trying to constrict him like a boa.

With a bigger threat behind him, Chen Ge steeled his heart. He struggled loose from the nurse and whacked the nurse heavily on her back. The hammer given by the black phone had a debilitating effect on ghosts, and this was proven when the hammer landed on the nurse's body. Chen Ge hit the nurse on the same spot, and the nurse got tossed forward, landing between Chen Ge and the blood door.

The door was already half open, and something was coming out.

"This is not where you belong!" Chen Ge carried on his attack. The normal method could not kill the nurse, so he tried the only method available—he planned to force the nurse into the blood door and perhaps that might close the door.

Things went smoother and much scarier than Chen Ge anticipated. When the nurse neared the door, a hairy hand reached out from the half-open door. The hand reached for the location Chen Ge was standing at earlier. During his fight with the nurse, Chen Ge had purposely traded his original position with the nurse.

The palm grabbed the nurse and powerfully yanked backwards. The nurse's face was twisted, and she barely had the chance to struggle before she was pulled into the door. Seeing this, Chen Ge ran forward and slammed the door shut. He put all his weight against the door to block it from opening.

BANG!

There was slamming from behind the door. Chen Ge had experienced a similar thing at his Haunted House, but the difference was, the door at the Haunted House only existed for a minute, but the one at the hospital might persist until dawn.

BANG!

Something slammed into the door heavily. It caused Chen Ge's back to go numb. "Just what kind of monster is behind the door? Why is it so powerful?"

He did not know the method to close the door, and there was nothing around to help him block the entrance. The worst thing was that the door-slamming might attract more monsters.

"This door has to be closed, even if just temporarily. If not, I might not be able to survive to see the sun rise tomorrow morning." Chen Ge forced himself to calm down. With his back to the door, he pulled out his phone to call Doctor Gao. "Please pick up!"

It was answered after four rings. Doctor Gao's voice drifted through the phone. "Chen Ge?"

Probably due to a signal problem, Doctor Gao's voice came intermittently, and this only made Chen Ge feel more nervous. "Doctor Gao, get me Men Nan! I have an emergency!"

"He is still hospitalized, what do you want from him?"

"It's a life and death situation! He was born at a mental hospital, and the hidden third persona is the real Men Nan," Chen Ge said urgently. While Doctor Gao was confused by what he had said, from Chen Ge's hurried tone, he knew the gravity of the situation.

"I'll drive to the hospital now. I'll be there in twenty minutes. Don't hang up; tell me if you need anything."

"I might not survive twenty minutes." Chen Ge's back was sore, and the few sickrooms next to him had started to make weird noises. "Doctor Gao, you have to help me invoke the youngest persona inside Men Nan!"

Chapter 174 - The Monster's Weakness

Chapter 174: The Monster's Weakness

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

"The youngest persona? Men Nan's third person is very well secluded and rarely appears. I cannot promise that I'll be able to do anything, you'd better be mentally prepared for a failure." There was the sound of a door opening from Doctor Gao's side; he was rushing out of his home.

"Only the youngest persona will have the answer to what I need to know. Doctor Gao, no matter what, you have to wake him up!" The slamming of the door came from behind him, and through the phone, Doctor Gao could hear it clearly.

...

"I'll try my best!" He knew Chen Ge through Gao Ru Xue. Initially, he had treated Chen Ge as someone who liked psychology, but when Chen Ge volunteered to cure Wang Xin and Men Nan, his impression of the young man improved greatly, and at the same time, he gained many new questions about the man.

Especially that night, he saw something questionable at Hai Ming Apartments, but he had not told anyone. He kept it inside his heart, attempting to find the answer himself. The phone stayed connected, and as Doctor Gao drove toward the hospital Men Nan was at, Chen Ge tried to hold the door behind him shut.

About three minutes later, the door slamming did not end, and to make matters worse, the sound of gears unlocking came from Room 8, which was not far away from Chen Ge. The room had a reinforced door, and it slowly opened to a slit.

A face that was uneven on both sides looked out. He extended his neck and came out of the room wearing a doctor's garb.

"The man was hiding inside the sickroom." Chen Ge had tried opening the door earlier, but he had failed. Now that he thought about it, it was probably the twisted face who did something to the door. The Doctor Skull-cracker's hammer leaned against Room 3's door, and he only had access to the cleaver.

Chen Ge looked at the twisted face and was considering pushing him into the door as well.

“I wonder what will happen to living person if trapped behind the door. If he dares to attack me, he’ll be the perfect candidate to experiment on.” The more dangerous it was, the calmer Chen Ge became. He held the cleaver and adjusted the position of the hammer. He formed a barricade using the hammer so that even if he left the door, the door would not be opened instantly.

After midnight, there were some chances to the man’s twisted face. His expression was more insane, and he slowly strode toward Chen Ge empty-handed.

“Something’s not right.” Chen Ge noticed the problem instantly. When the man was at the second sick hall, he had run without a second thought even though he had the axe, but after entering the third sick hall, he dared approach Chen Ge, who had both a cleaver and a hammer, empty-handed.

The white cat hissed dangerously. When Chen Ge was fighting with the nurse, it had jumped down from Chen Ge’s shoulder, and now it was gnashing its teeth at the twisted face. Facing the cat and the man, the twisted face’s expression was completely different from before. His face that seemed to have undergone surgery revealed an ugly smile.

He walked slower and slower with each step like there was something heavy on his shoulders, and every step was a painful ordeal for the man.

“His pose is similar to Wang Shenglong’s...”

With the cleaver before his chest, the thing that Chen Ge did not wish to see the most appeared. The twisted face’s lips cracked open even more, and a second head appeared behind his shoulders.

It was just a normal head, but like a person standing up, a thin monster that was about 2.5 meters long extended out from the twisted face’s back. The monster’s lower body was connected to the twisted face’s back, and the monster touched the ceiling easily. It then curved forward, like a human-headed cobra heading toward Chen Ge.

“What is this?” Even though he was prepared, when Chen Ge saw the monster, he was still quite shocked. The monster was thin and long, wearing a large white cloth that was sewn together. Through the open patches, Chen Ge could see several human faces that were silent and drawn.

At the beginning, the monster was probably not that tall, but after jumping onto people's shoulders and consuming them, it finally grew to this height. Chen Ge realized something. Wang Shenglong had once used a painting to describe his relationship with a monster. In the painting, he had been at the bottom, and the monster was stepping on his shoulders.

The twisted face and the monster before Chen Ge shared a different relationship. The monster came directly out of the man's back.

Is the twisted face the monster itself, or have they achieved some kind of mutually-beneficial relationship?

There was no time to think because even though the twisted face stopped at two meters away from Chen Ge, the long monster on his back had already reached the top of Chen Ge's skull. The monster's face was extremely common—it was the kind that would be forgotten easily, but who would have thought that such a common face hid a gruesome monster?

"Let's play a game. If you win, I'll let you go, but if you lose, you'll give me your body." The monster and the twisted face's lips moved at the same time, and the voice appeared in Chen Ge's mind. "The game's name is called 'Who Speaks First'."

This was a game that the player was destined to lose because there was no time limit; Wang Shenglong was the perfect example. After agreeing to the game, the monster would climb onto the player's back and start the torment.

If the player lost their conviction and spoke, the monster would win, but even if they did not, the monster would continue to squat on their shoulders, and the game would never end. The human faces that Chen Ge saw through the patches were probably the monster's victims.

"If you want to play a game, sure, but you'll need to edit the rules," Chen Ge said in a calm tone. Doctor Gao was rushing to the hospital, so he was buying time for himself.

The monster stopped above Chen Ge's head. It was about half a meter away, and it took in a slight breath because it had not experienced this situation before. After a moment's pause, it turned to look at the twisted face, as if asking for his opinion. Shouldn't a normal person be screaming by now?

The smile froze on the twisted face. He assumed that Chen Ge was toying with them, so he pointed his finger at Chen Ge's head. The monster understood his meaning; it leaned downward, and a pair of shriveled hands reached out for Chen Ge's face, its body still extending.

Chen Ge saw the monster approaching, but he did not lose his cool; if anything, his mind was working clearer than before.

This is the monster's weakness! When he tried to attack me, it only moved its upper body, and its lower body was still stuck to the twisted face. This means that it probably cannot move its lower body easily.

No wonder it wants to play this game with people. If it could just jump on people's shoulders to take over their body, it wouldn't need to draw people in with the pretext of playing a game.

Chen Ge took a step back, but his eyes were glowing. When it moves from one body to the next, that is probably when it is the weakest.

Chapter 175 - The Last Trump Card

Chapter 175: The Last Trump Card

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge kept evading, but he was eventually cornered by the monster.

“Wait! I agree to play the game with you!”

...

Facing certain death, Chen Ge ‘surrendered’. He pocketed his phone. Looking at the monster, he said, “We’ll do it your way.”

The change in Chen Ge’s attitude made the twisted face suspicious, but the monster was just excited.

“Before the starting the game, you need to drop the cleaver.” This was the first time Chen Ge had heard the man speak. He had a special voice, like his vocal cords had been operated on before, and it sounded sharp and shrill.

“If I win the game, you need to guarantee that I can leave this place safely.” Chen Ge’s eyes were filled with distrust. Seeing this, the twisted face felt more confident. “Move away from the door, drop the knife, and after you win the game, I will tell you the exit.”

The game was a losing battle. If Chen Ge really agreed to it, his future would be a life of torture inside a dark mental hospital.

“Fine, I agree. What shall I do next?” Chen Ge tossed the cleaver aside, but he made sure that the handle was facing him. He shoved both his hands into his pockets.

“Just stand where you are.” The twisted face walked forward until he was two meters away from Chen Ge. “From this moment on, no matter what you see or hear, you cannot make a sound or else you lose.”

He stared at Chen Ge while the monster on his back continued to extend until the very common face was hanging upside down before Chen Ge.

“Still not speaking? Then how about something more exciting.” Chen

Ge sat down and bent over. The monster completely extricated itself from his back. The monster was three meters tall. Its legs were less than one meter long, and his limbs were the size of normal people. However, its body was long, like it was attached together from the bodies of many different people.

What in the world is this? The monster was so tall that it had a hard time maintaining its balance as it wiggled its way toward Chen Ge. There were only two meters between them. The monster's upper body hung above Chen Ge while its lower body slowly climbed toward him.

As if afraid that Chen Ge might regret his decision, its spindly hands gripped Chen Ge's shoulders to prevent him from running. Chen Ge was rather nervous as the creature walked toward him. He repeated the plan in his mind multiple times as he kept his eyes on the monster's legs.

When the legs were next to the cleaver, Chen Ge's hand inside his pocket suddenly pulled out. There was something he had that would definitely cause damage on the monster!

The sharp tip of the pen stuck into the monster's eye. The force caused the pen that was taped together to shatter immediately.

The pen was stuck inside the monster's eye socket, and its body wiggled like a snake. Obviously, it was damaged. In Hai Ming Apartments, Chen Ge had accidentally thrown Xiaoxiao at the mirror monster, and the doll had taken a bite out of the monster's body. It was then that Chen Ge realized other ghosts were the most effective method to harm ghosts.

Using the Pen Spirit's ballpoint pen was part of his plan. When the monster was screaming from pain, Chen Ge yanked out the pen and rushed forward. He acted very fast. When the twisted face realized what was happening, Chen Ge already held the cleaver in his hand.

When he tossed the knife, he had already planned everything. He knew that even if he placed the handle toward himself, the twisted face would not have noticed it considering how dark the corridor was.

Feeling the weight of the cleaver in his hands, Chen Ge aimed it at the monster's weakness: its legs. He had suffered a lot that night, and that cut contained all the negative emotions that Chen Ge wanted to vent. With every cut, the monster's body dwindled.

The effect of the cleaver is still too weak to completely demolish this monster. When it recovers, the situation will still be unfavorable for me. Chen Ge soon calmed down from his battle rage. The cleaver cannot hurt the monster, but it can definitely incapacitate the person who it relies on.

With the cleaver in his hands, Chen Ge whipped his head around to glare at the twisted face.

“What is the meaning of this?” The twisted face broke out in cold sweat. For some reason, he felt like history was about to repeat itself.

You’re dead meat! Chen Ge ran at him with the cleaver raised. The twisted face turned around and dashed toward the stairs. The twisted face ran for his life, and Chen Ge chased after him with the cleaver glinting dangerously in the dark. Behind them, the monster who was poked blind slithered like a snake on the floor as it tried to catch up to its prey. The three formed a curious sort of balance as they ran from the first floor to the fourth.

After entering the fourth-floor corridor, Chen Ge slowed down. He realized that the twisted face seemed to be purposely leading him this way. When they ran up the other floor, the twisted face did not even hesitate. He just shot up the stairs to the fourth floor.

He wants to escape to the other sick halls? Impossible, he can only control the monster when he is inside the third sick hall. Chen Ge knew very well how unique the third sick hall was for these mental patients. They would not leave this place willingly for various reasons.

Just as the twisted face was about to leave the third sick hall, he finally stopped. He screamed loudly until his face twisted even more. Hearing the man’s screams, two other men climbed out of the rooms from the sides. They were both injured, and they were Xu Tong and the patient with the Phantom Limb Syndrome.

If it was just the three of them, Chen Ge would not have been so afraid, but he could see the monsters slowly extending out from the two other men’s backs.

All the patients at Third Sick Hall are possessed by monsters? Their relationship should be more peaceful compared to Zhang Peng and the mirror monster. This is not a good sign for me.

There were nine patients at Third Sick Hall, and after taking out Wang Shenglong, Chen Ge might need to face eight similar monsters that night. There might even be monsters that were scarier than these.

The thin bodies snuck out from the patient's backs, and Chen Ge was surrounded by the three monsters.

"Don't be afraid, you'll soon be one of us." Twisted face had the two patients block Chen Ge's way as he moved to lock the steel door that connected the second and third sick hall.

Standing there, Chen Ge felt that all hope was lost. The three monsters had blocked all the exits, and they slowly inched closer to him. Chen Ge doubted that they would even give him the chance to commit suicide.

A three-star scenario is still too tough for me. Chen Ge leaned against the wall and took out a candy with a crying face from his pocket. This is my last trump card. After using this, no matter what, I'll need to leave this place.

Chen Ge popped the candy into his mouth, and instantly, he could feel endless resentment and coldness spread through his body.

Long black hairs knocked into the walls like waves. An intensely wicked presence was awakening. Zhang Ya walked out of Chen Ge's shadow in red!

Chapter 176 - Remember It

Chapter 176:

Remember It

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The girl's face was even more ethereal, heightened by the red in her outfit. Her black hair fluttered in the wind. Zhang Ya stood before Chen Ge, with less than thirty centimeters between their faces. The chill seeped through his skin, and Chen Ge's lips turned purple from the cold.

The man who was not afraid of anything felt fear curl around his heart. Instinctually, he wanted to lean backwards, but he found himself unable to move. The crying candle seemed to have melted into a flowing icy river, freezing every blood vessel in his body.

...

There was a spirit crying for help surging through his body. The negative energy gathered around his heart like a pair of hands had clamped over it. The candy was hard to swallow, and Chen Ge felt like he was going to faint from a lack of air.

Zhang Ya moved toward him slowly, radiating icy presence. She finally stopped before Chen Ge. That face without temperature, its beauty was enough to stop the breath in Chen Ge's throat.

His throat could not make any sound, and the candy had melted. Chen Ge could feel a spirit surging within his body. Looking at Zhang Ya, who was just six centimeters away from him, his calves started to quiver involuntarily.

This is not what I had in mind! Someone stop her!

Perhaps the title of Specter's Favored did kick in because the monster that was blinded by Pen Spirit crawled toward him at full speed. The thin body slithered like a giant snake. Its bony hands gripped Chen Ge's shoulders, and its lower body arced like it was preparing to jump on Chen Ge's shoulder.

The pain from his shoulders woke Chen Ge up from his fear-induced trance. He turned around to look at the monster and gave him an appreciative look.

Appreciation?

This seemed to have offended the monster, and the head that hung high went mad. It had no intention of fighting Zhang Ya and chose a spot on Chen Ge's neck to bite. The twisted human head opened its jaw but stopped when it was half a meter away from Chen Ge.

It was not that it wanted to stop, but it was forced to. In the dark, strings of bloody hair bound its body. The monster screamed and glared resentfully at Zhang Ya. It did not attack Zhang Ya earlier, but that did not mean that it was afraid of Zhang Ya.

The three monsters communicated with each other, and they switched their target to Zhang Ya. Chen Ge did not know what Zhang Ya was about to do, but he saw the girl's face drop. The black hair drilled into the monster's body. Her slender arms gripped the monster's head and slammed it heavily against the wall.

The monster wailed for the second time. The first time was when Chen Ge used the Pen Spirit to poke into its eye.

This is so cruel.

When Zhang Ya started battling the monster, the chilliness on Chen Ge decreased enough that he could move. He quickly moved backwards. The screaming of the spirit in his body weakened as the candy continued to dissolve. His eyes felt surrounded by coldness and his power of sight increased once more. He could see clearer in the dark.

The three monsters tussled with Zhang Ya. Her red outfit blazed in the dark, signaling her burning anger and resentment. It appeared like she was going to tear the monsters apart and consume them.

Ten minutes later, it was a slaughter inside the corridor. The monsters were increasingly wounded. When they were joined to humans, these thin monsters were the strongest, but when they were detached from their hosts, their power greatly weakened. Even though they had the advantage of numbers, they could not do anything to Zhang Ya.

The difference in power is so huge?

The thin monster was the scariest ghost Chen Ge had ever met. Initially, he had thought this monster would be as powerful as Zhang Ya, but it looked like he had underestimated Zhang Ya.

She is definitely unique to be able to have a personal page inside the black phone.

Chen Ge gripped the cleaver; he did not dare let his guard down.

At most, Western Jiujiang Private Academy was a three-star scenario, but Chen Ge believed it was only a two-star scenario. As the ghost from Western Jiujiang Private Academy, Zhang Ya could deal with the monsters from the three-star Third Sick Hall easily. This could only mean one thing. There should be something scarier than the thin monster hiding inside the Third Sick Hall.

There has to be a reason why the black phone evaluates the Third Sick Hall as a three-star scenario. There should also be a Red Specter inside the hospital and perhaps even more than one.

The more Chen Ge thought about it, the more confused he became. The door had been left open for so many years already, so theoretically speaking, the whole hospital should have been a monster's den by now. Did all the ghosts leave, or did something happen to them after they left the world behind the door?

Chen Ge looked around, and he realized the blood vessels that he saw on the first floor corridor had appeared on the fourth floor as well, and they were moving silently toward Zhang Ya.

This is bad. Chen Ge had regained full control of his body. The candy given by Zhang Ya was made from a human soul, and the effect of the candy froze his body. When the candy fully melted, the candy was absorbed by the Yin Yang Vision. Zhang Ya did not mean to use this method to harm Chen Ge.

There is something else hiding at the Third Sick Hall! Maybe the real monster is the hall itself! Chen Ge ran forward, but he only took several steps before Doctor Gao's voice came from the phone in his pocket.

"Chen Ge! I've found Men Nan!" The call had not been disconnected, so Doctor Gao knew things were urgent from what he heard.

"Okay, give him the phone." Chen Ge stopped moving. Men Nan was the key to this whole issue; he was the one who had seen the door and closed it before!

“This is Men Nan, thank you for helping me last time...”

“Skip the formalities. I know there’s a child persona hiding inside your mind—you should know how to wake him up!” Chen Ge’s situation was critical. The extremely scary thing inside the Third Sick Hall was awakening due to Zhang Ya’s appearance.

“You must be mistaken? What is this different persona you’re talking about?”

“He is inside you!” Chen Ge raised his voice. “You were raised inside a mental hospital. I don’t how that influenced your growth, perhaps you are trying to avoid it, but some things cannot be avoided even if you pretend that they can!”

“What are you talking about?” Men Nan did not sound like he was lying. “Perhaps I did grow up at a mental hospital, but who can remember things when they were a baby?”

“A baby’s synapses grow rapidly, and it might cause the instability in recorded memory. Therefore, many people cannot remember things when they were a baby,” Doctor Gao explained from an objective perspective. “But this doesn’t mean that they’ve forgotten all about it. They were hidden deep inside one’s mind. By evoking these memories, perhaps that childhood persona can be awakened.”

“Evoking the memory?” Chen Ge rummaged through his pocket and took out the picture he had found in the director’s office. He snapped a picture of it and sent it to Doctor Gao. “Men Nan, take a good look at this picture; this is the sickroom your mother once stayed in! It is Room 3 in the Third Sick Hall. Focus on the door that sat between yourself and your mother!”

Chapter 177 - He's Inside the Door

Chapter 177: He's Inside the Door

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Door?” Men Nan’s voice had an audible change. He had been reminded of something. The picture that Chen Ge had sent, Men Nan also possessed, but his picture was placed at the bottom of a drawer under several books.

When Chen Ge saw the picture at Hai Ming Apartments, he had been confused. This was the only picture Men Nan had of his mother, so he could not understand why he did not display it inside a photo frame. Instead, Men Nan hid it in a secluded corner like a memory that he refused to face.

...

He did not want to throw it away but refused to face it. It was the conflict inside his heart.

“Where did you get this picture?” Men Nan’s voice croaked, and his tone slowed down. Chen Ge brought the thing that he was trying to hide up to the surface, so he could not run away anymore.

“I found the picture at the mental hospital. I’ve gone inside the room your mother stayed in...”

“Leave that place immediately!” Men Nan screamed before Chen Ge finished.

“Leave? Looks like you have remembered something.”

There was another period of silence on the phone. Several seconds later, Men Nan said, “I don’t why I said that, but my instincts told me that place is very dangerous.”

“The mental hospital is locked, and I cannot leave. If it was not urgent, I wouldn’t have called to disturb you.” Holding the cleaver, Chen Ge saw the blood vessels were still inching toward Zhang Ya. “This has gone beyond me and you. Those madmen who refused treatment have returned to this place with their twisted ideologies.

They have detained living humans and experimented with axes and saws; can you imagine what else they might have done?"

"There are victims in the hospital?" Men Nan's voice was filled with uncertainty. He seemed to be doubting himself, like he wanted to say something but did not have the courage to.

"I can confirm one thing—there is more than one victim. I've found plenty of evidence here that suggest there are multiple victims." Chen Ge did not know what Men Nan was hesitating about. "I'm also in a dangerous situation. Monsters and patients are chasing me with axes. I cannot communicate with them."

After a long time, Men Nan spoke. "How do you expect me to help you?"

"Awaken the other persona inside you! He's the one I'm looking for!" The stench in the air intensified like a monster opening its maw.

"Can you tell me why?" Men Nan's voice was soft, and it was filled with complicated emotions.

Chen Ge did not have the time to play games with Men Nan, so he answered truthfully, "I want to close the door of the third room at the Third Sick Hall. Your childhood persona knows the way to close it. Awaken him! I know what happened to you when you were young. I understand and relate to your pain, but you cannot run away from it forever!"

"Close the door..." Men Nan seemed to be talking to himself. "I'm sorry, but I'm afraid I can't help you."

Chen Ge did not expect the brutal rejection from Men Nan. "Why?"

"Because he is not with me." Men Nan took a deep breath. "He locked himself up behind the door."

"Your childhood persona is on the other side of the door?" Chen Ge's brows were furrowed deeply.

"Yes. To be honest, he is the real main persona. My memory started only after four years old." Men Nan revealed this shocking information. "The main persona was born at the mental hospital and saw the twisted as normal. His world is different from normal. Before four years old, he tried his best to fix his perspective, and his only pillar of support was his mother, but when he was four, his mother was murdered, and the persona, who saw everything, decided to give up on the normal world.

“Perhaps the normal world had never shown him any kindness, so he believed that the world that we reside in is the truly twisted one. He closed himself up in his psyche, and then I appeared. He did not communicate with me until the day the director from the mental hospital and a Doctor Chen came to find me. They pleaded for my help to close this ‘door’.

“At the time, I was so small, and without knowing anything, they brought me back to the mental hospital where the main persona once spent his childhood. They asked me many questions, questions that now I cannot answer.

“That night, they arranged for me to sleep inside Room 3, and I don’t know what happened next. There were probably sleeping pills in the water because I slumbered so deeply, and it was probably then that they summoned the main persona.

“When I woke up, it was already midnight. I opened my eyes blurrily and saw myself lying in bed, but everything around me was blood red. However, the strangest thing was that the main persona was standing beside me.

“He told me to keep this a secret from everyone and pointed at the clock on the outside corridor. He told me to keep myself awake no matter how tired I was. Then he sent me out of the room. He stayed behind the door and closed it.

“After that, he stopped appearing, but there are sometimes memories that don’t belong to me that appear in my consciousness. I planned to carry these secrets with me to my grave because, even now, I’m unsure if these are just hallucinations.

“My situation is very similar to schizophrenia, but everything seems so real. I grew up in a state of constant self-doubt, and it is the main reason I chose to study psychology.”

There was great pain in Men Nan’s voice, and Chen Ge, as an outsider, understood his pain. To pretend to be a normal person and live a normal life was something of a challenge to the young man.

“This explains why he was unable to resist the mirror ghost.” Chen Ge held the phone, and his heart was quivering with anxiety.

“Men Nan should be telling the truth. When I detected the third persona inside his psyche, it did appear like shattered memories because the occurrences were very episodic and randomized.” Doctor Gao took the phone from Men Nan. He did not understand the conversation between Men Nan and Chen Ge, so he could not be much help.

“Yes, he should be telling the truth.”

The only person who could close the door had spent the last decade or so inside the door, and the door had been closed for that long. It was not until the hospital closed five years ago that the door opened again. Could the real Men Nan inside the door have gotten into some accident?

Chen Ge wanted to retreat. This building was too wicked. Even with Zhang Ya, he did not feel that safe. “It’s safer to retreat.”

He turned to look at the corridor. The draft fluttered Zhang Ya’s red outfit. The black hair that melted into the night poked through the monsters’ bodies repeatedly. Of the three monsters, two were already torn apart.

Chapter 178 - The Chase

Chapter 178: The Chase

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Black snow seemed to be falling in the corridor. Zhang Ya stood in the midst of it as her black hair absorbed the energy from the torn apart thin monsters, and the red on her clothes burned even brighter.

She has gotten even stronger...

...

Chen Ge's eyes twitched. Zhang Ya's affection level toward him was increasing at lightning speed. What if they broke through a certain level and Zhang Ya 'accidentally killed' him?

This girl, who looked cute and quiet, had a penchant for torturing her victims. If there was a seat open for the worst villain in this story, she would be a good candidate.

"We'd better leave the Third Sick Hall soon." Chen Ge walked toward Zhang Ya to try to get her to leave. Of the three monsters, only the one who was blinded remained. It was heavily wounded, and the faces on its body were screaming for help. Even Chen Ge could not help but feel sorry for the helpless creature. "Zhang Ya, it has received enough punishment. Stop torturing it, and just end its life. We're in a hurry, and I don't plan to stay at this place for long."

Blood streamed out like tears from the monster's only functional eye. It tried its best to struggle from the bind of the black hairs. The faces on its body started to scream shrilly.

"It's calling for help? Just leave it be then, let's go!" Chen Ge walked a few steps and realized that Zhang Ya was still standing where she was, her black hair slowly curling around the monster's feet. At the other end of the corridor, endless pulsing blood vessels seemed to reach into the monster's body like they were trying to rescue it.

The stench in the air turned heavier. While Zhang Ya was fighting with the blood vessels, the real monster at Third Sick Hall was awakening. More blood vessels poked out from the walls and ceiling.

Part of them wrapped around the monster's upper body while the rest crept toward Zhang Ya.

What is the thing that is controlling these blood streaks? Chen Ge tried to go and help Zhang Ya, but before he got near, the thin monster was torn into two. Most of the body parts were wrapped up by the blood vessels and carried downstairs. Zhang Ya only got a small part of it.

This was the first time Zhang Ya had lost, but from how Chen Ge saw it, they were lucky they kept their lives. He was about to advise Zhang Ya to leave, but before he could say anything, he saw the black hair come out of Zhang Ya's back like waves, and that flash of red rushed down the stairs!

The blood vessels along the way were torn apart, and Zhang Ya soon disappeared down the fourth-floor corridor. A cold draft blew into Chen Ge's open mouth, and he said after two seconds, "She still wants to give chase?"

Chen Ge looked at the dark corridor, and various scary images crowded his mind. His rationality told him it was time to leave; things had gone beyond his expectations. Retreat was the wise solution. He wanted to leave, but Zhang Ya had rushed forward alone. In fact, she might be tricked into enter the blood door.

It was a dangerous world on the other side of the door, and Zhang Ya might be outnumbered. The more he thought about it, the more scared he became. Chen Ge slashed the cleaver on the wall, yelling, "What am I doing?"

Then, he gritted his teeth and rushed into the darkness. Sitting beside a bloated mattress, the white cat's eyes were filled with confusion. This man said one thing but did another; his body even ran faster than earlier.

Chen Ge ran from fourth floor to second floor, but he still did not see Zhang Ya. More blood spots appeared on the walls, and it looked scary.

"All the blood streaks along the third and fourth floor were taken care of, but only some are destroyed on this floor, so Zhang Ya probably stopped here." Chen Ge did not see Zhang Ya on the second floor, and Chen Ge went down to the first floor.

The blood red corridor was empty. Chen Ge stepped into it cautiously. "Don't tell me... Zhang Ya has already entered the blood door?"

He walked to Room 3, and the originally closed door was now fully open. Obviously, someone had gone through the door. Chen Ge picked up Doctor Skull-cracker's hammer that was lying on the floor. He glanced inside his backpack. The cock was already dead, and it had died without even making a noise.

"Wait outside or walk in to look for her?" There was no sound from the other side of the door, and Chen Ge hesitated. He would not necessarily be able to handle the dangers that were inside the door, but if something happened to Zhang Ya inside the door, Chen Ge would not be able to escape even if he stayed outside the door.

Holding the doorknob, Chen Ge's fingers were twitching. He took a deep breath and removed the almost shattered ballpoint pen from his pocket.

"It's already a new day; I want to use my fortune-telling chance." Chen Ge straightened the pen above the brown mattress. "Pen Spirit, is there a way for me to save myself and Zhang Ya?"

Without any hesitation, Pen Spirit wrote down three words on the mattress—Enter the Door.

"Isn't that a bit too fast? Don't you need to think about it?" Chen Ge pocketed the pen. He looked at the door and made his decision. He took out his phone. There was only a small amount of battery left. He called Men Nan to ask, "Didn't you say some mysterious memories would appear inside you mind? Are there any blood red scenarios among those memories?"

"There are."

"Try to focus on those memories, and tell me, is there anything I should pay attention to regarding these blood red scenarios?" Chen Ge could not just leave Zhang Ya behind. He was in too deep, and he would need Zhang Ya's help in the future. He could not lose her.

"The extra memories are rarely related to blood red, and even when they are, they seem to happen inside a similar scenario." Men Nan thought about it. "It is a fully enclosed room; there are no windows and only one door. The space is small and has a wooden bed. There are binders attached to the bed, and there are machines next to it. It looks like an electroshock therapy room."

"Electroshock therapy?"

“Yes, in the memory, various monsters entered the room. They twisted the binders around the bed, and then they conversed with each other as if saying, don’t wake it up.” Thinking about these things seemed to put extra pressure on Men Nan’s head. His tone sounded pained. “I couldn’t see the monsters closely, but I do know one of them seems to have a broken face and the monster mentioned a name—I think it was... Wu Fei.”

The broken face and Wu Fei were both patients at the Third Sick Hall. They respectively took up residence in Room 10 and Room 9. They were the most dangerous presences at this hospital.

“Is there anything else?” Chen Ge stood at the door.

“There’s something, but I’m not sure whether it will be useful or not. Ten years ago, I remember the main persona telling me that if I needed to find him one day, after entering the blood red door, I should not speak.”

“Okay, thank you.” Chen Ge zipped his mouth shut, placed the phone in his pocket, grabbed the hammer and cleaver, and stepped into the door.

Chapter 179 - Main Persona

Chapter 179: Main Persona

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Breathing became difficult like he had walked into a thick fog. He felt moisture on his skin, and everything had a sheen of red to it. This is the world behind the door?

Chen Ge remembered Men Nan's advice. He kept his mouth shut, and with the cleaver and hammer in his hands, he looked around. The walls, ceiling, and decorations in Room 3 were identical to the one in the real world.

...

He turned around, and what he saw made his heart race. The door of Room 3 was open, but the scene outside the corridor did not reflect what it was in the real world. The difference was drastic; it was a corridor without any trash, clean and well-kept.

The mattresses and dolls that littered the floor were nowhere to be seen, and it felt like there were cleaners who cleaned the place every day. Chen Ge nudged toward the door carefully. He reached his arm out, and his arm did not disappear; the door appeared to only work one-way!

Since he had been warned to not speak, Chen Ge could not call Zhang Ya. Bracing himself, he walked out of Room 3, and as he stepped out, he ran into something on the corridor. It was not a monster as he expected, not a zombie or a dead body, but a doll made from bedsheets and pillows. And there was more than one.

They stood along the corridor like scarecrows. Their drawn expressions had a blank smile, and Chen Ge could not tell whether they were happy or sad. Why are there such things in the world beyond the door?

Chen Ge assumed that the dolls buried inside the mattresses were just a silly prank, but after seeing this, his opinion changed. The nurse would feed the patients their medicine every night. She even had a special notebook to record each patient's name and medical history.

Most crucially, all these patients had died in the real world, so these dolls probably carried their lingering spirit. Lingering spirits were a lot weaker than baleful specters, but when the number of lingering spirits was at least ten times the baleful specters, the baleful specter might not win.

When Chen Ge studied the doll, one of them seemed to sense him. Its head that was lowered suddenly raised, and its body turned. Its face that looked like it was drawn on by the hand of a child looked at Chen Ge, and Chen Ge started to sweat.

The doll's body slowly moved, and Chen Ge raised the cleaver. The distance between the two closed, but the doll did not seem to pay Chen Ge any attention. With its wiggling gait, it walked to the other end of the corridor.

It did not seem to have any purpose. It walked down the corridor aimlessly and stopped to lean against the wall when it was tired. It reminded Chen Ge of a mannequin puppet. Chen Ge had met many lingering spirit. The reason for their formation was a deep compulsion that they could not let go of. It caused them to remain in the real world.

However, the lingering spirit inside the doll was completely different. It seemed to have lost its memory, or it had completely silenced its heart. Since the doll did not attack Chen Ge, there was no reason for him to provoke them. He slid silently out of Room 3 and inspected the walls on the corridor.

The wall had obvious scratch marks on it; they had probably been caused by Zhang Ya. Chen Ge followed the marks up to the second floor, and when he exited the stairwell, Chen Ge almost screamed from shock.

Various dolls teetered on the second-floor corridor. They wandered about aimlessly and paid no need to their surroundings. There was a great number of them; some of them were fallen on the floor with black scratch marks on them, a sign that Zhang Ya had passed through this way.

Walking amid the tipsy dolls, Chen Ge had this weird sensation that perhaps he was the crazy one. If one was surrounded by mad people, would the normal one think he was the crazy one?

The further he walked, the harder it was for Chen Ge to breathe. There was a heaviness on his body like he was being tossed into the ocean and s sinking. Thankfully, no one attacked him. Chen Ge successfully reached the end of the second-floor corridor, and the scratch marks ended there.

At the end of the corridor was a special room. Chen Ge had not had the time to examine it in real life before he was chased by the nurse to the first floor. This room that he had missed was the electroshock therapy room.

After pushing it open, the scene that he saw surprised him. It was different from what he had expected. There was only one bed in the room, and a boy about five years old was tied to it. Chen Ge walked to the bed, and after comparing the picture, he was sure this was the young Men Nan.

A question surfaced in Chen Ge's mind. Why is he here?

Based on the memory left in Men Nan's mind, Chen Ge had a bold speculation. An accident did happen to Men Nan's main persona inside the door, and it was because the door had lost its guardian that it started to go out of control.

The scratch marks disappeared here, so this proved that she had been here before, but there was no sign of a struggle inside the room.

Chen Ge had no idea where Zhang Ya had disappeared to, but since he had found Men Nan's main persona, he decided to rescue him first. Only by waking up the boy would he gain a new understanding of the world behind the door and perhaps a new helper.

That was the ideal situation, but what would really happen, no one knew. Chen Ge could only hedge a bet on it going well. The cleaver slit open the binders easily, and Chen Ge lightly nudged Men Nan's body.

It was unknown whether the boy was caught in a deep sleep or unconscious. No matter how hard Chen Ge shook him, his eyes remained closed. He could not speak inside this blood world, so Chen Ge tried other methods to wake the boy up.

He did not know what happened to the boy, and his brain tried to fill in the blanks. The culprit did not kill the boy but detained him inside the electroshock therapy room. This meant that the boy was still useful to the culprit, so they would not see any harm come to the boy.

A crazy thought flashed across Chen Ge's mind. Chen Ge silently raised the cleaver. He moved the blade up and down several times. He narrowed his eyes at the space close to the boy's neck and waved the cleaver downwards!

The blade did not make contact with the bed. When it was about two centimeters away, a hairy hand appeared to block Chen Ge's cleaver. Chen Ge had been paying full attention, but he still did not know where the arm came from.

Chen Ge pulled the cleaver back and put some distance between them. Chen Ge saw the monster in its full form. It had no body; it was only a broken arm.

The arm seemed to be protecting the boy. To try out this theory, Chen Ge unleashed another attack at the boy.

His every slash was blocked by the arm, and as this repeated itself, the arm started to crack. Just as Chen Ge thought the arm was about to disappear, many other broken arms appeared from underneath the bed.

The tussle between the two parties grew louder, and about ten seconds later, there was a slight twitch on the sleeping boy's face.

Chapter 180 - The World in His Eyes

Chapter 180: The World in His Eyes

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The boy is waking up? Chen Ge had no idea how many broken arms were hiding under the bed, and there might be monsters outside the door as well. Chen Ge did not think it was wise to stay inside the room for too long. Risking the danger of being hurt by the arms, Chen Ge rushed into the fray and held the boy in the bed in his arms.

He placed the blade on the boy's neck as he retreated to the wall, his eyes scanning the room. He did not know why these arms were stopping him from harming Men Nan.

...

If they care about Men Nan's safety, why would they strap him to the bed?

When he entered the door, the Trial Mission had gone out of control. Chen Ge did not know what would happen next; this was something he had not faced before. Tightening the grip on the cleaver, the only thing he could do then was wake Men Nan up. This boy was his only hope of surviving this ordeal.

When the blade touched the boy's skin, the broken arms stopped attacking. Like being controlled, all of them bounced to the door to knock on it. The incessant knocking unsettled Chen Ge.

He remembered Men Nan's order, so he had not said a word since entering the door. Even when he moved, he kept his footsteps as light as possible. The knocking was loud, and it reverberated down the corridor, shattering the peace that Chen Ge had tried so hard to maintain.

A bad feeling appeared in Chen Ge's heart. He started to panic, but before he could do anything, a large senior appeared at the door of the electroshock therapy room. The old man was 1.8 meters tall, had a head full of white hair, and was wearing a doctor's coat. However, his coat was drenched with blood; it had turned fully red. Looking at the old man, two words flashed across Chen Ge's mind—Red Specter.

The warning from Men Nan was probably to avoid this thing, but since the monster had already appeared, there was no reason for Chen Ge to be cautious anymore.

“This is surprising. I didn’t think that there would be others who could enter the door other than myself.” The senior was kind and gentle. He looked very approachable, if one could overlook the blood-soaked coat. “This is not a place where you should be. Put the boy down and quickly leave.”

Chen Ge did not move. The boy was his only leverage, so he could not let that go so easily. The blade was pressed on the boy’s neck. He stared at the senior at the door, and the longer he stared, the more frightened he felt.

The senior’s hands were slightly twisted, like they had been smashed by something heavy. The kind face also felt weird; it looked very deathlike as if it was a dead person’s make-up.

This man has been dead for a long time already. This was the conclusion Chen Ge came up with using his talent in Mortician’s Make-up.

Seeing how Chen Ge did not say anything, the senior took the first step into the room with an unchanged expression. Sensing his movement, Chen Ge pressed on the blade. The boy’s eyes twitched like he could feel the pain. It felt like he was waking up.

“Don’t hurt the boy.” The senior stopped and said something curious. “If something happens to the boy, you’ll never be able to return.”

He snapped his fingers, and the broken arms all retreated under the bed. Chen Ge saw this and took a step away from the bed.

“You’re so tense. Relax a bit.” The senior’s voice sounded convincing. Similar to Doctor Gao, he had the ability to make the other person relax and put their guard down during normal conversation. It was unclear whether this senior relied on psychological tactics or something else completely. “In this place, the only one who can communicate with you is me, and only I can help you.”

Chen Ge did not reply. He raised the hammer with one hand and pointed at the door.

“You want to leave?” The senior shook his head. “You can leave at any time, but the boy cannot. He has to stay inside this room.”

The electroshock therapy room was the room at the hospital with the best sound-proofing system. It was completely isolated. No one would have any idea what happened within. Being trapped by a Red Specter unsettled Chen Ge. He started to panic, and his arm flexed. The blade pressed down another few centimeters.

The senior's face twitched, but he recovered quickly. "I'm not threatening you. Just give me a chance to explain myself, then you can make your decision.

"You might not believe this, but we are living in this boy's nightmare. If something happens to him, or if he wakes up, we will forever be trapped here."

"Nightmare?" This was the first time Chen Ge had spoken since he stepped into the door. He examined the senior's reaction closely, and after realizing that there was nothing wrong with his body, he relaxed slightly.

"Yes, the boy grew up in a mental hospital, and due to multiple reasons, he has developed a sickly worldview." What the senior said next touched Chen Ge. "You must have seen the dolls made from pillows and bedsheets wandering the halls already. In the boy's eyes, they represented the patients who receive treatment in the hospital. Dulled by the effect of medication, they slowly turned into lifeless dolls. They lost interest in everything and spent their days in a waking dream."

"This is all his imagination?" Chen Ge looked at the bed. "Then how do you explain the broken arms? They don't exist in real life."

"The arms hiding under the bed are the manifestation of the boy's fears. When he was very young, a doctor purposely scared him, saying there was a hairy arm hiding under every child's bed and if the child was naughty, the arm would come out at midnight to pull on the child's ankle and drag them into the darkness under the bed. Because of this story, the broken arms became a symbol of fear in the boy's nightmare," the senior explained.

"In this nightmare, there is also a thin monster that likes to stand on people's shoulders. They are a manifestation of desire. Their original size is similar to a normal man, but as they jump onto the shoulders of different individuals, they squeeze their host dry, and their body continues to grow. Human desire is bottomless, and when it grows beyond its limit, it turns harmful and ugly.

“There are many more similar examples. Everything in this world is a reflection of the boy’s subconscious.”

Chen Ge could not tell whether the senior was lying or not. From his perspective, even this old man was not right in the head.

“I know it is hard to believe, but it is the truth. A human brain has 150 billion synapses, and 95 percent of them were untapped. If we compare a human brain to an iceberg, the large part that remained submerged is our subconscious.

“The adult brain is mature, but it is different for a baby. When a child is between one and three, their brain is at its most active. It is also the time when the subconscious starts to form. If during this period, the child’s mindset is continuously challenged and tested, then the subconscious will become highly active even to the point of supplementing the actual conscious mind.”

To be honest, Chen Ge did not really understand what the old man was saying, but he had a feeling that the senior was lying to him. He was trying to hide something.

Chapter 181 - You've Awoken the Devil

Chapter 181: You've Awoken the Devil

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

To conclude what the senior had said, the world behind the door was just a nightmare formed by Men Nan's main persona. When the boy woke up, the door connecting the real world and the dream would close, and they would be trapped in the dream forever.

Chen Ge would have believed the old man if not for the 'door' that also appeared at the Haunted House. The appearance of the 'door' at two different places was not something that can be explained by a boy's nightmare. Chen Ge did not reveal that fact. He looked at the senior and asked another question. "You said that this is the boy's nightmare and everything here is a reflection of the boy's subconscious. Then can you tell me, what role do you play in this nightmare? Or rather, what does you being in his nightmare represent?"

...

The expression froze on the old man's face, but he did not evade the question. "Similar to you, I came from outside the nightmare. We are outsiders, so even in the nightmare, we are playing ourselves."

"Playing ourselves?" Chen Ge came from the outside world, and there was no visible change to his body. The old man did not have a trace of liveliness to him, and Chen Ge could not move his focus away from the blindingly red coat. A thought flashed across Chen Ge's mind. Is it possible that the old man was already wearing this coat when he entered this world? What has he done to dye a white coat completely red?

When Chen Ge saw the old man for the first time, Chen Ge had a speculation in his mind. Three years ago, the Third Sick Hall's director had mysteriously disappeared, and his location had been a mystery ever since. There was no body and no news.

This old man before him, be it from looks or age, fitted the director perfectly, so Chen Ge suspected that the old director did not disappear years ago but stepped into the door. He had read the few letters written by the old director, and in the last letter, the director did show traces of interest toward the world behind the door.

But it was also because he had read those letters that Chen Ge had a good impression of the man. Therefore, he had a hard time overlapping the kind director in the letter with this Red Specter before him.

Chen Ge shook his head to calm down. His knowledge of the director was based wholly on those few letters. No one would willingly slander themselves in their own writing, so the director in the letters might not perfectly represent the actual director.

The thought of the electroshock therapy room, the crowded and dirty first sick hall, as well as the empty and deserted second sick hall made Chen Ge suck in a light breath, and he became more alert.

“Now do you understand what I mean? Do not wake the boy up. Put him down, and I’ll bring you out of this nightmare.” The old man’s voice was soothing, and it would make others forget about the danger that he presented.

Chen Ge slowly moved toward the door. “I will not hurt the boy, but you have to tell me how to leave this place first. Show me your sincerity.”

“Leaving is easy; you just need to step back over the door...”

BANG!

The old man was interrupted by a loud boom. It sounded like a room had exploded somewhere in the Third Sick Hall. Hearing this, the old man’s face fell. His pale face twisted, and the forced kindness disappeared.

“What’s going on?” Chen Ge had a feeling that this was related to Zhang Ya. When the old man first entered the room, he had noticed how twisted his fingers were, and his arms had been crooked in an unnatural way. They were probably injured when they were blocking a powerful force.

“It’s nothing, a small problem,” the old man said darkly. He stood in the middle of the room and raised his head to look at Chen Ge. “Give me the boy, and I’ll bring you out.”

There was no extra expression on the white face. It freaked Chen Ge out. The old man had finally dropped his pretense.

“Send me out first or no deal.” Chen Ge stood fast. His hand that held the cleaver was shaking because this was the first time he dealt directly with a Red Specter.

“You want to leave? Fine, come with me.” The old man turned around, suddenly so helpful. This caused Chen Ge to grow suspicious. He followed slowly behind the old man, maintaining a distance of three meters between them. He was certain that with this three-meter distance, no matter what the old man was up to, he would be able to react timely. However, he only took two steps when he realized that he had underestimated the Red Specter’s cunning and cruelty.

Technically, he only took one step because before he could take the second step, his foot that hung in mid-air froze. He could control it no longer. He lowered his head. When he was conversing with the old man, blood vessels that had seen earlier had crawled to his feet. Now the blood streaks were drilling into his skin like viruses.

“Don’t you want to leave? Come with me.” The old man turned around and rewarded Chen Ge with a wrinkly and creepy smile. Of course, Chen Ge did not dare follow him. He held the cleaver and wanted to take a step back, but the leg that hung in mid-air slowly moved forward!

“It’s because of these blood vessels?” Chen Ge’s mind was numb from fear. He had no idea how many blood vessels had seeped into his left leg, and the scariest thing was, as the old man spoke, more blood vessels started to bleed out from the cracked walls and floor. Like little snakes, they slithered to Chen Ge.

A normal person would have lost their cool and waved the cleaver about, but Chen Ge had something that was different to most—the ability to stay calm no matter how dangerous the situation was.

As the blood vessels climbed up his body, Chen Ge’s cleaver continued to press downward. The old man had purposely turned around earlier to trick Chen Ge, but he had turned around again to taunt him.

If the old man had full confidence, he could have controlled Chen Ge directly. He still seemed worried about the boy. Chen Ge could not understand why the old man was so afraid of the boy waking up, but in those circumstances, since the old man was more afraid of it, Chen Ge had more reason to do it.

The blade touched the skin, but there was no blood that trickled out from the wound. Weirdly enough, the blood vessels that the old man controlled seemed to go berserk whenever they were near to the boy, and they eventually returned to the boy's body through the open wound.

The blood seems to belong the boy to begin with. Could it be that the old man has merely stolen his power?

Chen Ge had discovered the old man's secret. He became braver—the cleaver created a larger wound, and the old man's scream drifted into Chen Ge's ears.

The wound was created around the boy's collarbone, and the boy, whose eyelids had been twitching, suddenly gripped his fists, and his eyes flew open!

The blood vessels in the room immediately split in two. A part of them continued to struggle as they retreated while the remaining ones were absorbed by the boy into his body.

“You madman! You've awoken the devil!”

The old man's face turned paler. He turned to run, but he only took several steps before a large wave of black hair swamped through the corridor from the other side.

Chapter 182 - Doctor Chen

Chapter 182: Doctor Chen

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The black hair slammed into the old man like a wave. A slender and fair arm materialized within the hair to grab on the old man's shoulder like it was trying to yank the old man into the wave of black hair. The old man was shaking, feeling the grasp on his shoulder. Obviously, he had suffered under the threat of this arm before. "I sent you out, why did you return?"

The answer was a slam to the ground. The old man crashed heavily against the floor, and the red on his clothes dimmed quite a bit.

...

Zhang Ya is here! From what the old man said, it seemed he had also chased Zhang Ya out once, but Zhang Ya broke through the door again.

You came back to find me? A warmth surged through Chen Ge. He was about to speak when he saw Zhang Ya walk out from the wave of hair. The girl did not even glance at him and walked straight toward the old man.

In the quiet world behind the door, a blood curdling scream could be heard. It caused Chen Ge's teeth to chatter. Are all baleful specters that prone to taking revenge?

At his prime, the old man probably could have fought back, but he had been shocked by the boy's awakening and had half of his blood stolen by the boy, so when facing Zhang Ya, he was as powerless as level 0 mob.

There should be further level differences among Red Specters as well, and this old man is probably one of the weakest Red Specter.

Spotting Zhang Ya, Chen Ge's nervous heart started to relax. In this strange place, Zhang Ya was the only 'person' who could give him comfort. After the situation settled down, Chen Ge wanted to switch into a more comfortable position. However, when he lowered his head, he saw a pair of curious eyeholes staring back at him.

The clothes of the young boy in his arms had been dyed red without him noticing. His face was blanched, and his eyes were completely black, without pupils, iris, or anything else.

Cold sweat slid down his forehead, and Chen Ge saw blood vessels climb back into the boy's body through the wound that was left on his neck.

"I did that to wake you up; I had no choice. My intention wasn't to harm you."

The boy hung on his body, and it seemed like he was trying to climb on top of him. It was quite scary having the body crawl up him. Chen Ge's first reaction was to push the boy away, but he was afraid that might cause further misunderstandings.

"Men Nan, I know your name, and I came to save you. Your second persona was assaulted by a monster; it was me who saved him." Chen Ge was trying to win some points, but he was afraid that the boy might not give him the chance to say anything later.

Earlier, the old man had called the boy the Devil. To be able to be called the Devil by a Red Specter, this meant that the boy was not as innocent as he looked. The boy did not stop moving until his face was inches away from Chen Ge's.

At such a close distance, Chen Ge realized there were no eyes in the boy's eye sockets, simply two empty eye holes. Chen Ge did not know what the boy was looking for, and the hairs on his neck crawled. He reached into his pocket silently, took out the picture of Men Nan and his mother, and slid it between the two faces.

"I know about your past, and I understand your pain. If you need someone to talk to, you can tell me anything." Chen Ge repeated everything he had told the Men Nan in real life. "We have the same experience, so perhaps we can be friends."

A man who knew no fear, this was the perfect phrase to describe Chen Ge. Even at a time like that, Chen Ge was thinking about recruiting the boy to work for him at the Haunted House. When he saw his mother's picture, the boy's attitude softened. He released his grasp on Chen Ge and jumped down to the floor. "Where did you find this picture?"

Men Nan in the real world had asked this question before. Their way of thinking was similar.

“In the director’s dresser inside his office.”

“He dared hide my mother’s picture.” The boy raised his head. “Can you give me this picture?”

“Sure.” Chen Ge passed the picture to the boy. He could feel the boy’s hostility toward him had decreased. He squatted down to the boy’s level. After a moment’s hesitation, he asked softly, “Just now, the old man said that this world is your nightmare, and after you wake up, the door that connects this place to the real world will close. Is that true?”

“This world existed before me, and I’m merely the first one who discovered it.” The boy pocketed the picture, and his hollow eyes looked at Chen Ge. “Don’t ask me anything about this world. The more you know, the harder it’ll be for you to leave.”

The boy’s intelligence was disproportionate to his appearance. Chen Ge had just spoken, but he had also figured out Chen Ge’s angle.

“You cannot tell me anything?”

“I can only say that this world is the reflection of human beings’ darkest secrets. It is filled with sin and terror. It is similar to the real world but different, just like day and night.” Then the boy walked out the door. The boy’s red shirt was blinding. It seemed to be dripping in fresh blood.

“I still have two more questions. Don’t move so fast.” Chen Ge rushed forward. He had regained his agility, and the blood vessels that had seeped into his arms and legs earlier seemed to have disappeared.

The boy stopped and turned around. His empty eyes studied Chen Ge closely. “Aren’t you afraid of me?”

“I am, but I have some questions that need to be answered.” The appearance of Men Nan’s real persona was meaningful to Chen Ge. “I want to ask about someone. Your second persona refers to him as Doctor Chen.”

“Haven’t heard of him.”

“Your second persona once told me that you returned to the Third Sick Hall because you were invited by two individuals. One of them was the old director and the other was this Doctor Chen.” Chen Ge sounded sincere. “This man is very important to me; he might be my missing family.”

Perhaps the word family had touched the boy. He moved his empty eyes away. “This Doctor Chen is very common-looking but has a special pair of eyes. He’s similar to you, the exact type of person that I detest.”

“That’s all?” Chen Ge was speechless before asking his second question. “This door that connects the two worlds, how can I close it completely?”

“Very simple.” The boy smiled. “Keep a living person behind the door and ask him to guard the door for you.”

“What kind of solution is that?” Chen Ge wanted to ask about the reason behind the appearance of the door, but the boy disappeared in the blink of an eye. “Is he hiding some important information from me?”

Chen Ge was afraid that the boy might get into an altercation with Zhang Ya, so he hurried to follow the boy.

After leaving the room, Chen Ge realized that the boy did not wander far. The boy’s brows were deeply knitted together, and his dark eyes were looking forward.

The red on the old man’s coat had almost faded, and he barely had a human shape left. His remaining body was surrounded by Zhang Ya’s black hair and would disappear in a few seconds.

“Leave me the old man’s body, and I’ll let you go.” The boy was small, but Chen Ge felt the threat coming from his words.

Her finger danced over her lips that were as bright as blood. Zhang Ya did not pay attention to what the boy said. With one leg on the director’s broken body, she turned to look at the boy like she had spotted a new ingredient for dinner.

Chapter 183 - Return

Chapter 183: Return

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Calm down!” Chen Ge immediately ran to the middle of the corridor. “We’re all allies here; there’s no need to harm each other!”

His back was drenched from being squeezed between two Red Specters. Chen Ge was shocked by this scene himself. Two Red Specters were going to fight it out, but he, a living human, was the mediator. Perhaps it was due to Chen Ge, neither the boy nor Zhang Ya made a move.

...

In reality, the boy was already compromising. After he woke up, the blood vessels inside the Third Sick Hall had continued to surge into his body, and the more he dragged this out, the more powerful he would become.

“I can give you the old man’s body, but I must keep his head.” There was a unique connection between the boy and the Third Sick Hall. If the Third Sick Hall was a monster, then he was the monster’s child, so he had perfect control of the many things here.

Many blood vessels appeared on the surface of the corridor, and they curled themselves around the old man’s neck. The old man, who had surrendered to his fate, suddenly opened his eyes and started to struggle. Unfortunately, Zhang Ya’s feet were still on his body, so he could not even move.

The blood vessels drilled into the old man’s neck, and the image that happened next was a bit gory. The old man’s scream reverberated down the hall. The blood vessels formed tentacles of sorts and transported the old man’s head to the boy.

“What kind of mistake has the old man made?” Chen Ge was past feeling pity for the man. After all, he did try to kill him earlier.

“When the door was first opened, the man used the patients as test subjects.” The boy’s hollow eyes looked at the head in his arms. “He forced the patients to enter the door and that included my mother.

The boy hugged the man's head and was smiling sweetly. "He is a very fake and selfish man. The reason I fell asleep was because of him and a few of his patients."

"Him and a few patients? There are other people inside the door?" Chen Ge nudged toward Zhang Ya; he felt safer being close to Zhang Ya.

"I promised Doctor Chen that I would guard the door after entering it. However, five years ago, the door was forced open from the outside." The boy started to explain what happened five years ago. "The old man suffered from cancer, and he knew that he wasn't going to live for long. To extend his life, he turned his interest toward the world behind the door.

"But he was scared, so like so many years ago, he sent a few patients into the door first. The Third Sick Hall was a quarantine building, and the patients there had no family or background, so the whole process was very hush-hush.

"After one week of trials and making sure that there was no danger, the director entered the door with a few patients." The smile hung on the boy's face as he petted the old man's screaming head. "After the door closed, this place became my world, and there is nothing inside the Third Sick Hall that can harm me.

"I didn't want to harm them; I just wanted to find something to do after so many years of boredom. However, to my surprise, to escape, these people opened the door for the monsters to enter the Third Sick Hall. Some of them even got possessed by these monsters.

"When I discovered this, it was already too late. They trapped me inside the electroshock therapy room and had the dying director look over me while the others escaped with the sin and terror."

After listening to the boy, Chen Ge nodded. "I've seen several patients of the Third Sick Hall in the real world. A thin monster possessed each of them. The old man said that they were a manifestation of human desire."

"Indeed, those are creatures that originated from inside the door, but they are also the weakest." The boy's words scared Chen Ge. The thin monster was the weakest, but he had always thought that the mirror monster was the weakest.

“Five years ago, seven patients entered the door, and four of them were possessed by the weakest monsters. As for the other three, I couldn’t tell.” The boy glanced at Chen Ge. “The fact that you’re here means that you’ve fought with them already. The remaining ones might seek you out for trouble.”

“Can you tell me about the three that are most dangerous?”

“There’s an incredibly beautiful woman, a man with a ruined face, and the last one is called Wu Fei.” The boy’s teeth gritted together when he said Wu Fei’s name. “It was this Wu Fei who came up with the plan to trap me.”

Then, the boy added, “But Wu Fei is not the most difficult to deal with. You have to be careful about the ruined face; he’s the most dangerous.”

“Thank you for the reminder.”

“There’s no need to thank me because I have a favor to ask of you.” The boy had observed Chen Ge for a long time and finally voiced his real purpose. “I am just a persona, and this Third Sick Hall behind the door is my host. Since I’ve been here for so long, from a certain perspective, you can say my consciousness has joined with the building. Outsiders cannot kill me; they can only weaken me and make me fall asleep.

“They cannot kill me, but they can influence me by harming my second persona. In fact, they might be able to control me through him. That is what I’m most worried about, so, if needed, please help me protect my second persona. I have no family left in that world, and he is my only friend.”

“No problem. I am friends with your second persona as well, so I will never not help him.” Chen Ge tried to befriend the boy and wished that one day he would be able to hire him as one of his workers. His Haunted House needed someone of his age.

“Hopefully, you’ll hold onto your promise.” The boy carried the old man’s head to Room 3. “Staying too long in this world will damage your spirit and body. It’ll be filled by negative thoughts. If you stay long enough, you too will go insane.”

He pushed the door to Room 3 open and placed the old man’s head beside the bed. “I’ll send you off. If there’s any problem, you can come find me at midnight; I’ll hold the door open for one minute.”

“Why one minute?” Chen Ge’s eyes twitched.

“That’s the limit of my control,” the boy answered. “This world is huge, and there are many other doors. Some doors, like this one, are guarded by people, and some are left unattended. Normally speaking, if there is someone guarding the door, the time of door opening will be one minute.”

“Okay, I understand.” Chen Ge lowered his head, thinking about the door in his Haunted House.

When both Chen Ge and Zhang Ya walked into Room 3, the boy closed the door. He stood beside the door. “You can go back now.”

“But how?”

The boy pointed at the door of Room 3. “Push it open, you only have one minute.”

Chapter 184 - Gripped by Passion

Chapter 184: Gripped by Passion

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge still had many questions, but the boy did not give him any chance and started the countdown. He could see that the boy was also struggling. His body had not fully recovered, and the blood on his clothes was fading. “Stop wasting my time, go!”

When he walked closer, Chen Ge realized that the door was filled with small cracks, and there were plenty of blood vessels weaving through it to fix the wounds. He was reminded of the loud bang that accompanied Zhang Ya’s appearance. He thought about it. “After being sent out by the old man, Zhang Ya burst through the door again. Looks like the door can be broken, but it’ll repair itself.”

...

Pushing the door open, the world that greeted him was no longer in shades of red, and Chen Ge found the darkened corridor to be quite comforting.

“Meow?” A white cat squatted beside the door. It turned to look at Chen Ge, its multi-colored eyes shining with intrigue. After exiting the door, Chen Ge wanted to turn to thank the boy, but the boy slammed the door shut in his face.

I have a feeling the boy is hiding something, but what is it? Is he afraid of Zhang Ya? The red school uniform that fluttered in the wind appeared in Chen Ge’s mind, and he shivered. This three-star Trial Mission had given him a new understanding of Zhang Ya. The Red Specter Zhang Ya was a complete opposite of the person she had been when she was alive. She was cruel and unforgiving. She shattered the door and would attack anyone who dared stand in her way.

Zhang Ya should have exited the door with me, right? Chen Ge turned to look, and Zhang Ya was standing one foot away from him. The red on her uniform was brighter than before.

Chen Ge’s fingers twitched like they were spasming, and Chen Ge let out an awkward laugh to hide how panicked he was. “Just look at how funny this whole thing is. I went inside the door because I was worried about you, but in the end, it was you who saved me.”

Zhang Ya was silent as she studied Chen Ge’s face carefully. Chen Ge was frozen solid under her scrutiny. He was trying to figure out a way to lighten the mood when he realized that, in the twenty or so years he had been alive, his experience of talking with girls was zero.

What have I been doing for the past twenty years? Finally, Chen Ge squeezed out the following. “The things here have been dealt with. Let’s go home.”

Zhang Ya did not answer but took a step forward. When her face was almost touching Chen Ge’s, she suddenly increased in speed to phase through Chen Ge’s body before entering his shadow.

The black phone in his pocket vibrated, and Chen Ge leaned against the wall before sliding down it. His forehead was already covered in cold sweat. The pressure Zhang Ya gave him was too high.

“Is that an alert that the mission has been completed?” After taking a deep breath, Chen Ge took out the phone and opened the alert.

“Zhang Ya’s affection level increased slightly! Soon, it will break through to the next level—Gripped by Passion!”

The alert that appeared on screen made Chen Ge suck in a deep breath. Gripped by passion, why does it sound so dangerous? Will Zhang Ya accidentally tear me apart when she is in the throes of passion?

Chen Ge hugged his head and groaned painfully from the terror. The white cat jumped onto his backpack and lay down lazily. It seemed like it had gotten used to the various weird antics of its owner.

In any case, there’s no need to worry about that yet. Chen Ge stood up, and after taking a look at his phone, he saw that all signals had been cut off after he entered the door. Then, he remembered his livestream. He entered the platform and saw that his own livestream had been temporarily banned, but his account was not frozen. He could still comment like normal.

What’s going on?

He glanced at the viewer count. With this one livestream, his number of followers had shot up to 150,000. Click into any bigger livestream, and they would be talking about Chen Ge and Qin Guang’s stories.

Chen Ge calmed himself down and went searching for Qin Guang's livestream. The man's stream was blocked as well.

What's happening? Chen Ge called Liu Dao, and it was picked up after seven rings. "Liu Dao? Why are my livestream and Qin Guang's livestream both blocked? Is it because of the overly long black screen?"

After a few seconds, an unknown male voice replied, "This is the city's investigation team. Give me your location immediately. Stay where you are, and don't move around."

The police? When did they get here, and how did they know I'm at the Third Sick Hall? Chen Ge glanced at the time. It was already 3:50 am. He had only been inside the door for a short time, but time had passed by so fast in the real world. After his livestream was cancelled when he entered the door, Liu Dao's team had probably called the police. Unlike those online viewers, Liu Dao understood how dangerous things could be and knew Chen Ge's exact location.

"I'm at the mental hospital's third building first floor. There are two victims trapped inside the second building's laundry room, and I've collected evidence of the suspects."

"The two victims have been rescued. Don't ruin the crime scene. We'll be there in a minute; keep the line open."

"My phone is dying, so I'm afraid it won't hold out for long." Chen Ge then hung up. He immediately hid the hammer and cleaver.

I have to take the thing inside the director's dresser too.

He raced to the second-floor office. When he grabbed the letters inside the dresser, Chen Ge accidentally found the dresser's secret. The partition at the back of the dresser could be opened, and it led to a hidden passageway. At the end of the passageway was a steel door.

The door's lock fitted the key Chen Ge had. After unlocking it and pushing the door open, Chen Ge was surprised to find himself back in Room 3.

This should be the secret tunnel mentioned by Wang Haiming in Room 3. This passageway is connected to the director's office, so the old man definitely knew about it.

Looking at the patient's bed, which faced the hidden passageway,

Chen Ge was reminded of Men Nan's mother who stayed in this room, and he had a rough idea of why the boy tormented the old director.

Wang Haiming was once a resident of Room 3, and this key was probably stolen from the director with the cooperation of the mirror ghost.

The police were coming soon, so Chen Ge pocketed the key, returned everything back to how it had been, and sat quietly inside the room, waiting for the police to arrive.

At 4 am, the Third Sick Hall was pried opened, and Chen Ge, who had been waiting for so long, rushed forward, carrying his backpack, a cock in his hand and a white cat slumbering on his shoulder.

Before Chen Ge got near, the police surrounded him. Chen Ge had not seen any of these faces before.

"I'm a friend! I've found these things left behind by the suspects."

After a short interrogation, Chen Ge explained why he was at the Third Sick Hall. He removed the things related to ghosts and said that he was chased by the twisted face and ended up being locked by the crazy people inside the Third Sick Hall.

"The suspects' fingerprints were left on the fourth floor's steel door. They are three of them; they were all once patients at this Third Sick Hall."

He struggled to stay awake until dawn, and after receiving the mission success alert on the black phone, Chen Ge left the mental hospital with the police.

Chapter 185 - Is Your Brain Filled with Lead?

Chapter 185: Is Your Brain Filled with Lead?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Get in, and don’t act funny.”

Chen Ge slipped into the police car, hugging the chicken and cat. From the tone of the policeman, he realized that things might have gotten a little serious this time.

...

“Thank God, you’re okay.” There was another person sitting in the backseat. His face was tense, but his voice was familiar.

“Liu Dao? Why are you here? Was it you who called the police?” Sitting inside the police car, Chen Ge felt oddly comfortable. He was not only not worried, and he felt like falling asleep. “Also, why was the livestream banned? What was the highest viewership tonight? Because my follower number has increased to 150,000.”

“Why do you still care about the livestream?” Liu Dao grabbed Chen Ge’s arm. “Brother, didn’t you say that all the people in the mental hospital are actors from the Haunted House? I’ve vouched for you in front of the cops, but you’ve pushed me into the pits of hell.”

“But there are my workers in the mental hospital, you just are unable to see them.” Chen Ge was not ashamed of his words. For this livestream, he had brought the Pen Spirit, Xiaoxiao, and the white cat out from the Haunted House.

“I didn’t mean to blame you, just...” Liu Dao’s face fell. “Never mind, it’s my fault for not taking more precautions, and to be fair, many viewers were tricked by you.”

“What are you talking about? Mind explaining it to me.” Chen Ge wanted to pet the white cat’s head but was warned off by the cat’s cruel gaze.

Liu Dao shrugged. “Normally, when a person enters a mental hospital in the middle of the night and sees victims trapped inside cages and murderers pursuing him with axes, wouldn't that person be afraid?"

"Yes, fear is the appropriate reaction."

"But the problem is, you chased the murderers up and down the building with a large hammer for at least twenty minutes! No matter who sees this, they'll think it's a set-up, right?" Liu Dao was at the verge of a breakdown. "I've been in the livestream business for four years already, and until now, I never thought that someone would go chase after a real murderer! Weren't you afraid? Is your brain filled with lead?"

"You're exaggerating—I was just doing what a lawful citizen would," Chen Ge emphasized. "To be honest, I have a strong sense of justice. When I saw the victims, I was angered by how much pain they'd been through, and the anger overwhelmed my fear. That's why I dared to chase after those murderers."

Chen Ge was loud, and the two policemen in front could hear him clearly.

"It's too late to say anything now. This is all my fault. I should have called the police earlier." Liu Dao massaged his temples. "When you started the livestream, there was already a report. At the time, I thought that it was people from Qin Guang's side playing tricks, so I ignored it. Then, when your viewership rose to 400,000, someone demanded that we call the police, and I had my men suppressed the motion. Finally, when your livestream went over 600,000 and broke the record for any newbie host, I had a very bad feeling. You started to scream and wave that cleaver at the air. I thought that it was some kind of performance, and due to personal greed, I forced Sister Lee to continue the broadcast.

"It was not until you entered that sickroom and the screen went black that I realized the gravity of the situation and called the police." There was a trace of relief in his voice. "So be it. No matter what, at least you're safe now."

Liu Dao sighed, removed a small pill bottle from his shirt, and popped two pills into his mouth.

"What are those?"

"Pills for angina. Give me some peace. This is my first time inside a police car, so I need to calm myself."

After they arrived at the city police station, Liu Dao and Chen Ge were led into different interrogation rooms. The police questioned him on all the details. Chen Ge stuck to his earlier explanation. He accidentally ran into a conspiracy, and to protect the victim, he chose to resist and fight back. The whole process was broadcasted, and that was all the evidence Chen Ge needed.

The thing that was most difficult for the police was, all evidence pointed to the fact that Chen Ge was also one of the victims, but this ‘victim’ had chased after the culprits aggressively.

After the interrogation, the police did not show any sign that they were going to let him go. “Mr. Chen, we need to have a meeting to discuss your situation.”

“Okay, but can you give me back my phone? I wish to call my family to tell them that I’m safe.” Chen Ge actually wanted to call Inspector Lee for help. This time, things were different. His livestream was no longer limited to a small circle. It had broken 600,000 viewers; in other words, the situation had gotten a bit out of hand.

“Please wait patiently.” The police officer rejected Chen Ge’s request and left the interrogation room. It was not until noon that the door opened again. Chen Ge, who had been fully cooperative, turned to look at the door.

A slightly fat police stood at the door. He wore a uniform that was different from others’.

“Captain Yan?” Chen Ge was surprised. It was this officer who had presented his medal when Chen Ge helped solved the case at Ping An Apartments.

“Follow me, someone wants to meet you.” Different from last time, Captain Yan’s expression was severe. Chen Ge stood up slowly and wondered, Am I going to meet some big character?

After exiting the interrogation room, they walked down the corridor before stopping outside a room. Through the glass window, Chen Ge looked in. The girl who had been trapped inside the cage was safe. She was wearing the police outfit someone had given her, and she cowered in a corner of the room, hugging a bottle of water. She was shivering non-stop and would not communicate with anyone. She did not even dare to sit on the chair.

Standing not far from her was a middle-aged man, and this was the first time Chen Ge had seen a man break down so completely. The middle-aged man appeared to be the girl's father. He was calling the girl's name, but she did not give any response. She was still shrouded in fear.

"Go in, the father wants to meet you."

When he walked in, the middle-aged father immediately rushed to Chen Ge. His emotions were running so high that he could not even finish a complete sentence.

...

About ten minutes later, Captain Yan and Chen Ge left the room.

"Earlier, we were all discussing about you, to determine whether what you've done has broken the law or not. At the end of the discussion, I also brought them here." Captain Yan looked at the pair in the room. "If not for you, the girl would have spent the rest of her life inside a cage and the father would have spent his looking for his only family in this world."

Chen Ge had a hard time controlling his emotions. Even though the girl was safe now, it would take a long time before the scar on her heart was healed.

"You've done good this time." Captain Yan turned to Chen Ge. "After our discussion, we decided to temporarily ban your livestream, but as compensation, we'll award you a record of merit."

Instead of a punishment, banning Chen Ge's livestream temporarily was more like a protection. This was to prevent Chen Ge from being used by others due to his newfound popularity.

As for that record of merit, Chen Ge did not know what it was. But since Captain Yan had specifically mentioned it, it should be a good thing.

"Thank you, but I was merely acting on my sense of justice. Sometimes, I just cannot control myself." Chen Ge was not sure. After all, what he did yesterday night was rash. He had been armed with a cleaver and a hammer, and he had broken a culprit's leg with the hammer. "Then, can I really go now?"

"Don't try to get information from me." Captain Yan pointed at his uniform. "We will not cheer for violence, but never will we punish a good conscience and sense of justice.”

Chapter 186 - New Competition

Chapter 186: New Competition

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After grabbing his stuff, Chen Ge left the station with the white cat.

This Captain Yan is different from the others.

...

Chen Ge turned back to look and decided to stay low for a period of time. This incident had reminded him that the main city is different from Western Jiujiang. The previous few times, he did not get into any trouble because Inspector Lee had been helping him.

After completing the three-star Trial Mission, there's no need for me to go unlock other scenarios for now. I should focus on the Third Sick Hall.

In reality, even if there was a four-star mission for him to choose, Chen Ge would not pick it. Starting with three-star missions, the danger level doubled and tripled. After he got into the taxi, Chen Ge placed the white cat and chicken to the side before pulling out the black phone to check his unread messages.

“Player managed to reach the Mission Location on time and survived until dawn. Trial Mission, Third Sick Hall successful! A new scenario has been unlocked. Player can manipulate the props inside the set freely using the interface available on the phone!

“Trial Mission Completion Rate 60 percent. Player has not achieved more than 90 percent completion rate, so the hidden item for this mission has yet to be unlocked.

“Completing the hidden quest of the scenario will increase the Trial Mission's completion rate, and when the completion rate is above 90, the hidden item will be unlocked.”

After reading the message, Chen Ge was shocked. The mission completion rate is only sixty? Where is the problem? Did Men Nan's main persona hide something from me, or does this have something to do with those mental patients who have escaped?

Chen Ge anticipated the hidden items that were rewarded after the mission, but he also discovered a pattern. The higher the star of the Trial Mission, the greater the reward of the hidden item and the hidden missions. For example, the one-star Ping An Apartment gave him a missing person notice with malice points, but the two-star Mu Yang High School gave him a rare ghost—the Pen Spirit.

Will the hidden reward for the three-star Trial Mission be the little boy? Chen Ge thought that was quite possible; after all, Men Nan's main persona had said that his consciousness had merged with the Third Sick Hall. Men Nan's main persona's relationship to the Third Sick Hall is rather similar to Director Luo's daughter's relationship to New Century Park, but one was guarding their place behind the door while the other guarded around their location.

As for what kind of hidden missions the Third Sick Hall would offer, Chen Ge would need to enter the scenario himself to trigger it. Under the taxi driver's curious gaze, Chen Ge took his stuff and got out of the car. Once he entered New Century Park, he noticed that the visitors were tossing him weird looks.

If I'm not mistaken, today isn't a public holiday, so why are there so many visitors at the park?

The normally quiet amusement park seemed to have been given a new lease on life. Chen Ge was embarrassed from being gawked at, and he escaped toward the Haunted House as fast as he could.

Chen Ge stopped before he reached the Haunted House because he saw how long the line at his Haunted House was. It felt like he was dreaming.

"Why are there so many visitors?"

"Boss!" Xu Wan stood at the steps of the Haunted House, and she saw Chen Ge as soon as he got near. "You're finally here!"

The visitors all turned following her shout, and Chen Ge shriveled under their watchful gazes. He squeezed through the crowd, and after hearing Xu Wan's explanation, he understood that most of the visitors had come to see him.

The influence of the previous night's livestream was bigger than he had expected. His livestream had been cut into pieces and shared on most big news sites. 'Fake livestream leads to interaction with real murderers'—such headlines had already appeared on the internet.

The key thing was, Chen Ge realized, the decision he made while the popularity of his livestream was rising to promote his Haunted House was brilliant. Because he had used the largest font for the address, those who shared the video had to block $\frac{1}{4}$ of the screen if they wanted to hide the address. Instead of ruining the experience, they decided to be fair and helped Chen Ge with his promotion.

This meant that many forums and platforms had helped Chen Ge promote his Haunted House. Some of the visitors were from Jiujiang, and they came to pay the Haunted House a visit.

After the previous night's livestream, his account's followers number had kept on climbing, and the comments went into the millions. Even though his livestream was blocked, Chen Ge still managed to squeeze into the popular ranking for newbies.

Chen Ge reaped many rewards, but Qin Guang was truly unlucky. The platform had used who knew how much to cultivate him, but after the constant broadcasting problems, the livestream was finally closed entirely. Based on rumors, Qin Guang was scared until he was sent to the hospital. When Qin Guang woke up, he realized that because of Chen Ge, his supernatural livestream was also banned. He probably coughed up more blood at the hospital.

Due to the large number of visitors, Chen Ge could not rest even if he wanted to. He had a little nap that morning inside the interrogation room, so he could still hold on. After giving a brief explanation on the different levels of the scenarios, Chen Ge asked Uncle Xu to look after the crowd while he and Xu Wan went to put on their make-up and move to their designated places.

There was no break throughout the entire afternoon. Even when the sun was falling, there were still visitors lining up outside the Haunted House. The park had to delay its closing time for half an hour, and it was not until 6:30 pm that Chen Ge and Xu Wan managed to leave the Haunted House.

With her face white from exhaustion, Xu Wan sighed. "Who would have thought one day, we would need to work overtime at the Haunted House?"

"There are still many things that you wouldn't expect in the future. Stick with me, and I'm sure your future will be bright." Chen Ge looked at Xu Wan and smiled. Ever since he discovered that he could hire ghosts as workers, his desire to hire a new worker had died down a lot. Perhaps, throughout his career, Xu Wan would be his only living worker.

“Boss, there’s something else I want to tell you.” Xu Wan took out a flyer from her pocket. “There’s a very famous travelling Haunted House that’s coming to Jiujiang. They’ve rented the spot at the city central’s merchant street, and tomorrow will be their official opening day.”

“Competition is a good thing, don’t mind it.” Chen Ge glanced at the flyer. The Haunted House was called Tian Teng Medical School. It combined the themes of a scary hospital and a school. It was a large moving Haunted House following the tradition of Japanese Haunted Houses.

“When they started their promotion, I did not pay them much heed either, but this morning, when our popularity skyrocketed, they changed their promotional ad on their website, saying that their Haunted House was designed by foreign specialists and is definitely scarier than the other Haunted Houses in Jiujiang. They say that they are on a completely different level.” Xu Wan took out her phone to show Chen Ge the website of Tian Teng Medical School.

Chen Ge took a look. The team behind Tian Teng Medical School did seem like they were aiming to slander. Even though they did not state it explicitly, the only other famous Haunted House in Jiujiang belonged to Chen Ge.

“Looks like they’re looking for a fight.” Chen Ge held onto the flyer. “No worries, when they are open tomorrow, I’ll go to give them my ‘support’.”

Chapter 187 - Tian Teng Medical School

Chapter 187: Tian Teng Medical School

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After Xu Wan left, Chen Ge returned to the Haunted House alone. He still had many things to do. After fixing the Pen Spirit's pen, Chen Ge buried the chicken beside the Haunted House. Chen Ge had no clue what had killed the chicken. There were no wounds on its body, so he suspected that the killer came from behind the door. For the sake of security, Chen Ge did not leave the chicken's body anywhere else but chose to bring it back to the Haunted House to bury it.

After dealing with all the chores, Chen Ge entered the underground parking lot. The Third Sick Hall had been fully copied. Its size was double the size of Mu Yang High School, and it was placed opposite from the school. All the scenarios were joined together, and the paths crisscrossed. The shape of a Maze of Terror was already forming.

...

Chen Ge walked through the scenario, and after making sure that there was no danger, he installed a few of the cameras that were left from before at several key points before leaving the scenario.

Mu Yang High School came with two hidden missions, and the Third Sick Hall is a three-star scenario, so it should have more hidden missions. However, I've walked through the entire scenario, and there is nothing out of place. Looks like the trigger for these hidden missions isn't so easily found.

After returning to the staff breakroom, Chen Ge was about to lie down when he got the message from Inspector Lee. After thinking about it, Chen Ge gave Inspector Lee a call. "Uncle San Bao, I'm fine now. No need to worry."

"Well, at least you're optimistic." There were footsteps on the other end. Inspector Lee was walking to a secluded spot before he continued. "I've seen the footage from last night. When you saw the trapped victims, you should have called the police already."

"I understand. I'll more careful next time."

“There’s still a next time?” Inspector Lee sighed. “So be it. I’m just trying to remind you to be careful. Also, two things to inform you. According to your statement, three individuals were involved in the trapping of the victims. All three of them are in the wind, so you have to be careful. They all suffer from mental illnesses and could do anything.”

“Okay, I’ll be careful.”

“The second thing is related to Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy.” Inspector Lee sounded like he was flipping through some files. “I’ve inspected all the men who were related to the school starting from five years ago, and we’ve narrowed down the pool to 21 suspects. In less than a week, we’ll be able to find the culprit who forced the girl to kill herself.”

Zhang Ya was finally going to get her justice. Chen Ge exhaled deeply into the phone. “Inspector Lee, after you apprehend the killer, can I have five minutes alone with him?”

“We’ll see about it later, but don’t get your hopes up.” Inspector Lee hung up, and Chen Ge looked at his phone, spacing out until he eventually fell asleep.

...

In the blood red room, Chen Ge sat in the bed. The blood vessels on his legs were surfacing. He looked around dumbly, and Men Nan’s voice appeared beside him. “You don’t have much time left.”

He turned around and saw the boy standing the middle of the room. Red lines were coursing through his body.

“Men Nan?”

“You don’t have much time left,” the boy said expressionlessly. When he was about to repeat it the third time, the red lines went taut, and the boy’s body shredded into pieces.

“Hey!”

Chen Ge’s eyes flew open, and he woke up from the nightmare, his forehead soaked with cold sweat. It was 3:40 am, and this coincided with the time he exited the ‘door’.

Why would I have a dream like that? Did anything happen to Men Nan’s main persona inside the door? Chen Ge lost all interest in sleep. He took his phone, toolbox, and backpack and headed for the Third Sick Hall.

Chen Ge returned to this place at 5 am. The sun was coming up, but the buildings still looked quite creepy. Chen Ge jumped over the fence into the mental hospital. The police had broken down the locks to the Third Sick Hall, and Chen Ge headed for Room 3 immediately.

He pushed the door open, and everything looked the same as when he left it. His investigation came up with nothing. Chen Ge walked deeper into the sick hall as he contemplated. He retrieved the hammer and cleaver that he had hidden the night before and rushed to the director's office. Using the tools from his toolbox, he pried the four blood red nails from the corners of the dresser.

They look to be normal iron nails. Chen Ge tore a piece off from the curtain, used it to wrap the nails, and placed it inside his backpack.

The day was starting. Knowing that he still had plenty of things to do, he exited the mental hospital, walked quite a distance, and eventually found a taxi. He returned to New Century Park.

After placing down his backpack, Chen Ge put up a sign for temporary closure and carried a bunch of stuff before hurrying to the city center.

"Sheng Yuan International Plaza's third floor." Chen Ge held the flyer in his hand as he waited for the elevator. There was a group of young men and women near him, and they were chit-chatting among themselves. They were very excited.

"I'm shocked that Tian Teng Medical School decided to come to Jiujiang! When they were stationed at Xing Hai last year, I was so ready to hop on a train to go visit them!"

"Sounds like you're exaggerating again. Su Su, I hear we also have a good Haunted House, and it's quite famous online."

"Don't buy into online rumors. The Haunted Houses we have only rely on cheap tricks; they're no competition for Tian Teng Medical School. You're not an aficionado like myself, so you wouldn't understand it."

The Su Su who spoke was a rather cute girl. She was about 1.6 meters tall, and her front was as flat as her back. Standing beside Su Su was a tall young man. He added shyly, "But aren't all Haunted Houses the same?"

“Most Haunted Houses are in it for the money, but Tian Teng Medical School is different; they’re aiming for a real haunting experience. The two are leagues apart.” The girl seemed to be a real Haunted House fan. “You won’t understand it even if I explain it to you. Later, you just stick behind me.”

The girl was quite interesting, and she had Chen Ge’s interest. The elevator door opened, and all of them went up to the third floor. The elevator opened to reveal a hall that was filled with waiting visitors.

“Tian Teng Medical School is so famous?” Chen Ge had risked his life and energy doing all sort of promotion online, and he had barely gotten the popularity of his Haunted House up. In comparison, Tian Teng Medical School managed to attract so many visitors just from word of mouth alone. That was quite impressive.

“They are, of course, famous! They’re the biggest moving Haunted House currently available on the market! They hired a professional Haunted House designer from Japan who had over ten years of experience. The make-up team and every set piece are custom-made.” The girl called Su Su overheard Chen Ge and patiently explained to him, “Uncle, even though the price of admission is rather expensive, it is definitely worth your money! The scares utilize sound, light, electricity, and smell. It’s the best Japanese-style Haunted House in the nation.”

“Uncle?” Chen Ge’s lips twitched slightly. The things he had seen yesterday were scary enough. After managing his expression, Chen Ge walked past the girl, mumbling, “I’ve not experienced a Japanese-style Haunted House before, but I wonder, compared to the Third Sick Hall, which is scarier?”

Chapter 188 - One Is Enough

Chapter 188: One Is Enough

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The hall was filled to the brim with people; there were still people downstairs, and the elevator kept bringing new visitors. At 10 am, the proprietor for Tian Teng Medical School finally appeared. He was of average height, had a short haircut, and looked to be in his thirties.

There were two models in revealing nurse costumes trailing behind them. Even though their make-up was startling white, their eyes never stopped releasing electricity. The man tried the loudspeaker and stood at the steps before the entrance of the Haunted House and said, “Everyone, thank you for your kind support. Tian Teng Medical School has always maintained...”

...

Chen Ge’s eyes scanned the two models. He was not going to pay attention to the man’s introductory speech. He was thinking about designing a pretty and sexy costume for Xu Wan when his Haunted House had its next activity.

The man talked for two to three minutes before finally getting to the point.

“Our team optimizes the Haunted House every six months. With the aid of a professional foreign team, all the scares are updated, and as the proprietor, it is my responsibility to tell everyone that Tian Teng Medical School is scarier than all the other Haunted Houses available on the market!

“We strive for the most realistic terror, unlike certain unethical Haunted Houses who rely on online water armies to brush up on their popularity. They think that this was clever, and some did fall for the dirty tricks, but to be honest, I find this behavior laughable!”

Chen Ge was getting impatient from all the slander. He nudged forward through the crowd, but there were too many people. Finally, he reached the ticket seller. “One ticket please.”

“Did you book a ticket online?”

“No.”

“I’m sorry, today’s tickets have all been sold. How about you stay until afternoon? Perhaps there might be an opening then.”

“The tickets are all gone?”

The proprietor continued to speak on stage. “If the Haunted Houses on the market are first generation, my Tian Teng Medical School is a fourth generation Haunted House that combines many high-end technology!

“Today is the first day we’re opening our doors for the citizens of Jiujiang. To let everyone have a clearer understanding of the situation, I’ll randomly select four visitors to experience the Haunted House with an audio recorder and a portable electrocardiographic monitor! Through the speakers that are connected to the audio recorder and the cardiograph broadcasted on screen, you’ll be able to see for yourself how scary our Haunted House is!”

Before the proprietor finished talking, there was already cheer from the crowd. It was hard to tell whether this was a set-up or not.

“There’s a code behind every ticket, and we’ll select the lucky ones with a randomized code generator.” The man nodded to the sales counter, and the workers started to do their work.

Chen Ge saw everything with his eyes. The man stepped on his Haunted House to bring himself up, and he could not take that lying down.

“Wait!” Chen Ge raised his hand and walked onto the stage. “You said earlier that your Haunted House is scary but other Haunted Houses depend on online water army to brush up on their popularity. That, I don’t agree with.”

The man frowned. If not for the crowd, he would have called for security to haul Chen Ge out.

“I am the boss of Western Jiujiang’s House of Horrors, the owner of the Haunted House that you’re happily slandering online. The day before yesterday I just hosted a livestream that has more than 600,000 viewers.”

When Chen Ge walked to the stage, there was a familiar voice from the crowd that called out. “Boss?”

Chen Ge followed the voice and saw He San and Gao Ru Xue standing in the crowd.

“Why are you here?” Chen Ge was baffled. He San was openly supporting his enemy. “If you want to experience a Haunted House, why didn’t you come to me?”

He San did not know how to explain himself. He could not openly admit before the proprietor of Tian Teng Medical School that Boss Chen’s Haunted House was too scary. His class was still having nightmares from their previous experience and thus decided to come to another Haunted House to seek some relaxation.

The man took this in as well. He had already recognized Chen Ge. “Looks like your Haunted House is not that popular; even your own friend won’t support you. Fine, if you insist on learning some tricks from us, we’re willing to provide you with this opportunity. Don’t say that we’re not generous people.”

The man was clever. Since they dared slander Chen Ge’s Haunted House online, they obviously knew of Chen Ge. By letting Chen Ge into the Haunted House, his intention was clear. If Chen Ge was scared inside Teng Tian Medical School, he could use this as a point of promotion and forcefully yank the customers from Western Jiujiang’s House of Horrors. Chen Ge had the same idea as he did; they both wanted to persuade the other’s visitors to come to their own.

Due to the recent livestream, Chen Ge’s Haunted House had become a hot item online, but he knew that the popularity would not last for long. At most, it would last for a week. Even though Tian Teng Medical School was not as popular as Chen Ge’s Haunted House within Jiujiang, they had a large national popularity and a number of loyal fans like Su Su.

“Come, help him put on the audio recorder and heart monitor.” The two models walked toward Chen Ge. “Now, we’ll pick the remaining three lucky visitors.”

“I don’t think that’s necessary.” Chen Ge shrugged. “Challenging a Haunted House alone is more fun. If you can manage to scare me, I will admit that my Haunted House is not as scary as yours on my website and promote your Haunted House for a whole month.”

The man was intrigued by what Chen Ge said, but he was cautious as well. He was sure Chen Ge was up to something. “How are we going to gauge that we’ve managed to scare you?”

“You’ve installed the heartrate monitor, right? The normal heartrate when a person is walking is between 60 to 100. When they’re scared, the oxygen in their blood will drastically decrease, and the heart will pump faster.” Chen Ge looked at the man and calmly said, “If my heartrate ever rises over 100, I’ll lose.”

“You have a deal.” The man did not give Chen Ge any chance to change his mind. Even a small jog would bring a man’s heartrate over 100, much less being scared. From how he saw it, Chen Ge was bound to lose.

“Don’t be so hasty. If I lose, I will admit your Haunted House is scarier than mine online, but what if you lose?”

“Don’t worry, if we lose, we’ll also admit that our Haunted House is not as scary as yours online.” The man pointed at the crowd. “Everyone here can be your witness.”

“Actually, I still have one small request.” Chen Ge smiled innocently. “I think that you still have some misunderstandings about my Haunted House. I hope that your team will be willing to come visit my Haunted House. I’ve added a new scenario, and it hasn’t been opened to the public yet.”

“Okay, no problem,” the man promised easily and earned affection from the crowd. Only He San and Gao Ru Xue had a curious expression on their faces. Looking at the man, they saw themselves in the past overlapping with him.

Chapter 189 - Rivalry

Chapter 189: Rivalry

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge removed his shirt, and the two nurses helped him apply the audio recorder and heartrate monitor. After testing, several fluctuating lines appeared on the screen in the middle of the hall. The man stood to the side of the stage and pointed at the lines. "HR/PR represents heartrate and pulse rate. SpO2 stands for peripheral capillary oxygen saturation, an estimate of the amount of oxygen in the blood. RESP is respiratory rate. TEMP is body temperature. Based on these few lines, we can clearly and objectively see the change in your emotions."

After putting on his clothes, Chen Ge shrugged. "Can we start now?"

...

"The entrance is to the left of the hall; the exit is on the right. We'll wait for you at the exit," the man explained briefly to Chen Ge. "There is a guide inside the Haunted House, so he'll tell you what to do."

"Okay." Chen Ge walked into Tian Teng Medical School. Looking at Chen Ge's back, the man smiled. They had organized similar activities in Xing Hai before, and the lines on the screen seemed to go through a roller coaster. Combined with the screams would be that broadcasted through the speaker, even the visitors outside could experience the fear vicariously.

"Such an interesting fella." The man locked the door silently and took out his phone to inform the workers inside the Haunted House that their prey was coming. He told them not to hold back.

...

As the door closed, the light in the room dimmed. Chen Ge waited until his eyes had familiarized themselves with the darkness before he moved forward. The first scene was a security stop. A person in a security outfit was sitting down, facing away from Chen Ge. There was a blood-splattered screen before him, and the images kept flitting about. They seemed to show scenes inside the hospital.

This was the preparation room, mainly used to inform the visitor of the Haunted House's background and to bring the visitors into the story.

The key to moving forward should be the security guard. This set-up is quite interesting.

Chen Ge walked to the door of the security stop, leaned against the only window, and yelled into the small room, "Boss, what are you looking at?"

Hearing Chen Ge's voice, the man slowly turned around. His face was covered with sweat, and with his finger pointing at the screen, his lips stuttered, "There, there..."

A stutterer's character setting? Very professional.

Chen Ge walked into the room to have a closer look at the screen. The screen was repeating several headlines about the hospital: Patients mysteriously jumping from the building; immoral doctors selling organs on the black market; confirmed dead patients returning the next day. The team had put plenty of effort into these headlines because there was even a surveillance tape attached to them.

In the darkened hospital corridor, a woman in white was staggering forward with her head lowered, her black hair covering her entire face. The video was edited so that the woman appeared to be far one second but close to the camera the next. The woman's face appeared at the camera on the third second, and a scary face filled up the screen.

"There's a ghost!" the security guard who sat behind Chen Ge screamed.

He had probably practiced this many times because his timing was perfect. Chen Ge sighed as he shook his head. "Great set-up, but you might be able to scare me if she's wearing red."

A female Red Specter had a special meaning for Chen Ge. At the end of the video, there was a layout page for the Haunted House. Basically, Chen Ge had to follow the designated path, and that would be all.

This kind of design was the most effective, but it was not as entertaining as Chen Ge's Haunted House, which was open for you to wander about. After memorizing the map, Chen Ge prepared to leave.

When he turned around and saw the security guard, his eyes narrowed, and his heartrate rose slightly.

The security had put on a thin ghost mask, and it looked rather similar to ghost face that had appeared on screen earlier. He looked at Chen Ge silently, and Chen Ge looked at him silently. "If you have nothing to say, then move on. Don't waste time."

"Our Haunted House is really haunted. If you stumble across anything weird, remember to holler at the camera!" the security said seriously, and it did not sound like he was lying.

"Can you be more specific? What kind of ghost?" Chen Ge scanned the room. There was a flashlight and some tools under the counter. They should have been provided to the guests, but the security did not seem like he was going to give Chen Ge any.

"You'll understand soon enough. The way to begin is on your left-hand side. Push the wall open, and your exploration of the secret at Tian Teng Medical School will officially start," the security guard said mysteriously before hauling Chen Ge out of the security stop.

"There's an actual ghost? At most, it'll be a lingering spirit." Chen Ge mumbled something that the security guard did not understand before pushing the wall and moved on. The Haunted House was filled with many traps. The wall opened and closed on its own. Someone was controlling it from afar.

The details are on point; no wonder they're so popular.

Just the design at the preparation room had impressed Chen Ge. He wondered if he could use that inspiration inside his own Haunted House somehow.

Behind the wall was a long corridor. Due to the limitation of geography, the corridor was half the size of a normal corridor, and the most interesting part was that there was a dried 'female body' hanging in the middle of the road, as if warning the visitors of incoming danger.

The corridor was most likely a buffer zone for the visitors to prepare themselves for the upcoming scare. This was quite the kind design. Chen Ge walked toward the body, and when he approached, he stopped.

At the corner of the corridor, away from the focus of the visitor, was a steel box that did not capture much attention. A normal visitor would be attracted by the female body and ignore the steel box.

There has to be someone hiding inside the box. After being scared inside the security stop, they would be tense. When they first passed through the door, their attention would be dominated by the female body, and when they tried to walk past the body, a ghost would jump out at them from the box hidden in the corner. That's quite interesting.

A heartless design met Chen Ge, who did not know the meaning of the term 'bottom line'. The match between shameless and cunning was officially starting.

I seem to have rediscovered the childhood joy of visiting a Haunted House. Chen Ge leaned his body against the wall. Since the actor was hiding inside the box, Chen Ge's position was exactly inside his blind spot.

As he nudged closer, instead of watching the swinging body, Chen Ge kept his focus on the box. The fake box looked flawless, at least from the front, but from the side, one could see that the back of the box was already loosening. There was even a small gap on the corner. Probably due to the hard-to-notice angle of the gap, the team had not fixed it.

The person inside the box must be fully focused, waiting for me to walk past so that he can jump out to scare me.

Scaring people required timing, and the more professional the actor, the better their timing.

Chen Ge thought about it and took out his phone to set a one-minute alarm. He set the alarm tone as Wedding Dress, and he slowly squatted down and slid the phone into the box through the open gap.

Chapter 190 - Don't be Scared, I'm a Visitor

Chapter 190: Don't be Scared, I'm a Visitor

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The corridor suddenly became so quiet that even the sound of breathing could not be heard. The 'ghost' inside the box did not realize what Chen Ge had done. He was still waiting for the moment to give Chen Ge the fatal blow.

In the corner, Chen Ge was also silently counting the time. After thirty seconds, there was a creaking sound inside the box. The actor had probably gotten tired from maintaining the same pose for a long time.

...

In comparison, Chen Ge was more like an experienced hunter. He arched his back and slowly nudged forward. After forty seconds, the 'ghost' was confused because the visitor still had not shown up. He leaned his body forward to adjust his angle in the hope of spotting Chen Ge.

The silent confrontation was about to reach its climax. When only three seconds were left, Chen Ge took a step forward to block the front of the box. At the same time, the sound of the ghost's screaming appeared inside the box. Different from Black Friday, Wedding Dress started with a crescendo!

The actor, who was focused on locating Chen Ge, was tense, and the sound of a shrill female scream appeared behind him. The actor knocked into the door, and in his panic, he seemed to accidentally trip on the prop that he was supposed to use to scare Chen Ge. He fell inside the box with a thud.

"What was that sound? What was that sound!"

The dark and cramped box became his greatest nightmare because it sounded like the female ghost was just beside him. He banged on the door madly. Chen Ge, who had predicted everything, very kindly stepped one step back to block the door from opening.

"What sound is that? Let me out!" Afraid that the blocking might expend too much of his energy, Chen Ge soon moved to the side.

The door was slammed open, and a male ghost in a patient's garb and fake blood over his face crawled out from it. He gasped greedily for air with his arm over his chest. He collapsed in the middle of the corridor looking just like a trauma victim.

"Don't be scared, I'm just the visitor." Chen Ge talked into the recorder naturally. He then picked up his phone and turned off his alarm. He acted like everything was completely normal.

As his cold sweat mixed with fake blood, the man looked at Chen Ge with mixed emotions. He looked as pitiable as could be.

"Why did you fall? Are you hurt?" Chen Ge turned to look inside the box. Sitting on the floor were two specially made mannequin heads, and one of the head's long hair had come off the mannequin. "You guys planned to use such a scary prop? So wicked."

Chen Ge planned to go help the man, but the man crawled away from him. "Don't touch me! Go ahead... I can stand up on my own."

"You sure? You look so pale."

"That's the make-up! Just leave me be, go on!" The male ghost struggled back into the box and closed the door behind him.

"Then you be careful." Chen Ge set the alarm alert back. This Wedding Dress sure was useful. Something hit him on the back of his head. Chen Ge turned back to look. The 'female body' was still swinging in the air.

He reached out to grab the body's feet. They felt cold to his touch. There was even a name written on the body's patient outfit—Xu Zhenzhen.

"The handiwork is not bad but still worse than the mannequins inside my Haunted House."

After giving his comment, Chen Ge continued to move forward. He turned the corner, and the 'female body' in the corridor started to sway again.

Chen Ge officially entered Tian Teng Medical School. The white walls were scrawled with words that were written in dried blood. There were proclamations like 'I don't want to die' and 'Give me back my organs’.

“This Haunted House’s background sure is complicated. I suppose the aim is for the visitor to explore the place on their own and come up with the solution to reconstruct the actual origin story.”

Chen Ge stood inside the corridor. The windows on the sides were painted, but combined with lighting effects, it gave the feeling that something was running outside the window. The person who designed this place was indeed an expert. The windows on the side were a mixture of fake and real. When Chen Ge walked past the fourth window, a hand reached out to grab him. That was not all. The ceiling above him clicked, and a mannequin head that was hidden above rolled down and fell right into Chen Ge’s arms.

If this was someone else, they probably would have been screaming, but Chen Ge had never been so calm. He held the head up and felt nostalgic. “When I was four or five, I used to run all over the place with fake heads like this. Time flies.”

The actor who held Chen Ge on the other side of the window was confused. Holding a fake head and running about when he was four or five? What kind of upbringing is that?

The person silently released his grip and retreated behind the window. The light in the Haunted House slowly darkened, and there were green lights installed every few meters. The corridor grew smaller, and there were surgical rooms that started to appear on both sides.

“Surgical rooms? So soon?” Chen Ge stopped at the first room and looked around. This was something that he had learned after completing many Trial Missions. He needed to check the room for safety before entering it.

When he turned back to look, he was surprised to find the security guard. He was still wearing the ghost mask. He was helping to get the man from earlier out of the box.

“Normally, there should be a ghost chasing after the visitors, and that would increase the excitement of the experience.”

The man inside the box had his limbs turn into noodles and could not get up on his own. The security was in an awkward position; the whole scary atmosphere was lost.

“If there’s only two of them, it’ll be fine, but how come I feel that there's a third person following?" Chen Ge made a mental note of that before waking into the autopsy room. The tables were pushed to the side of the wall, and fake blood covered the mannequins in the room. The scene looked gory.

"The Japanese and Western styles love this kind of design." Chen Ge was looking for fear and terror. Gore was more of a manifestation of violence. His eyes scanned the autopsy room, and to Chen Ge's surprise, there was no actor hiding in there, just broken mannequins.

He picked up a few of them and realized that every one of them was missing a different kind of organ. More interestingly, everyone was wearing a patient's garb with the same name—Xu Zhenzhen.

"Is this a special request by the boss?" Chen Ge tried to go over the video he had seen in the security stop in his mind. There was no mention of this name.

"Xu Zhenzhen? Could she be the woman who was featured inside the video?"

Chen Ge exited the autopsy room. The security guard and the man inside the box had disappeared; they seemed to have left the Haunted House.

Chapter 191 - Did I Forget to Put on Make-up Today?

Chapter 191: Did I Forget to Put on Make-up Today?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The security guard has carried the actor inside the box out?

Standing at the door to the autopsy room, Chen Ge turned back to look down the corridor that he had come from. His eyes narrowed. The influence of a dark environment was not that huge on him. I did not hear a shuffling sound, so they should only be in hiding.

...

Closing the autopsy room door, some rust fell from the frame. The props inside Tian Teng Haunted House looked old. Feeling the rust, Chen Ge stood up and inspected the tools in the room. Doesn't look like these have been painted to look old. They seem to have been taken from an abandoned hospital directly.

For authenticity, some Haunted Houses would use a low price to buy abandoned equipment in bulk and work on them before placing them into the Haunted House, examples being the surgery bed and the electrocardiograph in the autopsy room.

He could notice that because there was a hidden line of code behind the machine—2-2-1-15. This was the code the hospital used to monitor and categorize their equipment. It represented the field, a medical equipment, maintenance, and the electrocardiograph ID. Different hospitals might have different codes, but they were more or less the same.

Lingering spirits normally attach themselves to the closest item at the time of their death. If all the props inside this place were sourced from a real hospital, then perhaps this place is really haunted.

Chen Ge was merely speculating. After all, he had no evidence. Of course, this might just be another trick by Tian Teng Medical School.

There was another sickroom attached to the autopsy room. It was hung with plenty of white cloths and had a use that was unclear to Chen Ge. Chen Ge did not have any interest in experiencing it, so he walked by it. At the end of the dim corridor was a locked steel door, and there was a large lock on the door.

Looks like I'll need the key before I can move on.

The road ahead was blocked, and Chen Ge had already examined the autopsy room. There was no way forward other than to go back into the room filled with white clothes.

The white tapestries fell from the ceiling, and a large part of it was covered with blood stains. The place looked like a crime scene. After removing the thick white curtain, Chen Ge entered a room that was even darker, and the setting was quite uncomfortable. The organs and limbs that were missing from the mannequins in the autopsy room were all there, and intermixed with them were several severed mannequin heads.

Now, this is not bad. Chen Ge was the first to challenge the Haunted House so the fake blood on the floor had not completely dried yet. Stepping over it, Chen Ge's shoes stuck to the floor, and it was a very uncomfortable feeling. This room is connected to the autopsy room, and the monitor in the security stop mentioned something like illegal black marketing of organs, so this should be where it all went down.

Tian Teng Medical School had hired a specialist team from Japan to design the place. To pursue a visual horror, they would do many things that were horrible, things that designers in the local scene would not do. Walking to the pile of organs and broken limbs, Chen Ge scanned the pile and noticed something curious.

The female mannequin on the surgery table in the autopsy room was missing a heart. Even though other mannequins are also missing some organs, they're not as important as the heart. I've looked through the place and couldn't find a heart. Maybe the key is hiding inside the heart?

Where would the heart be?

Chen Ge looked at the pile of abandoned organs and limbs, and an idea surfaced in his heart. He bent down to prepare to rummage through the pile of props. Just as his body slowly lowered, a head human hiding in the pile of organs suddenly opened its eyes and started to scream!

The head was covered in scars, and her eyes were dripping with tears of blood. Her hair stuck to her neck. As she tried to stand up, the organs and limbs rolled away. However, she only stood up half way before someone pressed down on her skull!

“Shush, be quiet.” Chen Ge pressed the ‘ghost’ back into her hiding place. With his improved sight, things in the darkness were as clear as they were in daylight. When he walked into the room, Chen Ge had immediately noticed this slightly abnormal head.

Due to the mountain of props, it was a girl of slight stature who hid among the pile of fake organs. When she was pressed back down by Chen Ge, she also did not know how to react. This was something that she had not experienced before, and there was no corresponding method that taught her how to react in the workers’ handbook!

The girl then sat back down on the floor. With Chen Ge’s powerful hand pressing down on her head, she had forgotten what she was supposed to say.

“Heart, heart... where are you?” They said that a serious man was the most handsome man, but as the ‘female ghost’ watched Chen Ge searching for his target amid the pile of fake organs, mumbling the word ‘heart’, she shivered.

“Found it.” Chen Ge opened the heart model that was hidden behind the girl. It was hiding an exquisite looking key. After retrieving the key, Chen Ge left immediately, leaving behind a befuddled ‘female ghost’.

Looking at Chen Ge’s back, she tried to speak multiple times but failed. After Chen Ge left, she rearranged the props around her and reassumed her position. “Did I forget to put on my make-up today?”

After opening the door in the middle of the corridor, the place turned creepier. Due to geographical limitations, the design of Tian Teng Medical School paid extra attention to the details, and the scares were close to each other.

After walking through the steel door, the green lights in the corridor kept flashing, and the white cloth that lined the corridor fluttered in the wind.

The size of the corridor has narrowed by half a meter; there should be something hidden behind these walls. Chen Ge knocked on the wall. I’m right, the wall on the left side is hollow.

Chen Ge came across the third room after taking a few more steps.

The room was filled with baby cribs that had baby mannequins inside them.

A nursery? Chen Ge stood at the door to look around. Just as he went over the threshold, the room was filled with the sound of children crying. "Alright, don't cry. Come to Uncle. Now, where are you?"

There was more than one speaker installed in the room, so the crying felt like it came from everywhere.

There's a meaning to every room inside Tian Teng Medical School. The autopsy room provided the hint about the heart, and the room with white clothes hid the heart, and the heart was the key to moving on. Therefore, this room should have something I need as well.

Chen Ge walked to the middle of the room, and he suddenly felt something pull on his shirt. He turned to look, and beside him, a baby had reached its hands out of his crib to grab at Chen Ge's shirt. The baby's face was colored with venom, and the make-up was detailed.

The baby mannequin doesn't have a rounded joint. This means that the baby's arm is probably hollow. I should be able to find some signs of wiring. Chen Ge looked around him. To be able to grab me while I was passing by, the person who is controlling the baby must be close, or else their timing wouldn't be so perfect. Based on that line of thinking, they should be hiding under the crib.

Chapter 192 - You're as Good as a Real Ghost

Chapter 192: You're as Good as a Real Ghost

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge had discovered the ‘ghost’ underneath the crib, but the ‘ghost’ did not know that.

“Come out, brother.” Chen Ge pushed the crib aside, and the wiring hidden under the baby pulled taut. A slim man had hidden himself underneath the crib and was holding a remote control in his arms. He was wearing scary make-up, his body drenched in fake blood.

...

“Let me ask you, what kind of item am I supposed to look for here?” Chen Ge also felt he was being a bit forward, so he added, “When I came in, the security didn’t tell me anything so perhaps you would be able to.”

The ‘ghost’ under the crib didn’t say anything and turned to run out of the room. This sudden action surprised Chen Ge.

“Why did he run?” To maintain his heartrate, Chen Ge did not run after the guy. He walked leisurely as he had been doing since he entered the Haunted House. “A baby grabbing your clothes, this scare is a bit too plain. There should be a bigger scare. Most likely, the actor is supposed to jump out when I am leaving.”

Picking up the baby from the bed, Chen Ge realized that the make-up skill was still not as good as his was.

Xu Zhenzhen? The blanket underneath the baby had this name on it. Why is it her again?

Chen Ge picked up all the nearby babies, and all the mannequins had this name underneath them.

Ever since I enter the Haunted House, I’ve been seeing this name. Is this some kind of psychological trick? He looked through the nursery and finally found a clue inside one of the cribs. It was a pendant in the shape of a key. The pendant was sitting on a piece of paper. It read—

For my daughter, Xu Zhenzhen.

Taking something that belonged to the victim will give someone the impression that they're haunted by the dead victim. This note is probably supposed to increase the visitors' fear toward Xu Zhenzhen.

The pendant was something that Chen Ge needed to proceed. Not taking it meant the inability to move forward. This was another trick by the Haunted House.

After picking up the pendant, Chen Ge looked at the note. He retrieved the Pen Spirit's ballpoint pen, and he added a few words to the back of note while mimicking the handwriting—I've written.

A little surprise for them.

The scare in this room had been exposed by Chen Ge. He walked toward the door, and as he stepped out, there was the sound of something rolling in the dark. Then, a woman with disheveled hair, a face covered with blood, and a bloated stomach ran toward Chen Ge pushing a cart filled with babies. The scariest thing was that the woman had no legs.

When he saw this, Chen Ge's heart rate jumped slightly, but he soon calmed down. The woman's body was tightly adhered to the left wall, and he had confirmed that the left wall was suspicious before entering the nursery.

Instead of saying that the woman was pushing the cart, the woman was actually sitting inside the cart and was being carried forward. The corridor was small, and the cart moved fast. The 'pregnant ghost' practically flashed across Chen Ge.

His gaze filled with resentment locked with Chen Ge. Their faces were merely twenty centimeters away.

So, the scariest thing is outside the room; that's quite an ingenious design.

The visitors would be afraid when looking for the key inside the nursery. They would sigh in relief when they finally found it. They would be completely unprepared for the female ghost who waited for them as they left the nursery.

There are no tracks on the floor, so is there a machine inside the wall that pushes the cart?

Chen Ge followed the 'pregnant ghost' as the cart pulled back. His footsteps were light. The 'pregnant ghost' did not know that Chen Ge was following behind her. She enjoyed this experience of scaring people. She turned her body around, hoping to scare Chen Ge again.

However, as she turned and met Chen Ge's extremely inquisitive face, she was caught by surprise, and the expression on her face froze.

"So, you've been squatting inside the cart; that's quite creative."

The cart was motorized, and the woman was basically the driver. To protect the visitors' safety, half of the bottom of the cart was connected to the machine inside the wall, and the distance the cart could travel was only one meter.

"This design is quite interesting, and your gaze earlier did give me the feels. Resentment mixed with hate, it's almost like a real ghost." Chen Ge was never stingy with his praise. After hearing Chen Ge's praise, the 'pregnant ghost' did not know how to reply. She had been in this business for years already, and this was the first time that someone had praised her acting inside a Haunted House.

Normally, the visitors would not have paid attention to such details. They were like dancers in the dark; they focused on their work, but there was never any appreciation. Sometimes, visitors might even turn aggressive on them. Even though she hated to admit it, she quite enjoyed the compliment.

"It's nothing..." Perhaps she had been a ghost for too long, but even her voice sounded grim.

"I'm not kidding. Your gaze was similar to an actual ghost. You are an excellent actor."

Chen Ge moved on to the next scene with his key. When he left, the woman suddenly realized something. "What does he mean by 'similar to an actual ghost'? Sounds like he has seen an actual ghost before."

After the nursery, it was the bathroom. There were several mannequins hanging upside down in it. The scares at Tian Teng Medical School were mostly visual scares like these. It would give its impact at first glance, so those visiting their Haunted House would scream endlessly.

Other than these scenarios, Chen Ge's Haunted House had a different scenario. He depended on continuous influence of the atmosphere to slowly collect the fear inside people's hearts before exploding it at one shot, giving his visitors a scare that echoed deep into their soul.

The bathroom, diagnosis room, and the doctor's resting room had no actors, and they depended on mechanisms to scare people. In other words, these were the rooms Tian Teng Medical School gave their visitors to recover themselves. Normal tricks and gory scenes did nothing for Chen Ge. He went through all three rooms easily, and then inside the nooks and crannies of the three rooms, he found three different-colored pendant keys. Including the two found inside the heart and the nursery, Chen Ge now had five keys on him.

All of the keys have different colors, so there should only be one real key.

Chen Ge pocketed all the keys and entered the fourth room. The room was small and had the décor from decades ago.

The paint on the walls was yellow, and the chandelier swayed in the wind. There was a 'dead body' lying on top of the office table, and there was a plastic knife and several blood-stained patient's records on the floor.

There were bloody palm prints on the ceiling, and the floor was covered with messy footprints. The place was messy, like it had been visited by a bunch of ghosts.

This is interesting. Why is the dead body's frame so similar to the young man that was hiding under the crib earlier?

Chen Ge walked to the office table and found something interesting. On the bookshelf behind the table sat an old-fashioned tape recorder that was no longer in production.

Chapter 193 - Getting Interesting

Chapter 193: Getting Interesting

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Tape recorder had its popularity in the eighties and nineties, but with the advent of internet, it had slowly become obsolete. Perhaps to preserve the feel of the bygone era, Tian Teng Medical School had placed many antiques inside this room, and the most conspicuous was the tape recorder and an old-fashioned flashlight.

Chen Ge was reminded of a horror flick he had seen a long time ago. The recorder would play on its own every midnight, and those who heard it would die a horrible death.

...

Is this just a prop? Chen Ge completely ignored the ‘dead body’ that was collapsed on the table. He walked past it to head for the bookshelf. When he was one meter away from the recorder, the play button pressed down on its own.

A sensor? No, someone is probably remote-controlling it. Chen Ge turned back to look, and the dead body was lying in such a way that his head was deep buried inside his arms. Compared to the dead body, Chen Ge was more interested in this recorder before him. After the button was pressed, the tape started to play. After the initial white noise, a middle-aged man’s voice could be heard.

“Please, forgive me! Please, I beg of you!” The man was begging, and it sounded like death would have been a release. Following his screams, there was sound of cutting and tearing. It was direct and gory. When Chen Ge heard it, the images appeared in his mind. Bones were snapped, and skin was torn open; it was the cruelest torture.

“Tian Teng probably wouldn’t use this for normal visitors.”

The dead body on the table twitched slightly when he heard Chen Ge say that. The reality was not far from his speculation; the content of the tape had been swapped at the last minute specifically for Chen Ge. Chen Ge had gotten used to fear and terror, but he still flinched at gore and cruelty. In that manner, he was no different from a normal person.

“It’s still ongoing? Do they plan to use this as the background music?” Chen Ge listened patiently because he assumed that the recording would contain clues that might help him clear the game. However, he listened for a full minute, and it was still screaming from the torture and begging for mercy.

“The person would have fainted from blood loss earlier than this. How can he still be so spirited after one minute of fatal blood loss? Then again, the actor they hired sure is a good one. He has managed to create a scary feeling just using his voice.” The man’s voice eventually weakened, and he started to pay for all the horrible things he had done.

Chen Ge then realized that the victim on the tape was the director of Tian Teng Medical School, a man who would do anything for money.

“Who would have thought that this is a story with a moral of good things happen to good people and bad things happen to bad people?” At the end of the tape, the director admitted to all the bad things he had done. He begged his tormentors to not harm his daughter with his last breath.

Here, the twist arrived. Just as the director begged for his tormentors to not harm his daughter, there was the sound of door opening in the recording. It was quickly followed by a woman’s scream, and the director screamed, “Zhenzhen, run!”

The recording ended there, and Chen Ge did not know what to think about this story. The director was obviously guilty, but the daughter was probably innocent. In any case, that was not important. The important thing was, the daughter had walked into the room when the monsters were tormenting her father. Then, her ending would probably be the same as her father’s.

All the mannequins inside Tian Teng Medical School have the name Xu Zhenzhen written on them, what is the meaning of that?

Tian Teng Medical School was famous within the Haunted House circle, and all the scenes had been designed by a professional team. Challenging such a large moving Haunted House at its highest difficulty, there had to be something to this name.

All the workers inside the Haunted House are playing a fake ghosts, but that’s all to hide an actual ghost?

From the ‘female body’ that greeted everyone at the entrance and the mannequins that had lost their organs in the autopsy room as well as the repetition of Xu Zhenzhen’s name over the Haunted House, Chen Ge had an idea why Tian Teng Medical School did all these things.

No matter how realistic the actor’s make-up is, the visitors know internally that they’re fake, so they have to create a ‘real ghost’ that feels like she’s trailing behind all the visitors, and Xu Zhenzhen takes on that role.

The creativity was there, and it gave Chen Ge a lot of inspiration. All this for a real ghost? In that case, I’ll give you one.

Chen Ge realized that the tape was almost done. He pressed the eject button. He was facing away from the ‘dead body’, so no one knew what he was doing.

This kind of tape recorder is no longer sold on the market. Perhaps I can find one at the flea market, but that’s only if I’m lucky. Now that I have one before me, I might as well use it to try this tape that I have.

He inserted his tape into the recorder and pressed play. The tape started to roll, but there was no sound.

An empty tape?

Chen Ge waited.

He walked around the room, like he was admiring the décor.

After leaving Third Sick Hall, Tian Teng Medical School was like going on a holiday. Chen Ge had not felt so relaxed in a long time already. A Haunted House is indeed a good place to release stress. When I go back, I’ll have to change my promotional slogan.

After a stroll around the room, Chen Ge picked up a yellowed newspaper from the floor. He scanned it and realized that it was not fake. It was dated several years ago.

“Xing Hai Morning News?” Chen Ge was intrigued. Four years ago, a woman had run to an abandoned hospital to commit suicide. After investigation, it was made clear that the woman’s name was Xu Zhenzhen. The hospital had once belonged to her father, and her father had committed suicide ten years before that in his own office.

Same destination but different victim. This mysterious double suicide caused a wave through Xing Hai. The medical doctor confirmed that the woman had died from suicide, but after her death, obvious red handprints surfaced on her body; it looked very weird.

After that, people's interest moved on, and so did the police. The case was thus ended.

The victim's name is Xu Zhenzhen. Looks like this is the secret hidden at Tian Teng Medical School.

Chen Ge put down the paper. A normal visitor would have run out screaming and would have missed details like this. Only a brave visitor would search slowly, and when they found out that the Haunted House was based on a real event, the defense in their heart would crack. They would start to doubt themselves, increasing the fear inside their heart.

Tian Teng Medical School's design was perfect, but those designers who had been in the business for more than a decade did not expect that they would receive a customer like Chen Ge one day.

This Haunted House sure is interesting. Chen Ge thought back to the map that he had seen inside the security stop. He had visited two thirds of the scenes already, and he was close to the exit.

Chapter 194 - So Painful! So Painful!

Chapter 194: So Painful! So Painful!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Other than the tape and newspaper article, Chen Ge found many other hints about Xu Zhenzhen inside the office. For example, in a broken photo frame left in the corner of the bookshelf, there was a picture of a father and daughter, but both of their faces had been blocked out. There was the man's will inside the table's drawer, and it did mention the name Xu Zhenzhen. There was not one picture of Xu Zhenzhen, but the mention of the girl's name could be found all over the Haunted House.

Tian Teng Medical School is using a real case to design their Haunted House. Aren't they afraid of evoking the real Xu Zhenzhen? Haunted Houses were natural locales where negative energy gathered. It shied away from sunlight and was the perfect hiding location for spirits and ghosts. They say dreams are reflections of real life. Every day, people in the Haunted House are calling Xu Zhenzhen's name, what if she heard them?

...

Tian Teng Medical School had no idea what they had done. They had completely replicated a real case inside their Haunted House and used all the real case's information as hints. It might have looked clever to others, but Chen Ge thought that they were playing with fire.

There are 'gods' everywhere. Even if you don't believe in them, you don't need to go and actively taunt them.

Even though Chen Ge was brave, it was undeniable that he had never been incautious of the unknown. It was why he would prepare extensively before going on any Trial Missions. He had finished half of Tian Teng Medical School, and the light in the corridor was getting brighter.

It's time to leave.

Chen Ge was not sure if Xu Zhenzhen was inside the Haunted House, but he knew his target. His focus was to clear the Haunted House, and that was the only thing he was going to do. After another round, Chen Ge returned to the tape recorder. When he got close, he could hear something that sounded like muffled crying. It was soft and seemed to come from inside the recorder.

The ghost inside the tape is coming out? Chen Ge took one step back and reached one hand into his pocket to hold the ballpoint pen while his other hand shoved the ‘dead body’ on the table lightly. He was afraid that accidents might happen, and he did not have the time to look after this actor.

However, to his surprise, he only nudged the person lightly when the man leaned to his side and collapsed onto the floor.

What happened? Is it Xu Zhenzhen? He had seen real ghosts before, and he knew this could be the sign that a real ghost had appeared. Am I that lucky? Even when I’m visiting other people’s Haunted House, I ran into a ghost!

Chen Ge started to panic when he was reminded of his Specter’s Favored title. He immediately rushed forward to help the man on the floor. He wanted to save the man before it was too late. The actor died from playing dead? What kind of story will that make?

As Chen Ge squatted down to grab the man’s hand, a human head stuck out from underneath the table. The actor had been using his body to block the space from Chen Ge’s sight. It was so close that Chen Ge did not have time to evade. The human head rammed right into his chest. His heart raced and only calmed down after several seconds.

Chen Ge looked at the mannequin head in his arms and the ‘dead body’ on the ground, and it dawned on him. “Brother, are you trying to get revenge for humiliating you at the nursery?”

When the ‘dead body’ was collapsed on the table earlier, his face had been hidden from view. Now that his face was revealed, Chen Ge realized that the man had not even changed his make-up. His face was smudged with fake blood. He placed his finger under the man’s nostrils. After making sure there was a breath, Chen Ge stood up. He did not plan to stay there any longer; it was time to leave.

He walked to the tape recorder and pressed the stop button. He pressed it multiple times, but the tape kept playing. He tried other buttons, but there was still no response. It can’t be stopped?

Chen Ge could not leave the tape inside Tian Teng Medical School, but taking it with him would be stealing. When Chen Ge was operating the recorder, the light crying slowly became louder, and there were some other sounds mixed into it. It sounded like electrical current but very muffled.

Chen Ge tried to remember the introduction to the tapes. About one second later, a voice appeared on the recording. It could have been male or female, and it only appeared for mere seconds.

Someone is talking? What is he trying to say?

This was the first time Chen Ge had communicated with the tape. He did not dare take this lightly; after all, this was a ghost that had been given to him by the black phone. He listened patiently, and the voice reappeared soon.

“Pain...” Mixed within white noise, the voice sounded unreal. As the tape continued to play, the voice became clearer.

It's a man's voice, and it sounds young.

He focused his hearing on the tapes and suddenly the play button on the recorder pressed downwards. Chen Ge turned to look at the ‘dead body’ on the floor. The man had also heard the noises inside the recording. He silently reached into his pocket to press on a mini controller. However, it was too late to stop the recorder now. The baleful specter inside the tape had awoken. Even if he pressed all the buttons, it would be pointless.

“So painful...”

The voice inside the tape continued to grow as if the baleful specter was slowly losing control. The only thing Chen Ge could think of doing then was to leave with the tape recorder.

Following his inability to stop the recorder after several tries, the ‘dead body’ on the floor opened his lips to say, “What’s going on?”

He sat up with the fake blood flowing down his face.

“Something wrong with your equipment?” Chen Ge could not possibly say that he had inserted a baleful specter into their recorder, and now he could not remove it.

“I suppose so.” The actor was unsure as well. He reached out to grab the recorder, but before his finger touched it, a blood-curdling scream could be heard coming from the recorder.

” So painful! ”

The actor shivered, and he pulled back his hand like he had been shocked.

“What are you so scared? Isn’t this a set-up by your Haunted House?” Chen Ge stood before the recorder to prevent accidents from happening.

“I was there when we recorded the tape; we didn’t record anything like that!” the ‘dead body’ said seriously. He took out his phone and asked inside a chatroom, “Who tweaked with the tapes inside the director’s office?”

There was no answer, but in this short period, the voice coming from the recorder turned mad. It was filled with endless hate and resentment.

” So painful! So f*cking painful! ”

It sounded like there were actual knives poking holes in his body, and he was trying his best to stop the wounds but could only look on helplessly as more wounds appeared on his body. The actor’s body was shaking. At that moment, he was truly afraid.

“Your Haunted House sure is courageous to use an actual incident to design your set. Weren’t you afraid that the spirit might return to haunt you?”

Chen Ge purposely lowered his voice as he stared at the actor.

“I hear people say you shouldn’t repeat a dead person’s name willy-nilly, whether verbally or in written form. Otherwise, bad things might happen.”

“Stop!” the actor yelled. He told everything that had happened inside the office in the chatroom. Then with forced confidence, he told Chen Ge, “Just a technical accident. It’ll be fine.”

Just as he said that, there were footsteps coming from outside the door. The ‘pregnant ghost’ that Chen Ge had seen earlier rushed into the room with terror on her face!

She was holding a piece of paper in her hand, and she was gasping for air.

“Ah Rui? Why are you here?” the actor asked nervously. He was already panicking, and it only heightened when he saw the female actor.

“There’s something on the note! I saw it accidentally.” The woman placed the note before the actor. “She is back!”

Chapter 195 - Tian Teng Medical School's Haunting Past

Chapter 195: Tian Teng Medical School's Haunting Past

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

When the woman said that, Chen Ge could clearly see the hairs on the back of the man's neck stand upright. Chen Ge had filled in several words, mimicking the original handwriting, as a prank, but he did not think that the actors' reaction would be so big.

With his eyes narrowed, Chen Ge stood between the recorder and the actors. He had a feeling that this Haunted House was more than it appeared—perhaps it was really haunted.

...

Xing Hai was a large city. Tian Teng Medical School had spent a lot of resources to set up their Haunted House there, but they had left in a hurry to move to Jiujiang City, which was far from Xing Hai, after being in operation for only a few weeks.

If they knew Xu Zhenzhen might draw her spirit back, why did they insist on using her name inside the Haunted House? Chen Ge could not understand the proprietor's thought. Did he really think that moving the location would be able to shake her spirit off? Or does this Xu Zhenzhen have a special meaning for the proprietor?

The light in the Haunted House was dim, so the actor had to bring the note close to his face before he could get a good look. "The handwriting is still wet."

He turned to look at Chen Ge but quickly looked back. He mumbled to himself, "We've only had one visitor so far. Let's say he brought a pen with him and wrote this, how does that explain the voice in the recorder? This scene is newly added, and no one other than the design team knows about the tape recorder. I don't think someone would be weird enough to visit a Haunted House with an audio tape on him!"

Just as the actor was thinking, the scream appeared once more in the recorder. The pain was different from the one recorded by the actor.

Even though it was broadcasted through speakers, it was enough to make the listeners shiver from terror. It sounded like the murder was happening right beside them.

“Brother Lin...” The female actor moved toward the door. “How come the recording sounds so real?”

“I have no clue.” The man turned back to look, and he found Chen Ge still standing beside the recorder. He hesitated for a while before ignoring Chen Ge and rushing to the woman’s side. He whispered, “Other than this note, did you find anything else in the room that you’re responsible for?”

“No.”

“What about the others?”

“They should be coming soon.” The woman’s eyes darted about like she was on the verge of a breakdown. “Did that thing return? We’ve just opened for business, and didn’t the boss say that he has already taken care of it?”

“What are you guys talking about? What happened here?” Chen Ge picked up the recorder. He planned to persuade the actors to let him bring the recorder out of the Haunted House with him. Looking at Chen Ge and the recorder he was carrying, the two actors froze.

“Put that thing down!” the female actor demanded shrilly. “We did not record the voice that is coming out of it now!”

Of course, Chen Ge knew that, but he could not admit that he knew. “The recorder is inside your Haunted House. If you didn’t record this tape, who did? Are you telling me that a ghost did?”

The man was stunned speechless. Afterwards, it was the woman who stepped forth in spite of the man’s intervention and explained, “When we were in Xing Hai, one of the visitors was so scared that she left in tears. She told us that one of our actors was really realistic in her acting, but in reality, she was not supposed to be scared at the place that she was! We asked her for a description of the actor and realized her description matched Xu Zhenzhen perfectly!”

“Maybe the visitor was playing a prank on you?” Chen Ge asked with a weird expression. “She might have been kidding.”

“That happened more than once. After that day, more and more visitors saw Xu Zhenzhen.” The man took out the Buddha pendant that was around his neck. “Everyone of us has something to ward against the such things, but weirdly enough, until now, none of the workers have seen Xu Zhenzhen.”

“Since there is a real haunting, why did you insist on placing hints related to Xu Zhenzhen all over the Haunted House? Aren’t you afraid of calling her back?” Chen Ge thought this bunch of people had something wrong with their minds. “Or are you still acting now? The note and recording are also tricks to scare me?”

“I swear to God, we’re not acting,” both actors promised.

“First you have to understand one thing. Since our first stop was Xing Hai, we decided to incorporate the set design with a real case to increase the scare factor to draw in more visitors. Xu Zhenzhen’s suicide case is quite famous in Xing Hai. The sight of the name pulls out the visitors’ memories about her case.”

The man did not look so good. “We were forced to do this. For the past two years, the number of visitors has been dropping, and we have tested many different types of set designs. To preserve our popularity, we have to try something new.”

“So, you decided to incorporate a real case into the design?” Chen Ge felt like these people were more courageous than he was; at least he had a safety net for everything he did at the Haunted House.

“Reality has proved that it works. After we did this, the reputation and fame kept rising. Many visitors came back to solve Xu Zhenzhen’s secret after they found the hints.”

“If everything was going so well, why did you come to Jiujiang? Wouldn’t it make more sense for you to stay in Xing Hai to reap in the money?” The recorder in Chen Ge’s arms continued to scream, but the man did not seem to hear it. The two actors looked at Chen Ge and did not know what to say. As Chen Ge took one step forward, they both took one step back in unison.

“The fact that many visitors have surprisingly seen Xu Zhenzhen was a good promotion for our Haunted House. We enjoyed quite a period of very high popularity, but the fame came with a price. It attracted the ire of Xu Zhenzhen’s family, and her little sister came to find us.”

The female actor explained the secret past of Tian Teng Medical School. While he listened, Chen Ge turned off the audio recorder.

“During the negotiation, Xu Zhenzhen’s sister said that she felt we were ruining her sister and father’s names. She requested for a high amount of compensation and wanted us to edit the content of our design.

“Our boss only agreed to remove Xu Zhenzhen’s name. Compensation and editing the entire design was impossible. In her anger, she threatened to sue. I don’t know what happened next, but in any case, the Haunted House closed not long after that.”

The woman should have been telling the truth. It was difficult for large moving Haunted Houses to get approval from the government, so they could get banned easily if they got into any trouble. Chen Ge knew this well because his parents had originally managed a mobile Haunted House. It was not until they had found enough popularity that they settled down at New Century Park.

“We collected the props, changed the layout as well as name, and moved to another city, but the result was horrid. The Haunted House only managed to stay in business for two weeks before the visitors dried up. After a discussion, we felt the problem lay with Xu Zhenzhen. Therefore, we moved to Jiujiang, which is very far from Xing Hai, and returned everything to how it was when we were at our prime.”

The two actors had already retreated to the door. Looking at Chen Ge, who held the tape recorder, they had revealed everything.

Chapter 196 - Swaying

Chapter 196: Swaying

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“If you have not done anything wrong, there is nothing to be afraid of. At the end of the day, you want to use Xu Zhenzhen to make money.”

Chen Ge understood everything now. Originally, Tian Teng Medical School wanted to use a fake ghost to create an eerie atmosphere, but they had inadvertently summoned the real thing.

...

“Stop, don’t come any closer!” the woman screamed, but it was immediately swallowed by the male screaming that continued to pour out of the recorder.

” So painful! So painful! ”

The man’s voice rang again, but this time, the three people in the room froze.

“Brother Lin, am I mistaken?” The woman’s arm was shaking. “Has that voice escaped the recorder?”

The man was dumbfounded, too. He was sure that the scream earlier did not come from the recorder. The two actors looked behind Chen Ge with their bodies shaking, and this unsettled Chen Ge. “There’s something behind me?”

He reached into his pocket to curl his fingers around the ballpoint pen, and the muscles in his legs tensed.

“Not behind you...” As they answered, the actors retreated to the corner of the corridor, maintaining a distance of three meters from Chen Ge.

“If it’s not behind me, why are you all running?” Chen Ge squeezed the question through his teeth. These people sure knew how to abandon him when an accident happened. Whenever anything happened at his Haunted House, whether it was a real ghost or fake ghost, Chen Ge would be the one leading the way.

” So painful, so painful... ”

Something even scarier happened, the source of the man’s voice filled the room!

The sound seemed to be moving forward like there was a wounded man dragging his broken body forward.

After it disappeared for two seconds, the man’s voice suddenly appeared before the woman!

” Pain, so painful! ”

The woman’s scream almost shattered Chen Ge’s eardrums. She did not expect this to happen, and without turning around, she ran down the corridor before her.

“Ah Rui!” The man did not dare make any sudden movements. He leaned against the wall. When there were two of them, he had been afraid, and now he had been left alone. Chen Ge picked up the recorder, and the play button was still shining like a red eye ball. The tape was still rolling, but the man’s voice had escaped into the corridor.

It has left the tape?

Based on his previous experience, Chen Ge managed to gauge this baleful specter’s power. Lingering spirits and the lowest baleful specters could not leave the things that they possessed. For example, Xiaoxiao had never left the ragdoll. Stronger than Xiaoxiao was the mirror ghost and Pen Spirit. They could leave their possessed item occasionally but needed to return soon.

Above that would be the thin monster inside the Third Sick Hall. They spent most of their time squatting on living humans’ shoulders, but they could survive even if they were not attached to a human.

The most powerful was naturally the Red Specters. They did not need to attach themselves to anything; they were technically the ‘real’ ghosts.

The thing inside the tape should be between Pen Spirit and the thin monster.

The man's horrible screams kept echoing everywhere. He seemed to have no purpose. He did not target the male actor, who was frozen at the wall, or the female actor, who had run down the corridor.

This ghost acted very curiously like he was looking for something.

All the screams talked about pain. What happened to him before he died?

After winning the weeping tape, Chen Ge wanted to hear what the baleful specter had to say; that was the easiest way to get to know the specter. Due to a lack of a useable recorder, Chen Ge had not had the chance to communicate with the tape ghost, and this was technically their first meeting.

" So painful, so painful... " The man's voice stopped inside the corridor before slowly moving toward the Haunted House's entrance.

Did he find something?

Chen Ge's eyes suddenly glowed. The tape ghost probably had found the real ghost hiding inside the Haunted House!

This thought flashed across Chen Ge's mind, and he picked up the recorder and ran out of the room. The actor also heard the sound leaving, so he pulled out his phone and yelled into the chatroom, "The ghost is heading your way! Run! Run out from the entrance!"

The few actors at the front few scenarios had not been so afraid in the beginning, but after hearing the man's urgent screams, they started to panic. They were all workers at the Haunted House, so there was no reason for the man to trick his own colleagues.

"Quick! Run! The thing is coming your way!"

After he shouted that into the phone, the man ran the other way from the baleful specter. In his hurry, he did not even have the time to see his colleague's reply.

"What is the point in screaming?" Chen Ge chased after the specter, maintaining a distance of two to three meters. When he passed the cart in front of the nursery, a small girl suddenly ran out of the room that carried the mountain of fake organs. She had just pushed the door opened when the baleful specter screamed, " So painful! "

The gut wrenching scream sounded at the door. The girl looked at the empty corridor before teetering several steps back. She tripped on one of the props and fell into the pile of fake organs. “Who’s there? Come out!”

Her small voice was choked with tears. She held her phone and asked for help in the employee chat group, but there was no reply.

” So painful! So painful! ”

The baleful specter’s voice entered the room. The girl could only hear the screams but not see the person, and the make-up on her face was ruined from tears.

There was nothing around her. The girl shrunk deeper into the pile of mannequins. She piled the mannequins around her and planned to bury herself deep within the mountain. Chen Ge followed closely behind the specter. When he walked into the door and saw this, he was shocked by what the girl was doing.

Chen Ge yanked the girl out from the pile and said, “Inform your people to leave through the entrance.”

Feeling the temperature from Chen Ge’s palm, the girl recovered. She stumbled out of the room. The baleful specter did not give chase after the girl. It roamed the room before entering the autopsy room. Chen Ge was now confident that this ghost was looking for something.

There was the sound of gears turning coming from the corridor. The girl had informed the other actors, and they were all leaving. Chen Ge was probably the only living human left inside the Haunted House.

Let me see what you are exactly looking for...

Chen Ge held the ballpoint pen and the tape recorder as he followed the voice to the entrance of Tian Teng Medical School.

In the narrow corridor, a green light continued to flicker. It made the corridor look scarier than it was, and at the end of the corridor, a dried ‘female body’ swayed left and right.

“So painful...”

The baleful specter’s scream stopped beside the female body. Chen Ge walked to mannequin as well. Looking at the mannequin that hung in the middle of the corridor, a twinge of fear curled around his heart.

When he entered the Haunted House and helped the man inside the box stand up, he had felt something touch the back of his head. When he turned around to look, he had discovered that it was the swaying 'female body'.

Chapter 197 - The Visitor Is Still Inside?

Chapter 197: The Visitor Is Still Inside?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Looks like Xu Zhenzhen is hiding inside the female body prop.

Staring at the prop that hung at the entrance, Chen Ge felt a chill inside his heart. Who would have thought this prop hanging by the door was hiding a real ghost? Every visitor entered the Haunted House under her watchful gaze, and some of the visitors had probably even touched her.

...

Now I have to answer another question. Why does the Tape Ghost want to find Xu Zhenzhen? Is there some kind of relationship between them, or was the Tape Ghost merely hungry and wanted to ingest another ghost?

Chen Ge had no clue whether Xu Zhenzhen was a baleful specter or a lingering spirit. He knew the woman had treated Tian Teng Medical School as her home, and it was because of her that Tian Teng Medical School had their current popularity.

“When Tian Teng Medical School was operating at Xing Hai, there were no accidents or injuries, so this Xu Zhenzhen is probably not hostile toward humans.” Chen Ge had the mind to let Xu Zhenzhen be, but he did not have the power to control the Tape Ghost.

The male screams echoed around the hanging female body. The body kept shaking like she had felt the incoming threat. Several second later, the prop was twisted by an unknown force into a weird angle, and a leg was directly pulled off.

The Tape Ghost is trying to swallow Xu Zhenzhen?

Perhaps he had imagined it, but Chen Ge saw a painful expression on the mannequin’s face, and when that expression appeared, the Tape Ghost’s scream suddenly stopped.

The man has transferred his pain to another ghost? Or has something happened here?

While Chen Ge was confused, the other leg of the mannequin was yanked off.

...

The lines of visitors were chewing each other's ears. The proprietor looked at the flat lines on screen, and his face was dropping. The Haunted House did not have brilliant sound insulation, and there had been screams, but they were all female screams.

It was a male visitor who entered the Haunted House, but they were female screams that came out of it. This was also the first time the proprietor had come across something so curious.

"So close." He looked at the peak of the line that represented Chen Ge's heartrate. It had risen to 96 at its highest, so close to 100.

"Boss, how long will this activity of yours go on for? We've been waiting for almost thirty minutes already."

Some of the visitors started to complain.

"Please be patient. Give it another five minutes. I'm sure the guy will be out soon."

The proprietor did not have confidence in what he said and grumbled to himself, "There's a hidden plot for brave visitors. He's also the owner of a Haunted House, so he has to have discovered it. What's the holdup?"

Just as the proprietor was mulling over this, the sound of rushing footsteps came out from the entrance.

"He's coming out! Based on the rapid footsteps, it sounds like he is quite scared." The proprietor nodded in satisfaction upon hearing the footsteps. He looked at the screen again and consoled himself. "I knew that no one could maintain their heart rate below 100 when they visited a Haunted House. Something must be broken with the machine."

He took out the loudspeaker and turned to the crowd. "Our first visitor is coming out soon. We can compare how he was before he entered and how he is now, and then we'll ask for his thoughts."

Everyone's gaze was pulled toward the entrance. The footsteps came closer, and finally, there was a loud bang as the thick curtain and wooden door of the exit were pushed open.

“Someone’s out!”

She was wearing a large patient’s outfit, and her black hair stuck to her neck. Cold sweat ruined her make-up, and from afar, only her eyes that bulged from fear could be seen.

“Wait, isn’t that a woman?” the visitor closest to the door questioned. “This transformation is too huge!”

“Ah Rui?” The proprietor forgot to turn off his loudspeaker and yelled out the female actor’s name. The visitor had gone inside the Haunted House, but it was the actor who played a ghost that came out first?

Following behind the appearance of the female actor, there was another set of footsteps. This time, without the guidance from the proprietor, everyone’s gaze was turned toward the exit. The curtain was pulled back, and a male actor covered with fake blood rushed out. He was running very fast like he was running for his life. The moment he exited the Haunted House, he collapsed to the floor.

“What’s going on?”

“Is this another activity organized by the Haunted House?”

The proprietor did not even have the chance to get over his initial shock. “Why is there another?”

Looking inside the Haunted House, the darkened entrance had no light, so the people outside had no idea what happened inside. The proprietor walked down the stage and ran to the exit. He wanted to ask the two actors what was going on. However, before he reached his destination, the wooden door at the exit was slammed open again.

This was the loudest one yet. Three actors, two guys and one girl, spilled out at once. The three of them were wearing ghost make-up, but they looked very worse for wear. The smallest female actor had tears in her eyes, and half a broken hand and a model of a spleen were poking out from her uniform.

“What’s going on?” The proprietor asked the question that was on everyone’s mind.

“Boss Hu, there’s a ghost inside! Really, Xu Zhenzhen has returned!” The only one still standing was the security ghost. He ran toward the boss with the walkie-talkie in his hand. "Listen to the sound. Both Brother Lin and Ah Rui have seen her. Even Xiao Ye has heard her; it's real!"

"That's not important." The proprietor pushed the walkie-talkie aside. He looked at his workers who were collapsed on the floor. "All of you are out here, but where is the visitor?"

"The visitor?" The security guard turned back to look, and he said uncertainly, "The visitor seems to still be in there?"

"Still inside?" The proprietor felt like fainting. He had been in the business for almost a decade, and this was the first time that all of the actors had left the Haunted House while the visitor was still inside experiencing his tour.

"Wait! All of you are out here, but the visitor is in there alone. Is that because he thinks the real ghost is our actor?"

"That should be it. Xiao Ye said that the visitor has been following the ghost."

The proprietor felt like fainting. What kind of monstrosity had he attracted this time?

"Boss Hu, what should we do now? Call the cops?"

"Call the cops on our opening day? You want us to close down that quickly?" The proprietor glared at the security guard. "Bring your stuff and come back with me! All of you, get up from the floor! We need to go look for the man!"

The few actors were forced to stand up. The proprietor in his smart suit, holding the loudspeaker, led the team of 'ghosts' carefully into the Haunted House.

Chapter 198 - What Color Do You Prefer?

Chapter 198: What Color Do You Prefer?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

In the center of the corridor, both of the mannequin's legs had been yanked off. The rope around the mannequin's neck tightened like someone was pulling on her.

What is this guy trying to achieve?

...

Ever since he reached the female body, the Tape Ghost had stopped screaming. The more he thought about it, the more confused Chen Ge felt.

The mannequin is the item of possession for Xu Zhenzhen, so the Tape Ghost is trying to force her out?

While he was thinking, the rope around the mannequin's neck snapped. The mannequin fell to the floor, and the head detached from her body and rolled several meters away until it stopped at the corner, her eyes staring at her body.

The roughly-made mannequin face started to change from struggle to fear, then slowly reverting to normal. The fake lips moved like she was trying to say something. Several seconds later, the screams returned to the corridor, but unlike before, there was now an additional female voice.

"So painful! So painful!"

The voice of a male and female surrounded Chen Ge and the screams greatly unsettled him.

Why is Xu Zhenzhen screaming alongside the Tape Ghost? Does he have the ability to assimilate other ghosts?

Chen Ge had no idea what the Tape Ghost had done to Xu Zhenzhen; this was the Tape Ghost's biggest secret. The alternating sound of male and female screams flooded Chen Ge's ears. It caused his eyelids to twitch. He tried turning off the recorder, but it would not work.

“Pain, so much pain...”

The voice seemed to touch Chen Ge’s face. Then it slowly weakened until there was a click on the recorder. The play button stopped working.

The corridor no longer felt so depressed, and Chen Ge could breathe easier. Even the mannequin head that was left on the floor did not look so scary. Chen Ge opened the recorder. When he removed the tape, the black phone vibrated.

A message at a time like this?

Chen Ge stood beside the female mannequin and took out his phone to take a look.

“Congratulations, Specter’s Favored. You have unlocked Xu Yin’s affection mission. Completing the affection mission will greatly increase Xu Yin’s affection level, and there’s a high chance that you might be able to employ him at your Haunted House!

“Mission Venue: Fang Hwa Apartments.

“Mission Goal: You only have one night to find Xu Yin’s lover!

“Mission Hint: Honey, white, black, and red, which color do you prefer?”

The information on screen was only a few lines, but Chen Ge looked through it several times.

Fang Hwa Apartments? Isn’t that where Wang Xin is staying? I’ve been there once when I was trying to help the Pen Spirit.

The mission given by the black phone came with a certain danger level. Furthermore, based on what he knew of the Tape Ghost, something tragic must have happened to him for him to have such a deep level of resentment. Chen Ge did not want to take another mission after just finishing the Third Sick Hall’s Trial Mission, but the reward of employing a ghost at his Haunted House was too hard to give up upon.

The Tape Ghost is slightly stronger than the Pen Spirit. If I can hire him, then doing Trial Missions in the future will be safer.

Just as Chen Ge made the decision, the phone in his pocket rang. It was from an unknown number.

There are only a few who know my number. Who could this be?

Chen Ge let the phone rang for a few seconds before he answered it.

“Chen Ge, this is Captain Yan.”

“Captain Yan? Why are you calling?”

“The three suspects that you’ve found at the third sick hall... two of them have been found dead at their home.”

“Dead?” Chen Ge was shocked.

He was about to ask Captain Yan for more details when the black phone in his other hand vibrated. There was new information on screen. Chen Ge looked it and was shocked to see that the completion rate of the Third Sick Hall had risen to 65 percent!

“Chen Ge? Are you there?”

“Sorry, just a little shocked. They were fine a few days ago; why did they suddenly die?”

“At 3 am yesterday, we received a call. The person who made the call said that his name was Xu Tong. He said many curious things, and he made so no sense, so we couldn’t understand what he was trying to communicate.”

“So, you hung up on him?”

“Of course not. Xu Tong was a suspect on the run. The officer who answered the call contacted us immediately; however, when we triangulated his position and found him, he was already dead.” There was a trace of hardly discernible feeling mixed in Captain Yan’s tone. “He and a single-armed man were both stuffed inside a dresser. The actual cause of death is still unknown, and there were no obvious wounds on their bodies.”

“Perhaps the killer is their former ally? The man’s name is Xiong Qing. His face is twisted, so he’s easily recognizable.”

“Leave the detective work to us. I asked for your number from Inspector Lee because I wanted to remind you in person.” Captain Yan sent two pictures to Chen Ge. “These are pictures that we found in the victims' phones. They might be targeting you.”

The transfer was slow. Chen Ge needed to wait several seconds before he could see the content clearly. The first picture was taken when Chen Ge was hauled into the police car outside of Third Sick Hall, and the second picture was of Chen Ge when he left the police station. Both pictures were fuzzy. The person who had taken the pictures was very cautious; they had stood very far away when they took those pictures.

“These picture were taken by Xu Tong?” Chen Ge did not think that he would one day be stalked.

“That doesn’t matter anymore. The important thing is they seem to be part of something larger. They’re part of a group that does things systematically, and that changes a lot of thing.”

“Right, I’ve told you all that morning that there might be eight killers, and they were all once patients in the Third Sick Hall.” Other than Wang Shenglong, all the remaining patients were incurable mad persons.

Captain Yan sighed. “The clue you gave us has helped tremendously. We checked the information from four years ago, and after comparison, there were three of those eight patients who seem to have evaporated off the face of the earth after the hospital closed down. There is no physical or online trail of them anywhere.”

Chapter 199 - Fang Hwa Apartments

Chapter 199: Fang Hwa Apartments

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Even you can’t find information on these few patients?” Chen Ge was shocked. “Can you tell me which three persons they are? Maybe I can provide you with more clues.”

“You still remember stuff that happened four or five years ago?” Chen Ge had given Captain Yan many surprises. Since Chen Ge had helped greatly in the Ping An Apartment case, Captain Yan was willing to reveal some information to him. “These three patients were respectively patients of Room 7, 9, and 10 inside the Third Sick Hall.”

...

Chen Ge memorized what Captain Yan said and compared it to the information provided by Doctor Gao. Patient No. 7 suffered from Cotard’s Syndrome or the Walking Corpse Syndrome. He believed that he was already a dead man, telling the doctors that his organs had all decayed.

According to Doctor Gao’s analysis, the patient had been confirmed dead, but that was what he had read from the hospital records. No one had seen his body, so this information could be fake.

Patient No. 9 was Wu Fei, the individual Men Nan’s main persona warned him to be careful about. Patient No. 10 was the individual whom the doctors and patients dubbed the Devil. There was no information on this patient, but it was certainly related to the old director. After all, he had managed the entire center, and he was the one responsible for managing this information.

Alas, the old director had been torn apart by Zhang Ya already, and only his head remained behind the door. It would be hard to get information from him. Chen Ge’s mind turned. After Xu Tong and the patient with the Phantom Limb Syndrome died, his mission completion rate had risen by 5 percent, and this pointed a way for Chen Ge. Does this mean the capture or death of all the escaped patients will continue to increase the mission’s completion rate?

There was indeed such a possibility. After all, the patients had received a new life from the door inside the Third Sick Hall. They had been branded by the Third Sick Hall, and technically, they were part of the Third Sick Hall.

Realizing that Chen Ge had remained silent for a while, Captain Yan continued. "We wanted to interview the doctors and nurses who once worked at the Third Sick Hall for information on these three patients, but we came across with something horrible."

"What is it?"

"The doctors who knew about these three patients have all died mysterious deaths, some from accidents, others suicide." Captain Yan paused as if gauging whether he should continue.

"Captain Yan, I promise to not leak anything you tell me."

"I'm not worried about that. I don't want to scare you." There was a shift in Captain Yan's tone. "The most unique case was a female doctor. She moved away from Jiujiang with her boyfriend, but she couldn't escape fate. None of the deaths seem connected to each other, and the murder locations were completely different. There wasn't a pattern to the occurrence of these deaths either, so the police didn't link them. But once the connection of the Third Sick Hall surfaced, we looked over the cases again, and new patterns emerged. Taking out the accidents, about ninety percent of the deaths were detailed murders!"

Captain Yan was trying to warn Chen Ge that his situation was very dangerous.

"This bunch of people sure is brave." After giving a dry laugh, Chen Ge headed for the exit. He wanted to leave this place and return to New Century Park as soon as possible.

"They are a bunch of crazies. Their way of thinking is different from normal, and they will stop at nothing. The scariest thing is they think what they're doing is not wrong, and that is most difficult to deal with." Captain Yan also had a hard time dealing with these people. "In any case, be careful. If you find out anything, remember to contact me."

"Okay." Before Captain Yan hung up, Chen Ge said, "Captain Yan, other than these three patients, you also have the information on the other patients, right? Can I take a look at them? After all, I'm the only one who has interacted with them before.”

“I’m warning you, don’t do anything stupid.”

“You misunderstand me. I’m just curious. Since you already have the information on part of the patients, why don’t you capture them now and then interrogate them for more information?” Chen Ge could not be too careful since this involved his life. “Is it because you’re afraid of alerting the rest? Do you plan to capture them all at once?”

“If only things are that simple...” Captain Yan did not go into the details, but it sounded like they had come into some trouble. “The information is not supposed to be leaked to the public, but since you’re one of the victims, I’ll pick some of the files that you can see and send them to you.”

After a few more words, Captain Yan hung up and sent the files to Chen Ge. Each patient had their assigned number, and all the information had been compiled into files. What Chen Ge was reading was the information that had been arranged by the police.

“Patient in Room 1, Wang Shenglong...” The first page was the information on Wang Shenglong. The information on him was the most detailed, including where he had been treated in the past few years, how many times he moved over the past five years, and the people he had interacted with. The police had everything on him.

The second page was on a woman. The woman looked perfect, practically flawless. However, there was an uneven feeling about her like she did not think the face belonged to her. Chen Ge had some memory of this second patient. Doctor Gao said that this woman suffered from Dorian Gray Syndrome. She was particularly afraid of aging, had undergone plenty of plastic surgeries, and relied on a large amount of make-up. According to the police’s information, the woman had disappeared half a year ago, and the last place she was seen was at Fang Hwa Apartments.

When Chen Ge saw the name of the location, his heart shook. Everything was revolving around the same place, which could not be a coincidence. Chen Ge hurried down the corridor and passed all the scenes until he found the exit.

There was light at the end of the tunnel. Just when he was several meters away from the exit, he saw a group of six or seven huddled together moving forward slowly with a bitter expression on their faces.

“What are you guys doing?” Chen Ge walked toward them with the tape recorder.

“Wait!” the proprietor yelled at Chen Ge through the loudspeaker.
“Are... are you alright?”

“Why wouldn’t I be? Do you think I’m possessed or something?” Chen Ge walked past the proprietor and his workers with a shrug. “Your Haunted House is now safe, but let me remind you, the money earned on the back of ghosts could be cursed.”

The light was rather blinding when he left the Haunted House. Seeing Chen Ge, the crowd’s gazes all turned toward him. This was the first person who had entered a Haunted House but managed to scare all the ‘ghosts’ out. They were all visitors, but Chen Ge had managed to do something they could not.

Chapter 200 - Come to My Haunted House Next Time

Chapter 200: Come to My Haunted House Next Time

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge did not have the time to dawdle. He had just received the call from Captain Yan, and the news about the Third Sick Hall had unsettled him.

“Boss!” He San and Gao Ru Xue squeezed through the crowd to run toward Chen Ge. “What did you do to the Haunted House’s workers?”

...

“I’m just a visitor, what can I do to them?” Chen Ge raised his brow. “Also why aren’t you at least a little bit worried about my safety?”

He San and Gao Ru Xue were baffled. Indeed, under normal circumstances, when a visitor was left alone inside the Haunted House, they should have been worried for the visitor. However, for some reason, when the two of them saw Chen Ge walk into the Haunted House, they became worried for the workers instead.

“Of course, we were worried about you.” He San flashed his signature smile, not at all awkward at his lie.

“Fine, remember to come to visit my Haunted House when you have time. I’ve created new scenarios, and I’m sure it’ll be very exciting.” Chen Ge hurried to leave. He reached into his shirt to remove the electrocardiograph monitor and the audio recorder. He turned to face the proprietor. “My heart rate hasn’t gone over 100, right?”

“Right, the lowest was 60, and highest was just over 90.”

“Just over 90? Why was it so high?” Chen Ge was a little surprised. He did not feel anything inside Tian Teng Medical School. It had felt as relaxing as returning home, but his heart rate had still jumped quite high. Looking at the dissatisfaction on Chen Ge’s face, the proprietor felt like crying as the despair in his heart started to overflow.

“Brother, this is my first day of business...”

“Your Haunted House is not bad to be able to raise my heart rate so high. However, compared to the New Century Park’s House of Horrors, which you can reach by taking the number 13 bus, it’s still quite lacking,” Chen Ge said openly. “Actually, your Haunted House is good enough that you don’t need to rely on underhanded tactics like slamming our Jiujiang’s local Haunted House to bring up yourself and adopt real news to increase popularity.”

Chen Ge looked at the few Haunted House actors who had not recovered from the trauma, and his brain started to turn. “Your set design is very professional, and the story background is very interesting. You even have two storylines in place to include puzzle-solving into your scare. To be honest, I had fun today.”

Fun? You had fun inside the Haunted House?

The proprietor and group of actors were praised by Chen Ge, but they did not feel too happy. “The reality is, we lost. We will edit the unfair comment that we’ve levelled at your Haunted House online.”

“Thank you. If you come across similar trouble, feel free to come find me; I’m very impressed by your professionalism.” The ‘pregnant ghost’s’ expression and the ‘dead body’s’ gaze had both been practiced before the mirror many times before they got the expression down. Tian Teng Medical School’s actors had been in this business for many years, and they were Tian Teng Medical School’s biggest wealth.

“That’s all I want to say. Get back to work and remember to come pay me a visit when you’re free.” Chen Ge’s gaze scanned the proprietor and the actors, and he smiled before turning to leave. Chen Ge did not gloat when he won, nor did he say anything sarcastic.

Also, he had been left inside the Haunted House alone while all the workers were outside; this could be considered an accident already. If this was a personal visit, then perhaps it could be swept under the mattress, but this was in public. If Chen Ge insisted on making this big, then it would be over for Tian Teng Medical School. However, Chen Ge did not do that. In fact, he had praised the Haunted House, and this surprised the proprietor. He felt thankful.

The guy is not as bad as I thought. Perhaps like us, he is not in it for the money but the meaning of true terror.

The proprietor watched Chen Ge walk away and was reminded of his younger self who adored ghost movies and pranks. The bad economy for the past few years has caused me to focus on earning money, and I’ve forgotten the initial reason I opened a Haunted House.

The proprietor was too kind. Chen Ge did not treat them as competition from the beginning. The reason he said so much was because he was laying the foundation to swallow Tian Teng Medical School whole in the future to add to his terror-themed amusement park.

“Boss.” The security guard tapped the proprietor on his shoulder.

“I’m fine, let’s be ready to get back to work!”

“Erm...” The security lowered his voice. “He seems to have taken our Haunted House’s tape recorder with him.”

“What? When did that happen?”

...

When Chen Ge left the building and got on the bus, he realized that he was still carrying the tape recorder. I was too focused on making the speech that I didn’t realize I was still holding their tape recorder. Oh well, I’ll return this when they come over to visit my Haunted House.

Chen Ge returned to New Century Park. The moment he removed the sign from the door, the visitors started to swarm toward him. In less than a few weeks, the reputation and visitor number of his Haunted House had dramatically increased.

“We’ll be open in the afternoon. Don’t worry, we’ve designed a new scary scenario! Definitely will give you the scare of your life!” Chen Ge called Xu Wan before entering the Haunted House. He thought back to the tricks that he experienced at Tian Teng Medical School and tried to apply them in his own Haunted House.

“The update rate for my Haunted House is very fast, and it is still growing. When the hidden missions for the Third Sick Hall are completed, I’ll need to rearrange the scary scenes to add some scary items and mix in the real ghosts with fake ghosts. That will be more interesting.”

Visiting Tian Teng Medical School had given him plenty of inspiration. He wrote all his thought down in a notebook so that he would not forget them.

At noon, Chen Ge took out the information provided by the police and memorized the information of all the escaped patients. The information could prove useful at any moment. After a simple lunch, the doors to his Haunted House was open for business. Before completing the hidden missions, Chen Ge did not plan to open the Third Sick Hall for the public. That was not such a big problem because most of the visitors had not digested the earlier scenarios yet.

He kept himself busy until 6 pm. After sending the visitors away, Uncle Xu, who stood at the door selling tickets, flashed him a rare smile. Chen Ge's Haunted House was driving the popularity of the entire theme park upwards, and the management was trying their best to cooperate with the Haunted House.

“Nice work today.”

Chen Ge waited until Uncle Xu and Xu Wan left before he returned to the staff breakroom. He put the tape and the cleaver wrapped in red cloth inside his backpack and started to search for the white cat.

He looked through the entire Haunted House and finally found the white cat on top of the tree at the entrance of the Haunted House. The white cat was very clever. It seemed to sense that a bad thing was about to happen, and it jumped up to the top of the tree. No matter how hard Chen Ge tried to persuade it, it refused to come down.

“What are you so afraid of? The place I'm going is safer than the Third Sick Hall! Come down!”

Chapter 201 - Mad Woman

Chapter 201: Mad Woman

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Even when Chen Ge's throat was raw from screaming, the white cat refused to budge. After a few more minutes of that, Chen Ge gave up. This cat is very intelligent. It wandered over on its own when it was lunch time, but the moment I started to pack, it ran outside.

Looking at tree, Chen Ge sighed helplessly. He picked up his backpack and left the park. When he arrived at Fang Hwa Apartments, the sky was already dark.

...

Last time I was here, I forgot to ask about this place from Doctor Gao. The buildings here are quite old already. I wonder if there are any weird incidents that have happened here.

Chen Ge scrolled through his phone for the information provided by the police. It stated that Patient No. 2 had once been seen here, but there was no detailed address.

This is not going to be easy. The police use code for each patient, so I don't even know her name. Just based on a picture, it's going to be hard.

Fang Hwa Apartments was considered quite high-end in Jiujiang. The buildings in front were six older buildings; they were smaller than the three new buildings that were built at the back. Each building was over twenty stories, and Wang Xin's family was staying in one of the newer buildings.

I should start by asking the security guards.

The main reason Chen Ge was there was to complete the Tape Ghost's wish so that he could hire him as an employee. That was his main mission, but since he was there, Chen Ge would not mind finding out about Patient 2 as well.

He walked over to the security room and turned his phone to show them the picture that had been given to him by Captain Yan. I'm sorry, but have you seen this woman before?

The individual aspects of Patient 2's face was flawless, but when put together, there was just this incorrect feeling to it. The security guard not only did not answer Chen Ge's question. He looked at Chen Ge with alarm like he was someone suspicious. "You're not a tenant here, are you?"

"I'm not," Chen Ge answered honestly.

"Then I don't need to answer your question." The man walked out from the room. "If this lady is our tenant, we will not reveal any information about her, and if she's not, I won't know anything about her."

Chen Ge was baffled by the security guard. He did not expect such hostility.

"Xiao Gu, don't be such a spoilsport." There was another guard inside the room. He was much older than the one who talked to Chen Ge. He was about sixty and was just removing his guard outfit to change into his casual clothes. He walked out of the room, chuckling. "Forgive him. He was scolded this morning for something that wasn't his fault, and he's not feeling so good."

"My feeling is perfectly well. Ol' Wong, quickly go home. Your family is waiting for you. Leave this to me," the young security guard said impatiently.

"If I leave this to you, you'll end up getting lectured again tomorrow. You never learn. Would it kill you to be a little nicer to our guests?" Ol' Wong sighed, shaking his head. "How many times have I told you? We're just the security; move your limbs more than your lips. Whether it is right or wrong, it is not our place to judge."

"It's alright, I quite admire his attitude, straightforward and not pretentious," Chen Ge said. He instinctively felt this young security was quite an interesting character. "And how may I refer to you?"

"Gu Feiyu, you can call him Xiao Gu. He's our night guard, very brace and is a kind person. However, there's no filter on the words that leave his lips." It was obvious that Ol' Wong was very protective of Gu Feiyu.

"Night guard? Do you need to patrol this place at night?" Chen Ge's focus was not Gu Feiyu. He slowly moved the topic of conversation away.

“We have to ensure the safety of our tenants every hour of the day.” Ol’ Wong patted the dust on his trousers. “By the way, you’re looking for someone, right? Tell me the name, I’ve been here for a decade already, so I practically know everyone.”

“I don’t know her name, but I have her picture.” Chen Ge clicked onto the picture and passed his phone to the kind gentleman.

“It’ll be easier with a picture.” Ol’ Wong accepted the phone and lowered his head to look. When his eyes fell on the screen, the blood drained from his face, and Chen Ge’s phone almost fell from his fingers.

“You know her?” Chen Ge moved one step forward. Ol’ Wong pushed the phone back to Chen Ge like it was some kind of dangerous object.

“This woman is very important. She’s involved in many cases.” Chen Ge was considering flashing Captain Yan’s name.

“This woman again? The police already asked about her yesterday.” Gu Feiyu was a straight shooter.

“Then what did you tell the police?” Chen Ge was even more intrigued.

Ol’ Wong reached out to stop Gu Feiyu. With a complicated gaze, he said, “This woman is mad. That’s what I told the police yesterday.”

“Mad?” Chen Ge stood before Ol’ Wong. “Your reaction was not exactly subtle earlier, so it looks like you have a deep impression of this woman.”

“It’s nothing.” Ol’ Wong was more experienced in dealing with people, and he only revealed half of the information. “The woman in the picture has the surname Bai, but I suspect that is fake. The woman in the picture is totally different from what she looks like in person.”

There was a trace of fear at the bottom of Ol’ Wong’s eyes. “The reason I remember her so clearly is because two or three years ago, when she first moved into Fang Hwa Apartments, her neighbors kept complaining about her, saying there was a weird smell coming from her room, and there would be intense arguments at night.”

“That’s all?”

“Initially, it was fine. The landowner visited the woman, and after some communication, the woman admitted her mistake. She not only apologized but also volunteered to pay monetary reimbursement.”

“That doesn’t make her mad, does it?” Chen Ge was arranging the information internally. The woman had moved out from the Third Sick Hall four years ago. She moved to Fang Hwa Apartments three years ago and disappeared from this place two years ago.

“Two to three months after that, there came this rumor that her building was haunted. Someone said that there would be a white shadow in the corridor at midnight.

“Some tenants even said that they heard scratching outside their doors at midnight and a soft woman’s voice asking, ‘Is anyone home? If no one’s home, I’m coming in.’

“This was worse than a prank, so the security team was tasked with standing guard in her building. But weirdly enough, whenever we were on duty, the white shadow and the woman’s voice would not appear. It was like she was playing hide-and-seek with us.

“We are not made of steel. After we kept up the stake-out for two weeks, many gave up. For the whole month after that, both the white shadow and the woman’s voice didn’t appear, and we thought things were over. However, we still ordered two security guards to patrol the building every night.

“On the second month, our colleague who was supposed to patrol the building with me took an emergency leave, and I didn’t dare patrol the place alone. Unfortunately, I received a call from one of the tenants saying that the voice had returned. I grabbed my baton and took the elevator to that tenant’s floor.

“The moment the door opened, I saw, not far away, a white shadow lying against one of the doors, its lips mumbling, ‘Is anyone home? If no one’s home, I’m coming in.’”

The wrinkles on Ol’ Wong’s face was squeezed together. Even now, when he thought about that particular memory, he would still feel fear.

“That white shadow is the mad woman?” Chen Ge could imagine how Ol’ Wong must have felt then.

Chapter 202 - Third Building, 13th Floor

Chapter 202: Third Building, 13th Floor

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Ol' Wong nodded, and he regained his senses after some time. "When the elevator opened, I was given the fright of my life; my mind went blank."

"And then? Did the white shadow attack you?"

...

"She ran right away when she saw me, and even now, I cannot understand how she made no noise when she ran!" Ol' Wong's gaze kept wandering to Chen Ge's phone. This was a memory that he refused to remember.

"Were you so anxious at the time that you didn't notice the footsteps? Even someone running barefooted would create some noise." Chen Ge was afraid of heightening the trauma for Ol' Wong, so he did not say the real speculation he was thinking.

"Perhaps." This was a mystery that Ol' Wong had not solved. "The white shadow turned and ran when she saw me. Looking at her retreat, I stopped being so afraid and chased after her. We ran for some time, and I saw her run into the woman's house. When I arrived, the woman's door was locked.

"The tenant who was harassed called the police. When the police arrived to pry the door open, we realized the room was empty. The police came to ask me questions, but I had many questions myself. Between white shadow entering the woman's room and the police arriving, I had stayed outside, and no one had left.

"The woman came back the next day. She told the police that she had stayed at a friend's place and wasn't home the previous night." Ol' Wong's voice turned slightly bitter. "Because of this, I was sent to jail for one night. I was telling the truth, but no one wanted to believe me."

Chen Ge could empathize with Ol' Wong. A normal person would be flustered if they ran into something like this; in fact, he had acted similarly when this happened to him for the first time, but he had slowly gotten used to it.

“Did you manage to catch the white shadow’s face? Did she have any unique features on her body?” Ol’ Wong was Chen Ge’s opening. He had already gotten a lead when he just arrived at Fang Hwa Apartments. He was quite lucky.

“I was scared out of my mind; do you think I would pay attention to her looks?” Ol’ Wong’s wrinkled scrunched up, and he suddenly looked older.

“Fang Hwa Apartments is considered a well-off residential area in Jiujiang. Your surveillance never once captured the white shadow on film?” Chen Ge wanted to take a look at the videos, perhaps he might come up with something.

“When the rumors of haunting appeared, the landowner and tenants discussed to have security cameras installed in various corners, but due to the fact that neither party wished to pay for the cameras, they ended up only installing one camera on the floor that the woman stayed at.”

“One is better than none. Did this camera capture anything?” Chen Ge was more and more curious.

“Perhaps due to a technical issue or something else, this camera goes offline every midnight and recovers on its own ten minutes later. Until now, no one can explain why.” Ol’ Wong looked at his phone.

“Everything I’ve told you is the truth, and that was what I told the police when they came yesterday. It’s getting late, so I should be going.”

It was obvious that Ol’ Wong was getting away. He did not want to continue this conversation.

“One minute, can you tell me the room number that the woman once stayed in?” Chen Ge blocked Ol’ Wong.

“I’m really not kidding with you; I don’t even dare patrol that floor to this day. The other tenants on that floor have basically all moved out already,” Ol’ Wong told Chen Ge. “The police came yesterday, so before they come up with a result, you’d better stay put.”

Then he walked out from the room, but his gait was rather unnatural.

When he almost reached the door, Ol' Wong waved for Xiao Gu's attention. After he whispered something into Gu Feiyu's ears, Ol' Wong finally left.

"I know, don't worry." After sending Ol' Wong away, Gu Feiyu returned to the room. He saw Chen Ge still standing there and rolled his eyes. "Our captain has said that we're not allowed to let any suspicious characters enter the premises."

"Do I look like someone suspicious?" Chen Ge leaned toward the window of the room. "Do you think what Ol' Wong said is real?"

"No clue, I'm new here," Gu Feiyu answered honestly. Talking with him was easier than talking to Ol' Wong.

"You're new?" Chen Ge's eyes darted about. "They hired you to take up the role of a night patrol, but did they tell you why the previous one left? Do you think it's related to the haunting?"

Gu Feiyu was writing something in the notebook, but when Chen Ge said that, his hand that held the pen stopped. "What do you mean?"

"When did you find out about the haunting?"

"Yesterday, when the police came to question about the woman. I was standing beside Ol' Wong when he told them the story."

"Sounds like they tricked you into this job. The management sure is awful. You're the only night patrol. Are they that unafraid of accident?" Chen Ge was the kind who would lend his aid when he saw injustice in this world. "How about this? I won't ask you to bend your rules, but here is my phone number. If anything weird happens tonight while you're on patrol, please call me. I will try my best to cooperate with you, and so I hope you won't reject my kindness."

"Kindness? Where? I can't see it." After a few more exchanges, Gu Feiyu finally agreed to exchange phone numbers with Chen Ge. "Remember to call me if you come across any danger tonight."

After that, Chen Ge took a detour to the backdoor of Fang Hwa Apartments and walked through it like he belonged there.

The old security guard definitely wouldn't tell me about the woman's address. Looks like I'll need to trouble Wang Xin's mother.

Chen Ge walked to the three new buildings. He did not notice it when he first arrived, but this time, he made a new discovery. The three buildings formed the shape of the character ‘品’, similar to the three buildings at the Jiujiang Third Psychological Convalescence Centre.

Chen Ge walked to the third building. He was not doing that on purpose, but that was where Wang Xin’s family stayed at. “Third building 14th floor.”

Night had arrived. Chen Ge stepped into the building, and for some reason, he felt the temperature inside was lower than outside. The hall was empty. Chen Ge stood beside the elevator and saw the number dancing up and down.

There were 23 floors to the building, but there were 24 numbers above the elevator. Chen Ge did not quite understand what the extra number meant. When the number went to 13, it stopped for ten seconds. Then, it continued to move, meaning that someone had stepped into the elevator at floor 13.

Not long after that, the door opened, and a woman in red high heels walked out. She was very fashionable and tall. Like a celebrity, she was wearing a mask and a cap.

Chapter 203 - I Saw It Myself

Chapter 203: I Saw It Myself

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The two brushed shoulders, and Chen Ge turned around to look at the woman. There was a weird scent radiating off the woman. It didn't smell like perfume, more like the smell of hospital disinfectant.

"Hey!" Chen Ge stood at the door of the elevator and called after the woman. The woman stopped and turned around. Through the small gap between her mask and the rim of the hat, a pair of beautiful eyes blinked. They were filled with confusion. Based on the eyes, this woman was different from the picture of the woman provided by the police, and she was not be the Patient No. 2 Chen Ge was looking for.

...

"Are you that celebrity from the movie? Can I take a picture with you?" Chen Ge knew that he had acted rather rashly. He did not know what to say, so he created a rough excuse.

"I'm sorry, but you've got the wrong person." The woman's voice was soft like she was sick or something. Then, she turned to walk away. Thinking of Chen Ge as some sort of bad buy, she practically jogged away.

She's different from the picture, but Patient No. 2 suffers from Dorian Gray Syndrome. She has undergone plenty of plastic surgery, so looks cannot be my basis of comparison.

With technology nowadays, changing a new face was not difficult. Just in case, Chen Ge grabbed his backpack and ran after the woman.

Running out of the third building, Chen Ge followed the woman to the underground carpark. Chen Ge wandered about the place but realized the woman had disappeared.

"Where did she go?" There were cameras inside the parking lot, and afraid of being misunderstood by security, Chen Ge gave up on the woman and returned to the third building. He took the elevator to the 14th floor and knocked on the door to Wang Xin's home.

“Is someone there?”

There were footsteps behind the door, and someone opened the door wearing slippers. “You’re looking for?”

It was a middle-aged woman wearing a black-and-white suit behind the door. She looked after herself well. Her skin was tight, and she looked much younger than her actual age.

“It’s me. I helped Wang Xin last time...”

Before Chen Ge finished, the woman recognized him. “Doctor Chen! Please come in, I’ve been meaning to thank you in person but didn’t have the chance.”

“Doctor Chen?” The way the woman addressed him made Chen Ge feel weird. Even though this was the first time he had been thusly addressed, it felt weirdly familiar. “I’m not a professional doctor.”

“To me, you’re the best doctor because you saved Wang Xin’s life. Don’t be so humble, I’ve heard so many good things about you from Doctor Gao. Please come in!” The woman practically pulled Chen Ge into the room.

“Sorry to disturb you. I came to visit today mainly to check up on Wang Xin and to ask you some questions.”

“There are apples and bananas on the coffee table. Take a seat while I go brew a pot of tea.”

“There’s no need to trouble yourself.” Chen Ge sat on the sofa. Visiting Wang Xin was just an excuse; the main reason Chen Ge was there was to find Patient No. 2 and complete the Tape Ghost’s affection mission. Of course, he would not tell Wang Xin’s mother that. Maintaining an image was important.

When Chen Ge was talking to the woman, the bedroom door opened, and a thin girl walked out. They had not seen each other for a few days, but Wang Xin already looked much better compared to before. She would not have been able to leave her room before this, but now she walked out to meet him voluntarily.

She had opened her heart before Chen Ge. When the girl hugged the Pen Spirit’s pen and cried, the words that she said were still fresh in Chen Ge’s mind. Chen Ge was genuinely happy seeing the positive changes in Wang Xin.

Wang Xin sat down across from Chen Ge. She did not seem like she had gotten used to conversing with people, and her voice was very low. Chen Ge had learned many things from Doctor Gao, including how to talk to patients. He did not interrupt Wang Xin but listened patiently and put himself in Wang Xin's shoes.

Slowly but surely, a smile blossomed on the girl's face. After the issue in her heart had been solved, the girl was also trying to interact with the outside world. After Wang Xin left, the woman came out with the tea. "There are many things kept inside the child's heart, but she never tells us anything. It is because you're here that she can smile so happily."

Chen Ge accepted the cup but did not drink it. "Wang Xin's condition is improving smoothly, and the effect of the treatment is showing."

He looked at the time and said, "Actually, I'm here because I have a question for you."

"Go ahead." The woman was very cooperative.

"I hear one of the buildings in Fang Hwa Apartments is haunted? Is that true?"

The woman's expression froze. She stood up and sidled to Wang Xin's room silently. She listened for the sound before leading Chen Ge into the kitchen. After closing the kitchen door, she said, "Doctor Chen, I'm not lying to you. This is real."

"It's really haunted?" Chen Ge did not expect such confirmation from the middle-aged woman.

"I saw it myself." The woman pointed at her feet. "The haunting happened in this building on the 13th floor."

When the woman mentioned the 13th floor, Chen Ge was reminded of the woman he met earlier. Without prompting, the woman continued. "Fang Hwa Apartments was built around twenty years ago. Initially, the place wasn't so huge. There were only the six older buildings in front. The three buildings behind were built four or five years ago, and I was one of the first tenants who moved in."

The woman held the cup of tea and started to explain the weird events that happened two or three years ago. Her story matched with what Ol' Wong said, but hers was scarier because she personally ran into the white shadow leaning outside her door.

She said, that midnight, she heard something weird coming outside the door, like someone was scratching it. Initially, she had thought it was a puppy or kitten, but not long after that, she heard someone talking. The first thought that came to the woman's mind was burglary. She went into the kitchen to grab a cleaver before moving to the door. She looked through the cat's eye.

The voice-controlled lights in the corridor seemed to have broken down because she could only see a cloud of whiteness. The woman called the police and used the cleaver to slash at the front door. She finally managed to scare the white shadow away.

The woman's retelling of the white shadow's escape was similar to Ol' Wong's. The white shadow ran very fast, but there were no footsteps.

"I have no idea what that thing is, but I heard from the police that it was a mental patient pulling some prank." The woman put down the cup and sighed. "I bought this place on a loan, and all my life's savings have been thrown into this place. If not, I would have moved already."

"You've seen the white shadow at a close distance before?" Chen Ge mulled over what the middle-aged woman had said. His eyes swept across the woman's face that did not fit her age and the white-and-black pantsuit she was wearing.

It was not that Chen Ge did not trust Wang Xin's adopted mother, but he was curious why the woman seemed to love black and white. When they first met, she had also been wearing a white shirt and black pants.

Chapter 204 - Don't Take the Elevator

Chapter 204: Don't Take the Elevator

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The hint given by the black phone for the Tape Ghost's affection mission was: Honey, black, white, and red, which color do you prefer?

Because of this, Chen Ge was very sensitive to these three colors. Wang Xin's adopted mother loved black and white clothes, and the woman he met in the elevator was wearing red high heels. They both were worth suspecting in Chen Ge's eyes.

...

Chen Ge studied Wang Xin's mother closer, and Chen Ge realized that the woman—be it from physical appearance, presence, or looks—was younger than her actual age. She could still be considered a beauty, much less when she was younger.

Patient No. 2 is very afraid of getting old... Chen Ge became more cautious around the woman. He glanced at the cup of tea the woman was holding, and he was thankful that he did not drink it earlier.

"Doctor Chen." The woman took one step forward. She seemed to have noticed the change in Chen Ge. "Did I scare you with the story?"

"A little bit." Chen Ge went along with it. "Do you mind telling me which room was haunted?"

"Room 3133 on the 13th floor. The police said the white shadow ran into this room, but at the time, the owner wasn't even home. I heard that she moved away not long after that, and the incident was thus forgotten. After all, there was no injury or economic loss; there wasn't anything we tenants could do about it."

"Perhaps she hasn't moved away," Chen Ge muttered to himself.

"What did you say?"

"Nothing. I'm just curious as to why there are so many threes in her room number." Ever since leaving Third Sick Hall, Chen Ge had realized that the number three appeared very often in his life. In fact, when he summoned the mirror ghost, the countdown started with three.

"3133 represents the Third Building, 13th floor, Room 3," the woman explained to Chen Ge.

"I heard from your security that most of the tenants on the 13th floor have moved away already, is it because something else happened within these one or two years?"

"I don't think so. Then again, most of us don't go out at night." The woman thought about it before adding, "But I have to remind you one thing. When you leave, don't take the elevator. Several months ago, a drunkard took the elevator, and it stopped at the 13th floor. A white shadow entered the elevator from that floor."

"Normally, an elevator is fitted with surveillance; it should have recorded the whole process. Didn't the landowner give the tenants an explanation?" Chen Ge memorized the woman's words closely.

"The drunkard was so scared that he went to find the landowner the next day. I remember the issue got quite big at the time." Wang Xin's mother thought back to the incident. "The landowner pulled out the video, but there was no white shadow on screen. It only showed the drunkard pressing all the buttons aimlessly. He took the elevator from the first floor to the top floor and then back down again. The elevator stopped several times in the middle, but no one was captured entering the elevator."

"The doors opened several times?"

"But it was very quick each time. Only when it opened on the 13th floor did it stop longer than normal. The explanation given by the landowner was probably someone wanted to use the elevator, but they decided against it when they saw the drunkard inside."

"That reason sounds quite forced."

"You're right, but ever since then, we rarely use the elevator at night."

As he nodded, Chen Ge asked with some hope, "Do you think I can get my hands on the surveillance?"

"The owner probably has a copy. I can ask for you in the morning."

“Okay, thank you.” Chen Ge was not a police officer, so he had no right to go through a building’s surveillance footage. He left after talking to the woman. After the door closed, Chen Ge turned back after walking for a few meters. He took out a piece of paper from his backpack. He folded it multiple times before slipping it into the edge of the door.

The woman had told him personally that she rarely went out at night. If her door was opened at night, then she would be a worthy suspect. After doing everything, Chen Ge used the stairs to walk to the 13th floor.

Of the entire building, only the 13th floor did not have a voice-operated light. The sole light source in the dark corridor was the green sign above the safety exit. The faded green light only made the place look creepier. Chen Ge held the ballpoint pen in his hand as he entered the corridor. The place looked very abandoned. The doors on both sides were thick with dust.

“Room 3133.” Chen Ge found the room that the mad woman once stayed in. Weirdly enough, the door of the room was very clean, as if someone was staying here. He aimed his flashlight at the door, and Chen Ge found something new. There was a piece of white paper taped to the door with cellophane tape. It said that the owner wanted to sell or rent the room at a low price, and it came with a phone number.

Someone bought this place after the mad woman left?

The paper looked new like it had been put up recently. Chen Ge stopped outside the door for a while, and after realizing there was no sound from inside the room, he left. Then he used his phone to call the number. The call rang for almost half a minute. Just as Chen Ge wanted to give up, the call was picked up.

“Hello, I saw the advertisement at Fang Hwa Apartments. The price is very reasonable, and I’m interested.” Chen Ge was rather nervous. Calling at a time like this might tip the person off to his intention.

There was silence on the other end of the phone. After a long time, a female voice said, “I’m suffering from a serious illness, and I need the money for my medical bills, that’s why the price is so low. If you are serious about buying the place, give me a time. We’ll meet at Xin Kang Apartments in the old part of town.”

“Xin Kang Apartments?”

“My illness might deteriorate any time soon, so I moved to a place closer to the hospital. I’m staying on the third floor.”

“Okay, I’ll go now.”

“Now?” The voice on the phone rose slightly, and the tone got shriller. “Okay, come now then.”

After hanging up, Chen Ge’s suspicion deepened. There were not any big hospitals in the old part of town, so why was the woman lying on the phone?

After leaving the third building, Chen Ge felt lighter in person. He called a taxi to get to Xin Kang Apartment. Chen Ge ran to the third floor and called the person again. “I’m here. There are three rooms on the third floor, which one are you in?”

“Wait a minute.” After the phone hung up, the door on his left-hand side opened. “Come in, the room is a bit messy, but I’m not in the mood to clean up.”

When Chen Ge pushed the door open and saw the woman, his heart squeezed. The woman had no hair or brows. Her face was a swathe of white, and that looked quite scary.

Chapter 205 - She Is My Sister

Chapter 205: She Is My Sister

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Quickly close the door.” The woman quickly rushed into the room as if she knew how scary she looked.

“Okay.” Chen Ge did not close the door completely but left a small sliver open. Before he got deeper into the house, he was already considering his exit options. Chen Ge stood in the middle of the living room and looked around. The woman sat on the bedside and pulled over a thin blanket to cover her body. “Don’t mind the mess, just sit anywhere you want.”

...

The place could not be considered messy, but it was littered with many pill bottles. Chen Ge picked up a random one, and it was labelled with terms that he could barely understand.

“Don’t touch my stuff,” the woman urged. She looked at Chen Ge with eyes filled with uncertainty. “What is inside your backpack? It doesn’t seem like you’re here to buy any real estate.”

“The bag might be old, but all my life savings are inside it.” Chen Ge gave a random excuse. “Your apartment’s location is nice, but can you nudge the price further?”

“The apartment is huge. If not for the fact that I’m in need of money, I wouldn’t be selling the place.” The woman’s skin was unnaturally white, and it was weirding Chen Ge out.

“If you don’t mind me asking, what kind of illness are you suffering from that you need to sell your home to make money?” Chen Ge was not there to buy the apartment; he was there to find out more information.

“Cancer.” The woman pointed at his face. “Long term chemotherapy makes me lose all my hair and brows.”

“I’m sorry.” Because that was the logical thing to say.

“Now, I just want to live as many days as I can. There’s nothing else that I can ask for.” The woman was selling her home to extend her life. It sounded logical on the surface, but upon closer inspection, the story was flawed.

“Let’s talk about the price.” The woman had taken a huge step back. The price she had given was thirty percent lower than the market price for a similar apartment. “If you agree, we can sign the documents tomorrow.”

“It’s not that I want to take advantage to of you, but the price is still quite high.” Chen Ge pretended to be a shrewd homebuyer.

“A price like this is still high?”

“I pity your condition, but before I came here, I asked around. The place that you’re selling was haunted several years ago, and that is why it hasn’t been sold until now.” Chen Ge patted his backpack. “I admit that I have a bigger heart than most, but honestly, I don’t have that much capital, and that’s why I’m reaching out to you.”

The woman knew her tail was caught, so she asked, “Then how much you’re preparing to pay?”

“One-tenth the market price, I only have that much.”

“One-tenth?” The woman scoffed. “And you said you’re not trying to take advantage of me?”

“After all, the place is haunted. If not for the lack of money, I wouldn’t buy a haunted apartment.” Chen Ge had completely morphed into his character. Hesitation appeared in his eyes like he found pity for the woman’s condition. “How about we both take a step back? I know you’re selling this house to pay your medical bill, so I can borrow some loan from family and friends, but your asking price is still too high.”

Perhaps the woman was feeling the pressure since the place had been vacated for a long time. She was silent before saying, “One-tenth is too low. My bottom line is half the market price. If you want, I can have the lawyer draft up the document tomorrow. If you don’t want it, then leave.”

“Half...” Chen Ge lowered his head like he was contemplating.

“Don’t listen to those rumors. None of the tenants have been injured before, so how could there be a haunting?” The woman lay down on the bed. She noticed that Chen Ge’s stance was loosening, so she started to persuade Chen Ge.

“Don’t try to lie to me. Your security guard told me that he personally saw a white shadow enter your home several years ago, and his story was corroborated by the police. You weren’t home that night, so you might not know these things.” Chen Ge followed the woman’s thread of conversation, picking for information that he wanted to know.

“How can I not know about things at my own home?” The woman sighed. There was a conflict in her eyes. “Actually, I did not want to tell you in case it scared you, but that white shadow wasn’t a ghost.”

“Not a ghost?” Chen Ge’s heart rose. Things might advance further than he thought.

“Yes, the white shadow is my sister. She was a mental patient who was just taken out from the mental hospital.” The woman’s face scrunched up in pain, and she coughed violently for several minutes. “My sister did something wrong when she was small, and her illness was discovered then. After that, she was sent to the mental hospital and only came out four or five years ago.”

“Something wrong? Was it anything serious?” The woman’s sister matched the description of Patient No. 2, so Chen Ge paid closer attention.

“It was very serious, and it ruined her life.” The woman sighed for her sister. “My sister’s condition is very unique. She was a patient that needed to be quarantined because she could pose a danger to the public. If she was discovered by the police, they might have pulled her away from me and locked her up in another mental hospital.”

“So, you have harboring her inside your home?”

“After ten years of treatment, her condition has gotten a lot better.” There was a shift in the woman’s tone like she had faith in what she said. “How many decades are there in a person’s life? She has suffered too much in her early life, and it’s only fair that she has the chance to enjoy a normal life now.”

Chen Ge felt like there was something wrong with the woman’s words. “So, you hid your sister inside your own home, but you didn’t expect that she would go out to haunt other tenants? That was the truth behind the haunting?”

“Yes, the haunting was merely their imagination.”

“Then, what happened to your sister? You’re so sick now; shouldn’t she come take care of you?”

“I also have no idea where she has disappeared to. Since that night, I have not seen her again.” The woman appeared rather helpless. “She’s my only family, and occasionally, I return to Fang Hwa Apartments, hoping to run into her.”

“I understand your pain. If no one comes to buy the place, can you please help me reserve the place first? I’ll go ask for a loan tomorrow,” Chen Ge said sincerely, but what he did was to try to stabilize the woman first. He had something else that he needed to check desperately.

“Okay, then I’ll see you tomorrow.” The woman ended the conversation. She seemed very tired already, leaning against the headboard.

“See you tomorrow.” He picked up his backpack and left.

When the door closed, the expression of the people inside and outside the door changed. Chen Ge stood where he was and inserted the few English terms that he remembered from the bottle label into his phone.

“It’s as I expected—this woman is very suspicious. The pills in her room have nothing to do with cancer treatment. They’re mostly for wound recovery and anti-infection.”

Chen Ge called a taxi to rush to Fang Hwa Apartments. Chen Ge called Inspector Lee on the way there and told him everything about Xin Kang Apartments.

Chapter 206 - She Is My Sister

Chapter 206: She Is My Sister

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Inspector Lee, I’ve found one of the suspects from the mental hospital. She’s currently hiding in Xin Kang Apartments.” Chen Ge told Inspector Lee the physical features of the woman.

“Are you mistaken? The woman you described sounds completely different from the person we’re looking for. Furthermore, she shouldn’t have the ability to detain someone.”

...

“Her information matches Patient No. 2 from the third sick hall very well. She might have a partner. In any case, I’m fifty percent sure of my suspicion.” Chen Ge was afraid that the driver might overhear him and arouse unnecessary misunderstanding, so he kept his voice low.

“Okay, I’ll personally take a look.” After getting Inspector Lee’s reply, Chen Ge ended the call and returned to Fang Hwa Apartments. He entered through the backdoor and made sure to avoid the cameras.

The drunkard in the elevator saw the white shadow several months ago, and it ran without sound. That thing has to be a ghost. There’s a ghost living in the building, but for the past few years, there have not been any injury report at Fang Hwa Apartments. Are people purposely hiding the information, or is something else going on here?

After sneaking into the third building, Chen Ge moved the cleaver to a spot where he could reach it easily. If there was a nasty surprise, he would be able to pull the cleaver out at first notice. He climbed up the stairs and used half an hour to familiarize himself with the layout of the building. There’s no basement, so only 23 floors in total. Why does the elevator have twenty-four numbers?

This was a question that Chen Ge did not understand. However, due to the warning from Wang Xin’s mother, he did not dare take the elevator. After a few more turns, Chen Ge returned to the 13th floor. With Inspector Lee watching, he did not need to worry about Xin Kang Apartments. His responsibility was to stay put and watch over Room 3.

If it really is Patient No. 2 staying in Room 3133, the white shadow is probably the thing that possessed Patient No. 2.

If the creatures inside the door wanted to survive outside the door, they needed to possess a living person. Their relationship was quite symbiotic. The corridor was very quiet because most of the tenants of this floor had already moved away.

I wonder if I can run into the white shadow tonight.

He looked down the corridor and saw one of the doors open. The light from inside the room filtered out into the corridor.

Someone's home? Chen Ge walked toward the door, and the closer he got, the weirder he felt. Wait, isn't this Room 3133?

The paper that was pasted to the door had been taken down, and it had been crumbled up and tossed to the floor. Chen Ge glanced into the room. The floor was tiled, and there was little furniture. There was a curtain that sat in the living room to split it into two.

The owner has returned? After Chen Ge left Xin Kang Apartments, he had taken thirty minutes to tour around the building, so this was entirely possible. He waited by the door, and two minutes passed, but there was still no sound coming from inside the room.

Chen Ge pulled the cleaver out from his backpack and silently pushed the door open. He snuck into the room and pushed the door back to its original angle. He made sure he did not leave any footprints before entering the room.

The room was tiny, and two anomalies caught Chen Ge's attention. There was a very large bathtub in the bathroom, and other than a fridge, there was a locked freezer in the kitchen.

Is it hiding a body?

There was no other logical explanation than this. All the doors in the room were open. After exiting the kitchen, Chen Ge entered the bedroom. There were several dark coats hanging in the closet, and on top of the closet was a large black leather suitcase. The case looked old, and just as Chen Ge stood on his tiptoe to pull the case down, there was clicking of high heels coming from the outside corridor.

He looked around and carried his backpack to hide inside the closet. If I'm discovered, it's over.

Chen Ge looked through the open slit of the closet. The front door was pushed open, and a man and woman stood outside of the door. The man walked in front, holding a police baton. He was wearing the security's outfit and looked to be in his twenties.

"You really saw the white shadow?"

"Yes, around half an hour ago. When I was opening the door, a flash of white appeared from the elevator! I was so scared; I didn't think to close my door and dashed into the stairwell to save my life."

The woman who trailed behind wore a pair of red high heels. She was very fashionable. Her frame was on the slither side, and she had a head of luscious black hair. Chen Ge could not see her face clearly because she was wearing a mask.

Chen Ge had seen them both tonight. The male was Gu Feiyu, the new night guard, and the female was the woman who had taken the elevator from the 13th floor and run in a hurry to the underground parking lot.

"Stay here, I'll go to the elevator to take a look." Gu Feiyu was not only straightforward, he was very brave as well.

"Don't leave me here alone..." The woman pulled on Gu Feiyu's uniform.

"I won't go too far." Gu Feiyu did not care about the woman's feelings. He grabbed his baton and flashlight as he ran to the elevator. He inspected the corners seriously but did not find any trace of the white shadow.

"Did you see wrongly?"

"Impossible." The woman's voice was trembling. "Do you think that thing has entered my home?"

She stood behind Gu Feiyu, watching her own home, but did not dare step forward.

"According to the captain, this place is haunted. If you're that afraid, you should consider moving out," Gu Feiyu said what was on his mind without filter. "The earlier tenant was a mad woman, so you might have been cheated when you bought this place.”

“It wasn’t me who bought this place. The mad woman you mentioned is my big sister. After her disappearance, this apartment got transferred to my name.” When the woman mentioned her sister, her expression fell. “All of you say that she’s mad, but she’s the person who treated me with the most kindness in this world.”

The woman walked into the room. The sound her high heels made against the tiles was very crisp. “Don’t just stand out there. If you keep the door open, something might slip in.”

“It’s okay. I still need to return to my patrol.”

“Please come in and help me find the white shadow. You can leave after we make sure it’s not here.” The woman dragged Gu Feiyu into the room and closed the front door.

“Okay...”

Gu Feiyu walked through the living room to the balcony while the woman turned into the bedroom. Chen Ge held his breath as the woman got near. If she opened the closet door now, she would get a ‘surprise’ that she would never forget.

After closing the bedroom door, the woman walked to the make-up table and removed her mask in front of the mirror. She pulled out many cans and bottles from the drawer and started to touch-up her make-up. When she was done, she slipped a small plastic canister into her pocket and left.

“I’ve checked the bedroom; the white shadow is not in there.”

When the woman turned, Chen Ge caught a glimpse of her face. Her skin was pale, and she looked very familiar.

Chapter 207 - Black or White?

Chapter 207: Black or White?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Did you see the white shadow?” When the woman exited the bedroom, her expression slowly changed. Her lashes quivered lightly, and with the lack of color in her face, she looked like a real damsel in distress.

“No.” Gu Feiyu’s eyes landed on the woman who had removed the mask, and an awkwardness appeared on his face before he silently moved his face away.

...

“Take a seat. I have a feeling the appearance of the white shadow might have a story behind it.” The woman asked for Gu Feiyu to sit on the sofa. Probably tired from wearing the high heels, she removed them and walked into the kitchen barefooted.

Both of his hands gripping the police baton, Gu Feiyu was obviously nervous. He looked very agitated, and his legs shook unnaturally. The woman took two opened bottles of drinks from the fridge and placed them on the coffee table. “Thank you for your help today.”

“Just doing my job.” Gu Feiyu was embarrassed.

“No, I should really thank you. If not for you, I wouldn’t have known what to do. After my elder sister’s disappearance, I’m all alone in Jiujiang. I don’t have much savings. I’m waiting for this place to get sold, and I’ll be moving away forever.” The woman sat across from the security guard. She looked like she was still scared. She curled her legs around the edge of the sofa, and her hands massaged them gently.

“Leaving is not a bad idea.” Gu Feiyu nodded, and his gaze that went to the woman was colored with pity. “But you don’t need to feel so depressed. Your sister is just missing, perhaps she might return one day.”

“Things are not as simple as you think. I share a very good relationship with my sister. After all, we grew up together. She would share everything with me and tell me every one of her secrets, but one day, she just disappeared. I suspect that she's already..." The woman choked on her words. It felt like she had forced herself through that revelation; she was opening up before a stranger.

Her frame was small, and her limbs were thin; she gave off a sense of fragility. When she started to cry, the heart of every man would go to her. Gu Feiyu was all flustered, and he did not know what to do. After some time, he put down the baton and passed the tissue box on the table to the woman. The woman accepted a tissue, but afraid of ruining her make-up, she just used to it to dab around her eyes. "When I came back from work and saw the white shadow, I was shocked beyond words. Do you think the white shadow has taken my sister?"

Her voice was laced with despair. "Now that I've seen the white shadow, will I be taken next?"

"You won't." The woman was so focus on her sadness that she did not notice that her skirt was wide open. Gu Feiyu saw this and immediately moved his eyes away.

"I hope you're right." The woman picked up the drink before her and lightly touched the bottle in front of Gu Feiyu. "I'm so sorry to drop this on you."

She raised the bottle to her mouth, and it was then that Gu Feiyu recovered. Out of politeness, he also took a sip from the bottle.

"I think you shouldn't be that pessimistic. These few days, there were many individuals who have come to ask about your sister, so I'm sure she's still alive. Perhaps there's some reason that prevented her from coming to see you."

The drink just came out from the fridge, so it was cool. It tasted so good that Gu Feiyu naturally took another sip. "Your sister probably has her reasons for going away. In any case, I don't believe in that talk of ghosts. She probably made some mistake and came up with that excuse to hide from the law. Actually, I feel sorry for her. She couldn't even see the person that loves her the most in the world; what is the meaning of being alive then?"

"You don't understand her. None of you have ever tried to understand her." The woman's expression filled with sadness, but her tone had a small change to it. "She is the best older sister one can ever ask for. She was willing to share her most precious thing with me."

Gu Feiyu suddenly felt very tired. He hugged the baton and leaned against the sofa. "Looks like you two do share a very good relationship."

The woman seemed to go down her memory, but her gaze had never left the half-empty bottle that was on the table. "When I was small, people liked to bully me, and my sister would be the first one to jump out to defend me. As we grew older, our personalities started to form and differ from each other. I was selfish and prone to throw temper tantrums, but no matter what I did, my sister would always forgive me. She was perfect, beautiful, graceful, and had a great smile.

"At the time, I didn't appreciate it. The more she was tolerant toward me, the more I hated her. I hated everything she liked. She liked white, so I liked black. I had to be different from her. This continued for several months until that incident happened."

Studying the guard, the woman continued after a long time. "Even though I hate to admit it, we fell in love with the same thing.

"In our neighborhood, there was this handsome boy who fell in love with my sister. He liked to listen to music and compose pieces. He was a wonderful singer, too. Whenever they went on their dates, my heart twisted like it was cut with a thousand knives. I could not allow the thing that I loved to become someone else's.

"I look similar to my sister, so I started to put on her make-up and wear her clothes. Initially, the dates were successful, but slowly, the boy discovered my secret. After all, I was not my sister, and we have completely different personalities. I cried and begged him to stay, but he only loved my sister."

The veins on the woman's arms were scary, but Gu Feiyu sitting opposite from her did not seem to notice this. His eyes kept closing like he was too tired from the long evening patrol.

"For him, I gave up my pride to beg my elder sister, but the sister who claimed she loved me went silent this time. We did not speak for an entire week. In the end, it was sister who compromised. She said that she would call the boy over and had him choose.

"When the boy got my sister's invitation, he was so happy. He even went out to buy a new shirt and fresh flowers. He also spent the whole night recording my sister's favorite song. When he arrived, the boy confessed directly to my sister, but she did not accept it immediately. Instead she called me out and told the boy to make the choice.

“My sister was wearing her favorite white dress, so I wore black. She asked the boy, ‘Honey, white or black, which color do you prefer?’

“I’ve never prayed for something so hard in my life before, but it only took several seconds for my hope to be shattered. The boy didn’t hesitate at all and chose my sister.”

Her nails cut into her flesh. Even after so many years, the woman still felt the sting of betrayal. Her breathing became ragged, and it only calmed down after a long time. “I felt my heart being torn open. Words cannot describe the pain. I just wanted to leave and go somewhere people could not find me.

“Elder sister saw the pain I was in. She seemed to have already expected this ending. At my lowest point in life, it was again my sister who stepped forth to help me. She fed the boy a bottle of water and then removed her white dress before walking into the kitchen to retrieve a cleaver.

“She told me that other than white and black, there was another choice that was fairest to all.”

The woman stopped talking and pulling out a cleaver from underneath the sofa. She used the tissue that Gu Feiyu had given her to wipe away the make-up on her face. As if remembering the things that happened so many years ago, the woman held the cleaver high as she moved toward the immobile Gu Feiyu. The wig fell off her head, and the completely hairless face leaned close to Gu Feiyu’s ear.

“Honey, black, white, and red, which color do you prefer?”

Chapter 208 - This Is a Love Song

Chapter 208: This Is a Love Song

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The woman's face was startlingly white. When she was agitated, her features twisted dangerously. Her slender arm curled around Gu Feiyu's neck, and her icy finger slid down the man's face.

Licking away her bright lipstick, her thin purplish lips leaned against Gu Feiyu's ear and continued to mumble, "Two of us have fallen in love with the same thing, so the fairest way is to cut it into half so that we can have one half each."

...

The cleaver cut through the uniform's button, and the woman's movement was gentle and soft. The security guard tried his best to open his eyes. He had not completely fainted.

"Both me and my sister got our love; he was the first for both of us." The woman leaned against Gu Feiyu's chest. "You have a personality that's similar to his. Initially, I wanted to wait for a few months before asking you to come up, but those people have already found me, so I need to leave this city as soon as possible."

Listening to Gu Feiyu's heartbeat, the woman raised her head to say, "Don't worry, I won't hurt you."

She walked into the bedroom to retrieve the black suitcase from the top of the closet. From within, she took out an ancient tape recorder. Kneeling beside it, the woman picked out a tape that was covered in dust. She kissed along the edge of the tape slowly like she was doing some sort of ritual.

She put in the tape and pressed the play button, and a boy's voice drifted out from it. The woman held the cleaver and listened to the song quietly. The boy had a clear and warm tone. It was filled with love. It was a love song.

"I've made about ten copies of this tape, but most of them have been lost."

The familiar melody surrounded the living room, and it seemed to bring the woman back many years. She tossed Gu Feiyu's uniform aside and took out the bundle of rope from underneath the sofa. After securing the knot, she dragged Gu Feiyu into the bathroom.

Hiding inside the closet, Chen Ge saw everything. "The locked freezer, the large bathroom... this woman has prepared everything. This is pure madness."

Chen Ge knew he had to make his move soon or Gu Feiyu would be in mortal danger. He lowered the volume on his phone and stood beside the bedroom door. He grabbed the chair from the make-up table and called Gu Feiyu's number.

The woman dropped Gu Feiyu into the bathtub, and the man's phone in the living room rang. "Why at a time like this?"

The woman walked out of the bathroom barefooted and picked up the security uniform that was left in the corner. When the woman was looking through the uniform for Gu Feiyu's phone, Chen Ge walked silently behind the woman.

As if sensing something, the woman turned. However, before she could turn fully around, Chen Ge already swung the heavy chair at her.

The woman did not expect another person in the room. She collapsed to the floor, and the top of her head was bleeding. Her pair of eyes glared at Chen Ge like they were bulging from the socket.

"Why are you here?"

Chen Ge was not one to waste time talking, especially when his target was not incapacitated. The chair went down once more on the same spot. The woman's head lulled to the side. She was already weak to begin with, but now she could not even stand up.

Chen Ge untied the ropes from Gu Feiyu and used them to tie up the woman's legs and arms. "Who would have thought the two missions are overlapping? Then again, this makes thing easy for me."

He pulled out his own tape and placed it inside the recorder. The singing stopped, and only white noise could be heard.

"Those who disrespect life will be disrespected by life."

Fresh blood dyed the woman's face. She was lying on the ground, but she kept her eyes glaring at Chen Ge. The expression on her face was curious. There was no fear or worry but plenty of surprise and shock. Taking out his phone, Chen Ge called Inspector Lee. Just as the call was picked up, the lights in the room went off.

The woman came out from the Third Sick Hall, so she should carry a monster from inside the door on her.

Chen Ge opened the flashlight function on her phone and retrieved the cleaver from his backpack.

The red cloth fluttered to the ground, and Chen Ge cautiously looked around. After some time, there was a sound coming from the front door. It sounded like someone was scratching at the door with their nails. It sounded shrill to the ears. Chen Ge got quite unsettled listening to it.

It's that white shadow!

The first moment Chen Ge heard the scratching, he knew who it was.

"Is anyone home?" There was a rather ambiguous voice coming from beyond the door, and it had a weird tone. It repeated the same question. Holding the cleaver, Chen Ge did not know whether to answer or not.

When it repeated itself the seventh time, the voice said, "Is anyone home? If no one's home, I'm coming in."

The front door creaked open, and a white shadow about the size of a normal person stood at the door. This was the fourth monster Chen Ge had come across after the mirror monster, the thin monster, and the broken-arm monster. It had a blurry face and incomplete facial features, but it moved very fast.

Chen Ge blocked the cleaver before his chest. The monster gave him plenty of pressure; this creature was weaker than the thin monster but much stronger than a normal mirror monster. When he was at Third Sick Hall, a thin monster had chased him all over the place. If not for Zhang Ya, Chen Ge might not even have survived.

The white shadow faced Chen Ge and morphed to his side in the blink of an eye. Chen Ge waved the cleaver, and when it cut through the white shadow, it screamed like it was injured. It then glared at Chen Ge.

The white face morphed before Chen Ge's eyes. It finally changed into the face of Patient No. 2. However, the facial features were unstable. It felt like the result of too many plastic surgeries. The whole face was fragile like the features could come loose if the woman made too many facial expressions.

As the face leaned closer, Chen Ge used the ballpoint pen in his pocket to poke the ghost. He struggled as best as he could. Caught in their fight, no one realized a man's painful scream was echoing through the room.

"So painful..."

The tip of the pen stuck into the white shadow's forehead. The monster gripped Chen Ge's wrist tightly and slowly moved its face toward Chen Ge's face. It seemed like it was trying to steal Chen Ge's face!

"So painful, so painful, so painful!"

Just as the white shadow was about to touch the tip of Chen Ge's nose, its body was pulled back by an unknown force, and its hair was pulled taut.

"So painful!" When the scream appeared behind the white shadow, the expressions of both Chen Ge and the woman on the floor shifted.

"Xu Yin! Is that you?" The woman's reaction was bigger than Chen Ge's. Since she was all tied up, she used her forehead to move forward; she was trying to sit up.

When the woman was distracted, the white shadow's face disappeared, and its presence weakened.

"What's going on? It was the woman who was controlling the white shadow?" Chen Ge was the only one who maintained his calm. He kept his eyes on the white shadow. Realizing it had weakened, he made use of this opportunity to injure it.

The Tape Ghost had incapacitated the white shadow, so it was the perfect chance to give it a heavy blow. However, to Chen Ge's surprise, at the last minute, the Tape Ghost let go. It seemed to have recognized the woman on the floor.

"So painful..."

Chapter 209 - Why Are You Here Again?

Chapter 209: Why Are You Here Again?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After losing the grip on it, the white shadow retreated. Its speed was fast.

“Don’t run!” This was such a perfect opportunity, so naturally, Chen Ge would not let it run away so easily. He raised the cleaver and chased after the white shadow. Without the woman’s control, the white shadow’s presence continued to weaken. Its face became blurrier, as did its body.

...

The monster felt threatened. It scurried to the black suitcase and grabbed something from within before dashing out the front door. Chen Ge did not have a good look of what it was, but since they were enemies, he knew he had to keep what the white shadow was attempting to take.

The cleaver managed to do some damage to the white shadow. With the decision made in his mind, Chen Ge shifted the target to the thing the white shadow tried to carry away with it. He saw the opportunity and made a slash. As the white shadow evaded, Chen Ge grabbed at the thing it was holding.

In their tussle, the thing was torn apart. Half of it fluttered to the floor. In its hurry to escape, the white shadow did not stay to grab it. Chen Ge chased it to the door. There was nothing in the darkened hallway. He thought about it logically. Without the Tape Ghost’s aid, he might not be able to fight the white shadow if cornered.

Chen Ge thus gave up on the chase. Chen Ge closed the front door and turned on the lights of the living room. The scene that he saw made his eyes twitch. On the cold floor, the woman’s limbs were twisted at a curious angle, and her eyes bulged outwards. She screamed violently, and her hairless face showed an expression that confused Chen Ge. It felt like pain, but it also felt like release and joy.

“Is it painful?” How to deal with the woman was the Tape Ghost’s business. His mission was to find this woman to help the Tape Ghost complete his wish. He turned around to pick up the torn piece of paper that had fallen to the floor.

It looked like an advertisement flyer. The actual content was on the other half that was taken by the white shadow. Chen Ge's half only had three red words and a small slogan. Ghost stories society? Sharing a real ghost story every week?

This half-torn flyer caught Chen Ge's attention not only because the white shadow insisted on bringing this thing with it but also because the background for the flyer was a half-opened blood red door!

It's about the world behind the door?

The flyer belonged to Patient No. 2, and she had been behind the door before.

Could it have been set up by the escaped mental patients? But what does it mean by one horror story every week?

Looking at the roughly made flyer and curious introduction, Chen Ge realized that even those flyers on the telephone poles advertising loans were more detailed than this.

The members have to tell actual ghost stories, so what would happen if they have no story to tell? Fake one? How will they know it's real or fake? Chen Ge pocketed the flyer. If he told people the things that had happened to him recently, he would probably be able to scare plenty of people. Of course, the premise was people. If his audience consisted of ghosts, then it would be hard to tell who would be scaring who.

The screams in the room slowly stopped, and in their place was a robotic female voice repeating, "So painful..."

"The woman was forced inside the tape?" Chen Ge walked to the woman's side. Her gaze was dull and lifeless, like her soul had been sucked out of her body. Chen Ge had no clue what the Tape Ghost had done to the woman, and he did not care; this was between the Tape Ghost and the woman.

Placing the woman on the sofa, Chen Ge turned off the recorder. As he pressed on the power button, the black phone vibrated. A new message had arrived.

"Congratulations for completing Xu Yin's wish. His impression of you has improved greatly. Would you like to employ the Tape Ghost as a member of the Haunted House?”

The Affection Mission is completed just like that?

The Tape Ghost was more powerful than the Pen Spirit, so in comparison, the Tape Ghost’s affection mission was more dangerous than the Pen Spirit’s.

“Would you like to employ the Tape Ghost as a member of the Haunted House? No answer within twenty-four hours means that you have forfeited the choice.”

“Yes!” Chen Ge clicked on the screen. Normal person would not even imagine how excited he was.

“Congratulations, Specter’s Favored, you have hired a special-type baleful specter—Xu Yin.

“Xu Yin (Baleful Specter): He has a very unique voice (Can temporarily control lingering spirits and disturb other baleful specters. Unless on a Red Specter, useable once per week).

“Note: Xu Yin feeds on the visitor’s frightful screams. The visitor’s fear will improve Xu Yin’s power, but if you keep Xu Yin isolated and depressed, he might decide to leave you.”

Reading the information, Chen Ge was satisfied with Xu Yin. This was a special-type baleful specter similar to the Pen Spirit; they each had their own special power.

Not bad, for future Trial Missions, I have another trump card.

Removing the tape from the recorder, Chen Ge placed it next to the ballpoint pen.

The only downside is the Tape Ghost will only appear when the tape is played. Looks like I need to go to the flea market to find myself a portable recorder.

After doing everything, Chen Ge realized that there was another ‘victim’ lying inside the bathroom. He ran into the bathroom and realized that Gu Feiyu had completely fainted.

I bet this will scar the young man for life.

Chen Ge dragged Gu Feiyu out of the bathtub and used the uniform to cover his body. He hid his cleaver at the bottom of his backpack and sat in the living room, waiting for Inspector Lee to arrive.

Twenty minutes later, Inspector Lee came with the landowner. To contain the chaos, they did not make too much noise.

“Chen Ge!” As he stepped into the room, Inspector Lee saw Chen Ge, who sat in the middle of the room. “Are you injured? Where’s the suspect?”

“Already tied up. The victim is the security guard; he’s still unconscious.”

Inspector Lee entered the room to inspect the crime scene. He frowned and asked Chen Ge, “The female one is the culprit, and the male is the victim?”

“Yes.”

“Why are you here? What is your role?”

“I...” Chen Ge blurted out, “Actually it’s quite a coincidence. There’s a girl on the 14th floor who suffers from depression, and I was here to help her. I came tonight to check up on her condition; if you don’t believe me, you can go up and ask her mother.”

“Meaning you ran into this murder case completely on accident?”

“I suppose so.” After he said that, Chen Ge realized the eyes of the few policemen who looked at him changed. “I’m not joking; it’s all a coincidence.”

“You don’t need to explain, I believe you,” Inspector Lee reassured.

“Ah Yong, call the ambulance. We need to get the victim to the hospital for treatment and examination. The rest of you, deal with the crime scene and collect the fingerprints, but don’t touch the drinks on the table. Females are naturally physically weaker than males, so they normally depend on poison, so we have to carefully preserve the crime scene.”

Inspector Lee was very experienced. With just a glance, he managed to predict part of the case. Chen Ge stood to the side quietly and did not say a word, holding the half-torn flyer in his hand.

Chapter 210 - Rest Stop

Chapter 210: Rest Stop

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

About half an hour later, Captain Yan's people also arrived at the scene. They were the ones who were tasked to follow up on the Third Sick Hall's case.

"You're Chen Ge?" The one leading was a large young man.

...

"Yes." Chen Ge had not seen this man before, so he likely was not a normal police officer at the station.

"Come with us. Before the victim is conscious, we'll be responsible for your safety." The content was polite, but the tone was not. Chen Ge saw the surreptitious signal that Inspector Lee gave him, and he relaxed enough to follow this group of people to the hospital.

At 11:30 pm, Gu Feiyu awoke and told the police everything that happened. When Chen Ge tackled the mad woman, he still had half a wisp of consciousness left to remember seeing Chen Ge.

He had thought that he was going to die. This experience was something Gu Feiyu would never forget for life. Under his fervent demand, the police found Chen Ge and arranged for the two to meet. Meeting Chen Ge again, Gu Feiyu's expression and tone were completely different from the first time they met. The young man was a man of simple beliefs. Holding Chen Ge's hand, he thanked Chen Ge sincerely.

Seeing this, the police's suspicion toward Chen Ge slowly dissipated. The leading young officer even praised him so much that Chen Ge felt rather embarrassed. At around midnight, Chen Ge exited the hospital. Standing at the empty junction, he looked at the city that was shrouded in darkness.

"I should tell them." Holding the half-torn flyer, Chen Ge called Captain Yan.

“Xiao Chen?”

“Captain Yan, I have something to tell you.”

“Is it about Patient No. 2? Don’t worry, I got the report already. You’ve saved a human life, well done.” But Captain Yan’s tone turned serious. “But I still don’t agree with your ways of private investigation. You’re toying with your life.”

“Don’t worry, the discovery of Patient No. 2 today was pure coincidence. It won’t happen again.” Chen Ge’s voice sounded raw. “I’m calling for another purpose. When I was eavesdropping on Patient No. 2, I overheard her mention a special organization; it’s called the ghost story society.”

“Ghost story society?”

“Yes, listening to the name, it sounds like a gathering for horror story aficionados, but instead of making up stories, they only tell actual stories.”

“When you overheard this? Who was Patient No. 2 talking to? Will we be able to find the record on her phone?” Captain Yan was suspicious.

“She wasn’t talking on the phone. There was a big sister persona hiding inside this woman, so you can understand why she was talking to herself.” Chen Ge kept the half-torn flyer. “I suspect that this society is formed by the mental patients who escaped from the third sick hall, and the woman is probably one of the members.”

“A ghost story society founded by a bunch of mental patients?” Captain Yan thought about it and told Chen Ge seriously, “I will have my people follow up on this. If you have any more information, please remember to call me.”

“Of course.”

After hanging up, Chen Ge pulled up his collar. They have to share a real story every week, but what if there’s no story to share? Create one themselves?

Chen Ge returned to New Century Park. When he entered the Haunted House, the white cat jumped down from the tree and followed behind him gracefully. “Next time, I’ll tie you up and bring you with me!”

After feeding the cat, Chen Ge took out the black phone to look over his refreshed daily missions. Chen Ge had seen two of them before; they were to deal with hidden security threats and to hire a new employee. The third daily mission Chen Ge saw for the first time. It asked Chen Ge to build a rest stop outside of the Haunted House. The time limit was one day, and the difficulty was normal.

The missions given by the black phone are the things that I need to do at my current status. Indeed, as the number of visitors increases, asking them to stand in line for a long time isn't a good idea.

Chen Ge clicked on the screen to accept this mission. Then he used a pen and paper to design a simple rest stop.

There's not enough budget. If there was enough money, I could set up a multi-purpose building next to the Haunted House to sell drinks and food for the visitors to recover and rest as well as a place to sell Haunted House merchandise.

Inspiration flooded into Chen Ge. I can learn from Tian Teng Medical School and get a large screen to introduce the background to each scenario. Then I can pick selected videos of certain visitors to broadcast on screen, and that should be able to incite curiosity and interest in other visitors.

Chen Ge drew on the paper. With the delineation in difficulty level, he had even prepared a ranking board depending on the difficulty and clear time. That would definitely motivate the thrill-seekers and achievement-hoarders. When he was done, the paper design was several pages thick.

Chen Ge arranged them and prepared to take them to meet Director Luo tomorrow morning. Hopefully, he would be able to convince the man. He glanced at the time; it was already 2 am. Chen Ge stretched lazily.

The only hidden security risk inside the Haunted House now is that door, but the 'door' only appears at midnight, so it won't affect the visitors. The constant hints on the black phone should be a reminder that I should do something about that 'door'. The recruitment mission is even easier; I can just hire some from Tian Teng Medical School. Alas, now is not the time to make the move yet.

Chen Ge tapped his pen on the table as he compared the strengths and weaknesses between the two Haunted Houses. He was not one who was blinded by pride, and he knew which areas of his Haunted House were weaker compared to Tian Teng Medical School.

Tian Teng Medical School is small, but their scenes are seamlessly linked. In comparison, even though my Haunted House is bigger, there is also a lot more empty space.

This was not Chen Ge's fault. He had gained the black phone about a week ago, and he had been busy completing the missions to expand the Haunted House, so there had to be some flaws.

I should add more scares in my Haunted House. Looks like I need to go make a new batch of props and mannequins tomorrow.

After several Trial Missions, Chen Ge had mastered more ways to scare people. His mind was filled with ideas, and he could not help but smile, imagining the screams from his visitors.

I can't wait. I wonder who will be so lucky to be the first visitor to visit the Third Sick Hall.

Cat fur flashed before Chen Ge's eyes. The white cat seemed to think Chen Ge was being very noisy. It jumped on the table, then jumped onto the bed and snuggled into the mattress.

Chen Ge also realized it was quite late. He set the alarm for 7 am and lay down beside the cat to sleep.

The sun rose, and Chen Ge cleaned the Haunted House. Then he left the place with the ideas he had jotted down the previous night.

Chapter 211 - Scary Mannequins

Chapter 211: Scary Mannequins

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Along the way, Chen Ge called the workshop boss. The boss thought that Chen Ge had changed her mind and was willing to help the poor souls in the world. Without waiting for Chen Ge to explain, he left his home in a hurry. Chen Ge waited at the front door of the workshop while having his breakfast. In just twenty minutes, the boss arrived.

“Boss Qian, I need to borrow your workshop again. Money is not an issue.” Chen Ge was not exactly lying. He might not have money now, but he would have it soon.

...

“Why are we talking money at the first meeting? We’re old pals already. Talk of money hurts the relationship.” The slightly overweight boss sat next to Chen Ge. “Just leave me one of your mannequins, and it’ll be fine.”

“Are you sure? My mannequins are not for human use.” Chen Ge did not want to lie to the boss since he had treated him with nothing but kindness. “I will design a few new mannequins today. You can decide after I’m done.”

The boss opened the glass door, but before entering, he bowed three times.

“What are you doing? Are you that afraid?” Chen Ge remembered that the boss did not have this habit when they first met.

“I also don’t know why. Ever since you created your first batch of mannequins, I’ve had a feeling something is watching me from inside the door.” Boss Qian scratched his head. “In any case, it’s no loss on my part to be careful. If there’s really something, this way perhaps it might leave me alone.”

“You’re not wrong.” Chen Ge shook his head as he entered the workshop. Now he appeared to be more familiar with the layout than Boss Qian. He picked up the tools that he needed and walked into the storage room. “Some of your materials are going to expire if you don’t use them soon. Speaking of which, the place looks the same as when I left the last time. Have you had no business during this whole period?”

“It’s okay.” Boss Qian walked into the storage room to help and used this opportunity to say, “I’ve just came back from the adult doll market research. The market is booming, and we can go the custom-made route.”

“We can talk about that later.” Chen Ge brushed him off. With all the materials ready, Chen Ge tried to remember the woman’s face that had gone under the knife many times. In a few minutes, he had completed a broad draft.

“Running a Haunted House is a real waste of your talent.” Boss Qian sighed. Chen Ge ignored him and focused on the clay. Very soon, he completed the woman’s face. The woman might have been insane, but it had to be said that she was incredibly beautiful.

“But something is missing.” Chen Ge held the model for inspection before ruining it.

“Don’t!” Boss Qian cried out. “At least give it to me to show the customer!”

“The face is not what I want,” Chen Ge mumbled and soon came up with another face. Compared to before, this face was filled with sickness and madness. “Still wrong, the woman’s madness is laced with pain.”

Chen Ge started over again. Then Chen Ge felt the face was missing a brilliance. This was repeated several times until Boss Qian had gotten used to it. He looked at Chen Ge with sadness in his eyes, and he was humming a sad ballad.

“Where is the problem?” Chen Ge thought back to the introduction of his Dollmaker’s talent, and a brave idea appeared in his mind. “The woman’s lingering spirit was trapped by Xu Yin inside the tape. I can use Xu Yin’s power to release the lingering spirit to control the mannequin. The madwoman is still alive, and in the phone, living doll has this introduction—using a live person as basis. If I follow the black phone’s introduction and instill the madwoman’s lingering spirit into the mannequin, what will happen?”

Looking at the clay body in his hands, Chen Ge could only envision this. The woman had been involved in multiple murders. Even if she played the mad card, it was impossible for her to see the light of day again.

“Looks like I still need to depend on myself.” To reconstruct the woman’s face, Chen Ge continued to work. “She has been through many plastic surgeries. Her face is indeed gorgeous if you look at the facial feature individually, but once combined together, there’s this uncanny feeling.”

Chen Ge tore the woman’s apart and focused on making individual features before joining them together. When Chen Ge patched the last piece of the face together, a miracle appeared. The woman’s face was replicated perfectly; even the expression was hauntingly similar. Looking at this face, Chen Ge was finally satisfied.

“The features are made individually and joined together using steel wires. This way, the face won’t be broken so easily.”

However, that did not mean that the face would not break open. If a visitor got too close, the woman’s face could still crack. Chen Ge chuckled, imagining the scare that would have on people.

Before 9 am, Chen Ge completed five mannequins, based on the madwoman, Xu Tong, Xiong Qing, the single-armed patient, and the resilient nurse. If possible, Chen Ge wanted to copy the entire Third Sick Hall, including all the patients and doctors.

“Now that I have the characters. With the corresponding props, each mannequin will be their own scary tale.”

It needed time for the filler to freeze, so Chen Ge left after bidding Boss Qian farewell.

Chen Ge reached the Haunted House at 9 am. He opened the gate to welcome a new day of work. New Century Park opened at 9 am. Many visitors stepped into the park and made a beeline for Chen Ge’s Haunted House. The number was not small either.

Uncle Xu did not miss this. From certain angle, Chen Ge’s Haunted House had become the park’s main attraction.

“Uncle Xu, you’re here. This is perfect; I was just looking for you.”

“Want me to help you sell tickets? Sure, I’m free anyway.” Uncle Xu naturally moved to the door of the Haunted House. Looking at the long line of visitors, a rare smile appeared on his face.

Chen Ge waved. "I want to build a rest stop next to the Haunted House. It's horrible that we ask the visitors to stand in line all day."

"No problem. Director Luo has specifically ordered us to aid you in the next two months."

"I still feel like it's better if I go talk to Director Luo in person." Chen Ge was preparing for the future. He had more things in mind than a mere rest stop.

"Director Luo will be in his office around noon, so you can go see him then." Uncle Xu gave the other workers their assignments through his walkie-talkie. Soon, the park's van arrived, and several workers helped move the benches and shed covers out from the vehicle. They were going to build a simple shed beside the Haunted House.

"These were from when the park still had activities; we'll use them for now. As for the actual rest stop, the size and everything, you will need to discuss it with Director Luo first."

"Understood."

Uncle Xu and the park workers helped maintain the line. Most of them were lining up obediently, but a large young man cut through the line, rushing toward Chen Ge.

"Wang Hailong? Why is he here?" Chen Ge walked forward assuming some accident had happened to Wang Shenglong. "Did the child finally lose his patience and speak?"

Chapter 212 - As Kind as the Sun

Chapter 212: As Kind as the Sun

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Stopping the worker, Chen Ge went forward. “Are you looking for me?”

Wang Shenglong was covered with sweat, and he gasped for breath as he pushed through the crowd. “My little brother spoke last night! He’s just outside the park; he says that he has something important to tell you!”

...

“Bring me to him.” Things were as Chen Ge expected. He looked at the long lines and gave Uncle Xu some simple commands. He opened the Minghun scenario to the visitors before leaving with Wang Hailong.

“I’m sorry to disturb your business.” Wang Hailing swiped the sweat from his forehead. “Life has been really difficult for Shenglong, and I couldn’t say no to him.”

“I understand.”

The two of them reached the entrance of the park. There was a van parked across the street, and the outside of the van was painted with a logo that read ‘Long Hu Fang’.

“In here.” Wang Hailong led Chen Ge toward the van. “You’ve seen how my brother looks. He’s afraid of scaring others, so he didn’t want to show himself in public.”

Tussling with the thin monster meant that Wang Shenglong’s mental age had not grown; he was no different from a child, but his body was seriously twisted. He stayed inside his room for most of the time, and he was so fat that he could not get on a bed, so he had to lie on the floor with a thin layer of mattress.

Chen Ge was reminded of the famous Disney movie—The Hunchback of Notre Dame.

When Chen Ge first met Wang Shenglong at Hai Ming Apartments, he had drawn a picture. Inside the picture, the monster had been standing on the boy's shoulders, its eyes targeting the people around him like he was ready to jump on other people's shoulders at any moment.

Wang Shenglong used that picture to tell Chen Ge of his difficulty. If he did not follow the monster's instructions, it would jump to his other family members, harming them. Thus, he had taken on the suffering all by himself, playing this unfair game. He had not said a word for the past five or six years.

Wang Hailong opened the back of the van to reveal a mountain like shadow at the deepest recesses of the van. "Shenglong, I've invited Boss Chen. If you have something to say, please tell him now."

Hearing that, the shadow moved forward slightly, causing the whole van to shake.

"Don't move, I'll come in." Chen Ge and Wang Hailong jumped into the van and closed the door. This was the second time he had been in such close contact with Wang Shenglong. It was impossible to tell Wang Shenglong's age from his looks. His face was covered by folds of fat, and his body was impossibly wide.

"Wu..." The years of non-speech meant that Wang Shenglong had forgotten how to speak. He could only formulate the start of the word but not the complete term.

"Don't worry. You can write the things that you want to tell me down." Chen Ge had initially maintained a distance from Wang Shenglong. He had stood near the door, and if there had been something amiss, he would have jumped out immediately. However, after some observation, Chen Ge realized that Wang Shenglong was indeed different from before. The most obvious difference being that the stench around him had already disappeared. He grabbed the notebook from the seat next to him. Wang Shenglong held the pen and wrote down two words on the paper.

"I won."

It was two simple words, but it took Wang Shenglong five to six years to complete them. It was because of these two words that his life had been ruined. The pen almost scratched through the paper; it was obvious how excited Wang Shenglong was feeling.

“Boss Chen, do you still remember the story I told you?” Afraid that Chen Ge did not get the reference, Wang Hailong leaned toward him. “My little brother got into this game with a monster when he was young called ‘Who Speaks First’. This game lasted for almost six years, but from the looks of thing, my little brother has won.”

Then, Wang Hailong added in a whisper, “Boss Chen, my little brother just recovered, so please go along with everything that he says.”

Chen Ge turned to glance at Wang Hailong. This large man was gentler than Chen Ge had expected.

“Your little brother is indeed impressive. I’ve met many who played this game, and your little brother is the only one who has won it.” Chen Ge held Wang Shenglong’s large hand. “You’re amazing.”

The pen moved, and Wang Shenglong added on the notebook, “It had only left temporarily. It said that it would return to find me.”

“It will return?” Looking at the words, a question surfaced in Chen Ge’s mind. “The monster has wasted almost six years on you, why did he suddenly leave?”

“It felt so threatened that it woke up from its slumber. It tried to forcibly take over my body, but it failed. Then, it left.”

“Threatened? Is it because the appearance of Doctor Gao and myself?” Chen Ge pressed. “When did the monster awaken?”

“At 3 am two days ago,” Wang Shenglong answered on the notebook honestly. Looking at the date on the paper, Chen Ge was shocked.

Two nights ago, he had been livestreaming inside Third Sick Hall. After I entered the world behind the door and awakened Men Nan’s main persona, it also woke up the slumbering monster?

Chen Ge thought about it. He was almost certain that the two were linked, but that should not be the main reason.

“That night, when the monster left, did you see or hear anything out of place?”

“There was the sound of people walking backwards in the corridor.”

“Walking backwards?”

Wang Shenglong wrote a lot of stuff on the paper, but Chen Ge still failed to understand him. This caused Wang Shenglong to start sweating profusely.

“It’s alright. That’s already a good enough clue.” Chen Ge did not understand the difference between people walking forward and walking backwards. Before the Wang brothers, Chen Ge called Captain Yan.

“Captain Yan, I just received new information about the Third Sick Hall. The escaped patient might have appeared at Hai Ming Apartments recently.” The monster on Wang Shenglong had come out the door in the Third Sick Hall. Instead of sticking around the other monsters, it had left the place’s control. To be able to scare the monster, it was probably the appearance of the other monsters from the Third Sick Hall.

The monsters had to possess living humans if they want to stay outside for a prolonged period of time. Therefore, the backwards footsteps that Wang Shenglong heard that night were probably the result of one of the patients from Third Sick Hall.

Watching the conversation between Chen Ge and Wang Shenglong, Wang Hailong thought Chen Ge was just humoring his little brother, but he panicked when Chen Ge called the police. “What’s happening? Why did you call the police?”

He suddenly realized the gravity of the situation, and he realized that Chen Ge was not kidding.

“Boss Chen, what have you been talking about? The police are coming to Hai Ming Apartments?” Wang Hailong’s face was filled with worry.

“Your brother’s story is related to another case; that’s all I can tell you.” Chen Ge chatted some more with Wang Shenglong before leaving the van.

Wang Hailong chased after him because he was worried. “Boss Chen, my brother has spent his whole life inside the house; he hasn’t done anything illegal.”

“That I know. To be precise, the case is related to the monster inside your brother’s story.”

“The monster?” Wang Hailong’s face shifted. After a long time, he asked, “Will my brother be affected? He has suffered too much, and it took him so much time to be ready to speak.”

“Don’t worry, it won’t affect your brother.” Chen Ge looked inside the van. Wang Shenglong, who was like a small mountain, sat in the corner. He hid in the shadows where the sun would not hit. He gripped the pen in his hands, and it looked like he was drawing.

Chapter 213 - Boss Chen

Chapter 213: Boss Chen

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Boss Chen, tell me the truth, what is going on with my brother? Will he relapse?” The vaguer Chen Ge was, the more unsettled Wang Hailong felt.

“I don’t think it will repeat because it wasn’t a sickness.” Chen Ge tried to make Wang Hailong calm down. “Don’t think too much of it. The most important thing you need to do now is assimilate Shenglong into a normal life.”

...

Wang Hailong still wanted to say something more, but he was interrupted by Chen Ge. “Your little brother has been cut off from the outside world for a long time; he seems to have gotten used to closing himself up. This is not helpful if he wants to return to a normal life. If possible, you should bring him out some more.”

Chen Ge pitied Wang Shenglong’s condition. He was an innocent boy but ended up like this. Afraid of scaring others with his looks, he felt he had to hide in the corner of the van.

“I’ve discussed that with our father, but how can we bring Shenglong out in his condition? If people start pointing at him, won’t that just make things worse?” Wang Hailong also worried about this. Even though the thin monster had left, the trauma it left on the boy would take a long time to undo.

“Didn’t I introduce you to a psychologist last time? He might be able to help with these problems.” Looking at the silent Wang Shenglong hiding in the corner, Chen Ge did not feel that well either. “There needs to be a process for him to get reconnected with the world. If you need my help, don’t be afraid to ask.”

He turned to leave. With regards to how to help Wang Shenglong return to a normal life, Chen Ge had an immature idea in his mind. The child looks scary on the surface but has a gentle heart. If there is nowhere else for him to go, perhaps he can come help me at the Haunted House. Xu Wan is too small to make people think she's a murderer. Wang Shenglong's size is more in line with what the visitors think a murderer look like.

When he returned to the Haunted House, the shed was a third ready. All the benches had been arranged. To experience the Haunted House, many visitors chose to sit on the benches rather than visit other attractions.

“Xiao Chen, your Haunted House is truly popular.” Uncle Xu was impressed. “I heard a few foreigners talking among themselves about how they rode on a train for several hours just to come visit your Haunted House. Now that you have the fame, it's time to focus on the management to bring visitors the best terror experience. If they're impressed, every single one of them will become free promotion for the Haunted House.”

Chen Ge had a plan of his own. Terror was the most intense of all human emotions. After one experienced something scary, ninety percent of them would share it with someone else, and this would indirectly help promote his Haunted House. Sometimes, they might conclude their whole experience with one, “It's scary”, but that was possibly the highest praise for a Haunted House.

Chen Ge entered the Murder by Midnight scenario to act as the murderer while Xu Wan stayed in the Minghun scenario to play the bride. About three hours later, many visitors survived these two scenarios. Some already got their fill while others wanted to challenge Mu Yang High School after resting.

Afraid that an accident might happen inside Mu Yang High School, he would trail after them from a distance wearing Doctor Skull-cracker's outfit. The whole morning passed, and the highest record was a group of six locating fourteen nametags in twenty-five minutes.

After entering Mu Yang High School, many visitors realized how different this scenario was from the others, and they escaped for their lives. The underground was not locked with a steel door, so they could exit any time they wanted. However, if they regretted that decision and wanted to try again, they would have to line up once more.

Is the goal of twenty nametags too difficult? Chen Ge thought about it. Everything he did, he did to bring the visitors a better service. The mannequins consumed the visitors' fear and screams, so they appear to be more alive. With how things are going, I doubt anyone will enter the Third Sick Hall this week.

After giving it some consideration, Chen Ge reduced the clear requirement to sixteen nametags, but even so, there were no successes. "These visitors are too cowardly. Now I kinda miss those medical students."

Chen Ge pulled the gates shut and helped Xu Wan remove her make-up.

"You miss them, but they might not miss you." Uncle Xu stood outside the door, counting the tickets. "Things had been going well these past few days. Keep it up. Don't make the visitors faint or vomit again. You'll just give me more scares by doing that."

"Don't worry, I'll try to keep that under control." Chen Ge just said that when his phone rang. He lowered his head and saw that the caller was He San. "The boy is calling at a time like this, is this a sign from above?"

Sitting on the steps, Chen Ge answered it. "Boss! The proprietor from Tian Teng Medical Schools wants your phone number, can I give it to him?"

"Wants my number?"

"Yes, after you left that day, it was chaos outside the Tian Teng Medical School. The visitors were split into two camps; one said that Tian Teng Medical School's name was unfound and demanded a refund because they wanted to go to your Haunted House. The other half were Tian Teng Haunted House's loyal fans. They said that it was normal for you not to be afraid because you own a Haunted House yourself."

"Wait, what does all that got to do with the proprietor wanting my phone number?"

"Of course, it has everything to do with it! To not disappoint his own fans, the proprietor was forced to promise that he would come to visit your Haunted House to prove that owners of Haunted Houses would not be scared in other people's Haunted Houses," He San said on the phone. Chen Ge had a feeling that his wicked streak had rubbed off on the young man because he sounded really excited on the phone.

"They're ready to visit your Haunted House tomorrow morning, and they'll be bringing their own fans with them. Apparently, they want to record the whole process to face-slap those visitors who demanded a refund.”

Chen Ge was rather speechless. “Are these mindless fans?”

“No idea, I’m just calling to warn you.”

“Sure, give him my number. We’re both in the same business; more communication is beneficial for both parties.”

Not long after He San hung up, Chen Ge’s phone rang again. This time, it was an unknown number.

“Hello?”

“Boss Chen, I’m the proprietor for Tian Teng Medical School. We met some time ago.”

“Yes, how can I help you?”

“We’re planning to visit your Haunted House tomorrow, and some of our fans will tag along. Hopefully, Boss Chen will be kind to us.”

“Of course, you know I’m not the kind to hold grudges. My Haunted House is all for your visitation.”

“Boss Chen sure is nice.” Tian Teng Medical School’s proprietor added in a hurry, “Then we’ll pick one that has intermediate difficulty, not too scary but also not too simple.”

Chapter 214 - A Seven-Week Miracle

Chapter 214: A Seven-Week Miracle

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Intermediate difficulty? No problem,” Chen Ge promised readily. He was going to invite them to try out Mu Yang High School. If they survived that, then Chen Ge would invite them to try the Third Sick Hall.

“Then, I shall thank you in advanced.” After hanging up, the proprietor was impressed by Chen Ge’s kindness. He thought the man was quite friendly and nice.

...

Chen Ge was rather happy that the people from Tian Teng Medical School were coming to visit. Ever since the introduction of the Third Sick Hall, no visitors had managed to challenge it, and it pained Chen Ge that he did not get to share the treasure with others. Since the workers from Tian Teng Medical School were coming, they might be able to challenge the Third Sick Hall because they were people who spent most of their time inside a Haunted House, and that meant they should be more courageous than normal visitors.

“The filler for the mannequin should be dry by now. I’ll go get them to decorate the Third Sick Hall tonight.” Chen Ge planned to employ what he had learned from Tian Teng Medical School inside his own Haunted House and then use the workers from Tian Teng Medical School to try it out. During lunch, Chen Ge took his own design proposal to the office building. “Director Luo, I have a proposal that I want you to see.”

Director Luo was facing the laptop in his room, and his brows were creased deeply. When he saw Chen Ge, the expression on his face lightened slightly. “If you need anything, ask Ol’ Xu. I’ve already told him to cooperate with you fully.”

“He can’t make the call on this.” Chen Ge placed the document that he had spent the whole night writing on the desk. “I wish to build a multi-purpose hall next to the Haunted House. I have great plans for the future, so the building will be quite big.”

Director Luo looked at Chen Ge's proposal twice before putting it down. "The park now is facing financial issues; it's already difficult keeping the place running normally. We do not have the budget to invest in more attractions."

"Director Luo, this multi-purpose building will serve us well; I have full faith in that. An eatery will be able to provide the visitors a better environment to recover. Limited mementos to commemorate the different scenarios they have cleared will entice visitors to go try out new scenarios."

"I know you have confidence and I believe in your ability, but certain things need to be inspected from the bigger picture." Director Luo turned the laptop to face Chen Ge. "This is a promo video for the futuristic theme park at Eastern Jiujiang. Take a look at this first before you comment."

Director Luo clicked on the button, and a large whale jumped out from the surface of the sea, splashing water everywhere. As the whale submerged back underwater, the video took the viewers to an underwater world following the whale. Many fish and water creatures filled up the screen. There was even a ghost ship travelling underwater.

The angle changed, and it felt like the video was taken on the deck of the ghost ship. Under the deep sea, the ship neared an underwater trench, and the ship narrowly escaped the explosion of an underwater volcano.

"This is one of the attractions provided by the park; it's called '20,000 Miles Underwater'." Director Luo probably had his own channel to acquire this video. "Tell me, what do you think?"

Chen Ge understood why Director Luo was looking so glum earlier. The video had given him plenty of awe and shock, so he could only imagine how exciting it would be if he was on the cruise himself.

"The competition is strong, but that doesn't mean we have no chance." Chen Ge sat down on the sofa. He would not give up not until the last minute.

"Keep on watching." Hearing his answer, Director Luo did not get mad. In fact, his expression softened even more. The remaining part of the video featured a futuristic city with skyscrapers, flying cars, and various robots keeping the whole city running. Visitors could be seen sitting inside a capsule-like vehicle as they explored the city.

“This is the other main feature of the park—Virtual City. The visitors will be given 3D glasses to experience life in the future inside this virtual city.” Director Luo closed the video and looked at Chen Ge. “Are you amazed? Actually, several years ago, I anticipated this day. A third-generation theme park that depends on actual rides will eventually be replaced by a larger, 4th generation theme park with a futuristic theme.”

“Director Luo, what we saw were promo videos. Current technology is not advanced enough to create the scenes we saw in the video,” Chen Ge countered. “Most video games show incredible effects in their promotional videos, but the finished product is often different from advertised.”

“They don’t need to replicate it a hundred percent. Even if the actual park is thirty percent as shown in the video, it will get enough visitors interested to visit it.” Director Luo walked to stand before the window. “New Century Park was built at the beginning of this century. Over ten years have passed since then. It has enjoyed its prime, but now it is reaching its end. Probably starting from next week, the whole of Jiujiang, perhaps even our own district, will be filled with advertisements for the futuristic park, and it’ll only get more difficult for us.”

“Director Luo, how long do we have until the park’s official opening?”

“Less than two months, to be precise only seven weeks.”

“It’s a bit rushed, but we still have a fighting chance. Perhaps there might be a miracle at the end.” Chen Ge stood up to leave. The promotional period for the futuristic park had given him plenty of pressure.

“Don’t hurry to leave. I have something to tell you, and I hope you’re ready.” Director Luo returned to the table and clicked open a report on the laptop.

Chen Ge stopped. “What is it?”

“I had Ol’ Xu came up with a report about the visitors who came to the park for the recent week. 35 percent were coming just for your Haunted House, and the number is still growing.” Director Luo did not hide anything from Chen Ge. “Now, your Haunted House is the feature of this park. This kinda reminds me of how it was when your parents first came to New Century Park.”

“It’s mainly because everyone is being too kind to me.”

“Don’t be too humble, this is the result of your hard work.” Director Luo looked at the data and analyzed, “Your Haunted House is the main reason the park even has visitors. Many people come to the park solely for your Haunted House, and I believe the number might be larger if not for the high admission price to come into the park. After all, they’re only here for the Haunted House and have no interest in the other attractions.”

Chen Ge listened quietly. He realized that Director Luo might want to tell him something very important.

“Compared to the futuristic park, we have zero competition power, so the only thing we can do is lower the admission price to attract more visitors. Initially, we planned to do this in two months’ time, but considering the rising popularity of your Haunted House, we decided to move it forward,” Director Luo announced. “The admission price to the park will be decreased, but the ticket price to your Haunted House has to be raised. How much the number will be moved, we’re discussing, and I’m just preparing you for this by telling you now.”

Chapter 215 - The Second Apparel

Chapter 215: The Second Apparel

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After exiting Director Luo's office, Chen Ge had a quick lunch before throwing himself back into work. He worked until 6:30 pm, and while most of the attractions at the park had already stopped working, the crowd outside of the Haunted House was still quite large.

Many visitors sat at the tent to communicate with each other. The few who survived Mu Yang High School became celebrities of sorts. The other visitors wanted to know what a two-star scenario was like, but they did not dare challenge it themselves.

...

Those who survived Mu Yang High School had pale faces dripping with cold sweat. However, they refused to admit that they were scared, so they exaggerated the fear factor of Mu Yang High School, making those who had not challenged it even more curious.

After a long discussion, the group of visitors joined together to form a massive team, specifically to challenge the Haunted House. They jotted down the detailed location of each discovered nametag and it had a professional flair to it. After closing for the day, Chen Ge went out and discovered what the visitors were doing. Looking at how excited they were, Chen Ge was glad.

"Hopefully they can find all sixteen nametags soon; the Third Sick Hall has been vacant for too long."

After cleaning the Haunted House, Chen Ge rushed to Boss Qian's workshop. Inside the underground workshop, Boss Qian had moved a chair to sit next to the front door. When Chen Ge arrived, he saw the man looking at the mannequins.

"Boss Qian, I'm here for the mannequins." Chen Ge patted Boss Qian on his shoulder and the latter jumped from shock.

"When did you arrive?"

“Just now. What’s wrong with you? You’re so distracted.” Chen Ge walked into the workshop to add the finishing touches to the mannequins. Boss Qian stood beside him, staring at the mannequins wordlessly.

Sensing Boss Qian’s strange behavior, Chen Ge asked probingly, “Is it because you ran into something strange today?”

Boss Qian’s brow raised like someone had exposed the deepest secret inside his heart. “How did you know?”

“You were quite obvious about it.”

“Since you’ve found out, then I have no reason to hide from you anymore.” Boss Qian sidled to Chen Ge and said mysteriously, “Actually, I have Yin Yang Vision, and I can see things that others can’t.”

“Yin Yang Vision?” Chen Ge turned to give Boss Qian a once-over. “Have you been watching too many scary movies?”

“It’s real. When I was young, a monk once told me that I came from a line of royalty, and I was even named Qian Guigen because my father believed the monk,” Boss Qian explained.

“If you came from royalty, why are you in such a state?”

“Perhaps my opportunity hasn’t arrived yet.” Boss Qian shook his head. “Anyway, that’s not important—the important thing is that I saw something unbelievable today.”

“Well, what is it?”

Boss Qian got close to Chen Ge and said in a whispered tone, “About four hours ago, this female mannequin winked at me.”

He even used his hand to cover half of his lips like he was afraid the mannequin might overhear him.

“That’s all? But why is it the female mannequin and not the male one?”

“Boss, the mannequin blinked! Can you focus on the main point of the problem?” Boss Qian gripped Chen Ge’s arm. “I’m not lying to you!”

“I didn’t say you were, did I?”

“But you didn’t react when I told you I have Yin Yang Vision and saw the mannequin blink!”

“I hear Yin Yang Vision is quite amazing. Does this mean you don’t need to wear 3D glasses when you got to watch 3D movies?”

Boss Qian’s mouth fell open. He thought long and hard about it before finally squeezing out, “No.”

“From how I see it, you’re probably too tired. Go back home and get a good rest. We still have plenty of chance to work together in the future.” Chen Ge used a white cloth to cover up the few mannequins and moved them out of the underground workshop.

“Was I really imagining things?” Boss Qian started to doubt himself.

“Don’t worry. Call me if anything happens.” Chen Ge patted his chest to reassure Boss Qian. Then, he called a taxi and prepared to leave.

The more Boss Qian thought about what Chen Ge had said, the more unsettled he felt. Normally, when one tries to console others, they would say, ‘Don’t worry, nothing will happen.’ So, why did Boss Chen tell me to call him if something happens?

After Chen Ge hauled the mannequins back into the staff breakroom, his expression turned serious. He placed the white cat around the mannequins. After several seconds, the white cat jumped onto the female mannequin’s body. Using its claws, it toyed with the mannequin’s hair like it was toying with a mouse.

“So there is really something.” Chen Ge had not expected this. The mannequin that was created using the madwoman as a basis turned out to be different than others. Chen Ge placed the cleaver on the female mannequin’s neck. “I’m your creator, so you’re my responsibility. Hopefully, you’ll listen to my orders and quietly move into your new home.”

Chen Ge’s pupils narrowed, and he could sense emotions like fear and anxiety from the mannequin. He thought about it before retracting the cleaver. “I’m just trying to scare you. In reality, I’m a real softie; I’ll never harm any of you on purpose.”

Chen Ge opened the door to the underground parking lot and deposited the mannequins inside the Third Sick Hall. “Welcome, this will be your new home in the future.”

He placed the four mannequins in different areas, and using his own ideas, he came up with several mechanisms. He only finished working when the clock struck twelve. Chen Ge returned to the staff breakroom. Lying in bed, fatigue washed over him. Chen Ge had not rested throughout the day.

Chen Ge pulled out the black phone to glance at the daily missions. When the tent was constructed outside the Haunted House, the message alert that he had finished the mission was received.

“Congratulations, Specter’s Favored, you have completed a normal mission. Terror requires a corresponding buffer period. Considerate service will leave a good impression on the visitors. You’ve earned the mission reward—The Uniform of the Faceless Nurse!

“Uniform of the Faceless Nurse (Prop Apparel): Jennie is the wife of Doctor Skull-cracker, Clark. That night, she saw her husband entering the sickroom with the iron mallet. She had no idea what her beloved husband was up to. It was not until the hammer came right at her face that she realized what was happening.”

A Skull-cracker doctor and Faceless Nurse, this is quite a scary story.

Chen Ge switched off the phone and turned to sleep. When he woke up early the next morning, he entered the dressing room, and inside the wooden box where he found Doctor Skull-cracker’s outfit last time, there was a blood-drenched nurse’s outfit.

This is too small for a male mannequin, but it should fit the female mannequin nicely.

Chen Ge took a tour around the Third Sick Hall. After he made sure that there were no hidden security threats, he opened the Haunted House’s gate to prepare for business.

Chapter 216 - I Have a Bad Feeling

Chapter 216: I Have a Bad Feeling

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Boss, you’re looking swell this morning.” When Xu Wan arrived, she saw Chen Ge arguing with the white cat, which was perched at the top of the tree. Instead of being surprised, she found this to be quite normal.

“Xiao Wan, go and put on your make-up first. Today, the people from Tian Teng Medical School will be visiting us for a cross-study. You’re my only presentable worker, so I’ll be counting on you today!”

...

“Okay.” Xu Wan pointed at the white cat munching on Chen Ge’s jacket. “Do you need my help?”

“It’s alright. I can handle a mere cat.”

Long story short, when Chen Ge woke up that morning, he had realized that there was still time for laundry, so he had collected the dirty clothes that needed washing. While he was not paying attention, the white cat had dragged the jacket in which the kittens had once been wrapped up in to the tree. “I’m not going to wash that jacket! Please come down!”

New Century Park opened at 9 am, and it was quite obvious that almost half of them headed directly to the Haunted House. “Today’s visitors are even more numerous than yesterday.”

Chen Ge’s Haunted House was by far the most popular attraction.

“Boss Chen!” There was a small group of familiar faces at the front of the crowd. When Chen Ge saw them, his face lit up. Seeing Chen Ge’s smile, the proprietor from Tian Teng Medical School shivered involuntarily. He lowered his head and coughed. “We came with a few friends from within the circle, and everyone wishes to visit your Haunted House.”

The proprietor winked at Chen Ge, and the inherent meaning was quite clear. They came with their fans and friends, so hopefully, Chen Ge could save them some face. “Friends from within the circle?”

Chen Ge looked behind them and discovered the weird atmosphere. Other than the few actors from Tian Teng Medical School, the rest of them did not seem like they were there to play.

“Let me make some introductions. This is Han Qiuming, our district’s best Haunted House designer. He has worked with many international teams and is the brain behind Tian Teng Medical School. When you visited us, Mr. Han was overseas.” The proprietor leaned sideways to show a tall, thin man with thick spectacles. The man’s attitude was cold.

“The short-haired girl next to Mr. Han is Ye Xiaoxin. She’s a famous online blogger with more than 600,000 followers. Her focus is reviewing Haunted Houses, and she has reviewed more than fifty Haunted Houses throughout the country.” The proprietor’s face froze. “When she heard about you, she reached out to me because she was curious and stated her wish to come along.”

“Nice to meet you.” The girl looked like she was only slightly over twenty and had very fair skin. She was about 1.74 meters tall, and her long pair of legs grabbed everyone’s attention. Her style was very unisexual. With cropped hair, she looked as handsome as a young man. This kind of girl going into a Haunted House alone would be entertaining, so it was no wonder she had a huge following online.

“Boss Qian, don’t underestimate her.” The proprietor seemed to have suffered at the hands of the young woman before. “She has a high tolerance for fear. When she first entered Tian Teng Medical School, she played some nasty prank on our workers. Unfortunately, she was very bad with directions and requested us to lead her out after she wandered about the Haunted House for a full forty minutes.”

“That’s wonderful. I admire people with big hearts.” Many female visitors said that they were not afraid before entering the Haunted House, like the initial Gao Ru Xue. Chen Ge smiled kindly on the surface, but internally, he wondered if his Haunted House had scared this type of female visitor before.

“Oh well. If you’re fine with it, then alright.” Tian Teng Medical School’s proprietor saw how unfazed Chen Ge was, so he waved and said, “Come over here, we should be preparing to enter the Haunted House now.”

Three more people departed from the crowd, two boys and one girl. The girl looked familiar to Chen Ge. He remembered seeing her in the line when he visited Tian Teng Medical School. She had a cute face, very girl next door.

She walked forward to greet Chen Ge. "Do you still remember me? We met each other in the elevator at Tian Teng Medical School. My name is Su Luoluo."

"Luoluo is a Haunted House aficionado, and most of us know her. The main reason she's here is because of a lucky draw. She was chosen to experience your Haunted House with us," the proprietor explained awkwardly. He could not bring himself to say the truth. His own workers had refused to come along, and since there were not enough people, he had to come up with this fan service, a "lucky draw".

"Is that so? Then she sure is 'lucky'." The sun hit on Chen Ge's face, and his smile was like a spring breeze, calming and soothing. Su Luoluo looked at him before lowering her face embarrassedly.

"You've met the other two. They're the workers from my Haunted House." The proprietor pointed at the two men who stood at the back. "The large one is Song An; he was the security ghost. The smaller one is Du Chaojin; he was the one hiding inside the steel box."

Since Song An was not 'attacked' by Chen Ge, he came forth and greeted Chen Ge politely. However, Du Chaojin reacted differently. He had been hiding inside the steel box to scare Chen Ge, but he had instead been shocked by the 'Wedding Dress' tune that suddenly appeared behind him. To make matters worse, Boss Chen moved to block the front of the box, so he could not escape even if he wanted to. He had screamed and yelled before being allowed to crawl out of the steel box with half of his soul gone.

Meeting his 'nemesis' again, his face turned paler and paler. Chen Ge walked to Du Chaojin and was surprised. The young man was at most eighteen, and he was incredibly thin and youthful. He was probably working at Tian Teng Medical School part-time. "Without the make-up, I barely recognized you. Who would have thought you're the patient who was yelling so desperately to get out from the box?"

Before Xiao Du exploded, the proprietor pulled Chen Ge aside swiftly. "Boss Chen, six of us are visiting at the same time, so we'll depend on your arrangement."

The proprietor stood facing away from the other guests and kept winking at Chen Ge. Chen Ge understood what he was getting at. “Currently, my Haunted House has four themed scenarios. Minghun, Murder by Midnight, Mu Yang High School, and the newly added Third Sick Hall. The difficulty for Minghun and Murder by Midnight is just normal, and Third Sick Hall is the most difficult, so I suggest you take the moderately difficult Mu Yang High School.”

“Alright, we’ll visit that one.” The proprietor nodded, but the people behind him had things to say.

“Boss Chen sure is being unkind.” Han Qiuming pushed on his thick glasses. “Before we arrived, we asked around, and people told us your Haunted House’s most difficult scenario. The one that no one has solved to this day is Mu Yang High School. This is already the most difficult challenge, and you are trying to pass it off as moderately difficult? Isn’t that a bit too much?”

“I’m being unkind?”

“Are you afraid that letting us clear the most difficult scenario will make you lose face? That’s why you made up this scenario that is supposedly more difficult?” Han Qiuming smirked. “Designing a large themed scenario takes two to three months. Mu Yang High School has only been open for less than a week; where did you find time to design a new set?”

His thin lips continued to rise. “But no matter, the result will be the same. The reason we’re here today is to clear all of your scenarios!”

“Qiuming, don’t be silly. Boss Chen is not that kind of person.” The proprietor pulled on Han Qiuming’s arm. A bad feeling surfaced in his heart. Chen Ge listened to the man quietly and did not retort. Uncle Xu had once said, as a theme park worker, he should try his best to satisfy the visitors’ need.

He thought about it, and the smile returned to his face. “In that case, how about we start with the Third Sick Hall? If you can still manage to walk after that, we’ll go to Mu Yang High School.”

Chapter 217 - Putting Visitors First

Chapter 217: Putting Visitors First

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Sure.” Han Qiuming patted the proprietor’s hand, telling him not to worry.

“Follow me.” Chen Ge did not give them the chance to reject. The proprietor stood where he was. “Qiuming, you’ve acted too rashly.”

...

“We’re all in the same business. You should be able to tell whether he was lying or not.” Han Qiuming shrugged. “If you are that afraid, I’ll walk at the front.”

“You weren’t there that day; you don’t know about the situation.” The proprietor felt a headache coming. “This Boss Chen is not a normal individual. He entered the Haunted House alone and managed to maintain his heartrate below 100.”

“That’s not all,” Song An added. “That day, Zhenzhen’s spirit seemed to appear again. All of us actors ran out of the Haunted House for our lives, but he remained inside the Haunted House alone.”

“What is so scary about that? You people are just too cowardly.” Han Qiuming pushed the glasses up his nose. “If it was me, I would have stayed inside the Haunted House as well.”

“I’m not done.” Song An shared a look with his boss. He continued when he got the latter’s permission. “After Boss Chen left, we inspected the Haunted House closely. Guess what we found.”

“Stop talking in riddles.”

“The female body that hung at the entrance was decimated. The head was rolled to the side, and its eyes looking in a fixed direction. Both of its legs were torn apart and were deposited far away from the body.” Just retelling it made Song An scared. “Would a normal visitor do something this crazy? I almost called the police then.”

The proprietor also walked over. "After Boss Chen, I've learned something. Sometimes, people are scarier than ghosts."

"That's right." Song An nodded in agreement. "We should leave as soon as possible when the visitation is over. Our two Haunted Houses should stay as apart as possible in the future."

"Is that necessary? You're all acting like such babies. We're already here, and it's too late to be afraid now." Ye Xiaoxin swiped on her phone and turned back when she realized that the people from Tian Teng Medical School had not moved. "You're both in the same business, so how come the difference is so big?"

The young woman was a straight-shooter, and she had a unique tone. It sounded quite raspy and sexy. She walked toward the Haunted House and updated her status online. 'Trying out a new local Haunted House today.'

"See, we're looked down upon now." Han Qiuming's gaze swept the pair of long legs and rushed after Ye Xiaoxin without looking back.

"He's acting too rashly." The proprietor was worried. "Song An, stick close to him when we're in there. Qiuming is talented, but pride might be his biggest downfall."

"Okay, I'll try my best." Song An sighed as they walked into the Haunted House. The curtain was like a wall separating the two worlds. There was barely any light inside the Haunted House, and it was much cooler inside.

"This place looks quite old." Song An looked around. "Who would have thought Jiujiang still had a localized Haunted House of this scale?"

"The Haunted House was built by both my parents and the park five or six years ago. At the time, it was the park's main feature." Chen Ge pulled out the disclaimer notices to give his guests. "Sign these first before we move forward."

"Are you serious?" Han Qiuming looked at the long list of claims on the form before tossing it back on the table. "Save the paper. We're both operators of Haunted Houses. We know what you're getting into, so there's no need to make this so official."

The rest of Tian Teng Medical School did not move. They thought this was a trick by Chen Ge. The form itself was not useful, so the main purpose was its psychological pressure. On the other hand, Ye Xiaoxin and Su Luoluo signed the papers readily.

“I think there might be some misunderstanding. My papers are authorized by the government; they’re stamped and sealed.” Chen Ge placed the disclaimers beside the group. “There’s no entry if you don’t sign the form; that’s the rule.”

“Understood, understood.” The proprietor signed his name—Guo Miao. The rest of them followed suit. Since everyone was doing it, Han Qiuming had to follow, but that did not stop him from grumbling. “Tsk, so much trouble to visit a Haunted House. Fine, let me see whether it’s worth it or not.”

Chen Ge ignored Han Qiuming as he put their forms aside. “The Third Sick Hall is a newly built scenario, so many places are not yet completed. If you come across things that you cannot handle, remember to find the security spots to call for help.”

“Don’t waste your breath. We’re more familiar with the rules of a Haunted House than you are; we’ve tried more than twenty ways of introducing changes to the game for the past few years, so if anything, we’re more professional than you are.” Han Qiuming had never stopped harassing Chen Ge.

“In that case, I’ll keep the explanation brief.” Chen Ge did not get angry and maintained a good attitude. “The scenario that you’re visiting is called the Third Sick Hall. This is a story where the patients took up the role of the doctors, and logic is twisted. The whole scenario is not entirely fake, and I have to warn you that some of the patients are still at large.”

“Based on a real story? Isn’t that a direct copy of our idea?” Han Qiuming continued to lambast Chen Ge as if he could not see the warning in the eyes of the proprietor. “I’ve visited more than a hundred Haunted House of various sizes both locally and overseas. There are Haunted Houses in western countries that are built directly on top of abandoned prisons. Compared to those, yours is still too green.”

The proprietor finally rushed forward to say something. “Boss Chen, Qiuming is a bit direct with his words; he didn’t mean anything by them.”

“It’s alright. In this business, I always put the customers first, and I will listen to all suggestions and ideas seriously.”

Ye Xiaoxin took out a notebook from her pocket and wrote, “Great staff, + 5 points.”

“You are...?” Chen Ge turned toward the young lady.

“I’m marking your Haunted House. Full score is 100. If you score above 80, I’ll help you promote it on my blog.” Ye Xiaoxin pocketed her notebook. “I know Haunted Houses don’t allow phones, so I use this notebook to record everything I see.”

“Very professional.” Chen Ge swiped the sweat in his palm. “The Third Sick Hall is an open scenario, so feel free to explore the place. As long as you can bring out the tape recorder that I took from your Haunted House in twenty minutes, you will have cleared the scenario.”

With kindness and sincerity, Chen Ge repeated, “Don’t let your guard down. You have to retrieve the tape recorder from the Third Sick Hall in twenty minutes to win.”

Chapter 218 - Different From What I Thought

Chapter 218: Different From What I Thought

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“So simple?” Han Qiuming and the few workers from Tian Teng Medical School were in disbelief. The tape recorder was quite huge, and it should not have been too hard to find.

“Boss Chen, you’re not kidding, right?” Ye Xiaoxin pulled out her notes. She had reviewed many Haunted Houses, and this was the first time she had come across such an interesting challenge.

...

“The tape recorder is from Tian Teng Medical School anyway, so I shall make use of this chance to return it to you.” Chen Ge locked the forms inside the cupboard. He had a feeling that he might need them soon.

“You’ve given up so early?” Han Qiuming seemed to be rather disappointed.

“This way please.” Chen Ge ignored him and led the group to the entrance of Night of the Living Dead.

“These props are from the beginning of the century, and it looks like they haven’t been maintained in the past month. The mannequins look like they were made by a child’s hand, and the props are allowed to stack over themselves in a giant mess. There’s no semblance of a plot. You want us to experience this kind of scenario? Are you trying to humiliate us?” Han Qiuming said wickedly. But at least the man was talented; he managed to pinpoint the issue with Night of the Living Dead with one glance.

Even Ye Xiaoxin and Su Luoluo felt the scenario was quite underwhelming. Listing the weaknesses of the scenario, Han Qiuming made to enter the scenario, but he was stopped by the proprietor, Guo Miao.

“Ol’ Gao, why are you stopping me?” The man shook his head. His heart was racing, and he had a bad feeling. “The atmosphere inside this place is very weird.”

“What is so weird about it?”

“I can’t really tell, but it is different from a normal room.” Gao Miao sucked in a cold breath. “When I went to inspect the hospital where Xu Zhenzhen had her incident, this was the feeling that I felt. My heart was all flustered even though it was broad daylight, and I ran out after a five-minute tour.”

“Don’t scare yourself for no reason.” Han Qiuming flung the man’s arm away and walked into Night of the Living Dead.

“I abandoned this scenario quite some time ago. Due to certain reasons, I had not had the time to remove it.” Chen Ge looked at Han Qiuming, and he was reminded of Fei Youliang. He had a feeling that Fei Youliang would not be so alone at the hospital after Mr. Han finished his tour.

Pulling up the wooden board, a draft of cold air surged forward. Chen Ge’s gaze scanned the group of visitors and pointed down the darkened stairs. “The Third Sick Hall you’re visiting is down there.”

“Underground?”

The group of visitors crowded around the entrance. Looking at the staircase that seemed to lead into endless darkness, a curious feeling formed in their hearts. Unfinished test papers settled on the charred steps, and a faded stench filled the air. It was not obvious, but it was enough to implant some horrible ideas in the visitors’ minds.

“The left side leads to Mu Yang High School, and the right side leads to Third Sick Hall. The two scenarios are connected, so make sure you go in the right direction.” Chen Ge gave a few final warnings. “The two scenarios are incredibly big, so I advise you all stick together.”

After explaining everything, Chen Ge took out his phone. “Find the recorder in twenty minutes and bring it out. The game will be over.”

The group of visitors did not move. It was unknown who pushed Han Qiuming from the back, but he staggered forward.

“You don’t have the time to waste.” With Chen Ge’s urging, the visitors took the stairs down into the basement. When the last of them disappeared into the darkness, Chen Ge picked up the wooden boards and waved at them. “Have fun.”

After closing the boards, Chen Ge went back to the main control room, but he faced a difficulty when choosing the background music. He rarely used Wedding Dress and Black Friday for his normal visitors. At most, he mixed them in between normal music as a hidden surprise of sort.

“Han Qiuming is a Haunted House designer. He managed to pinpoint the various weaknesses with Night of the Living Dead with just one glance, so he is more than just a mouth. The workers from Tian Teng Medical School are used to the atmosphere inside the Haunted House, so normal scares won’t work on them. Ye Xiaoxin is a professional Haunted House reviewer, so she naturally has a strong heart. Only Su Luoluo is the innocent victim who has been dragged into the mud by the proprietor.”

Since the visitors were all professionals, being too nice would be a sign of disrespect. His hand on the mouse, Chen Ge teetered between the two music tracks. “Which is more suitable? Oh well, only a child will pick one. Since we’re all adults, there’s no need to hesitate.”

He entered both songs into queue before going to the dressing room to put on Doctor Skull-Cracker’s outfit and some make-up. “They won’t be able to tell that the face under the skin mask is scarier, right?”

Chen Ge packed everything and entered the Third Sick Hall with the faceless nurse’s uniform.

...

The wooden boards closed as if sealing the hope and warmth of the outside world. The youngest, Du Chaojin, shuddered. He had only been in the place for ten seconds, but he had already started to regret. He should not have agreed so easily that day. I should have followed the examples of Sister Rui and Brother Lin—I’m still too young for this.

A cold draft of mysterious origin blew past them, causing the empty test papers on the left corridor to flutter. Shadows seemed to move in the classrooms on both sides like something was watching them. The place was dark, and the group stood where they were for a full minute. In the end, it was Gao Miao who stepped forward. “Mr. Han, you’re the most experienced among us, so we’ll be relying on you today.”

Han Qiuming pushed on his glasses. He had not stopped observing since entering the Haunted House. Based on atmosphere and recreation of the scene alone, Western Jiujiang’s House of Horrors was already better than most of the Haunted Houses that he had visited. “No wonder he dares call this the scariest Haunted House in Jiujiang, interesting.”

They stood in the corridor and looked down it. At the end of the left corridor were plenty of mannequins. They were either lying on the ground or standing up. Looking at the mannequins, fear gripped the visitors’ hearts. It was as if the mannequins were also looking at them.

“Boss, didn’t that mannequin’s head move?” Song An grabbed Gou Miao’s arm.

“It didn’t.” Gou Miao’s face was quite pale as well. “But I have a feeling that female student in the middle just smiled at me.”

“I saw that, too. Wait, did she just move? Why is she suddenly closer to us?”

“Should be some illusion...”

“Are you two done?” Han Qiuming walked ahead. “The scarier the scenario on the left side, the better it is for us. You all should be thanking me.”

“Why is that?” Xiao Du hid at the back, considering just calling it quit.

“That Boss Chen was definitely trying to trick us! The scenario on the left side is his Haunted House’s main feature, so it must be scariest! Thankfully, I saw through his ploy.” Han Qiuming walked down the right corridor. It was the door to a hospital building. His hands gripped the handle. “If not for me, we would be experiencing the left scenario now.”

“He has a point,” Xiao Du concurred meekly.

Song An also nodded. “The left scenario looks creepy. Thankfully, we selected the right one. Mr. Han, nice job.”

All of them moved to the right corridor. Only Gao Miao did not feel so good. “Boss Chen didn’t give me the impression that he was a liar.”

“We’ll know when we see what is behind this door.”

The group stood in the middle of the corridor, and Han Qiuming pulled the door to the Third Sick Hall open. The door creaked on its rusted hinges, and the first thing that hit them was the pungent smell of antibiotics. The old walls were left with scratch marks and blood notes. There were barely discernible screams that came from the depths of the hospital.

The most shocking thing was, along this dark corridor, innumerable mannequins wrapped in mattresses were left on the path. It looked like an open grave.

“This...”

Their limbs went numb, and a chill rose from the bottom of their feet to the top of their heads.

Chapter 219 - Like the Real Thing

Chapter 219: Like the Real Thing

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Teacher Han, are you sure the right scenario is less scary than the left one?” Xiao Du held onto the door handle. He found himself missing Tian Teng Medical School and the steel box that he could hide himself in.

“Why are you acting all panicked like this? The Chen person has said that the Third Sick Hall isn’t fully complete yet, so what is so scary about an unfinished scenario?” Han Qiuming was the first to recover from the initial shock. He grabbed Guo Miao’s arm. “Ol’ Guo, both of us will go first.”

...

“What has it got to do with me?” Guo Miao shook him off. “Didn’t you say you’re going to go alone?”

“I’m afraid you might run in the middle of the experience.” Han Qiuming’s face was as dark as the abyss, but due to the lack of light, no one could see it. “Fine, I’ll take the front line. The rest of you follow closely, don’t get left behind.”

Han Qiuming pushed the door completely open, and pieces of rust fell to the ground. The group of them walked into the Third Sick Hall. There was an indescribable stench in the air, and abandoned pills as well as patients’ records littered the ground. Han Qiuming walked forward alone, and the sights gradually unraveled his confidence.

Words of madness filled the wall, and combined with words of desperation, it made the skin of those who read them crawl. These were not things that a person with a sane mind could come up with. To make matters worse, as he walked deeper into the hospital, the bloody letters on the walls did not decrease but only became more frequent. They overlapped with each other, and none of them were repeated!

“How did the man come up with these sentences? Is he really a madman?” He squatted down and yanked off a corner of the mattress.

It revealed a doll that was made from pillows and bed covers. It was a roughly-made doll, but Han Qiuming found it hard to pull his gaze away.

“You can even use this method to create the props inside the Haunted House? I’ve indeed learned something new today.” Looking at the painted face on the doll, Han Qiuming knew that it was probably scrawled on by Chen Ge, but he was still greatly unsettled by it.

“Look here!” Su Luoluo stood at the door that led into the first sickroom. The group followed the direction of her finger. The doorknob was covered in blood streaks and scratch marks made from fingers.

She compared them to her own fingers. “They look real, unlike those that were gauged from tools.”

“You’re telling me the designer used his hands to leave those marks on the door?” Han Qiuming closed the mattress to cover the doll. “Be careful not to touch anything in here. You might trigger the trap. Especially these mattresses, I believe the actors are probably hiding in one of them.”

He continued to move forward. The rest of them did not follow except the short-haired woman who entered the first sickroom alone. The windows were sealed, and a thick cement wall could be seen through the wooden slits. It created a sense of despair, like they were being trapped inside a prison cell.

Ye Xiaoxin dragged her finger carefully over the bed frame and discovered digging marks on the sides of the frame. “Come help me pull the bed up.”

“We only have twenty minutes to clear this scenario, can you guys pick up your speed? Just ignore those insignificant details.” Han Qiuming stood outside the room alone. Xiao Du and Song An entered the room to help Ye Xiaoxin. What they saw when they lifted the bed was out of their expectation.

There was a long, dark-red scratch mark down the side of the bed. There were even broken fingernails mixed into the grooves. It went to show the amount of pain the patient was in.

“Fake blood should have a faded red color when it dries up. This kind of dark red stain...” Song An pulled his neck back and whispered to Ye Xiaoxin beside him, “Looks like human blood.”

“You sure this is human blood and not fake blood?” Ye Xiaoxin looked at the wooden frame and bent close to sniff at the groove. “There’s no smell.”

Song An was shocked by the girl’s courageous move. He laughed awkwardly. “It could be pig’s or cow’s blood. To achieve authenticity, sometimes Haunted Houses use animal blood in place of fake blood.”

“It’s normal for Haunted Houses to have props with blood marks, especially a local Haunted House like Boss Chen’s. Most of his props should be directly purchased from abandoned hospitals.” Gou Miao had probably done something like that before. “Either way, we shouldn’t let our guard down. There is blood on the bed frame, so that means that something very bad happened at this mental hospital before.”

Ye Xiaoxin nodded before asking, “How do you explain the bloody scratch marks on the door knob? You’re telling me the door knob was also taken from the mental hospital?”

Guo Miao was stumped.

“You also can’t answer that, right?” Ye Xiaoxin took out her notebook. “I’ve visited many Haunted Houses before, and most of them only paid attention to the details around the scare points, but this Haunted House has an authenticity to every single detail. It is as if the boss has some kind of OCD.”

“I also discovered something very scary.” Su Luoluo turned to look at the ceiling. The sentences written with blood seemed to move before her eyes. “The handwriting for each sentence is completely different. They don’t look like they’re written by the same person.”

“Different handwriting?” Guo Miao looked around closely, and his face turned paler. “You’re right. How did Boss Chen manage to do this?”

Han Qiuming had moved forward, but he had turned back when he realized that the rest of his group was not following. He leaned against the door knob and boasted, “Didn’t he say his Haunted House has been in operation for several years already? Give me five years, and I’ll definitely be able to come up with something better than this.”

“Will you spend a whole five years on a single scenario?” Guo Miao felt rather annoyed. He had already arranged everything, but it was ruined by Han Qiuming. “Boss Chen probably wasn’t lying. This scenario is the scariest one he has at his Haunted House. We had better locate that tape recorder as soon as possible; I don't think we should stay here any longer."

Ever since entering the Third Sick Hall, he had felt uncomfortable. When he saw the interior decoration, that feeling had only intensified. The red marks on the door knob, the grooves on the side of the bed frame, the bloody sentences on the walls and ceiling—everything unsettled him. The memories buried within him were awakened, and it brought him back to the hospital where Xu Zhenzhen committed suicide.

"Ol' Guo, I didn't know you're such a scaredy cat. Yes, I admit that his Haunted House is amazing with his attention to detail, but this only proves that he is good at mimicking." Han Qiuming's eyes surreptitiously swept Ye Xiaoxin before he pushed on his glasses. "When I visited a large Haunted House overseas, the worker there told me that their props were all taken from an actual prison. Compared to that, this Haunted House is barely passable."

"You'll regret that overconfidence soon enough."

"I'm just telling the truth." Han Qiuming waved at them. "We only have sixteen minutes left, so let's get moving."

The few of them moved down the corridor, and only Xiao Du was left at the entrance to the Third Sick Hall. Looking at the letters on the wall, his heartrate started to rise. As he stared at them, the random letters seemed to move together to form a word.

Death.

"This place is too cursed; I'll just stay by the door."

He walked out of the Third Sick Hall and turned to look down the corridor that led to Mu Yang High School. He realized with a shock that the mannequins that were supposed to be at the end of the corridor had moved to a spot that was very close to them.

"What's going on?"

Xiao Du staggered back. He did not dare stay there alone, so he hurried to catch up to the others.

After he left, a mannequin with a nametag pinned to its lapel silently adjusted its head.

Chapter 220 - Shadowing

Chapter 220: Shadowing

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Boss! Mr. Han! Look behind us!” Xiao Du ran to the rest of the group. He gasped for air, and his face was white.

“Behind us?” Guo Miao looked behind them, and the long corridor did not have anything weird in it.

...

“The mannequins! The mannequins are chasing after us!” The scream from Xiao Du caused the group, which had walked several meters into the Third Sick Hall, to stop moving again.

“Are you sure you’re not mistaken?” Song An asked Xiao Du softly as his body moved closer to Guo Miao.

“I’m sure! They really did move!” Xiao Du gasped for air. “Come talk a look for yourself. Those mannequins were at the end of the left corridor earlier, right? But now, they’ve reached the point between the two scenarios!”

“Don’t fret,” Han Chu said calmly. “I saw something like this in a Japanese Haunted House three years ago. It was a doll-themed Haunted House. The smaller dolls were equipped internally with machines, so they could move and change facial expression. Only four fifths of the larger dolls were props; the rest were played by actual actors.”

“So, these mannequins are real people?” Mr. Han’s explanation confused Xiao Du, and he felt even more unsettled.

“I noticed the mannequins when we first came in.” Han Chu crossed his arms before his chest. “The mannequins are life-size, as if they were meant to model actual humans. You have to understand something, even for Tian Teng Medical School, there are natural deficiencies to the mannequins that are used at normal props. This is because manufacturing a custom-made mannequin requires too much money. One of them costs about 30,000 and requires a master dollmaker. This is not something a normal Haunted House can afford.”

“Then, why would this Haunted House invest so much money into making these mannequins?” Ye Xiaoxin kept writing on her notebook, but no one knew what she was writing.

“Very simple. This goes to show that these mannequins are an important scare point for his Haunted House!” Han Qiuming held his chin as his gaze fell on Ye Xiaoxin. “Mixing real actors among mannequins could have startling effects—just look at what happen to Xiao Du. It looked like the mannequins had moved on their own, but it was actually the live actors who moved. If we hide in the dark to observe, perhaps we might even see them in motion.”

Song An nodded. “Mr. Han has a point. We’ve used similar tactic in Tian Teng Medical School last year, but the mannequins were too fake. The visitors identified the real actors immediately.”

“That has to be it.” Color returned to Xiao Du’s face. “I was really spooked just now. Those mannequins look so real that I though they knew how to move on their own.”

“You know that’s impossible.” Mr. Han said confidently; he had logic on his side. “If not for the time limit, I would hide in this room to record the whole scene of the Haunted House’s actors moving the mannequins for you to see.”

“Alright, let’s move on. We still need to find the tape recorder.” Guo Miao had a feeling that things were not as simple as that, but he had no basis to counter Mr. Han.

“Ol’ Guo, we have to pay attention to two things with regard to that tape recorder.” Mr. Han might have said that he was not afraid, but it was clear that he was extremely cautious. “That Chen fella told us that our tape recorder is hidden inside this place, so he must have put down some traps around the tape recorder.”

“I know that.” Guo Miao moved forward. The mattresses made a mess of the place. Stepping on them had a curious feeling like he was stepping on bundled up hair.

“That is only the first point. I have to tell you another thing. Don’t you think that the game rules that he laid down are also very weird?”

“How so?”

“Finding the tape recorder won’t clear the scenario. We have to bring it out of the Third Sick Hall to end the game.”

“But that recorder belongs to us. Isn’t it normal for us to take it out with us?” Xiao Du chimed in.

“You have underestimated this boss’ cunning.” Han Qiuming took out a cloth to wipe his glasses. The glasses were very thick. “The recorder itself is probably tied to some mechanism inside this place. In other words, when we find the recorder, the scary stuff will start to appear inside this scenario. Until then, we should be safe.”

“That sounds logical, but no one can guarantee that.” Song An was the largest of them all, but he was quite a coward.

“In any case, I personally don’t think we have any reason to be scared. Familiarizing ourselves with the environment and memorizing the route should be the most important. After all, this scenario is open-ended. The environment will be complicated. Only by retracing our steps will we be able to leave as quickly as possible when the recorder is found and the actors start to move in earnest.” Han Qiuming finished his analysis. It was unclear whether the others bought his words or not, but he believed himself.

“You have a point. Haunted Houses still need to rely on actual actors to scare us. As long as we’re collected and don’t scare ourselves, we should be fine.” Ye Xiaoxin shoved the notebook into her pocket.

Han Qiuming was validated after getting the approval from Ye Xiaoxin. The fear in his heart slowly dissipated. He was about to increase his pace to walk beside Ye Xiaoxin when someone pulled on his shirt. He turned to look, and this moment-wrecker was none other than the witless and youngest Du Chaojin.

“Mr. Han, look.” They turned to look outside the Third Sick Hall. In the middle of the entrance that led to the Third Sick Hall stood a female mannequin in a school uniform. Her head was lowered, and her limbs were slightly twisted.

While they were busy with their analysis, the mannequins had moved closer to them.

“This is nothing out of the ordinary, the most basic of psychological tricks. The Chen fella is probably hiding inside the control room to give the actors their commands. He wanted to use this group of advancing mannequins to pressure us, to make us lose our footing.”

Han Qiuming tried to rationalize everything. “At the end of the day, this is all fake. A few years ago, I used something similar. Don’t worry, these mannequins won’t dare to come to within five meters of us. Five meters is a safe distance. Once the mannequins got too close, the actors will have a hard time controlling them. I can use my decade of experience to promise you that.”

Then he ignored Xiao Du and ran to walk beside Ye Xiaoxin. He started to judge the various decorations inside the Haunted House.

“This guy.” Guo Miao sighed. He told his group, “All of you stick close to me. Don’t touch anything in the corridor, and don’t enter a sickroom alone.”

“Okay.” Xiao Du walked at the back of the group, but he did not realize that when he moved, the mannequins outside the door also started to move.

Chapter 221 - The Wrong Scenario

Chapter 221: The Wrong Scenario

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“I think we’re almost near the end. No wonder Boss Chen calls this place a Third Sick Hall—stay here long enough, and those without sickness will also go crazy.”

“I wonder how the workers manage to survive. Working at such realistic location every day, looking at this insane writing on the wall, Boss Chen must have provided them with some counselling.”

...

“Now that you mention it, we’ve been here for about ten minutes already, but we have not seen one Haunted House worker.”

“Stop chattering. We’re rounding the corner. Be careful of things jumping out at you.”

The few visitors took seven minutes to reach the end of the corridor. They kept their backs against the wall, and when they looked down the corner, they were stunned. “More corridor?”

The setting was almost the same: old walls, cracked floor, endless blood writings, and the dolls wrapped up in mattresses. The only difference was that the colors on the wall had deepened, and looking through the cracks, things like blood vessels could be seen.

“A background loop?” Standing at the corner, Han Qiuming frowned and uttered a term that was unfamiliar to outsiders.

“Isn’t this a repetition of the earlier set?” Luoluo and Xiao Du heard the term for the first time.

“It looks the same, but every repetition, there are some changes that have escaped your attention. When you’re at your most vulnerable, the scary stuff will appear all at once.”

Han Qiuming confidently said, “I’ve seen this before at an overseas Haunted House called Recurring Nightmare. The whole scenario was made up of nine rooms, and each room was scarier than the one before it. Most importantly, the nine rooms could be freely moved, so you had no idea what kind of stuff had been added to the rooms after you opened the door.”

“You’re talking about individual rooms that are easier to manipulate, but here, the whole corridor is decorated the same way.” Gou Miao touched the wall and said softly, “Everything here has an authentic touch to it; it’s like Boss Chen has moved a real mental hospital into the Haunted House. I don’t know why I think that, but I have a feeling I’m right.”

“Ol’ Guo, you’re being too sensitive.” Han Qiuming chuckled. “Ever since you came back from the hospital where Xu Zhenzhen committed suicide, you have turned into a coward. As the operators of Haunted Houses, we live on fear and terror. If you’re so afraid, how do you expect to scare others?”

“Qiuming, it’s something I also did not believe in initially, but after some more interactions, you’ll see what I mean.”

“From how I see it, you’re regressing.” Han Qiuming and Guo Miao faced each other. “For real though, you managed to take it even though your place was taken down on the first day of work? Do you know how much effort and time we have spent to prepare for our opening day? Yet it was all ruined by that Chen fella. Even then, you still think he is a good man? You plan to have a truce with him? Have you lost your mind, or have you gone senile?”

“Qiuming, this is not boss’ fault.” Song An’s voice was low. “If anything, it is your fault for suddenly changing the advertisement. You had to add that we’re the scariest Haunted House in Jiujiang, slandering other people’s names.”

“So, you mean the fault lies with me?” Han Qiuming’s face dropped. “Tian Teng Medical School is the latest enclosed Haunted House that I personally designed, combining my years of experience. It even has a hidden plot. I admit that his Haunted House has some points that we can learn from, but compared to my design, his is still too juvenile.”

“I’m not going to argue with you. You were not there that day, so you don’t understand what happened.”

“If I was there, things would have gone differently. As Haunted House workers, you were scared out of the Haunted House by a visitor. You’ve been made the laughingstock within the industry.” Han

Qiuming's single sentence had insulted all the workers there, but he did not seem to mind it. "Looks like we'll need to increase your training after we return."

"Qiuming, we can talk about this later; there are other visitors with us." Guo Miao brushed Han Qiuming's needling words off.

"Yes, when we return, I'll need to have a chat with our sponsor. I feel like you've become too old to be the proprietor of this business anymore."

In his anger, Song An roared at Han Qiuming, "Han Qiuming! Boss has been nothing but kind to you. Don't cross the line!"

"I've crossed the line? Every single decision I've made is for the benefit of the Haunted House. Tian Teng Medical School has been redesigned four times already, and I'm the one responsible for three of them." Han Qiuming chuckled. "You all know how good they were."

"Incorporating a real case into the Haunted House and using a dead victim's name as a prop to send us to court, that's the good effect you're talking about?"

"Sorry, but I'm only interested in the result. Based on the data, after including the dead Xu Zhenzhen, the ticket sales increased by five times." Han Qiuming shrugged. After all, he had the right to be proud. "It was me who saved your career. Plus, please remember that I'm the designer that your sponsor begged to come help you, and you're just a worker hired by the Haunted House."

"Using actual cases as material and using a dead person's name to attract attention. When you were designing it, did you consider the feelings of the victim's families?"

"Now you're turning on me? Why didn't any of you say anything in the beginning?"

"Stop arguing!" Guo Miao pulled Han Qiuming and Song An away from each other, "We can resolve this when we return. Boss Chen cleared our Haunted House alone, and if we fail to clear his with so many of us, that will be a real source of shame."

Han Qiuming and Song An both harbored a stomach full of fire, and it helped to overwhelm the fear in their hearts.

"Who has the time to argue with person like this?" Song An strode forward alone.

“Ol’ Song, don’t walk away on yourself!” Afraid that something bad might happen to Song An, Guo Miao chased after the man, moving a distance away from the rest of the group.

“There are indeed all sorts of people in the world.” Han Qiuming walked easily at the back. When he first entered the Third Sick Hall, he had been shocked by what he saw, but now, he felt much better.

He turned back to look. “The three of you stick close to me. We have ten minutes left, but don’t worry, I’ll clear this scenario. Honestly, this Haunted House might be something within the country, but compared to those foreign Haunted Houses, it’s nothing.”

“Mr. Han, I understand what you’re trying to say, but there’s something that I want to confirm with you.” Xiao Du was at the back of the group. His face was blanched. He had not paid attention to the argument between Han Qiuming and Song An because his attention had been occupied elsewhere.

“What is it?”

“Didn’t you say the mannequins wouldn’t get within five meters of us?”

Xiao Du pointed behind them, and those incredibly real mannequins had all entered the Third Sick Hall!

The leading mannequin was the female student with a nametag. Her head was lowered, and she stood only three to four meters away from Xiao Du.

Chapter 222 - Don't Be Afraid!

Chapter 222: Don't Be Afraid!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Why are they following us?” Xiao Du’s voice was shaking. He was closest to the group of mannequins.

“Did you hear any footsteps?” Han Qiuming moved his eyes away to look at Xiao Du. “There should be more than one worker mixed in the mannequins since they need to move so many mannequins.”

...

“There was no sound. It was as if they suddenly appeared behind us, I swear.” Xiao Du was afraid that Han Qiuming would not believe him.

“No sound?” Han Qiuming’s brows were creased together. He stared at the mannequins for a while before suddenly laughing. “I know the reason!”

He strode toward the mannequins like he had really discovered their secret. “The Third Sick Hall is filled with mattresses. The workers will not create any footsteps if they step on them. The designer of this Haunted House has an impressive mind. He purposely hid the dolls underneath these mattresses to distract our attention, making us forget their actual purpose.”

Han Qiuming stopped beside the female mannequin with his lips turned up. “Using the mattresses to hide the sound of footsteps, that is a great idea, but your lousy performance gave it away. You have to maintain a safe distance if you aim to psychologically pressure the visitors. Making the visitors aware of your presence but not close enough for them to touch you is the best method.”

Xiao Du did not quite get what Han Qiuming was saying. “Why is that the best? For me, this kind of encroaching assault is scarier.”

“Pushing it too far will cause the opposite reaction in the visitors, and they might do something like this.” Han Qiuming pulled the mannequin’s head off and shoved her to the ground. Facing the group of mannequins in the darkened corridor, he shouted, “Come out on your own. Don't make me go in to catch you—that will just be awkward for everyone.”

“Who are you talking to?” Xiao Du found him unable to catch up.

“The workers inside this Third Sick Hall. They are hiding among the mannequins with special make-up!” Han Qiuming pushed on his glasses. His face stated that he had everything under his control.

However, ten seconds later, the mannequins in the corridor still had not moved. The shadows stood unmoving in the dark corridor, and it was weirdly scary with how still they were.

“Mr. Han, should we just move on? It's fine if their workers don't want to come out,” Xiao Du advised, but Han Qiuming felt like this was an affront to his face. “If they're exposed, then this is no longer their choice. It's their bad luck that I'm in such a foul mood today. That Chen fella has ruined our Haunted House, hasn't he? Today, I'll repay his kindness and wreak havoc inside his!”

Han Qiuming strode inside the group of mannequins. He pulled off the heads of the mannequins one after another and kicked them to the ground. “Fine, continue to hide. Let me see how long you can hold on!”

The rolling heads made the situation worse.

“Please come back, Mr. Han!” Looking at the mannequin heads that rolled across the floor, Xiao Du's heart raced.

“What are you in such a hurry for?” Han Qiuming yanked out five heads. “This worker sure is loyal. He'd rather watch the props get destroyed than come out to surrender.”

“Boss and Brother Song have wandered far away, we need to catch up!” Xiao Du urged. More heads rolled on the floor, and his scalp went numb because their facial expressions seemed to be changing—they were smiling!

“Don't fret!” When Han Qiuming pulled off the eighth mannequin head, he also realized that something was wrong. “The mannequins are installed with metallic joints and support. Even an adult would have a hard time moving four of them at the same time. Could the workers be hiding at the back of the group? That has to be it. Even with special make-up, the workers will be exposed if they wander too close, so they have to be hiding at the back!”

Han Qiuming convinced himself. He charged forward, knocking the mannequins all over the place.

“Mr. Han!” Watching as Han Qiuming rushed into the group of mannequins alone, Xiao Du was worried. With a grit of his teeth, he ran after the man. “Let’s go! It’s not nice for us to ruin so many expensive props.”

“He dares wreck our Haunted House, so he should be prepared to face such consequences.” Han Qiuming strode toward the last four mannequins, which were lying on the ground. “You are making me do this to you.”

His hands tightened around the fourth mannequin. With a light yank, the mannequin’s head came off easily.

“It’s also a mannequin?” Xiao Du’s voice was shaking. “Mr. Han, are you sure the mannequins weren’t moving on their own? When I came over, I swear the expressions on the mannequins’ faces changed.”

“What do you know? Stop talking!” Han Qiuming pulled off another two mannequins’ heads. His hands started to tremble when they tightened around the last mannequin’s head. With a strong pull, a face that was crying got separated from its body.

“What the f*ck?”

Holding the head, Han Qiuming stared at Xiao Du.

“They’re all mannequins?” Xiao Du’s voice was shaking. Standing in the grave of the mannequins, he did not even dare move.

“Don’t be afraid! The workers probably ran to hide inside the sickrooms on both sides when they saw me coming.” Han Qiuming dropped the head to the ground and rushed to inspect the sickrooms. “Come out now! I’ve seen you!”

He searched several rooms, but there was no reward. Han Qiuming returned with a stern face.

“Mr. Han, do you think this place is really haunted? That Boss Chen is a madman; he is someone who will do anything. I was trapped inside a steel box by the man before.” Xiao Du was covered in chills and started to relay his nightmarish experience.

“Enough, that’s not something to boast about.” Han Qiuming waved to interrupt Xiao Du. He was calculating the distance between the corridor and the entrance to Third Sick Hall. "The workers wouldn't have time to run out the entrance after they moved the mannequins. Yes, I know it now. They should have left through a workers' pathway. There is probably some hidden passageway underneath one of these mattresses."

No matter what he said, Xiao Du would not believe him anymore. Now he just wanted to get as far away from Mr. Han as possible. Xiao Du had a feeling that staying close to the man would not lead to anything good.

"If you want to go look for that, you have fun. I'm leaving." Xiao Du turned and ran.

"With such cowardice, no wonder he was spooked by the visitor." However, the confidence in Han Qiuming's voice had disappeared. He walked back to the Third Sick Hall, and a headless mannequin's finger pulled on his pants. He promptly kicked the mannequin away. "Who are you trying to scare?"

After turning the corner, Han Qiuming heard the sound of stuff rolling on the floor coming from behind him. "That is so fake."

However, he did not turn back around the corner to look but increased his speed to catch up to the rest.

Chapter 223 - He Has to Be a Patient!

Chapter 223: He Has to Be a Patient!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“What’s wrong with you?” Looking at Xiao Du, who was covered in cold sweat, Su Luoluo also started to get nervous.

“I’ll tell you the truth, but don’t be scared.” Xiao Du huddled with Su Luoluo. “I suspect that this place is really haunted.”

...

“Don’t try to scare me.” Su Luoluo had visited many Haunted Houses before, but she had never seen one like Boss Chen’s before. The place was like a maze, and it was completely open for visitors to explore.

“Mr. Han’s earlier speculation was all wrong; there was not one worker hiding among the mannequins! They were moving on their own!” Xiao Du gripped his hands tightly, causing his knuckles to crack. “We cannot depend on Mr. Han. I have to report this to boss and Brother Song.”

“They left a long time ago... wait, don’t run so fast!” Xiao Du rushed forward in a hurry, leaving Su Luoluo behind. The girl did not know whether she should run after Xiao Du or stayed behind with Ye Xiaoxin to wait for Mr. Han.

“A haunted Haunted House? Mannequins moving on their own?” Ye Xiaoxin added these two comments into her notebook. “Even professional actors from other Haunted House can be scared. This Haunted House sure is something else.”

She gave a very high review. “I’ve not come across such a high-quality Haunted House in a long time, so today should be fun.”

“The boy did not look like he was lying,” Su Luoluo reminded Ye Xiaoxin. “Let us move as well. It’s better if we’re together.”

“It’s my opinion that Haunted Houses are no different from magic. They depend on illusions and psychological tricks to surprise visitors. The realer the illusion, the more successful it’ll be.” Ye Xiaoxin removed her jacket and tied it around her waist. She stretched lazily, and her voluptuously figure annoyed the only audience somewhat. "In this respect, Western Jiujiang's House of Horrors is undeniably successful."

"Then you stay here, I'll go join them."

The few visitors were thus separated. None of them realized that the bloody letters on the wall continued to deepen as if the blood was trying to seep out of the wall.

...

"Boss, stop defending him. Han Qiuming is talented, yes, but that doesn't mean we should allow him to insult us like this!" Song An was angry on Guo Miao's behalf. "Yes, he came up with the design, but all of us contributed to building the set. In fact, he barely contributed in the construction, so what is he so proud about?"

"Calm down, I understand everything you said, but patience goes a long way. After all, he was the designer invited by our sponsor." Guo Miao was old enough to see many things lightly. "Haunted Houses are a dying trade, and we're all trying to find work. There's no reason to fight among ourselves."

"But did you not see how arrogant he was? He even wanted to replace you! Honestly, if the sponsor listens to him and replaces boss, I'll hand in my resignation immediately." Song An was a straightforward person.

"Don't worry, the sponsor wouldn't agree." Guo Miao sighed. Actually, he was not that confident. After being forced to leave Xing Hai, their numbers had been dropping. "Let's find that tape recorder first. There are fans of Tian Teng Medical School out there, so we cannot disappoint them."

"Okay." The two of them continued to move forward. After turning a corner, they found themselves in another corridor. "What is the meaning of this? They want us to keep on walking until the end?"

The place was dim, and the color of the walls deepened as if they were bruised. Stepping on the uneven mattresses, smelling the mixture of antibiotics and some weird stench that perforated the air, it felt like they were inside the intestine of some weird creature.

"There has to be a reason for Boss Chen to design the place like this.

It's probably to increase the authenticity." Guo Miao peeled off a piece of the wall, and it crumbled in his fingers. "Along the way, I realized some of the numbers outside the rooms weren't removed. The rooms in the first corridor all started with four, those in the second corridor started with three, and this corridor uses the number two."

"The numbers are decreasing?"

"I suspect that this whole scenario is based on a building that has four floors in total, and Boss Chen has replicated it perfectly. Each corridor represents a floor of the building." Looking at the walls, Guo Miao continued. "Even the numbers are preserved in their well-worn state. Not one detail has been missed. This is more than a mere OCD."

"Yes, I have that impression as well. We create Haunted Houses mainly to scare the visitors, but this Boss Chen's creations feel like it is more of a reduplication. So many details, including the bloody letters on the walls, this is already a kind of illness." Song An's anger started to dwindle as it was replaced by fear. "The bloody sentences have not stopped since we entered this place. It is hard to imagine how the man managed to write all these letters."

"Some of the bloody letters look fresher than others." Guo Miao also felt unsettled as an image appeared in his mind—in the middle of the night, the Haunted House's boss carried a bucket of red paint alone in the dark and started to write down all these letters like he was possessed.

"Before entering this Haunted House, Boss Chen told us that the place has been in operation for five to six years already. Could it be that he planned this scenario with the help of his parents?"

"To use five years to build a single scenario? What is the point of that?" Since they were in the same business, Guo Miao knew how much time and effort were needed to build a scenario as complicated as this. "When we were at the entrance, a few of us peeled off the flooring. Boss Chen even paid attention to places that normal visitors wouldn't pay attention to. That was incredibly out of place."

"Wait a minute, the name 'Third Sick Hall' sounds quite familiar to me now." Song An took out his phone, and the result made his face fall. "Boss, the Third Sick Hall is a real place in Jiujiang! Its patients were involved in many crimes like murders. In fact, a few days ago, the police sent out a warrant to capture the escaped patients!"

"So, Boss Chen wasn't lying?" Guo Miao's pupils danced. "He brushed over such an important fact?”

“The internet says that the Third Sick Hall was abandoned five years ago, and his Haunted House began operation five years ago!” Song An compared the timelines, and they were a match.

“This is bad!” Guo Miao suddenly remembered something. “Examine the articles closely. Look at the warrant. See whether there is anyone that matches Boss Chen, like similar weight, height, and so on.”

“Boss, you suspect that Boss Chen was once a patient of the Third Sick Hall?”

“Do you think a normal person would spend five years to reconstruct a mental hospital? Every detail here is so authentic—only someone who spent a long time inside a mental hospital could replicate them so perfectly!” The more he thought about it, the more afraid Guo Miao became. “This Boss Chen cleared Tian Teng Medical School with his heartrate not going over one hundred once. How can someone like that be a normal person?”

“How about we just stop this tour and leave immediately?”

“Leaving now might cause us to get targeted.”

“Why?”

“The Third Sick Hall is not normally open to the public, and Boss Chen said that the scenario is not yet completed. Thinking about it now, those were probably all excuses.” Guo Miao felt like killing Han Qiuming. “This place is probably hiding a huge secret.”

Song An realized how severe Guo Miao’s expression had gotten. He whispered, “What kind of secret?”

“Before I arrived, I spoke with the manager of New Century Park. The man mentioned in passing that Boss Chen’s parents disappeared mysteriously half a year ago without leaving behind any clues.” Looking at the crazed sentences written in blood, Guo Miao’s heart was frozen in fear.

“Mysterious disappearance?” Song An’s shock turned into terror. His eyes bulged as if he was suddenly reminded of something.

Chapter 224 - Limitation

Chapter 224: Limitation

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Could Boss Chen’s parents...” Song An felt like his throat was filled with ice. When he said that, his lips were shaking uncontrollably.

“You saw the blood streak on the side of the bed in that room earlier. I didn’t want to say anything then because we had outsiders with us.” Guo Miao reached into his pocket to pull out a cigarette to dangle on his lips. “Fake blood is definitely not that color. The scratch marks and blood stains that we saw probably came from an actual human.”

...

“There are many more similar scratch marks and blood stains inside this scenario. If all those are real...” Song An shivered as he looked around. This is not a Haunted House; it’s a slaughterhouse!

“Boss, shall we call the cops?”

“I had the same idea, but we’re in here for only ten minutes. If this is a misunderstanding, we’ll be shamed for the rest of our lives.” Guo Miao bit on the cigarette. “Let’s meet up with the others first.”

“Boss! Brother Song!” When Song An was conversing with Guo Miao, Xiao Du ran over, gasping for air. “The mannequins are alive! The mannequins are following behind us even though no one is carrying them!”

“The mannequins are alive?” The bad news just kept coming.

“Yes, Mr. Han said that it was because of the workers hidden among the mannequins. To expose them, he dashed into the group of mannequins to drag them out.” Xiao Du’s breathing became calmer. He did feel safer around Guo Miao and Song An.

“Did he find any workers?” Guo Miao and Song An’s faces shifted. This Haunted House had many nasty surprises!

“There was not one worker among the mannequins!”

“If they were not manually moved, why are the mannequins following us? Han Qiuming might be an annoying person, but he is indeed a professional in this business.”

“No idea, but Mr. Han failed to discover any secrets after destroying all the mannequins. They’re just normal mannequins.”

“Wait, Mr. Han destroyed the mannequins?” The bad feeling within Guo Miao was slowly materializing.

“I warned him about it, but he still went ahead and pulled off all the heads.” Xiao Du pouted. “You don’t know what happened then. Mr. Han was standing amid the broken mannequins, saying that since Boss Chen has ruined Tian Teng Medical School, he was going to create chaos within his Haunted House as well!”

Listening to Xiao Du, both Guo Miao and Song An froze. *What the f*ck! Does he not know the limits? Why do you have to go and provoke a crazed murderer?*

“What’s wrong with the both of you?” Xiao Du realized that both Guo Miao and Song An were not speaking, and the atmosphere was rather heavy. “Are you both scared as well? I was walking at the back of group, and it felt like people were following us. Every time I turned back to look, the mannequins moved closer, and I swore one of them even smiled at me!”

“Xiao Du, the mannequins aren’t that important.” The cigarette in Guo Miao’s mouth had been chewed in half. He removed it and shoved the broken halves into his pocket.

“How is that not important? Boss, there are at least twenty of those mannequins. If they all come alive, how are we going to survive?” Xiao Du was surprised by his boss’ reaction. This was different from what he had expected.

“Boss is right. There is a bigger problem that we need to deal with.” Song An’s expression darkened. “Let’s go find that Han Qiuming first.”

Song An’s sudden change in attitude confused Xiao Du. “Brother Song, didn’t you just have an argument with Mr. Han? You’re still going to look for him?”

“There’s no choice.” Song An said with a serious expression. “I cannot just let him die, can I?”

“Let him die?” Xiao Du’s lips fell open. When did things become so serious? Aren’t we only visiting a Haunted House?

...

After Xiao Du and Su Luoluo left, Ye Xiaoxin stood where she was. She was brave and enjoyed the visit. Occasionally, she would take out her notepad to jot things down.

“You’re waiting for me?” Han Qiuming’s heart soared when he saw Ye Xiaoxin was alone.

“I prefer to do things slow and alone. Your friends are all ahead.” Ye Xiaoxin pointed forward with her pen. Due to the corner, they had no idea what had happened ahead.

Han Qiuming glanced at Ye Xiaoxin and did not move his gaze away anymore. He increased his pace to walk beside her. “I can help with your review; after all, I’m a professional. I’ve visited many Haunted Houses and worked with many foreign teams.”

“Is that so?” Ye Xiaoxin pushed open a random door and looked through everything with patience.

“Haunted Houses with a mental hospital theme alone, I’ve been to three. One of them was built directly on an abandoned mental hospital; that is true authenticity.” Han Qiuming saw that Ye Xiaoxin wanted to move the bed, so he quickly hurried in to help.

As he attempted to flirt, Guo Miao and Xiao Du’s call came from the corner. “Where is he? Qiuming! Han Qiuming?”

“He was just behind me earlier, where has he gone?”

“This place is too dangerous; we need to find him!”

“Han Qiuming!”

There were rushing footsteps in the corridor, and Han Qiuming pretended to not hear them. He helped Ye Xiaoxin move the bed and placed it on the floor.

“They’re calling you, aren’t you going to respond?”

“Why should I when they only want me when they come into danger?” Han Qiuming chuckled. “There’s probably something very scary later. These guys might look large, but they’re all useless. They all need to depend on me.”

Ye Xiaoxin did not comment, and they replaced the bed. “Actually, you can go with them, I would prefer to explore the place alone.”

“It’s fine. This way we can be on the lookout for each other.”

Since she could not chase Han Qiuming away, Ye Xiaoxin did not say anything else. She exited the room and entered the corridor. Guo Miao’s group had just run past.

“Did you notice the numbers left on the door? All of the rooms here start with the number 2.” Han Qiuming tried his best to show off, but Ye Xiaoxin was not interested. They walked for a short distance when Ye Xiaoxin stopped.

“What’s wrong?”

“This door is different from other rooms.” Ye Xiaoxin pointed at the plaque. It was smudged, but roughly, they could make out the words ‘Director’s Office’.

“Maybe the recorder is inside. Come on, let’s take a look.”

...

Guo Miao and Song An ran all the way. They screamed until their throats were raw, but there was no reply from Han Qiuming.

“This shouldn’t be! He was just behind me!” Xiao Du had a full head of sweat as various scary thoughts filled his mind. “Do you think Mr. Han was kidnapped by the mannequins?”

“Probably not. He would have screamed if something happened to him, but we didn’t hear anything.” Guo Miao frowned, looking at the collapsed mess of mannequins and the rolling heads. He gritted his teeth. “Don’t panic. He’s probably in one of the sickrooms. We’ll turn back and look.”

Chapter 225 - Tape Recorder

Chapter 225: Tape Recorder

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Boss, you still want us to find him?” Xiao Du grumbled. The young man did not have a good impression of Han Qiuming because of his sharp tongue.

“Something might really happen to him if we don’t find him.” Guo Miao’s expression was serious. “Perhaps something has already happened to him. No, we can’t leave him behind! We’re retracing our steps now!”

...

“I agree with you, boss.” To everyone’s surprise, Song An did not hold onto his grudges and was willing to help. “It’s a mistake to get separated inside a Haunted House. We’d better stick together.”

Xiao Du nodded after a long pause. “Okay, I’ll follow you.”

The most innocent was Su Luoluo. The girl did not know anything and had no idea what the workers from Tian Teng Medical School were talking about. She just followed them and ran all over the place.

“We should be more detailed with our examination. We need to look inside every room.”

With Guo Miao leading the way, the group returned into the Third Sick Hall.

...

Han Qiuming and Ye Xiaoxin entered the director’s office. The room was separated into two smaller rooms, equipped with simple desks and chairs.

“The drawers are empty, and there are no books on the shelves. It’s impossible to know the boss’ personality from his reading preferences, but this is a good thing as well because it saves our time. Many Haunted Houses like to hide passwords or clues inside books,” Han Qiuming explained to Ye Xiaoxin, but it felt like he was talking to himself. Ye Xiaoxin moved away from the man and walked deeper into the room. She looked at the large dresser.

“Let me, this dresser is obviously custom-made. Ninety percent chance there’s a worker or trap hiding inside.” Han Qiuming walked forward to pull the door open. The dresser was empty. He laughed awkwardly. “Looks like this is the ten percent. The worker probably didn’t have the time to return after scaring Ol’ Guo.”

Ye Xiaoxin was completely uninterested in the man. She knocked on the walls of the dresser light. “Placing a special dresser inside a special room, there has to be a reason.”

When Ye Xiaoxin knocked on the back wall of the dresser, the sound changed. It was obvious that the back was hollow. The two worked together to remove the wall, and a hidden passage was revealed.

“The worker’s passageway?”

“It’s shouldn’t be.”

There was no light inside the passageway, so Ye Xiaoxin took out her phone to use its flashlight. When both her and Han Qiuming entered the path, an invisible force pushed the wall of the dresser, and it slowly closed. The passageway was so cramped that it was difficult to even turn. Thankfully, it was only several meters long.

At the end of the oppressive tunnel was a steel door. Ye Xiaoxin pushed it open, and before her was a wooden board. She shoved it open, and the scenery changed. This was a sickroom that she had not been in before.

“The director’s office is connected to a sickroom? What is the meaning of this design?” Ye Xiaoxin was completely drawn into the authentic recreation of the Third Sick Hall.

“Do you think it’s because the director kept the patient in his room as his possession?” Han Qiuming suggested. “I hear this is something common when the private hospitals weren’t professionally managed like nowadays.”

“Possibly.” They entered the room and started inspecting it. There sick bed, tables, and chairs had their corners ground down. The decoration was simple; there was nothing special.

“Let’s go out to take a look.” Han Qiuming opened the door, and a weird stench entered his nostrils. It smelt like the mixture of medicine and blood. He staggered one step back and extended his neck to look down the corridor.

The walls were cracked, and the blood vessels behind them seemed to be pulsing. It gave a very creepy feeling like the building was alive and the walls were hiding its blood vessels.

“It doesn’t seem like we’ve been to this corridor before.” The set design was almost the same, but the feeling it gave was completely different. The Third Sick Hall had made use of the looping design to its maximum potential. The visitors did not know what was at the end, and they had no idea how many corridors awaited them.

The mattresses on the floor were well-worn, and the dolls poked their pillow heads out. Weird expressions were drawn on their faces. It felt like their eyes were following the duo. Han Qiuming wanted to retreat. They came from the secret passageway, so they did not know how far this corridor was from the rest, and they had no idea how many scary things it was hiding.

He used his phone to shine the light down a corridor. The end of the dark corridor was not an exit but yet another corner.

“Don’t block the way.” Ye Xiaoxin exited the sickroom. Her legs that stepped out felt like they were touched by chills. This corridor was obviously different from those before it.

“Let’s look around. The tape recorder should be one of these rooms.” Ye Xiaoxin entered the sickroom next door to investigate, but Han Qiuming stood where he was. His hand that gripped the door was covered in sweat, and he peeked over his shoulder to look at the room door.

The upper half of the door was normal—it had the sign ‘3’—but the lower part of the door was quite scary. It was completely covered in red paint, but the paint was bright and sticky. The red seemed to be alive, and it grew on the door. “Room 3? Why are the number of the rooms in this corridor different from others?”

Han Qiuming and Ye Xiaoxin examined the first three sickrooms. When they reached the end, they discovered a room without a number or a sign. “Let’s go in and see.”

The room was small and completely enclosed. There was sound-insulation on the walls, and there was a bed with straps installed in the room. There was some broken equipment left by the bed.

“This looks like an electroshock therapy room. I’ve seen something similar in many other mental hospitals and movies.” Han Qiuming looked around the bed before examining the cluster of broken equipment. Then he started to chuckle. “Found it!”

Han Qiuming moved the equipment aside to retrieve a tape recorder that was hidden among it.

“And here I thought the Haunted House would be difficult.” He tried his best to pretend like this was nothing, but the excited expression on his face betrayed his true feelings.

In comparison, Ye Xiaoxin was much calmer. She looked at the recorder and frowned for the first time since she entered the Haunted House. “Do you hear that?”

“Hear what?” Han Qiuming did not know what Ye Xiaoxin was talking about. “Let’s ignore it. We need to leave now. There’s a time limit to this game. I’m going to make a perfect game clear and shut that Chen fella up.”

“You really don’t hear that?” Ye Xiaoxin pointed at the tape recorder in Han Qiuming’s arms. “The tape inside is turning, and the play button is lit up. The recorder has been running.”

Chapter 226 - Believe Me

Chapter 226: Believe Me

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Wearing the bloodied doctor's outfit, Chen Ge opened the wooden boards wearing the skin mask. Ten minutes have passed, and there haven't been any screams. Looks like they have gotten used to the Third Sick Hall.

Chen Ge felt like he had become too soft. Afraid that the visitors might get too spooked by initial scares, he gave them a ten-minute buffer.

...

They should have found the tape recorder. Things will be a little more difficult from now on.

Chen Ge moved down the darkened steps. When he reached the bottom of the stairs, he turned to look down the left corridor. There was not one mannequin outside the sealed classroom. They sure are obedient today. Normally, a few of them would be out loitering.

Holding the faceless nurse's uniform and the hammer, Chen Ge pushed the Third Sick Hall's steel door open.

The Third Sick Hall hasn't been completed yet, and the hidden mission has not been triggered. The scenario is only fifty percent complete at most, so it can't be treated as a real three-star scenario. The group is also accompanied by many professionals, so they might really succeed. Chen Ge walked slowly. He was not in a rush. Gotta go find that madwoman's mannequin and test the effects of this nurse's outfit first.

After turning the first corner, Chen Ge suddenly stopped moving. In the middle of the corridor, over twenty mannequins blocked the road with their bodies, their heads rolling left and right. They seemed to be having quite a good time.

"Why are you all here?" Chen Ge stood in the middle of the road, and the rolling heads stopped immediately. All of them started to play dead. "Is this your scenario? Why are you coming to the mental hospital with your school uniforms?”

Naturally, the mannequins were silent. They stopped moving like primary school students who had been caught by their teacher at the arcade.

“It’s one thing to come here, but you’re disposed of as well?” Chen Ge sounded angry, but he felt sorry for them. He carried the heads up from the floor and returned them to their owners. “This group of visitors wouldn’t even leave the harmless mannequins be, such cruelty.”

His progress was slow because there was no light. After patching up the sixth mannequin, he stood up and announced, “When I send them out, I’ll return to help the rest of you.”

There was anger lacing his voice as Chen Ge gripped the hammer and ran down the corridor.

...

Inside the electrotherapy room, Han Qiuming leaned toward the recorder. He listened for a long time, but there was no sound.

“Could it be an empty tape?” This was the only conclusion that he could come up with.

“Would the boss do something that pointless?” Ye Xiaoxin had a feeling there was something more to this tape, but it was true—there was only faint white noise. She reached out to press the buttons on it, but no matter which button she pressed, the play button did not change, and the tape kept playing.

“The boss has probably modified this recorder; the buttons are only for appearance. The real power switch is hidden somewhere else.” Han Qiuming looked for a long time but could not find the real switch. His face was dark. Even since entering the Third Sick Hall, he had tried to make himself look useful, but the props inside this place kept going against him.

“We should leave first.” Han Qiuming looked at his phone. “We have three minutes left. If we hurry, we should be able to make it.”

He exited the room with Ye Xiaoxin. They planned to use the secret passageway in Room 3 to exit.

At the same time, at the other end of the corridor...

Guo Miao's group rushed back into the deep ends of Third Sick Hall. They looked cursorily inside the rooms along the second and third corridors, including the director's office, but they could not find Han Qiuming.

"Boss! We've looked through all the rooms, but there's still no sign of Han Qiuming!" Song An exclaimed between hurried breaths.

"The corridors only leads one way, so we should have run into each other. Where is the guy?" Guo Miao patted himself on his face lightly. He had not been so worried in the past ten years. "Let me think about this. There are three possibilities to Han Qiuming's disappearance. One, he has found a secret passageway and run into it; two, he was hiding in one of the rooms earlier when we were looking for him, and now, he is deeper inside the Haunted House; and three..."

At this point, the bloody scenes that one associated with mental hospitals appeared in his mind. He did not have the courage to continue. He looked at Song An and saw fear reflected in his eyes.

"This is bad!" The two guys communicated with their eyes, and it caused Su Luoluo's scalp to go numb.

"Do you guys want to continue this tour? Because I'm leaving!"

She was getting more scared. Even her own teammates were more professional than these Haunted House workers, who kept saying things to make her scared.

"No! You can't go alone; it's too dangerous! We mustn't separate from each other!" Song An commanded like something bad would happen to Su Luoluo if she left them.

"Ol' Song is right. Being separated will give them the chance to take us down one by one. Only by staying together will the enemy not dare do anything rash." Guo Miao forced a smile at Su Luoluo. "I'm sorry for dragging you into this mess, but don't worry, we'll definitely bring you out safely."

Su Luoluo felt like crying when she heard Guo Miao's apology. Why are you suddenly apologizing? What is happening? You told me I was lucky to have been selected to join you on this visit, but I've done nothing except run all over the place. Why are you doing this to me?

Su Luoluo suspected that she had been tricked and that she was the only real visitor. The rest of them were actors! The two Haunted Houses had worked together to scare her!

“We don’t have time to waste. The longer we stay here, the more dangerous it is for Han Qiuming. We need to find him now!” Guo Miao decided. “Come on! Let’s move down the other corridor!”

He and Song An walked in front while Xiao Du followed at the back. Before they moved on, he turned to tell Su Luoluo, “Brother Song and Boss are reliable people. With them around, nothing dangerous will happen to you.”

“What kind of danger will happen to me inside a Haunted House? Is that how you console someone?” Standing alone in the corridor that was covered with bloody letters, Su Luoluo followed Guo Miao’s group unwillingly. She did not dare go back to the exit alone. The group walked to the fourth corridor. They looked through all ten rooms, but they still had not found Han Qiuming.

“We’ve reached the end? Where is this Han Qiuming?” Song An leaned against the wall, physically drained.

“A live person disappeared just like that?” Guo Miao’s heart was racing. He looked around and realized that the blood letters on the wall had deepened in color.

“We must have missed something!” Guo Miao gripped Song An’s shoulder. “All Haunted Houses have pathways specialized for workers—it should be the same for the Third Sick Hall. In the few sickrooms that we checked earlier, a few of them had unique structures. I believe that the pathway is hidden in one of them.”

“Okay, we’ll go back to look together!”

Su Luoluo, who had been following them, was tried. This was the first time she had visited a Haunted House like this. “I just ran here, and you guys are running away again?”

“The worker’s pathway and Han Qiuming should be in one of those rooms.” Guo Miao looked at Su Luoluo. He had not been so serious for a long time. “Trust me, I won’t be mistaken!”

...

Holding the tape recorder, Han Qiuming and Ye Xiaoxin exited the director's office. The white noise from the tape had gotten more pronounced.

"Where are your teammates? I seem to hear running." Ye Xiaoxin kept her distance from Han Qiuming.

"Ignore them, let's get out first." Holding the tape recorder, Han Qiuming felt like something was observing him. It made the skin on his back crawl.

Chapter 227 - Help! Help!

Chapter 227: Help! Help!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“You go first. I hear this Haunted House delineates its scenarios into different stages of difficulty. Since it is not often that we get to visit the hardest scenario, I wish to look around some more.” Ye Xiaoxin stood inside the director’s office.

The noise that came out from the tape recorder grew louder, and some other sounds could be heard within the white noise. It sounded like gasps of air and also crying.

...

Han Qiuming looked at the time; they still had two minutes left. He did not have time to dawdle. “Okay, you take care of yourself.”

Then he turned toward the exit with the recorder. Watching as Han Qiuming’s back merged into the darkness, the eyes of Ye Xiaoxin, who had kept her cool throughout, bulged wide. Why is there someone lying on his back?

She was someone who did not believe in the supernatural, which was why she could so bravely review so many Haunted Houses. However, just now, she saw something that her experience could not explain. Who was that lying on his back? Is it one of the workers?

...

Han Qiuming ran at the top of his speed with the recorder. Two minutes left!

His body temperature fell. Han Qiuming did not know why, but there was a chill that radiated from his back and suffused through his body before finding its way into his heart.

“Pain...”

A voice appeared beside his ear. It was fleeting.

“Who was that?” Han Qiuming turned his head around to look behind him. It was like a girl was lying on his back, but when he looked, there was nothing there. “Was I mistaken?”

He ran faster with a simple goal in mind, to leave as soon as possible. “I already have the item, and I’ll win the moment I escape. I’ll gain back the face that Tian Teng Medical School has lost!” Han Qiuming ignored everything and dashed madly ahead.

“So painful...”

The voice came closer, moving from his back to the side of his ears like it was trying to find its way into his earlobes.

” So painful! ”

” Ahhh! ” Han Qiuming waved his arms at the air around him angrily. “Come out! Who is it?”

There was no response other than silence. There were only the echoes of his voice and the tape’s white noise in the long corridor.

“Is it this recorder?” Other than himself, only this recorder could produce sound. Han Qiuming placed it before his eyes. The tape was still turning, and the play button’s light had changed from the earlier green to red. “This has to be it!”

Han Qiuming could not figure out what was wrong. Time was ticking. With a grit of his teeth, Han Qiuming grabbed the recorder and continued his mad sprint. There has to be something wrong with the recorder, but it is also the key to clearing this scenario! It took us so much time to find this—I’m not going to throw it away! It’ll be a waste of all my previous effort!

Han Qiuming cursed Chen Ge within his heart. Such despicability!

He needed to exit with the tape recorder to win, and this was the hardest decision. Ditching the recorder meant losing, but keeping the recorder meant having to suffer the torment that it brought. This was a scenario that normal people would not be able to solve!

“Argh!” Han Qiuming gritted his teeth. He was going to give up his life to clear Chen Ge’s Haunted House. He continued to run, but the weight on his shoulders gradually increased. It was as if something was pressing on his shoulders, and the chill seeped into his bones.

“So painful...”

The voice from behind him became clearer and clearer. From the initial fuzzy male voice, it had now turned into a female voice. It sounded familiar. It was a voice that was filled with helplessness and despair.

Wait a minute!

When this voice appeared, the hairs on Han Qiuming's body stood up. I've heard this voice somewhere before.

His sanity was almost shattered. In a Haunted House that he had not visited before, he had managed to hear a voice that he was familiar with. Where did I hear this before?

Cold sweat slid down his forehead. He did not have many female friends, practically none from his age group. No, I must have heard this somewhere before!

A memory from about half a year ago floated up in his mind. When editing the design to Tian Teng Medical School to increase the attraction of the Haunted House, ignoring the objections from others, he had insisted on adding the death of Xu Zhenzhen and her father into the plot. To add to the authenticity, he had thoroughly researched Xu Zhenzhen.

The girl had once worked at her father's hospital. Later, she had been fired due to medical mistake. At the time, the patient's family had made a huge deal out of it, and there was even a video online. The family had gone to the hospital to demand an explanation from Xu Zhenzhen. In a nurse's uniform, Xu Zhenzhen had been surrounded by other doctors and nurses. She had explained herself with her soft voice, but no one had paid her any attention. Later, the situation had spiraled out of control, and she had been shoved to the ground. Someone had even stepped on her fingers.

"So painful..."

Yes! This is the voice!

Han Qiuming's head was exploding. He was listening to a dead victim's voice inside a Haunted House!

He threw the tape recorder away instantly. Even if he had ten more hearts, and he would not go near that tape recorder again.

Why would Xu Zhenzhen's voice be caught inside the recorder? Is it the work of that Chen fella? Impossible! He wouldn't have known we were going to visit the Third Sick Hall. It was my suggestion that the plan was changed. Han Qiuming wanted to give himself a huge slap on his lips. I shouldn't have said that!

The tape recorder originally came from Tian Teng Medical School. Could it be that the Xu Zhenzhen that I took inspiration from returned as an actual ghost?

His body temperature was dropping, and his skin was cold. The pressure on his shoulders continued to increase. I'll need to leave this place first; this house is too haunted.

Han Qiuming continued to run, but he only took several steps before he started to gasp desperately for air. The soft mattresses did not provide his feet with any purchase, and every step he took made his body feel heavier.

What's going on? It feels like I'm carrying something.

Han Qiuming looked behind him. The tape recorder that he had dropped in the corner was unharmed because the fall had been cushioned by the mattresses, and it was still rolling. The tape that kept on turning was like a curious smile or a whirlpool that was designed to draw him in.

I need to escape.

The tape recorder was far away from him, but the white noise felt like it was just beside his ears.

“So painful, so painful...”

The woman's voice filled Han Qiuming's mind, and there was a crazed look in his eyes. “Stop talking! I told you to stop talking!”

He punched the air and turned wildly about. He wanted to search for the source. In a flash, he saw a woman's face placed on his shoulder, whispering into his ear.

“I've got you now!” He turned on his phone's flashlight and used the camera to point behind him. As the camera turned, the familiar face that he had seen many times on newspapers and medical reports appeared in his phone. “Xu... Xu Zhenzhen!”

The phone slipped from his grasp, and Han Qiuming dashed down the corridor, running for his life. His body turned colder ,and the voice refused to leave him be.

“So painful, so painful, so painful!”

After turning the corner, Han Qiuming returned to the mess of mannequins. He did not notice the changes to the mannequins and charged forward blindly. He knew that he had paid attention to where he was stepping, but for some reason, something tripped him up, and he collapsed amid the mess of mannequins. During his fall, his thick glasses were sent flying as well.

“My glasses!”

Han Qiuming crawled on all fours. His surroundings were completely blurred, but he could still make out the shapes of hands, legs, and heads. He crawled toward his glasses, but the glasses kept on moving away from him like they were being moved by the mannequins.

In the dark, he could sense the many heads and body parts moving toward him.

“What are you? Don’t come any closer! Help! Help!”

Chapter 228 - The Devil's Story

Chapter 228: The Devil's Story

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Han Qiuming only managed to shout once before something clamped on his lips. Endless terror swallowed him whole. Unable to see anything clearly, the icy feeling shot through his body and was carried in a certain direction. The door closed, and the corridor returned to its original state.

The Third Sick Hall was huge, and all of the corridors were quite a distance from each other, but Ye Xiaoxin still heard some commotion. She hesitated before leaving the director's office. This courageous girl was very careful with her every step. She turned the corner, but there was still nothing.

...

Where has that man disappeared to? Did he trigger some trap? Ye Xiaoxin continued to move through the dark corridor.

Suddenly, she heard footsteps. Han Qiuming's footsteps are weak and light; this person's are stable and powerful, like someone who has a purpose and knows what he's doing.

Ye Xiaoxin hid in the nearby sickroom and snuck a look through the slit.

Not long after that, an incredibly scary monster emerged. He was wearing a bloody doctor's outfit, and his face was sewn together. He was covered in a murderous aura and holding a horrific-looking hammer. The hammer was covered in blood splatters, and it dragged across the floor. It did not look like a prop but like an actual murder weapon.

The actor inside the Third Sick Hall? The actor only appears after twenty minutes?

The first time Ye Xiaoxin lost her cool was when she saw the person on Han Qiuming's back, and the second time was now. The monster was slowly advancing, and Ye Xiaoxin's fair fingers gripped the door tightly. This was something she had not experienced in other Haunted Houses, and she could not understand why.

Why am I so afraid? Looking at the monster wave the hammer about expertly, Ye Xiaoxin's instincts told her to hide. Actors in other Haunted Houses are just putting on a show, but looking at this doctor, it feels like he has really done something sick with that hammer before.

It was not until the doctor left that Ye Xiaoxin silently exited the sickroom. She jotted down a brief few words on her notebook before starting to follow behind the doctor.

...

In the deepest part of Third Sick Hall, Guo Miao and Song An stood before the door to Room 10.

"The numbering on this corridor is different from others, and Rooms 8, 9, and 10 are the most unique because their doors are made from steel."

Guo Miao shared his findings with others. "We should focus on investigating these three rooms. Take care to not lose sight of one another. If you discover anything, call for help and do not touch anything on your own."

The group went into Room 8 first. The window was installed with anti-theft gauze, and there were detaining straps attached to the steel bed on both sides. The whole room gave a weird feeling, but it was not noticeable at first glance.

"This room..." Guo Miao stared at the bed for a long time and said uncertainly, "Looks like everything here is uneven."

With that reminder, the other visitors saw that as well. Half of the dresser had been destroyed but the other half was perfectly preserved. The left side of the bed was fine, but the right side was heavily twisted. Even the floor was half dirty and half clean. "What is the meaning of this room? The clue to clearing the scenario is unevenness?"

The patient Room 8 housed was Xiong Qing, a patient with Hemineglect. Harmony in the eyes of normal people would be twisted in his perspective, so the world in his eyes was sick and twisted and thus required correction. The group searched for a long time inside Room 8 but came up with nothing. They left Room 8 and entered Room 9.

Room 9 was the cleanest room in the Third Sick Hall. There was no trash or rubbish, and there was no weird drawing on the wall. However, inside the Third Sick Hall, this only made things seem weirder. The group searched the room and still came up with nothing.

“What is Boss Chen trying to say? This design is difficult to understand.” The patient in Room 9 was Wu Fei. This was someone even Men Nan’s main persona had thought was dangerous.

Pushing open the last steel door, the group who stood outside the door were assaulted by a pungent stench. Everyone had their hairs stand upright and they prepared to run.

When Chen Ge was doing his Trial Mission, Room 10 had been locked, so he had not been inside this room in reality.

“Should we leave?” Su Luoluo asked outside the door with her hand over her nose.

“The smell is not as strong inside the room, but you and Xiao Du can stay outside.” Guo An and Song An entered Room 10, and the decoration inside this room could only be described as madness. There were no windows—it was a completely enclosed area. There was no bed or furniture like tables or chairs. Only several dilapidated and smelly mattresses were left on the floor.

When Guo Miao and Song An’s gaze moved to the wall, even they were spooked. All the surfaces in the room were covered in blood letters of various sizes. They were so overlapped with each other that it created an illusion that they were moving.

The scariest thing was, opposite from the room door was a man’s face, embedded in the wall. It was just a thin layer, and he looked like he was smiling and was not at the same time.

“Boss, that face doesn’t look like a prop—manmade rubber wouldn’t be able create this kind of feeling.”

“I know.”

Guo Miao took several steps toward the human face. He raised his hands to touch it to confirm, but his hand hung several meters away from the face, and he could not move forward anymore. “So be it, I feel like the clue won’t be related to this face. It’s probably hiding among the blood letters.”

Guo Miao looked at the letters around the human face and realized with a shock that unlike the words out in the corridor, the sentences had basic logic to them, as if they were telling a story. Using his phone as light, he read them aloud.

“My wife accused me of being a killer, my parents refused to talk to me, the neighbors pointed at me, and everyone abandoned me.

“I shouldn’t be alive, but I found no reason to die. I am the killer of my own children. Yes, I have never denied that fact.

“I shouldn’t have left him alone at home. I shouldn’t have left the fire on and rushed to work.

“Three lives, three children.

“What can I do to seek salvation?

“I wish to tear out my heart for you to see.

“Please stop blaming me. I’m sorry, it’s all my fault.

“I shouldn’t have argued; I should accept my mistake silently. If I didn’t argue with my wife that night, perhaps she wouldn’t have left late at night to find her parents, and she wouldn’t have been harmed by those people.

“I’m sorry, this is all my fault.

“I wish to atone for my sins, but who would accept my atonement?

“There’s a needle inside my body, standing over my heart. Every breath I take, it pierces through my heart.

“What should I do? Try my best to live.

“I’ve moved to a completely new place, but the situation hasn’t changed.

“Guilt torments me. I am a killer, an unforgivable killer.”

Chapter 229 - The Flyer for Ghost Stories Society

Chapter 229: The Flyer for Ghost Stories Society

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“No matter where I was, when the sun rose up and I woke up from my dream, I would tell myself it’s a new day. Yet, whenever I opened my eyes, the monster within me awakened. It would tear open my wounds relentlessly, and that bone-piercing pain reminded me.

“I’m my children’s killer, the source of all tragedy.

...

“I sought help from doctors, and they told me the monster was a manifestation of my conscience and guilt; it was me torturing myself.

“They suggested that I put my focus elsewhere, find a place where my heart could rest.

“I’m afraid of interacting with people, so I relied on medication and books as well as religion to seek escape.

“I have a small wish in my heart. Perhaps God will be able to forgive my sin to give me my salvation.

“In everyone’s eyes, I’m my children’s killer, but my God wouldn’t. I will give my everything to God.

“Three years ago, the pain finally stopped—perhaps the medicine was working. In fact, I could feel myself improving. I was more at peace with myself.

“The fall of the fourth year, the police came to me with a stranger. They said that this was one of the culprits who harmed my wife. The man came to me because he wanted to seek forgiveness. But why should I forgive him?

“My wife lost three of her children, and she was taken away from me forever not long after. I will never forgive him, never!

“The stranger opened his heart to me, but I didn’t feel a shred of pity for the man. If anything, I felt like he had not suffered enough punishment. Those kinds of people do not deserve forgiveness.

“After he was done, he seemed to feel better. Looking at how relieved he was, I was angry. I charged at him, and during our tussle, the locket on his neck snapped, and the necklace that had the carving of God fell to the ground.

“As if afraid that his most precious treasure would be stepped on, he used his body to shield the locket, to beg the God for forgiveness.

“I saw myself in the man; he was very similar, including the God in the locket. I had the very same locket—we believed in the same God!

“Why would my God forgive the murderer who harmed my wife?

“After the stranger left, I smashed the locket around my neck and burned everything religious I had in my house.

“The monster that had been silent for the past four years awakened once more. I thought I was healed, but I was merely lying to myself. However, this was perfect. I no longer needed to suppress the monster that was now a part of me.

“I found a knife inside the kitchen and chased after the stranger.

“God might have forgiven him, but I had not.”

The blood letters filled the wall. There were plenty more, but they became more and more incomprehensible, although they all had a feeling of confession to them.

The more he looked at them, the more afraid Guo Miao became. “Could this be Boss Chen’s past? The patient in this room was once Boss Chen? This mask is one he has used before?”

His mind went to impossible places to scare himself. “Could this be actual human skin?”

With a grit of his teeth, he held his breath and reached out to touch that face. When his fingertip was about to touch the face, there was a sudden scream coming from the corridor!

“Who is that? I saw it! A face! There was a face inside Room 3!” The shrill female scream made Guo Miao’s legs turn to mush, and he collapsed to the floor. His heart was racing, and Guo Miao had his hand over his heart. He turned to yell outside the room when something caught his attention. He was kneeling before the human face, and from his vantage point, a yellowed piece of paper was poking out between the wall and the human face.

“What is this?” With shaking hands, he reached into the human face to pull the piece of paper out. Careful not to ruin the human face, Guo Miao finally pulled out the piece of paper that was about the size of his palm.

“Ghost stories society?” The paper looked like a flyer. The back was a picture of a half-opened red door, and on the top half was written ‘Ghost Stories Society’. The lower half of the flyer introduced the way to get into this society.

“Look for a building with twenty-four floors and take the elevator at midnight?”

Holding the paper in his grasp, Guo Miao’s heart kept skipping. He could no longer tell what was real and what was fake. At the same time he found the flyer, Chen Ge exited the secret tunnel into Room 3, and the black phone in his pocket vibrated.

A message at a time like this? Chen Ge retreated into the secret tunnel and closed the steel door. He checked his message.

“You’ve triggered the only hidden mission inside Third Sick Hall—Ghost Stories Society!

“This will your first opponent before you master nightmares! Find them!

“Mission Hint one: The ghost story society congregates in one of the rooms on the 24th floor.

“Mission Hint two: A building with 23 floors, but it has 24 numbers. Why?

“Mission Hint three: Only by taking the elevator at midnight will you be able to enter the 24th floor.”

When he was waiting for his elevator at Fang Hwa Apartments, he had accidentally discovered that the building only had 23 floors, but the elevator had 24 numbers!

The Ghost Stories Society is inside that building?

Inside Room 10, Guo Miao put his phone close to the flyer. “Only by taking the elevator at midnight will you be able to find the ghost stories society. After entering the elevator, press to go to the 23rd floor. When you’ve reached the 23rd floor, press to go down to the second floor. When you reach the second floor, go up to the 22nd floor. Repeat this many times before pressing the button for the 24th floor.”

Just looking at the flyer, Guo Miao was scared. He folded the flyer back up and shoved it back under the human face.

“This has to be some kind of prank, right? Taking the elevator alone at midnight, going up and down endlessly. The elevator opens to the corridor. What if those spooky things join you in the elevator?”

“This place is too weird, we cannot stay here any longer. Ol’ Song, help me up, we’re leaving!”

Chen Ge pocketed his black phone and swung the hammer before him. The visitors have triggered the hidden mission. How did they manage to do that?

Before the Third Sick Hall was opened to the public, Chen Ge had inspected every single corner of the scenario. He had examined Room 10 as well. However, the flyer was hidden masterfully. Only by looking at the mask from the floor would one be able to spot it. This meant that one had to be afraid of the mask until one fell on the floor to discover it. It was a pure coincidence that Guo Miao had found it.

In comparison, when Chen Ge saw the face, he had gone over to squeeze the nose and cheeks to try it out. He was not afraid at all; if anything, he was happy because he suspected that this was Patient 10’s face, which meant that he was closer to solving the puzzle.

The hidden mission was discovered the visitors—I need to thank them nicely.

Listening to the footsteps coming from outside the tunnel, he touched the skin mask on his face and lay in wait for the perfect moment.

Chapter 230 - Surprise!

Chapter 230: Surprise!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Was it this room?” The few visitors entered Room 3, but the place was empty.

“Are you sure you’re not mistaken?” Song An held Guo Miao to look around the room. There was no hiding place in sight.

...

“There was a face! He was wearing a doctor’s outfit, and his face was sewn together. He shook and then disappeared back into the room.” Su Luoluo was very sure of herself. Everyone else had their attention turned to Room 10, but she had been paying attention to things behind them.

“Never mind, stop looking,” Guo Miao said weakly, his legs still weak. “Let’s go out now.”

“Impossible, I was staring at Room 3, and the face hasn’t appeared again. He should still be inside this room.” Su Luoluo grabbed Xiao Du’s arm. “You were also in the corridor earlier; did you see anything?”

“Maybe, I’m not sure.” Xiao Du’s answer was too vague. The few of them stayed in the room for a while before retracing their steps and preparing to leave.

Leaving just like that? Chen Ge exited the secret tunnel and followed behind the group of visitors. So be it. Their fans are waiting for them outside; I’ll save them some face.

He entered Room 10. When the hidden mission was triggered, they were inside this room.

Everything in the room was normal; only a few footprints were left on the mattresses. Chen Ge walked over to inspect the footprints and noticed the small changes in the human face. He squatted down, reached into the face’s mouth, and pulled out a flyer from within.

Looks like they found this.

Chen Ge pocketed the flyer and entered the toilet opposite from the electrotherapy room. He carried a female mannequin out from it. He put the faceless nurse's uniform on the mannequin, preparing one last surprise for this group of visitors.

Exiting Room 10, Chen Ge could hear some noise coming from the third corridor. He glanced in that direction and saw the person, but he did not expose her. After turning the corner, he leaned against the wall and waited quietly. Several seconds later, there were soft footsteps coming from the corridor. The person who was following him was very cautious.

The sound of footsteps was adjacent to the wall. In the darkened corridor, danger could come from anywhere. Only the sturdy wall could bring her the security she needed. The two parties got close, the corner blocking their sight of one another. The person was afraid that Chen Ge was still around, so she did not turn the corner instantly but committed to the same pose as Chen Ge—her back against the cracked wall, her legs tensed as she leaned her upper body forward. She bent over and silently moved her face toward the corner.

“Are you looking for me?”

The pair of eyes met, and Ye Xiaoxin's breathing stopped. Her heart was racing, and blood rushed to her eyes. Her ears were numb, and she could not hear anything!

Her body temperature was dropping, and her body shook involuntarily. Chen Ge looked down on the short-haired woman, and his sewn face was slightly twisted. Without a second word, he raised the hammer in his grasp!

BANG!

The hammer connected on the wall that was two meters above the girl's head. The wall chipped, and the debris fell on her face; this made Ye Xiaoxin realize that she was not in a dream. Her composure was shattered, and blood drained from her face. She turned and dashed toward Room 3.

“Wait, don't run!” Chen Ge maintained his distance. He did not catch up to her, but he did not slow down. The hammer scratched the wall, creating a sound that chilled Ye Xiaoxin's heart. She did not dare turn back to look; there was only one thought in her mind—Run!

She dashed into Room 3's secret passageway, and Chen Ge followed closely behind her.

One ran, and one chased.

They passed through the tunnel in the blink of an eye and exited at the director's office.

In the corridor outside, the other visitors did not know what happened, but they could hear the weird noises coming from the surrounding sickrooms.

"Boss, I'm worried. It feels like something is coming." Song An held Guo Miao and kept turning his head about.

"There are so many of us. If something is really coming, we don't need to worry." Guo Miao tried to keep the morale high, but before he could finish, a disheveled woman burst out of the director's office. It was Ye Xiaoxin. She saw the group of people that she had stunned and yelled, "He's coming to get us! Run! Run for your lives!"

Her face was red from a lack of oxygen, a different person from the calm reviewer that walked in.

"He? Who is he?"

Ye Xiaoxin ran after she gave the warning. About one second after that, the half-open door to the director's office was cracked open by brute force!

The door slammed against the wall, and it shattered into pieces. The thing that came into the visitors' sights was a blood-stained hammer!

Chen Ge, in his bloodied outfit, exited the director's office. He was chasing after Ye Xiaoxin but came into Guo Miao's group instead. His body blocking the only exit, Chen Ge turned to look at the few visitors. "This is such a coincidence."

The emotionless eyes sent chills down the visitors' spines. Before Chen Ge could make his next move, Su Luoluo and Xiao Du at the back of the group screamed and ran back into the deeper part of Third Sick Hall.

"Hold your ground..." Guo Miao was about to say, but he reached out to grab air. Song An, who had been holding onto him, had abandoned him to rush after Su Luoluo and Xiao Du. He was already several meters away.

“It’s wrong to abandon your friend no matter the situation.” Chen Ge made the decision and ran past Guo Miao to chase after the escaping three. The smell of blood blasted past him, and Guo Miao slowly slid down the wall. He looked at Chen Ge’s rushing figure and took in a deep breath before crawling toward the Haunted House’s entrance. “The truth mustn’t be suppressed. Someone has to escape this place alive...”

The deepest part of the fourth corridor was a dead-end, and this was also the place where Chen Ge had laid the most traps. This group of visitors had been scared before they even reached the fourth corridor. They did not really inspect the fourth corridor, so this meant that many scare points that Chen Ge had hidden were not activated.

Chen Ge chased after them, giving them tons of pressure. When the three reached the dead end, their minds collapsed.

“There’s no way forward.” Xiao Du punched on the wall covered with blood vessels, and the fear he was feeling could not be put into words.

“We’re trapped.” Song An’s face was equally filled with despair.

Of the three of them, Su Luoluo was the calmest. “There should be a hidden passageway. Don’t you remember? I said I saw a face inside Room 3, but we couldn’t find anyone, so I suspect there’s a secret passage there.”

“Room 3?” The three looked at one another and decided to gamble. They ran toward Chen Ge, and when they were about to meet, the three snuck into Room 3.

“There’s really a secret passage!” When Chen Ge was chasing after Ye Xiaoxin, he had forgotten to close the passage embedded into the wall, so the visitors discovered the hidden passageway easily.

“We’re saved!” Before they could be relieved, Chen Ge appeared at the door. “Hey!”

“Run!” Su Luoluo was the first to crawl into the tunnel; Xiao Du and Song An followed closely behind her. The dark tunnel was large enough to allow one person to pass through at a time. Su Luoluo saw the exit that was approaching, and her heart was in her mouth. The escape was imminent!

She crawled faster, and when she was about one meter away from the exit, a face covered with bandages appeared on the other end of the tunnel!

She was wearing a bloodied nurse uniform, and Su Luoluo could hear a woman's giggle coming from the nurse. "What is this?"

Su Luoluo felt like cursing. She forced herself to stop, but the momentum still sent her careening into the monster. The realistic head fell into her chest. The bandages loosened, and the curiously beautiful face was revealed. Then the scariest thing happened. Due to the physical trauma, the nurse's facial features fractured, and the face shattered before Su Luoluo!

" Ahhh! "

She tried to crawl backwards while Xiao Du and Song An were mindlessly charging forward. The three rammed into one another, and the collision could be heard miles away. The three tripped, and due to the small space of the tunnel, they got entangled in one another and were unable to escape, lodged in the middle of the tunnel.

Seeing this, Chen Ge chuckled as he moved closer to them with the hammer. "Why are you doing this to yourselves?"

Chapter 231 - I Forgot I Have on Make-up

Chapter 231: I Forgot I Have on Make-up

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The three were entangled with one another. This was the first time Chen Ge had happened across something like this in his Haunted House. “Call 911? There’s no need. I’ll help you myself.”

Using his feet to place pressure on Song An’s back, he pulled on Xiao Du’s arm. “Brace yourself!”

...

He leaned back to pull Xiao Du out from the mess.

“Ow! Ow!”

After a long time, he finally managed to separate the three of them. Looking at the three who were collapsed on the floor with pale faces, he could not help but sigh. “The physical condition of my recent visitors sure has been weak.”

Wearing the doctor’s outfit, holding the hammer, Chen Ge got no response from his visitors. For them, this day was going to be forever sealed in their hearts, becoming a ‘precious’ memory that they would never forget.

“Can you still walk on your own? I’ll lead you out.” Chen Ge picked up the female mannequin’s head and placed it beside her body. Then, he helped the few exit the director’s office.

At the entrance of the Haunted House, the visitors were separated into two groups. One group consisted of the real visitors; they were seated at the resting tent, being busybodies. The other group consisted of Tian Teng Medical School’s fans; they were anxious to see the result.

“Manager Xu, it has been almost forty minutes, why aren’t they out yet?”

“We’ve received SOS calls! Manager, are you sure nothing will go wrong?”

Uncle Xu stood outside the Haunted House to sell tickets. Surrounding him were four young men and women. If Chen Ge was there, he would definitely have recognized them. These were the other workers from Tian Teng Medical School.

“This... I’m sure it’ll be fine.” Uncle Xu was covered with sweat. To be honest, he had no idea. The normal visitation time was twenty minutes, and once they went over that time, something bad was bound to happen.

“You’ve wiped your sweat at least ten times within two minutes. Boss, you’re making us worried!” The man who shouted had the surname Lin. He was the dead body who had hidden under the baby crib. Without his make-up, he looked even paler in person.

“Don’t worry.” He might have said so, but Uncle Xu was more nervous than they were. When Fei Youliang came to visit last time, he had been delayed by eight minutes before he was let out, and he had been sent directly to the hospital. This time, the delay was twenty minutes! This was bad!

Uncle Xu did not dare think of the possible reasons. In fact, he had called the park’s medical team ten minutes ago; stretchers were already ready at the resting tent.

“Let’s wait a little longer. Perhaps they’re having too much fun.”

Another minute passed, and the curtain was finally pushed open. A sexy woman ran out of it. There was no color in her face, and her short hair was stuck to her face and her forehead. The moment she saw the light, she crumbled the ground. Her chest rose and fell violently like she had just finished a marathon.

“Someone is out!”

“It’s Ye Xiaoxin!”

“Isn’t she the country’s most professional Haunted House reviewer? How did she end up in this state?”

“This proves that you cannot believe everything on the internet. After all, she wasn’t a professional from Tian Teng Medical School, so it’s understandable that she is this scared.”

Seeing Ye Xiaoxin manage to run out of the Haunted House, Uncle Xu sighed in relief. Thank God!

He opened the gate to go to help Ye Xiaoxin when the curtain was opened a second time.

Guo Miao looked so much older. He knocked into the wall before collapsing out of the entrance. There was no life in his eyes. Seeing Ye Xiaoxin on the left, he very instinctively collapsed to the right. Kneeling under the sun, he doubled over like he was about to vomit.

“Boss!”

The other workers from Tian Teng Medical School all rushed forward. Looking at how distressed their boss was, the shock in their heart could not be described. The fans outside the Haunted House were speechless as well.

“It was only a Haunted House visit, right? How come it feels like he went on a roller-coaster?”

Not long after that, the thick curtain was pushed back again. Song An limped in front while Chen Ge followed behind him with the two other visitors. He did not remove his mask, so his appearance caused some in the crowd to scream. Even Uncle Xu was shocked by Chen Ge. He was a coward, so he had never entered Chen Ge’s Haunted House before.

“Nothing serious, they’re just spooked.” Chen Ge dropped Xiao Du and Su Luoluo at the front door. He saw the other workers from Tian Teng Medical School. Before they interrogated him, Chen Ge said, “You’re here in support of Tian Teng Medical School, right? Don’t worry, in ten minutes, I can arrange for you to visit the Haunted House.”

The words that they wanted to say were stuck in their throats.

“If there’s nothing else, I’m going back. There’s still one visitor I haven’t found.”

The workers from Tian Teng Medical School looked at one another. They were all in the same business, and they knew of the surprise accidents, but what exactly did he mean by that last sentence?

Entering the Haunted House again, Chen Ge pulled up the surveillance for the Third Sick Hall to look. Han Qiuming was struggling within the pool of mannequins before being dragged into one of the sickrooms.

Chen Ge returned to Third Sick Hall to find Han Qiuming. Pushing open the wooden door, he found Han Qiuming fainted on the floor.

His glasses were hanging on his face, and around him were numerous mannequin parts.

“You guys even helped him find his glasses. Nice job, very polite.”

Chen Ge placed his finger under Han Qiuming’s nose. There was still breathing. He looked okay on the surface, but whether or not he would leave with an emotional scar that would make him scream in the middle of the night while hospitalized like that Fei Youliang, Chen Ge could not tell.

Holding Han Qiuming’s arms, Chen Ge dragged him to the door. When he was moved, Han Qiuming slowly opened his eyes, regaining his consciousness. When he saw he was being dragged by a bloody doctor, he instinctively started to struggle. Chen Ge was not saving him but was pulling him somewhere to get butchered.

“Don’t move, I’m here to help,” Chen Ge told him kindly, but Han Qiuming’s consciousness was fraying. He could not understand Chen Ge and kept mumbling, “Ghost... ghost...”

“What ghost? Are you hallucinating?” Chen Ge did not know what happened to Han Qiuming, but according to his design, even if they triggered all the traps, they should not end up in Han Qiuming’s state.

“How are you a Haunted House designer if you’re so easily scared?” Chen Ge released the man, and Han Qiuming pulled on the mattress on the floor and tried to crawl toward the corner.

“What are you so afraid of? I’m here to lead you out. I’m one of the workers here.”

Han Qiuming refused to listen to Chen Ge. Out of options, Chen Ge grabbed Han Qiuming by his shoulders and removed his skin mask. “Look at me, I’m the Haunted House’s boss.”

Han Qiuming was forced to turn his head to look at Chen Ge. Underneath the skin mask was a face without life.

“Dead, dead, dead people...”

Looking at Han Qiuming who had fainted once more, Chen Ge touched his face and suddenly realized that he had applied the dead people’s make-up before putting on the skin mask.

Chapter 232 - Wednesday

Chapter 232: Wednesday

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Then again, this is not bad. At least I don't need to explain myself anymore.

Dragging the unconscious Han Qiuming, Chen Ge exited the Haunted House and very naturally headed for the resting tent. "Where are the doctors? This brother here might need a little aid."

...

"Chen Ge!" Uncle Xu rushed over in a hurry. He was not surprised when he saw this. He had prepared plenty of emergency rescue kits in the tent outside of Chen Ge's Haunted House. "The stretcher is at the corner! Stop dragging him! Let him lie down naturally. Make some space, give him some air!"

The park doctor who stood ready quickly ran out to help Han Qiuming. "His physical condition is fine, and there are no obvious wounds. It was not because of physical trauma or sickness that he fainted." The more he inspected, the more curious the doctor became. "The reason of his fainting was probably because he was put under high pressure, continuously causing his brain to shut down. This is the human body's natural self-defense mechanism. He will wake up on his own in a while."

"Doctor Liu, will he end up with some kind of side effects?" Uncle Xu asked worriedly.

"It's hard to say. After all, cases like this aren't common." Doctor Liu peeled Han Qiuming's eyelids back; his pupils were not concentrated, his mouth was agape, and his body temperature was low. "Just what kind of experience did he go through to end up like this?"

When the other workers saw Han Qiuming, they were also scared. "Boss Chen, Mr. Han became like this when he was visiting your Haunted House. You have to give an explanation."

"Actually, I'm also quite curious myself. All of you went to visit the place together, so how come he's the only one who became like this?" Chen Ge shrugged. They moved to Guo Miao and Ye Xiaoxin. "Don't worry, our Haunted House is very experienced dealing with things like this, and there will definitely be a satisfactory explanation."

"Very experienced?" The other workers followed Chen Ge dumbly. For some reason, this Boss Chen's words unsettled them. Ye Xiaoxin and Guo Miao each occupied the left and right side of the stairs, and they were still recovering.

"Boss Guo, Han Qiuming entered the Haunted House with the rest of you. You should be clearest about what happened to him." Chen Ge tossed the question to Guo Miao.

"I have no idea, we were separated." Guo Miao looked at the smile on Chen Ge's face, and his scalp went numb. He grumbled internally, Why did he end up this way? Shouldn't you know?

"Then I'll change the question. In which corridor did you get separated, and what was he doing at the time?" Guo Miao did not understand the purpose of Chen Ge's question. Staring at the unconscious Han Qiuming, he did not know what to say. Han Qiuming had gloated proudly that he wanted to ruin Chen Ge's Haunted House, but in the end, he had disappeared two minutes after saying that.

That was the truth, but Guo Miao felt it was embarrassing enough. If he said that before their workers and fans, how was he going to survive in this business in the future? Compared to what Chen Ge did at Tian Teng Medical School, Guo Miao clutched his heart, feeling the pain originating from it.

"Mr. Han might be a Haunted House designer, but he is not that courageous; he was probably spooked by some prop." Guo Miao forced a smile to end this topic as soon as possible.

"Boss, isn't Mr. Han not afraid of anything, not even the curse of the dead?" The female worker called Ah Rui wanted to say something more but was warned off with a dead gaze by Guo Miao.

"We can talk about this when we return."

He pointed surreptitiously at the gathering fans, hoping that she would take the hint.

They helped each other up, and when they looked toward the resting tent, Han Qiuming was already being carried away by the doctor and park workers. The stretcher passed through the crowd, and the people parted to let him through. The man had fainted, so he did not know anything, but his fainted image with the white foam on his lips was forever seared in everyone's mind.

"My Haunted House's scenarios are delineated into different levels. The Third Sick Hall is a three-star scenario, currently my scariest. Most of you haven't fainted, so that's already very impressive." Chen Ge's voice was not loud, but it was loud enough to be heard by the nearby visitors. "Normally, if you experienced the scenarios one after another, you would be able to get used to the terror, and it would be a lot simpler."

The workers from Tian Teng Medical School had been used as teaching material, and this shamed their fans. Some of them had silently moved into the line, also wanting to experience Chen Ge's Haunted House.

"Some of the props are ruined, and I have half an hour to fix them. In the meantime, you can visit the Minghun scenario." Chen Ge returned to the Third Sick Hall to fix all the mannequins and replaced them in Mu Yang High School. "Stop running about! The doctors and patients can handle the other scenario just fine."

Chen Ge closed the door to Third Sick Hall. Based on how things were going, it would be some time before any of his visitors could challenge this scenario. He continued his work. During the lunch break, Ye Xiaoxin sought out Chen Ge to do an interview, saying that she wished to help Chen Ge promote the place. After answering a few simple questions, Chen Ge sent the girl away and prepared to work the afternoon shift. The Haunted House closed at 6:30 pm. After cleaning the bathroom, Chen Ge lay in the staff breakroom alone.

This is not a bad life, scaring people in the day and counting money, toying with cat at night.

Chen Ge called for a take-out. Before he could even dig in, a phone call pulled him back to reality. "Captain Yan? You're looking for me?"

"We've checked the surveillance around Hai Ming Apartments, and we didn't find anyone suspicious. I need you to tell me where you got this clue."

When the monster left Wang Shenglong, he had heard weird noises from the corridor. It sounded like someone was walking backwards. Chen Ge suspected at the time that it was due to the patient from Third Sick Hall and so he had called Captain Yan to report it.

He told Captain Yan everything honestly, and after a drawn-out silence, Captain Yan replied, "We have heard about this from one of the neighbors from another case. I hope that you will stay out of this from now on."

"Okay."

"I've also found something related to this ghost stories society." Captain Yan's tone became serious. "They're very dangerous, and they're related to many cases."

"What kind of cases?" Chen Ge was intrigued.

"Don't ask, I'll explain those that you can know, but for those you cannot know, you will not get me to say anything."

"I understand." Chen Ge did not mind. After all, he had plenty of secrets of his own.

"For the sake of your safety, I'll reveal some information to you. All the cases related to the society happen on Wednesday. This day seems to have some significance to them, but currently, we still don't understand why."

"Wednesday? Meaning I'll need to be careful on every Wednesday?" Chen Ge looked at his phone; it was a Tuesday.

"Take care of yourself."

Hanging up the phone, Chen Ge lost his appetite. He pulled out the flyer from his pocket. Instead of waiting, he preferred to be active in his pursuit.

"What is the purpose of this society?"

When he was thinking, his phone rang again. This time, it was from Inspector Lee.

"Chen Ge, come to Western Jiujiang's police station immediately! We found the killer who forced the girl from Western Jiujiang's Private Academy to commit suicide four years ago!"

Chapter 233 - Zhu Xiu

Chapter 233: Zhu Xiu

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“You’ve found the killer?” Chen Ge jumped up immediately. “Okay, I’ll be there in a minute!”

Chen Ge grabbed his jacket and dashed out of the Haunted House. The first date in his life had been at a haunted school with a Red Specter. There had been no excitement or joy during his first date, but he did familiarize himself with the sad past of a girl. Falling from a high building, lying in the pool of her own blood. Pain had assaulted her from everywhere, but death had taken its sweet time to arrive.

...

Looking at the killer walking away from the scene, the truth had thus been buried. Her ballet shoes had slowly been dyed red, and the kind girl had morphed into a malicious specter. Zhang Ya had told Chen Ge everything, and the only one who could speak on her behalf was him. Chen Ge took a taxi to the police station.

Ah Yong, who waited outside, recognized Chen Ge at first glance. “Inspector Lee is in the room on the left.”

“Thank you.”

The office was small, and Inspector Lee was in it alone. “You’re finally here, take a seat.”

When Chen Ge saw that there was only Inspector Lee in the room, he had a very bad feeling. “Has the killer been confirmed? Didn’t you say the pool of suspects still has three people?”

“Nah, it’s been confirmed. It’s him.” Inspector Lee picked up a file from the desk to retrieve a photograph. “The man’s name is Zhu Xiu. He was the manager for the equipment room at Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy. There was nothing to his name. At the same time, he was the headmaster’s youngest son and the ex-husband of the dance teacher, Sun Meijing.”

The picture had been taken from a surveillance video. A thin man was captured in the picture. He sat at a roadside stall. Many beer cans crowded the dirty table.

“Are you sure?” Zhang Ya had once replayed the original scene using the mirror in the dance studio. Chen Ge had not gotten a good look of the killer’s face, but he did have a sense of the man’s physical body. The killer in the mirror was large, completely different from the man in the picture.

“Initially, we also only saw him as one of the suspects. Our focus was on the physical education teachers and guest teachers of the Private Academy. When we did our interview, Zhu Xiu’s ex-wife, Sun Meijing, accidentally revealed an important detail to us.”

“What did she say?”

“Her lips were tight and refused to say anything, but we discovered a picture that she had posted online many years ago.” Inspector Lee took out his phone, and it was the picture of a couple that he showed to Chen Ge. The woman looked normal, but she kept her figure tight and fit. The man looked younger than the woman, but he was large. He appeared to weigh about 180 kilograms.

“This man is Zhu Xiu from five years ago.” Comparing the man in the picture and the man in real life, they were completely different. “In five years, Zhu Xiu has lost about 60 kg; this attracted our attention. When we investigated deeper, we discovered that this man has no stable job but has a great spending habit, and most importantly, he appears to be a hoarder.”

Inspector Lee took out another photograph. “After Zhu Xiu’s father passed away, Sun Meijing filed for a divorce. The house went to Sun Meijing, and he has been living inside rental home. We found his landlord, and using ‘fixing an electrical line’ as excuse, we looked around his room. His place was a huge mess and absolutely reeked. There were several pairs of female shoes hidden underneath his bed.”

The last picture was taken in secret, and it captured the situation inside Zhu Xiu’s room.

“His occupation, physical stature, and obsession match perfectly! It is ninety percent certain that he’s the killer!” Chen Ge hissed. This kind of person should be locked behind bars, awaiting the judgement of the law.

“But we only have circumstantial evidence. He had the motive and ability to commit the crime, but that doesn’t prove he’s the killer. We need more concrete evidence.” Inspector Lee rubbed his temple. “Now, I have good news and bad news—which do you want to listen to first?”

“Bad news,” Chen Ge said.

“Based on the clue you provided, we found that the other girls who were Zhu Xiu’s accomplices in forcing the girl to commit suicide have all mysteriously died. We do not have any living witnesses.”

Chen Ge could not do anything about that. The witnesses whom Inspector Lee wanted had been cursed inside chairs, and one of them had been made into candy and eaten.

“We couldn’t do anything to him without witnesses?”

“No, as long as we have concrete proof, we’ll get a guilty verdict as well. However, this case happened four or five years ago, so all the physical evidence has been ruined. Most importantly, the coroner’s report states that the girl committed suicide, and there was no sign of a physical altercation before her death.”

“That was because she was forced to jump! The bastard cornered her at the window! This is definitely a murder!” Chen Ge had seen that scene for himself in the mirror.

“That is not for me or you to decide. We need evidence.” Inspector Lee put away all the pictures. “Now, do you want to listen to the good news?”

“Okay.”

“Somehow, Zhu Xiu found out we were onto him. On the second day of our investigation, he disappeared.” Inspector Lee removed the remaining pictures from a document.

“How is that good news?” Chen Ge could not understand. He turned to look at the pictures on the table.

“Refusing to cooperate and obstruction of justice enable us to take more forceful advances like asking for aid from other stations.” Inspector Lee said many things, but they fell on deaf ears. Chen Ge picked up one of the pictures, and his eyes were shaking. “Why is this picture here?”

Inspector Lee glanced at it. "That is the last picture we have of Zhu Xiu. Apparently, he disappeared inside this building."

"Why would he go there?" Chen Ge narrowed his eyes. The building in the picture was the third building of Fang Hwa Apartments!

"We're also wondering about that." Inspector Lee did not know why Chen Ge was acting this way. "After further investigation, we realized that this was not the first time Zhu Xiu visited Fang Hwa Apartments. We pulled the surveillance footage for the most recent three months and realized that Zhu Xiu has visited the third block three times, and interestingly enough, his visits were all at midnight, Tuesday midnight to be exact."

"How long does he spend there each time?"

"About ten minutes."

"Can you give me an exact time frame?"

"He would arrive at Tuesday night 11:50 pm and then leave right after midnight. No one knows what he is up to." Inspector Lee stated his suspicions. "The man seems to know that his sin will be exposed sooner or later and thus is finding an escape route for himself."

"After the midnight of Tuesday, it would be Wednesday." Chen Ge placed the picture down. The number three kept appearing. Now, he suspected that Zhu Xiu had received the flyer from the ghost stories society. The man tried to search for the society but had failed so far.

"Fang Hwa Apartments is now the focus of our investigation, but the main city is currently dealing with a big case, and we do not have enough manpower to cover the whole building." Inspector Lee had his own difficulties. "We might need to wait another few days, but don't worry. Catching him will be easy, but the difficult part will be collecting enough evidence to charge him."

"I understand." Chen Ge memorized all the pictures on the table in his mind. "Thank you, Uncle Lee!"

"What are you thanking me for? I'm just doing my job." Years of experience made Inspector Lee realize that something was wrong with Chen Ge's tone.

"Okay, if there's nothing else, I'll be leaving."

“Be careful.”

“Don’t worry.”

After leaving the station, Chen Ge reached his hands into his pocket to pinch at the flyer inside it.

“After today, it’ll be Wednesday.”

Chapter 234 - No One Else

Chapter 234: No One Else

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Looking at Chen Ge's back, Inspector Lee felt worried. He called for Ah Yong to come in. "I have something to do tonight, so I'll be leaving now."

"Is it related to Chen Ge?"

...

"Yes, after his parents disappeared, he has managed to keep a cool head no matter what happened. This is the first time I've seen him react so harshly to something." Inspector Lee placed the file back on his table. "Inform the officers on night shift to not let their guard down. There might be an emergency tonight."

"Okay."

Inspector Lee changed into his casual clothes and left.

...

After leaving the police station, Chen Ge called a cab to return to New Century Park. He locked himself up in the staff breakroom. The killer who forced Zhang Ya to commit suicide should be searching for the ghost stories society as well. He was last seen at the third building of Fang Hwa Apartments. There's a high chance that he has entered the 24th floor and found the society.

Chen Ge knew nothing about the society, and the flyer he had only introduced the address.

Zhang Ya's death happened many years ago, and too much time has passed since then. Even if the police catch Zhu Xiu, it will be difficult to prove his crime. They'll need concrete evidence. Chen Ge was not a law student and had not done anything related to law, so he was not sure what the punishment would be for a man who forced a girl to commit suicide.

If you make a mistake, you have to face the consequences. Chen Ge took out the flyer. Perhaps I should let Zhang Ya handle this herself. My mission now is to locate that bastard.

The blood red door that was half-open caught Chen Ge's attention. This was the society's logo.

Taking the elevator at midnight, repeating at every floor and press the button for the 24th floor will bring me to the ghost stories society.

There were other warnings written at the bottom of the flyer.

"This has to be done at midnight and alone. If other passengers enter the elevator in the middle of the process, you will need to start from the beginning. No matter what you see in the corridors during this process, you cannot step out of the elevator.

"Whether you find the society or not, you have to bring a mask with you. Every member of the society has to hide their real identity, and they are forbidden from revealing their own information or asking about others.

"The last and most important point is, no member is allowed to reveal any information about the ghost stories society, and they cannot let a second person know they're looking for the society."

Chen Ge could satisfy all these requirements.

I can go alone, but they didn't say I can't bring the undead with me. Chen Ge took the ballpoint pen and the tape with him. He thought about it and still believed it was not enough.

There is too much of a limitation on Xu Yin's power. He'll only be useful when the tape is playing, but it's too inconvenient to carry a tape recorder.

He walked around the Haunted House and decided to carry Xiaoxiao with him. It's unclear whether the members of the society are people or ghosts. Carrying Doctor Skull-cracker's hammer and the cleaver might cause them to be unnecessarily alert.

But it's better to be careful.

Chen Ge used a piece of string to tie the cleaver that was covered in red cloth around his calf. He decided to give up on the hammer; that thing was too eye-catching. That's everything I can do for now.

After inspecting all his gadgets, Chen Ge went online to order a thin recorder, but he needed to wait until tomorrow for this order to arrive. Chen Ge took a pen and some paper to jot down everything he needed to pay attention to that night.

At 10:30 pm, his phone finished charging, and Chen Ge left the Haunted House to head for Fang Hwa Apartments.

The night was dark; there was no moon or stars. It was a different world inside and outside the taxi. Chen Ge felt like he was a visitor, passing through a colorful world.

Chen Ge arrived at Fang Hwa Apartments at around 11 pm. His plan had been to sneak through the backdoor, but when he glanced at the security post, his plan changed.

“Gu Feiyu? You’re already back at work?” Chen Ge saw the young man inside the post wearing his security uniform and was surprised. It had only been one or two days since the madwoman captured him, but he was already back at his post.

“Brother Chen, why are you back here?” Gu Feiyu was embarrassed. Facing Chen Ge again, his attitude was completely different.

“Something to do here and came to check up on you.” Chen Ge smiled. “How are you recovering? Why don’t you take a few days of rest?”

“I came to the city with my uncle. One day of hospitalization costs three days of pay. In fact, it was my uncle and family who helped me pay the medical fees for that night.” This shamed Gu Feiyu. “I’ve been here for a month already. I haven’t collected any money but keep creating problems for others.”

“That’s nice of you to think about them.” Chen Ge took out his phone. “I’ll be leaving for the third block in a minute, and I have a favor to ask of you.”

“Sure, anything you need.” Chen Ge had once saved his life, so naturally, Gu Feiyu would not reject.

“Listen closely.” Chen Ge changed both of their call alerts to the simplest vibration mode. “If you receive my call after midnight, do not pick it up. If I hang up after it rings three times, I need you to do something very simple for me.”

“What is it?”

“Call the police immediately.”

Gu Feiyu had more questions but was stopped by Chen Ge. “Just follow my instructions. Remember, do not answer the call, just call the police.”

“Understood.” Ever since Gu Feiyu was saved by Chen Ge, he had felt that Chen Ge was destined for something big.

After leaving the security post, Chen Ge entered Fang Hwa Apartments and headed for the third building. The building looked so normal on the surface, but it played host to the ghost stories society.

If I run into anyone else during the process, I'll have to start over. If this were any other building, the chance of failure would be very high, but this building is different. According to Wang Xin's adopted mother, none of the tenants use the elevator at night because the place is cursed. Thinking about, the supernatural experiences they had are probably related to the ghost stories society. They probably came across people or 'ghosts' looking for the society.

Chen Ge hid inside the stairwell until 11:30 pm. The floor that the elevator was on had not changed, meaning that the elevator was vacated. Perhaps it was the changing of the day, but as the time moved forward, Chen Ge felt the temperature in the building continue to drop.

The temperature inside the building is even lower than outside. Have all the tenants gotten used to this?

At 11:50 pm, Chen Ge exited the stairwell to walk to the elevator. I shouldn't run into anyone else now.

Chapter 235 - The Old Lady Outside the Elevator

Chapter 235: The Old Lady Outside the Elevator

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After entering the elevator, Chen Ge pressed the button for the 23rd floor. The silvery-gray door slowly closed as if separating him from the outside world. Chen Ge's breathing turned ragged. He did not like taking the elevator—not because he had claustrophobia but because he did not like the feeling of being trapped in an enclosed space.

The elevator's number kept jumping.

...

Looks like Wang Xin's mother was right; the tenants here rarely take the elevator at night.

The elevator rose quickly, and the number soon hit 23. The chime sounded, and the door opened. The light filtered out from inside the elevator before it was swallowed by the darkness of the corridor. Shut doors lined the corridor on both sides.

Reached the top so quickly?

The 23rd floor did not look so different from the other floors except for the window at the end of the corridor, which was left open, so Chen Ge could hear the howling wind.

It does feel weird taking the elevator alone at night.

After the door closed, Chen Ge pressed the button for the 2nd floor. The elevator descended, and he soon arrived at the second floor.

What is the meaning of this design? Repeating this will really get me to the hidden 24th floor?

The door closed, and Chen Ge went up to the 22nd floor. When the elevator started and stopped, its speed would change, creating a temporary shift in the gravity. This was the reason certain people would feel lightheaded whenever they took the elevator.

Chen Ge had always had a good physical body, but the continuous going up and down for five minutes still made him feel quite uncomfortable. His heart was racing. He was unable to calm down, like something was about to happen. After he repeated this several times, he had a bad feeling in his heart even though he did not know why.

The elevator went from the 18th floor to the 7th floor, and he pressed for it to go to the 17th floor. There were no accidents throughout the whole process, and this instruction given by the ghost stories society felt more like a psychological game.

The elevator continued to rise, and the number kept changing. The elevator slowed down, and the door slowly opened. Chen Ge leaned out to take a look.

There was nothing on the corridor. The tenants appeared to be sleeping, and the place was quiet.

I've been lucky enough to not run into anyone so far. After few more times of time, I should be able to reach the 24th floor.

Chen Ge had gotten used to the process. When he pressed the button, his eyes went to the number. The red number made his arm hang in mid-air.

16?

He swore that he was heading toward the 17th floor. The button for the 17th floor on the elevator control panel was still lit up, but the elevator had stopped mysteriously on the 16th floor.

Someone has called for the elevator on this floor!

He bent down and lowered his right hand to touch the cleaver around his calf. Chen Ge looked around the empty elevator, staying on high alert. The corridor outside was completely dark; he could not see more than ten meters beyond him. The surroundings were quiet.

Could it be a prank?

That idea was immediately rejected by Chen Ge.

Several seconds later, the door slowly closed. Chen Ge looked at the empty elevator, but he didn't dare to let his guard down. They could have been something that he could not see standing near him. He reached into this left pocket. He glanced at the time on his phone—00:01 am. It was already Wednesday.

The elevator continued to move upward and stopped at the 17th floor. Chen Ge leaned against the wall and pressed the button for the eighth floor, but something else happened not long after that.

The elevator stopped on the 11th floor, and after the door opened, Chen Ge saw a white dress hanging in the middle of the corridor.

Something else is getting on the elevator?

There was no wind in the corridor, but the dress kept swaying like it was moving toward the elevator. With one step, Chen Ge reached to press the close door button. The dress swayed even harder like someone running in the corridor.

*Close the f*cking door!*

When the dress was two to three meters away, the door closed, and the elevator continued to descend. Chen Ge collapsed to the corner, and his palms were coated with cold sweat. From that moment onward, this building had changed. The elevator reached the 8th floor safely, and Chen Ge decided to wait on that floor for a while.

According to the flyer's introduction, he should be heading for the 16th floor next, but if the elevator moved to the 16th, it would definitely pass the floor with the white dress. He was afraid that the elevator would open on its own on the 11th floor, the white dress outside waiting.

His finger stopped at the control panel for a long time as he tried to convince himself.

I have the Pen Spirit and Xu Yin with me. If the thing dares to do anything, I have the advantage in numbers.

The elevator rose, and when it reached 11th, Chen Ge's heart skipped a beat. But to his surprise, the elevator did not stop. The number continued to change. Before he could take a breath, however, the elevator stopped at the 13th floor.

Someone else is coming in?

The door slowly opened. There was an old woman wearing dark clothes and a thick scarf standing outside the elevator. She looked very old, the wrinkles on her face like folds. Her hair was completely silver, and her limbs were all covered by her thick clothing.

The old lady did not seem to expect anyone to be inside the elevator and surprise crossed her face.

“Weird...” Her voice was soft. The elevator door closed, and she did not move toward it. “Why are there so many people taking the elevator so late at night? There’s not even enough space for me.”

When Chen Ge heard the old lady, cold sweat broke out on his forehead. It looked like he really did not have the advantage in numbers. No wonder the Pen Spirit has been acting so calmly. She didn’t even warn me.

He looked around, but he could only see himself inside the elevator. Thinking back to what the old lady said, Chen Ge’s heart raced even faster.

Something must be wrong somewhere. Even inside the Third Sick Hall, I wasn’t this nervous. Chen Ge tried to calm down, but there was something stuck in his mind, telling him that he was in deep danger.

That old lady is suspicious as well. Wearing all black and a scarf so late at night, is she that cold?

After meeting the old lady, the rest of the trip continued without further incidents. It was just as she said, the elevator was already full, so the people on the outside could not enter it even if they wanted to.

Chapter 236 - Four New Members

Chapter 236: Four New Members

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The elevator finally opened at the 12th floor, the middle floor of the building.

The game is over, but the 24th floor hasn't appeared.

...

The elevator opened to a darkened corridor, and Chen Ge stood within the elevator as he took out the ghost stories society's flyer. 1st floor corresponds to the 23rd floor, and the 2nd floor corresponds to the 22nd floor, but the 12th floor is right in the middle; there's no corresponding floor.

Chen Ge thought about it but could not be sure whether he had been successful or not. Is it because of the old woman? Is that why I failed? Should I try again?

It was already Wednesday. Standing inside the elevator, looking out, Chen Ge felt unsettled. "There are 24 numbers on the elevator, but there is no button for the 24th floor on the control panel. Is this a mistake by the elevator company, or is there a second meaning?"

Chen Ge would not give up so easily, so he decided to go back up to the top floor. He pressed the button for the 23rd floor, and the elevator started to climb. The number kept changing, and it did not stop.

20, 21, 22...

Chen Ge looked at the number, and when the number changed from 22 to 23, unlike before, the elevator did not slow down. The number deepened like it was bleeding. The enclosed elevator booth suddenly gathered a cold gust, and weird sounds could be heard coming from outside the elevator.

Chen Ge stood in the corner and half-arched his body. His fingers reached toward the cleaver tied to his calf. After about two seconds, the elevator started to slow. When the elevator completely stopped, the number on display lit up.

The 24th floor!

The silvery-gray door opened, and as the two halves parted, a sticky substance that looked suspiciously like blood was stuck to them. A stench surged into the booth like a wave. Covering his lips and nose, Chen Ge was very familiar with this smell. He had smelled something similar when he was at Hai Ming Apartments and the Third Sick Hall.

This smell seems to be unique to the monsters behind the door!

The elevator door opened fully. Chen Ge looked down the corridor, and he started to hesitate. He did not walk out immediately but changed the speed dial on his phone to Gu Feiyu's number. Even though this added an extra procedure to calling the cops, it could prevent the emergency call to the police from exposing his identity.

When he set up everything, Chen Ge removed one other thing from his pocket. Before he arrived, he had also been wondering if he should bring this out of the Haunted House.

There is a requirement on the flyer that since all the members are not allowed to reveal their information, they must wear a mask.

There were plenty of masks inside Chen Ge's Haunted House, but the one he was most comfortable with was the skin mask for Doctor Skull-cracker. With this, it should be easier for me to join the group of insane people.

It was understandably unnatural since this was the first time he had put on the mask outside of the Haunted House. However, now was not the time to be concerned about these details.

Exiting the elevator, Chen Ge turned back to look. On the walls beside the elevator door, there were some blood stains and blood prints like people were struggling to crawl toward the elevator but were cruelly pulled back.

The elevator slowly closed, and it did not return after it left.

How am I supposed to leave?

There had to be a way—that was the only thing Chen Ge could think of to console himself. He inspected everything he had before moving down the corridor.

When he was inside the elevator, Chen Ge could hear people's screams, but now that he was outside, he realized that the place was suspiciously quiet. All the doors were locked, and there was no sound coming out from within.

It doesn't seem like there is anyone alive on this floor.

As he moved forward, the light dimmed, and more blood stains appeared on the wall.

Will the society be in one of these rooms?

Chen Ge walked for about ten meters when he came across a door that was open. He sidled carefully toward it. He was about to enter when a person wearing a bird's mask suddenly came out from it.

Chen Ge stopped moving, but the birdman jumped back like he was spooked. Chen Ge did not speak. In this unfamiliar environment, the more he said, the greater the danger he put himself in.

Both were silent. After several breaths, the birdman asked with suspicion, "A new member?"

"Yes." Chen Ge changed his voice to make it sound gravellier and lower.

"But three new members have already arrived today, why is there a fourth one?" Birdman blocked Chen Ge's path. "How did you find this place?"

Chen Ge showed the man the flyer for the ghost stories society. The man glanced at it, and his curiosity deepened. "This is indeed a flyer that we sent out, but how can there be a fourth one?"

He leaned toward Chen Ge until the beak on his mask was almost touching Chen Ge's face.

"You smell nice..." The birdman closed the door behind him and said with uncertainty, "Come with me."

Chen Ge followed with his head lowered. His eyes twitched. When the birdman was closing the door, he tried to glance inside the room. A few wooden boxes sat in the dark room. One of the boxes had not been sealed—an arm was poking out from it. There was a circular hole in the middle of the palm like it had been poked through by a bird's pecking.

Following the birdman, they reached the end of the corridor.

"Go in." He pointed at the door at the end of the corridor.

"Okay."

Chen Ge did not waste time. He opened the door and waited for two seconds to make sure this was not an ambush before walking in. When he saw what was inside, Chen Ge sucked in a cold breath.

The room was bigger than he had expected. There was a long dining table in the middle of the room, and sitting on its sides were ten people with faceless masks and dark robes, five on the left and five on the right. There were three people in casual outfits standing to the side.

Thirteen of them...

In a few seconds, Chen Ge memorized the characteristics of everyone there. Is it because of the light? How come the five on the left don't have shadows but the five on the right do?

"Get in, our fourth new member. Good luck." The birdman did not give Chen Ge any chance to run and slammed the door shut.

The sound was loud, and it attracted the attention of everyone in the room. All the masks turned toward Chen Ge.

"Why is there a fourth new member?" The man who sat on the first seat to the right stood up. His voice sounded sharp, and there was a cigarette burn on his exposed pinkie.

"Do not interrupt someone's story," the first person on the left said in a faded tone. He sounded disgruntled.

"But how can there be four new members?" The man on the right took his seat back.

"It doesn't matter. After all, in the end, there'll only be three people left," the man on the left said darkly. When he said so, the three new members who stood by the dining table became nervous.

Chapter 237 - Tell Me Your Story

Chapter 237: Tell Me Your Story

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Only three will remain...

Chen Ge's heart chilled. Considering the situation, being abandoned probably meant death.

...

"Go over there. You still haven't earned the right to sit with us," the fifth person on the right said. He was closest to Chen Ge, and he eyed him with interest. "I like your mask."

Chen Ge ignored him and walked to stand beside the three new members.

"No. 1, continue your story. This time, no one will interrupt you." The first man on the left seemed to be the backbone of the society; his word was the law.

The new member dubbed No. 1 looked old. He was wearing a black mask that covered his whole face, but it exposed his white hair. His limbs were slender, and he looked weak. His skin was sagging, and old people's spots could be seen on his exposed arms.

"Then I shall continue the story." No. 1 coughed. He had a habit of waving his arm around when he spoke, so he gave people a humorous feeling.

"This incident happened at the People's Hospital. I saw it with my own eyes, so it is definitely real. I am the victim of lung cancer and have been receiving treatment at the hospital. I stayed inside ICU.

"There was an old man who shared the room with me. I have no idea what kind of illness he was suffering from, but I know that he was in deep pain, moving along the boundary of life and death.

"This story starts one week ago at night. He was a light sleeper and would wake up from the slightest sound. That night, I suddenly realized that the old man wasn't asleep. He had his eyes open, looking in a certain direction in the room.

"I also turned to look, but there was nothing there. I turned on the light to ask him what he was looking at. He said, there was someone standing there.

"When I asked him for the person's description—what he looked like, what he was wearing—the old man stammered for his answer. Around midnight the next day, I felt that the room was rather cold. When I woke up, I realized that the old man in the bed next to me was looking at me with his eyes bulging.

"I was given the shock of my life. After I turned on the light, the man turned his head to the side. No matter what I asked, he refused to say anything.

"I didn't dare turn the bedside lamp off when I settled down on the third night. The small light gave the comfort I needed to sleep until morning. However, when I woke up, I realized that there were dusty footprints on the bed and mattress, like someone had been standing on my bed the previous night.

"It unhinged me, and I didn't dare fall asleep. I felt like the moment I did, something bad would happen. I only dared sleep in the day and kept myself awake at night.

"Nothing happened on the fourth day, but on the night of the fifth day, I saw something scary.

"The old man stood up from his bed after midnight. He stood on his tiptoes just like this..."

No. 1's arms dangled at his side, mimicking the old man. He stood on his tiptoes and jumped around the room. It looked quite frightening.

"The old man walked around my bed several times. I didn't know what he was doing. His face collapsed within, but his eyes poked out. The wrinkles on his face were folded together. I yelled to wake him up. He returned to his bed, but his eyes kept staring at the door.

"He said that someone was calling his name from the outside, but he didn't know whether he should answer the door or not.

"On the sixth day, after night fell, the old man's conditions worsened. He had troubles and could not speak due to the endless coughs. It felt like something was stuck in his trachea. The doctor performed an emergency operation, and his conditions finally stabilized after 11 pm. However, his face turned paler, like there was a gray mist hanging over his face.

“After midnight, the old man opened his eyes again. He stared at the door, and his mouth kept mumbling something. When it was 1 am, the old man got out of bed and used that weird stance to move out of the room. He has not been seen since then.”

When he was done, No. 1 started to cough again. He looked very fragile.

“Fascinating story.” The first man on the left nodded.

“Thank you for the compliment.” No. 1’s laugh sounded like the cawing of a crow; it was grating to the ears.

The people on both sides of the table leaned in to critique No. 1’s story. Chen Ge stood at the back silently, making his own judgment. He had realized that something was off when the old man spoke his first sentence.

According to the old man, he had been staying inside the ICU room, but according to Chen Ge’s knowledge, most of the ICU rooms in Jiujiang were single rooms, so there should not have been a shared room.

In the beginning, he had thought the old man was lying, but the more he listened, the more he was able to confirm that the old man was telling his own story. He was the ill patient who had run out of the hospital on his tiptoes!

In terms of timeline, it was entirely plausible. No. 1’s story started one week ago, and it was on the midnight of the sixth day that he escaped the hospital. That day would be the seventh day.

The ghost stories society requested that every single story shared be real, and none of the people at the table had any objections, so that meant the old man’s story was probably real. Chen Ge lowered his head to glance at No. 1’s feet out from the corner of his eyes; the man did not seem to have a shadow.

“No. 1’s story is very interesting, a good beginning. Now we shall listen to No. 2’s story,” the first man on the left said, and the other people immediately became quiet.

“It’s your turn, No. 2.” No. 1 was weirdly excited, and he kept coughing.

No. 2 was wearing a smelly jacket and was wearing a plastic pig’s mask that one could buy from roadside stalls. He was almost Chen Ge’s height, but he was very thin.

“It was my ex-wife who told me this story, but I can guarantee it is real. She was the dance teacher for a school, and there was an extremely talented girl in her class. Be it from looks, ability, or physicality, she was leaps and bounds ahead of others.” No. 2 coughed slightly. “The child was like the real white swan, and in comparison, the other students were nothing more than ugly ducklings.

“The story started several years ago when my ex-wife selected six girls from her class to form a dance troupe to enter the city’s dance competition. Out of envy, the five girls grouped up to isolate the most talented student.

“During the competition, the most talented girl practically carried them to victory, but no one invited her for the celebratory party.

“To prepare for the provincial competition, the six of them started to train during summer break, and the real conflict exploded then.”

Chapter 238 - Found You!

Chapter 238: Found You!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“The brighter the girl shone, the more envious the other girls became. The truth was, even if she did not do anything, others ostracized her. Sometimes, being loved by God was not necessarily a good thing. After all, most of us are demons.

“Of the five girls, one of them was in love, and what happened next could not have been more common. She wrote a love letter for her confession, but the boy did not like her at all. In fact, he only approached her because he wanted to know more about the other girl.

...

“After she discovered everything, envy and shame pushed her into a crazy decision. She found the worker who managed the equipment, and they came up with plan to ruin that girl.

“As the date drew closer to the competition, the six girls went to the dance studio to practice every afternoon. Because it was summer break, the school was vacant. The other girls played nice with the girl, and in her innocence, the girl really thought that they wanted to be her friend.

“She volunteered to take on many chores and even made homemade candy to give her ‘friends’.

“However, she should have known it was all a trap. It was her ‘friends’ who pushed her into the depths of hell.”

No. 2 was still telling his story, but Chen Ge’s fingers were already clenched.Found you!

The killer was telling his story of sin to everyone there, and there was no regret in his voice.

Zhang Ya... Chen Ge called in his heart. Knowing the whole story added a different emotion in Chen Ge’s heart. It was heartache. The color of his shadow changed, but Zhang Ya did not appear. Perhaps she had eaten too many ghosts at Third Sick Hall and was still digesting them.

As if knowing something was up, No. 2 glanced at Chen Ge.

“The girl called for her ‘friends’ to help, but instead of coming to help her, one of them took out a love letter from her backpack. It had been written by the boy she loved, but the recipient was not her.

“The cornered girl looked at the window behind her. She fell from the fourth floor, and blood blossomed around her. Even then, she was beautiful.

“She was still alive. She could not make a single noise, and her eyes were open, staring at her ‘friends’ who abandoned her.

“Her white ballet dress was dyed blood red. No one knew her exact time of death, and her body wasn’t discovered until the next day.”

With every single sentence, the blood lines in Chen Ge’s shadow deepened slightly. After consuming two thin monsters and a large part of the Red Specter that was the old director, something seemed to have changed within Zhang Ya. Chen Ge had no way of summoning Zhang Ya. Zhang Ya had aided him thrice, but every time, she had appeared of her own volition.

“Other than the wounds from the fall, there were no other injuries on the girl’s body. With the testimonies from the ugly ducklings, her case was deemed a suicide.”

No. 2 could keep his calmness initially, but as he talked, his breathing started to get ragged, and he kept looking at Chen Ge. He seemed to have noticed something, and he sped up to tell the ending of the five girls. They would receive unknown love letters written in blood at night, and the girl who received it would die a week later due to unknown reasons. Coincidentally enough, all of them had ended up in a chair.

“The school rumor says that it’s a cursed musical chair game, but the truth is the girl has returned as a specter and has been roaming the dance studio.”

No. 2 took a step back. “That’s the end.”

“The plot is not bad, but your pacing is all over the place. In the future, you will have to learn how to tell a good story from others.”

The man on the right yawned before turning to the other side of the table. "What do you guys think?"

"At least it's interesting, unlike the new member from last week." The first man on the left tapped his finger on the table, his eyes shining coldly. The man on the right laughed before adding, "Since he has passed, it's No. 3's turn."

"Wait a minute," the man on the left said. His gaze slowly moved away from No. 2 toward Chen Ge. "No. 2, No. 4, do you two know each other?"

Chen Ge had not expected the man to be so astute. Zhang Ya did not give him any response, so he could only try to drag things out.

"No, we don't know each other," No. 2 said. He also was surprised that his slight tell had been caught by the man.

"Since you don't know him, why did you keep looking at him both consciously and unconsciously when you told your story?"

After the man said that, all the masks seated at the table turned to look at No. 2 and Chen Ge. Gazes that were sharp as knife penetrated them.

The atmosphere in the room tensed. Chen Ge kept calling for Zhang Ya in his heart, but there was no reply. However, the blood lines in his shadow did turn redder. In comparison, No. 2 was more honest. "He makes me feel uncomfortable. There's a voice in my head telling me this person is dangerous."

"Dangerous?" The masks focused on Chen Ge. "A dangerous new member?"

"Is it because of his mask?" asked the person who had expressed an interest in Chen Ge's mask earlier. Holding his chin, he seemed to be admiring Chen Ge's mask. "It is indeed a work of art. One day, it'll be mine."

The man did technically help take the focus away from Chen Ge. The first man on the left did not press. He shrugged and said, "No. 3, let us hear your story."

Of the four new members, only No. 3 was a woman. Her height and weight were average.

“My surname is Zhong, and I work at a chemical plant.” The woman touched the homemade mask on her face, and her first sentence made everyone frown.

“Miss Zhong, for the sake of your safety, please do not reveal any private information,” the man on the right warned, but the woman did not seem to mind it.

“The story I wish to tell is related to my wife.” The woman’s voice was soothing like the chirping of a bird. “She was four years younger than me and was a DJ for a midnight radio show.

“Her time slot was between midnight and 2 am, so she would return home late every night. When we first got married, I would wait for her to come home so that we could fall asleep together, but since I had work early each morning, I only managed this for a while.

“I would make dinner for two of us and left her a note, telling her to warm it up when she returned home.

“Initially, it was still fine, but starting from one night, my wife stopped touching the food left on the table. When I woke up the next morning, the food looked untouched, but the cooking utensils in the kitchen showed signs of use.

“My wife seemed to be cooking in the dark.”

Chapter 239 - My Turn?

Chapter 239: My Turn?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Initially, I thought it was because my cooking was not to her taste, so I didn’t mind it that much. However, I soon realized that things were different. One late night, I woke up from my sleep due to a sound coming from the kitchen. I climbed out of bed silently.

“The house was dark, so I assumed it was a thief. When I got close, I realized that the person looked like my wife. She picked up a large piece of meat from a plastic bag and held a cleaver in her other hand.

...

“Cleaving meat would create a loud sound. Probably afraid of waking me, she only cut the meat’s surface open, seasoned it, and then placed it whole inside the pot.

“Making stew? My wife was making stew in the middle of the night? Perhaps she was preparing for tomorrow’s breakfast and lunch. I loved my wife. Even though I thought it was weird, I didn’t disturb her. I returned to our room and observed her through the open door.

“It was 3 am when the stew was ready. She looked behind her. She saw that the bedroom door was open and I was sleeping in bed. As if not willing for me to see her, she closed the kitchen door.

“Then I heard the sound of chomping. About twenty minutes later, my wife came out of the kitchen holding a large black garbage bag. For some reason, I was scared when I saw her.

“Her stomach was slightly bloated, and there were oil stains on her face. She had a satisfied smile. After tossing the garbage bag away, she went to take a bath to wash the odor away from her body. Finally, she lay down beside me like usual.

“The person sleeping next to me had this habit. From that day onwards, I realized that I did not know her at all. I was awake the whole night. I got out from bed in the morning, preparing to go to work. My wife was still sleeping soundly.

“She looked just like Sleeping Beauty. It made me want to kiss her, but the things that had happened in the kitchen the previous night stopped me.

“I looked at her stomach; it was no longer that bloated. Everything that had happened the previous night was just like a dream. I put on my clothes and headed downstairs. The rubbish bin had been cleaned, and the black garbage bag from last night was gone.

“The same thing happened again the next night. She seemed to have fallen ill with some kind of meat-eating compulsion. I spent the night awake, observing her. I waited until 4 am, and my wife had fallen asleep. Then I put on my clothes and headed out.

“I rummaged through the pile of rubbish and finally found the black garbage bag. It was filled with bones with teeth marks on them. It looked like a chicken. My wife had managed to consume a whole chicken on her own. I suddenly realized that I did not know her at all.

“A new day arrived, but she was still so weird. I also made it a habit to rummage through her rubbish every night. The more I saw, the more chilled my heart became.

“My wife seemed to be trying different meat, from the initial chicken and fish to bags that I found attached with the fur of cats and dogs.

“I was an animal lover, and it was that day that I knew I have to talk to her. She must have fallen ill, or maybe a demon had moved into her stomach. No one would allow the person sleeping beside them to do something like this.

“I confronted her. Initially, she denied it, but when I offered the garbage bags as evidence, she knew that she was cornered. She told me that she could not control herself. She would get unreasonably hungry at night, but other than that, she was just like a normal person.

“She said that she would take good care of me and love me, but who would be willing to sleep with a crazy person?

“After much consideration, I decided to opt for a divorce, to end the marriage as soon as possible. My wife begged me to stay, and I really did still love her, but her actions worried me deeply.

“I left her and moved out to live alone. My wife still loved me. She would call me and message me daily, trying to get me back. To be honest, other than that quirk, she was perfect, kind and fair, pretty and gentle.

“Slowly, guilt formed in my heart. About one month later, I received a call from a stranger. He said that he was the police. He suspected that my wife was related to a missing person case at the radio station. He asked me some questions and told me to be careful.

“I was glad that I had left my wife. If I had been several days too late, the person missing would be me. I returned to my rental home, and after reheating the food that had gone cold, I swallowed it quickly.

“After I was done, I swore that I was hallucinating. I saw my wife crawl out from underneath the bed.

“She looked at me with a smile and said I was still the same. Even after so long, I still had not changed the habit of not wasting leftovers.

“I didn’t know how she got into my home, but I did know that I wouldn’t be able to leave her again; I would be a part of her forever.”

The woman’s story ended there, and No. 2 and Chen Ge subconsciously moved away from her. The woman had told the story from the husband’s perspective, but according to her storyline, the husband was probably dead by now.

Therefore, the only living person who would know all this should be the wife. The wife’s job was a DJ, and the woman had a beautiful voice. Furthermore, the story kept beautifying the wife.

From these details, it was apparent that No. 3 was the crazy woman who liked to eat meat in the story.

“I haven’t heard such a wonderful story in a long time.” The man on the left clapped lightly. His eyes that landed on the woman looked slightly invasive. “The stories of all three new members are so interesting. It’ll be so hard to choose.”

Then, he raised his head to look at Chen Ge. The eyes underneath the mask locked on Chen Ge’s face. “No. 4, it’s your turn now.”

“It’s finally my turn?” Chen Ge was thinking many questions. No. 3 beside him had a very recognizable voice. Based on her voice alone, Chen Ge confirmed her identity. No. 3 was a late-night DJ for Jiujiang’s radio station. Her name was Lychee, and Chen Ge had even heard her show before.

Everyone anticipated Chen Ge's story. After all, he was the fourth new member that should not have been there. Chen Ge stood in the corner of the room, and no one could see the blood twisting in his shadow. The blood vessels were like needles and threads, slowly knitting a bright red dress.

"I have many stories. Let me think, which shall I share?"

Chapter 240 - Real Stories

Chapter 240: Real Stories

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“No. 4, before you start your story, I must warn you.” The first man on the right turned to look at Chen Ge. “The story you tell must be real. We have our own detection method, and if you’re fabricating a lie, there’ll be an appropriate punishment.”

“I know the rules.”

...

“Then begin.”

Chen Ge thought about it and prepared to tell his first story. “This is a real story that happened to my friend. His surname was Wang, and he loved his wife very much, but his wife mysteriously disappeared several months ago.

“He reported it to the police and looked for his wife all over the city, leaving missing person reports at every corner he went. Everyone pitied him, and the investigating police also realized that he really loved his wife to the stage of pampering her, so they understood his actions.

“However, there is no such thing as a real fairytale in this world. After half a year of searching, his wife had still not been found. The police had already given up, but he did not. This became his only drive to live. He left home very early every morning with the missing person notices and only returned home late at night.

“He repeated this day in and day out until, one day, his hard work was rewarded. He suddenly received a message from his wife.

“Save me...

“It was sent from his wife’s phone. It was short, but it sent endless terror in his heart!

“He was hiding a secret that he had not told anyone. Actually, he was responsible for his wife's disappearance. He had killed his wife and hidden her body. The endless search was to drain himself, to lighten the guilt he felt toward his wife. However, he didn't expect his dead wife to message him from beyond the grave.

"He hurriedly removed his wife's body from the hidden compartment in his house and drove to the countryside to bury her. He thought that was the end of the story, but scarier things happened.

"Whenever he woke up from his dream, his wife's clothes would appear in the bed beside him like his wife had returned in the night!

"But how could the person he buried return in the night?

"He woke up and returned to the countryside with his tools to move his wife deeper into the woods. However, no matter what he did, he would wake up to find his wife's stuff appearing around him. It was as if his wife had come back from the grave and would return to him after he fell asleep.

"He was increasingly scared, and his phone kept getting messages from his wife. However, he didn't have any recollection of receiving them. The only explanation was that they were sent after he fell asleep.

"Things only got worse from there. Sometimes when he woke up, he would discover he was wearing the clothes his wife died in. He was on the verge of collapse, and he knew the problem was with his wife. So, he returned to her grave to move her one last time.

"To prevent her from coming back again, he came up with a crazy idea—he was going to seal his wife inside the wall of an old apartment building.

"Seeing his wife merge into the wall, he sighed in the relief. This time, there was no way his wife was coming back." Chen Ge stopped abruptly. "That's the end of the story."

"That's it?" The two at the table were deep in the story. "Then what happened next? What happened to your friend?"

Chen Ge was telling Wang Qi's story. He wanted to say, That 'friend' met me and is now rotting in jail.

"Your story isn't finished, right?" the first man on the left said with annoyance.

“That’s all I know. If I continue, it would be a lie.” Chen Ge changed his voice to sound old. The first man on the left shared a look with the rest at the table, and they all turned to the fifth person on the left. The person was swallowed up by the black robe. Not one inch of skin was revealed.

Feeling everyone’s gaze, the person spoke. “I cannot get a clear reading, but his story should be real.”

“Not a bad story, but I don’t like this feeling.” The first man on the left placed his left hand on the table—that looked like how they voted. Of the other nine, eight placed their left hand on the table. Only the man who showed interest in Chen Ge’s mask did not move.

“One forfeit and nine in agreement. Looks like our main course for tonight has been decided.” The man on the left chuckled wickedly. The rest also looked at Chen Ge with viciousness.

Chen Ge tried calling Zhang Ya, but there was no response. He knew that if he did not do something, he was going to be in grave danger.

“Don’t be so hasty. This is just my first story.” Chen Ge was very calm. The mask on his face revealed a twisted smile. “Like I said, I have many stories.”

Initially, the other new members had sighed in relief, but they got tense again.

“Many stories?” The man who had interest in his mask studied Chen Ge. “The rules of the ghost stories society state that if you finish three completely real ghost stories that are approved, you can make a demand or choose to leave the society. So, if you can tell me another two real ghost stories, we might develop a different opinion of you.”

His statement was approved by the rest. Only the first man on the right hesitated. “No. 10, you seem to value this new member a lot.”

“I just feel he is very interesting.”

The black robed individuals seated at the table had their own numbers; they never referred to each other by name, not even nicknames.

“Real ghost stories aren’t so easily made. Normal person come across them once or twice and would have a mental breakdown already.” The man on the left retrieved his left hand from the table. “Hopefully, he won't be dumb enough to tell lies."

Chen Ge did not interrupt their exchanges. After all, he was trying to drag out the time.

"Tell us the rest of your stories."

"My second story is another real story that happened to my friend."

Chen Ge first told about how Fan Yu saw his parents fall into the well and how he lived in the house with his murderous aunt and house filled with ghosts. Then Chen Ge told the story about the Pen Spirit and the girl with depression. He realized that Zhang Ya had not awoken yet, so he also relayed the story about Men Nan's washing hair at night and the encroaching monster in his dream.

Finally, he stood at Xu Yin's perspective and told his bloody love story.

All his stories were real. When he was done, all the members were speechless. Just what kind of life he had lived?

His 'friends' were either sick or mad, and they would die every few years, but this fella was still alive and went there to share his story. Could it be that he was the real culprit behind all these stories?

Chapter 241 - Who Is the Chairperson?

Chapter 241: Who Is the Chairperson?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The room was extremely quiet. Even the two who liked to critique the most were quiet. The atmosphere around the dining table was weird. The ten black robes looked at one another, and they seemed to be communicating with gazes.

“If that’s not enough, I have other stories.” Chen Ge was buying time for Zhang Ya. He was not interested in the other members; he only had one target that night, which was to capture Zhu Xiu.

...

“You still have other stories?”

The dining table fell silent again. The first man on the right scratched his head before turning to the fifth person on the left. “No. 5, are all his stories real?”

Everyone then turned to this most mysterious No. 5. The black robe fluttered slightly, and a gender-neutral voice came from the mask. “I cannot detect any signs of deceit in his words.”

Five ghost stories, all real... what kind of ‘amazing’ life had he led?

“Looks like we have to redo the judging.” The man on the left moved his gaze to fall on the three other new members. “All of your stories are amazing, but we can only keep three new members.”

He placed his left hand on the table and extended one finger. The second vote had begun. Other people came to the decision equally quick. Six of them extended one finger.

“You got more than half of the votes.” The man on the left turned to No. 1. “I’m sorry, No. 1, but you can leave now.”

“Leave?” No. 1 started to panic and wanted to say something but was cut off by the man on the left.

“You can come back next Wednesday.”

The alert No. 1 was sent out of the room. The birdman had been waiting. When he saw it was not Chen Ge, he was rather surprised.

“Follow me.” The birdman led No. 1 away and closed the door.

When the door shut, the first man on the left finished his sentence. “Provided you can survive until the next Wednesday.”

The moment he said that, there was screaming from the corridor and then something heavy fell on the floor. No. 2’s legs shook. Earlier, four people had picked him. If there were two more votes, he would have been the one outside.

“Don’t worry, the new member lives on in another form.” The first man on the left softened his voice. “Welcome to the ghost stories society. You will be respectively No. 11, 12, and 13.”

Chen Ge came in last, so his number was 13. The blood in the shadow behind him grew obvious. Chen Ge, who had survived the first wave of danger, slowly relaxed. The ghost stories society was the hidden mission for the Third Sick Hall. It was related to the world behind the door, and the reward was probably Men Nan’s main persona, a Red Specter who could control the opening and closing of the ‘door’.

“I have a question,” the woman who was now No. 12 said. Her emotions had always been light. “The flyer says that I can find a way to soften the pain, so how do I do that?”

“Don’t worry, everyone here has once been in depths of pain. We’re all patients, and the purpose of building this society is to help everyone seek salvation.” The man on the right stared at the woman. “When you tell us three real ghost stories, we’ll find a way to help you according to your situation.”

Chen Ge listened quietly. He had initially thought that this society was a bunch of madmen playing with themselves, and he did not expect that it would have such a deep meaning behind it.

“How do you expect real ghost stories to happen so often?” When the woman was speaking, she turned to look at Chen Ge with slight alert.

“Ghost stories surround us—you haven’t been paying attention. All the words written on the flyer are real, and many members have sought salvation with us. There was once a member who had been tormented by her stepfather since she was young. She was whipped and drowned, making her fear water very much. After she came to us, her illness was fixed, and she no longer feared water.”

“How did you cure her?”

“Very simple, we forced her stepfather underwater and had her personally destroy the phobia in her heart.”

“That’s it?”

“Yes, it is that simple. Every one of us is sick, but we suffer from different conditions. The reasons for our illnesses are different. Don’t worry, when it’s your turn, we’ll draft a solution designed for you.” The man on the right’s voice was calm and confident. Chen Ge imagined a trustworthy face under that mask.

“You already know the condition. Once you can tell three real ghost stories, you can demand something from us, or you can choose to leave.” The man laughed and added with humor, “And it’ll be real that time.”

“Three ghost stories?” The woman lowered her head to think.

Listening to their conversation, Chen Ge was shocked. This is not therapy; it’s murder! Then again, only mad men would come up with these therapy methods.

Chen Ge’s gaze swept over everyone at the table. The patients from the Third Sick Hall were probably among them!

The devil from Room 10 and Wu Fei from Room 9, these two were probably the founders of the ghost stories society. They themselves were patients. In fact, Room 10 was filled with records of the devil’s suffering. In a way, no one could empathize with these crazy people more than them.

Since medicine could not solve their pain, they would provide treatment themselves, using the crazy method to give crazy people their salvation.

“Every new member is given the right to ask a question.” The man looked at No. 2 and Chen Ge. “Which one of you would like to go first.”

“I’ve run into some trouble recently. I have the police on my back.” When No. 2 said so, he raised his head to look around. No one reacted; this seemed to be something common here.

“I can probably guess your problem, another man pushed to the wall.” The man on the left leaned against the back of his chair. “We cannot help you solve that problem, but the society can provide you a place to stay. We can even let you stay forever.”

No. 2 nodded, slightly disappointed.

The room turned back to Chen Ge. “What is your question?”

“My question is simpler.” Chen Ge felt a chill run down his spine. He did not expect the monsters behind the door to work together with the patients from Third Sick Hall to organize something like this. After a long pause, he directly stated, “I want to know who the society’s chairperson is.”

“The chairperson?”

The black robes went silent once more. They looked at one another, and in the end, it was the first man on the left who spoke. “Change your question.”

“You cannot tell me?” The more they wanted to hide it, the more interested Chen Ge was.

“It’s not that,” the man on the right said. “We know the chairperson is among the ten of us, but which of us it is, we ourselves do not know.”

Chapter 242 - You Are My Next Story

Chapter 242: You Are My Next Story

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Even you don’t know who the chairperson is?” Chen Ge thought he could use this question to identify Wu Fei or Patient 10, but he did not expect this answer.

“Everyone wears a mask and has the same black robe on. Even if the people underneath the masks change, we won’t be able to tell.” The first man on the left pointed to himself. “I’m No. 1. Here, your number is more important than your name. If you do not wish to be replaced, you’d better be on full alert.”

...

His words were meant for No. 12. The woman’s voice was unique, and her story had exposed her husband’s surname and many details about her life. If one wanted to, one could definitely identify her.

Since Chen Ge had heard her voice before, he was fairly sure he knew who she was. To be fair, Chen Ge did not expect the famed DJ to be such an individual.

“The society doesn’t have any other rules except the need to prepare enough ghost stories.” The man’s voice turned chilly. “When the three of you finish telling three stories, we will try our best to complete your wish. Then, it’s your choice to stay or leave.”

“No. 1 has explained everything you need to know.” The man on the right snapped his finger. “Dinner will be served soon, and after that, you’re free to leave.”

Dinner? Chen Ge was suspicious but did not ask. The room thus fell to silence. About half an hour later, there were footsteps in the corridor. The door was pushed open, and the birdman who poked his head in had obvious scratch marks on his neck. “There was an accident, so we might need a little more time.”

“No worry, after all, there’s still quite a long time until sunrise.” The first man on the right glanced at the three new members. “You might not be used to this since it's your first time, but it'll get better."

When he finished, No. 10, who liked Chen Ge's mask, said, "If you're in a hurry, you can choose to leave first."

When he said so, all the other black robes did not say anything, but it seemed like they did not understand why he would say that.

"In that case, I'll skip the need. I need to rush to find new ghost stories." No. 11 seemed the most normal among everyone there. He was not used to dealing with these mad people. If not to evade the police, he would not have attended the gathering. The men at the table did not say anything but waved their hands. Their gazes were locked onto No. 10. That day, No. 10 had been acting rather curiously.

Chen Ge had more things he needed to find out about the ghost stories society, and the blood lines in his shadows only needed one or two minutes before they finished knitting. It would be such a waste if he just leaves like that. From how he saw it, since they were all gathered together, it was the perfect chance to round them up in one go!

The chairperson was one of the ten, but they themselves did not know who the chairperson was. In this case, the simple solution would be to deal with all of them.

"Goodbye, we'll meet again next Wednesday." The second new member immediately rushed out. The birdman was still standing at the door, his pair of eyes following the man like he was eyeing a piece of meat.

"Will you two be leaving as well?" No. 10 asked Chen Ge and the woman.

"I'm curious about the food served here." For the first time, there was emotion in the woman's tone; she sounded excited. "I'll stay."

There was sound of running coming from the corridor. No. 11 was close to the elevator.

"I have an emergency, see you again next Wednesday." Chen Ge walked out of the room. When he passed the birdman, he smelled a faint hint of blood.

"I'm surprised you could walk out alive." The birdman's voice was hiding surprise and perplexity.

“There will more surprises in store for you in the future.” Chen Ge smiled at him, the skin mask looked especially scary.

The birdman did not answer immediately. He waited until Chen Ge had left before grumbling, “For some reason, I am not anticipating them.”

No. 11 with the pig’s mask stood beside the elevator. His finger pressed the button hastily, and the number slowly changed.

“Why is it so slow?” He felt like he was suffocating. Compared to those crazies, the scariest thing he had witnessed in his life was nothing. Especially the fourth new member, how did he manage to survive all those things? “No way, I need to leave immediately.”

The elevator rose but stopped at the 23rd floor. After a long time, the number finally changed to 24 like there was a long distance between the 23rd and 24th floors. No. 11 rushed into the elevator immediately. Not knowing there was someone behind him, he pressed the close door button. Just as the silvery-gray door was about to close, a hand reached out to stop it. Chen Ge walked into the elevator. “Let’s go together.”

The man silently gulped. He wanted to reject, but he did not have the courage to. “Sure.”

After pressing the button to go to the first floor, Chen Ge stood beside the elevator door. After the door was fully closed, he turned back to glance at No. 11. “Will you be coming back next Wednesday?”

“No idea, but if I come across a new ghost story, I will.” No. 11’s tone sounded stiff. He did not want to talk to this man.

“So, you’re worried about that.” Chen Ge laughed. “I know many ghost stories; would you like me to share one with you?”

“You’re willing to share them with me?” Hope rose within No. 11’s heart. If Chen Ge was willing to tell him one ghost story, he only needed to find one more story to get the society to fulfil his wish.

“Of course.” Chen Ge turned around, the shadow behind him pulsating. The blood burst forth like a blood swan opening its wings. “After all, you’re the main character for this story!”

Endless black hair crawled out from Chen Ge’s shadow to cover the entire elevator!

A woman in bright red dress was leaning on Chen Ge's shoulder, her pale and beautiful face twisted by endless torment.

"Zhang Ya!"

In the enclosed elevator, there was nowhere to run!

Chen Ge dashed forward to yank No. 11's mask off and then covered his lips. The number on the elevator kept decreasing, but time seemed to have slowed down.

...

When the number reached 1, the elevator door opened, and there was a man frozen in terror lying in the corner.

His heart was still working, but other than fear, there was no other expression on his face. If one took a closer look, one could see his pupils that seemed to shatter like glass beads, and they were bleeding.

Chen Ge hauled Zhu Xiu, who seemed to have turned into a vegetable, out of the elevator. Zhang Ya floated behind him, playing with a new toy in her hand.

The toy looked exactly like Zhu Xiu. When one got close, one could even hear a faded scream.

Chapter 243 - Four-Star Trial Mission

Chapter 243: Four-Star Trial Mission

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After removing Zhu Xiu from the elevator, Chen Ge did not leave. He returned to the elevator. Zhang Ya followed behind him, not willing to leave his side. “Since you’re out here, why don’t we go and create some chaos?”

Chen Ge looked at Zhang Ya behind him. This Red Specter seemed to have grown stronger. The dress that she was wearing seemed to have been knitted from red threads; it looked very real. Zhang Ya kept her head lowered. She stuck close to Chen Ge, her fluttering hair occasionally caressing Chen Ge’s arm. There was something that looked like blood lines coming out from underneath the dress, and they seemed ready to drill into Chen Ge’s body.

...

It looked quite scary, and Chen Ge did not expect such a large change would happen to Zhang Ya. In reality, when he had held Zhu Xiu’s lips shut, there was an alert on the black phone. Zhang Ya’s affection level had broken through Gripped by Passion and was close to reaching the next stage.

Like an overflowing vase, Zhang Ya’s minor actions exemplified her affection toward Chen Ge. Do you like ghosts? If you don’t, I’ll turn everyone you like into one, including yourself.

The blood vessels and black hair gently curled around Chen Ge’s blood, and it chilled the man to his core. He turned to look at Zhang Ya, but Zhang Ya pretended like she did not know anything, just following behind him.

I can feel the murderous intent. I need to distract her somehow.

Chen Ge pressed the button for 23rd floor. He had decided to return to the 24th floor. Actually, he did not want to act so rashly, but he was reminded of an issue.

Normally, Zhang Ya would return to his shadow on her own, but this time, it did not seem like Zhang Ya had any interest in returning!

He was afraid that if he did not find something for Zhang Ya to do, he would be her next target. Love and hate were extreme emotions. The way Zhang Ya looked him made him feel uncomfortable; it was like she was hesitating over turning him into a doll as well. That way, they could be together forever.

The door slowly closed. Chen Ge's hair rose on the back of his neck. He suddenly wished to be back in the room with the rest of the members. He felt safer with them. It was complicated getting back to the 24th floor. Chen Ge hid himself in the corner and took out the black phone when Zhang Ya was not looking.

"Resolving her last wish, Zhang Ya's affection level has reached Gripped by Passion!

"Specter's Favored, congratulations for completing Zhang Ya's Bloody Heart Mission with a hundred percent completion rate!

"Choice of Reward One: Unlocking three-star scenario, Western Jiujiang's Private Academy! The scenario includes seven mini scenarios: White Valentines, Red Dancing Shoes, Cursed Love Letter, Female Dormitory, Crying Chairs, the Hanging Man, and the Stink!

"Warning: After you select this reward, Red Specter Zhang Ya will be confined to the scenario!

"Choice of Reward Two: Remove all scenarios related to Zhang Ya, leaving only the Hanging Man and the Stink. This will downgrade Western Jiujiang's Private Academy to a two-star scenario, but Zhang Ya's movement will be unlimited!"

The message surprised Chen Ge. He did not expect that Western Jiujiang's Private Academy would be a three-star scenario and Zhang Ya would be related to five mini scenarios!

The Third Sick Hall was judged a three-star scenario probably due to the ten patients and the creatures behind the door, but Western Jiujiang's Private Academy was judged as three-star simply due to Zhang Ya.

She's scarier than I thought!

After swallowing some of the creatures and the old director in the Third Sick Hall, Zhang Ya had grown stronger, her malice increasing, the blood in her dress glowing brighter.

If I pick the first reward, I'll get a complete three-star scenario, but I'll lose Zhang Ya's aid whenever I'm out of the Haunted House.

Chen Ge turned back to sneak a look at Zhang Ya. He thought long and hard before selecting reward number two. He was not afraid that if he picked reward one, he was not going to leave the elevator alive. Furthermore, he felt like he was the only person Zhang Ya could rely on. He felt like giving as much warmth as he could to someone who had suffered so much in her life. He clicked option two, and a new message appeared.

“Are you sure you want to select Reward Number Two?”

“Yes.”

“Congratulations for unlocking the two-star scenario, Western Jiujiang's Private Academy! This scenario is a gift from completing the Bloody Heart Mission, so it has no hidden missions and no security threats!”

No security threats? Meaning I can allow my visitors to explore the place to their hearts' content?

Since the black phone had said so, it should be fine. This meant that Chen Ge had been gifted a two-star scenario, so he was quite happy. Then another message appeared.

“Specter's Favored, congratulations for completing Zhang Ya's Bloody Heart Mission with a hundred percent completion rate! Successfully triggered the Trial Mission for four-star scenario—School of the Afterlife!

“Warning: four-star scenarios are extremely dangerous! The Trial Mission for School of the Afterlife is comprised of eight side missions and one final mission. The active time to complete them is three months.

“Currently, you have completed seven side missions at Western Jiujiang's Private Academy and Mu Yang High School. After completing the 8th side mission, Eternal Life, you will unlock the final mission!

“Side Mission 8: Eternal Life (In an undisclosed underground morgue, there's a group who seek eternal life). Mission Venue: Western Jiujiang's Medical University.

“Final Mission: Currently locked.”

Chen Ge pocketed the phone when he was done reading it. Every increase in the star of a scenario would double or triple the difficulty. When he conducted the Trial Mission for the Third Sick Hall, he would have died if he had faced the thin monster alone. If Zhang Ya had not been there to help him, he would not have had the chance to enter the blood door.

Looking at this from a different perspective, Zhang Ya herself was the reason Western Jiujiang Private Academy was a three-star scenario. How scary Zhang Ya was equaled to how scary a three-star scenario was.

I should just ignore the four-star mission for now. Three-star missions already have the presence of Red Specter, so the four-star mission probably has something worse.

Chen Ge tried to understand that world, but the more he found out, the more confused he became.

The active time for clearing School of the Afterlife is three-months. I still have time. The most immediate concern is to deal with ghost stories society and solve the hidden mission inside the Third Sick Hall.

Chen Ge followed the introduction on the flyer and returned to the 24th floor, but this time, he did not enter alone.

Chapter 244 - Things You Shouldn't See

Chapter 244: Things You Shouldn't See

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The red number on the display was rather eye-catching. When 24 showed up, the elevator door opened. There were wet blood stains in the corridor and many more scratch marks on the walls. There was the smell of blood in the air like something horrible had just happened. Chen Ge removed the cleaver from his calf and hid it inside his sleeve.

“Let’s go in.”

...

Chen Ge did not turn back to look; based on the chill coming from behind him, he knew Zhang Ya was following. The corridor was silent, and he could hear every sound. When he was a third of the way down the corridor, Chen Ge heard the sound of sawing. He took several more steps forward and confirmed that the sound came out from the room Chen Ge had seen the birdman exit when he first arrived.

There were ten seats around the table. They probably represented the ten initial patients, and the birdman is responsible for the odd jobs. But what exactly is his role in the ghost stories society?

Chen Ge thought about it before shaking his head. There was no need to consider that. He was not there to get to know the society; he was there to ruin it. They’re both from three-star scenarios, so Zhang Ya should be able to hold her own against them.

Standing outside the room, Chen Ge peered through the door, and his brows involuntarily creased. The birdman was squatting in the corner with some tools in his hands. There was an old man lying before him, and a mask was lying to the side. Chen Ge had seen that mask before; new member No. 1 had worn it earlier.

“What are you doing?” Chen Ge blocked the door and suddenly spoke. The birdman jumped at the sudden intruder. The man did not turn around and spoke while facing away from Chen Ge. “Everyone has left; why are you still here?”

“Are you guys serving dinner? I just left for a while, and you’re already done?” Chen Ge had some regret. No matter the reason, the plan that night had to be changed.

“There was a small problem. One of them received a message from the chairperson, and they had to leave.” The birdman still had not turned around. His upper body seemed frozen. He kept his back to Chen Ge and his face to the old man on the floor.

“A message from the chairperson?” Chen Ge thought that the man was acting funny. He walked into the room. “Can you tell me where they have gone?”

“No idea.” The man paused before adding, “I suggest you stay away.”

“There’s only one elevator at the end of the corridor, and I did not leave the elevator. Is there another exit here?” Chen Ge managed to gain many clues from what the man said. Now that everyone had left, this birdman was his sole source of information.

“In the future, people will inform you about that, but now, please leave.” The birdman’s actions were stiff, like he purposely did not want to turn his face around. Chen Ge was not there to discuss things with him. After the birdman said so, he not only did not leave but moved deeper into the room.

“Why didn’t you follow them and leave then? Do you stay here?” Chen Ge kept his questions coming.

“I’m only responsible for cleaning and cooking.”

“Interesting.” Chen Ge had his suspicions regarding the birdman. He could stay at the 24th floor for as long as he wished, and he had access to everything. Could he be the chairperson? Perhaps the chairperson was not one of the other members.

Chen Ge wanted to prove that, but he knew that even if he asked directly, the birdman would not be honest with him. Therefore, he decided to go for the most direct method. Regardless of whether he was the chairperson or not, as long as he disappeared forever, he would not be the chairperson.

The birdman realized that Chen Ge coming close, and he raised his voice. “Newbie, no matter what you’ve done outside, now that you’re here, you’d better follow the rules of the ghost stories society.”

“The rules? But there’s only one rule, right? I only need to tell ghost stories. What are the other rules?” Since Chen Ge realized that this person was suspicious, he was not going to leave so easily.

“You’ll have to pay if you see things that you shouldn’t. Now that all the members have left, you and I are the only one left on this floor.” The birdman stood up, and at the same time, there was sound of water falling. Chen Ge looked at the bottom of the man’s body. His pants were drenched with blood, and the blood was sliding down his pants.

“I don’t understand what you’re trying to say. All the members have left; that should be bad news for you.” Chen Ge continued to move forward like he did not notice the blood on the birdman’s clothes.

“Is that so?” The birdman moved to the side to reveal the old man’s body. His face was carved in terror.

“Occasionally, there are newbies who mysteriously disappear, and everyone has gotten used to it.” He seemed to be talking to himself, but he wanted to let Chen Ge hear him as well. Then, the birdman turned around. Compared to the weird tools in his hands and his bloodied clothes, the point of attraction was his face.

He did not need a mask!

The man’s mouth protruded out of his face like a beak, and the blood vessels that were unique to the monsters behind the door swam across his cheeks. This man was not a human being!

“I’ve given you the chance, but you don’t want to appreciate it.” The birdman waved the tools in his hands to create a weird sound. “I’ve been meaning to do this since I first met you. Alas, there were too many people, but you came back on your own.”

Things were different from what Chen Ge thought; he had thought that he was talking to a human.

If I’d known, I wouldn’t have wasted so much time.

Chen Ge stared at the man’s face. If the monster behind the door wanted to survive outside the door, they needed to attach themselves to a living person. The monster that seemed to grow out of the man’s head should be a new monster that he had not seen before.

Their relationship should be similar to Xiong Qing and the thin monster. The monster behind the door grew on them, and the living human controlled them to a certain degree by satisfying the monsters' desire.

All the real members of the ghost stories society will have monsters attached to them. This is rather difficult, especially if they have a Red Specter among them.

Chen Ge stood where he was, thinking about this problem. The birdman thought he was scared witless, and a cruel smile appeared on his face. He liked to see people struggle; it was the little enjoyment in life he allowed himself. It was because of that there were so many bloody scratch marks around the elevator.

He loved to yank people down into the depths of despair when they thought they saw hope.

“The ghost stories society is not a charity. If you wish to have salvation, you need to pay the price!”

The birdman rushed toward Chen Ge with his tools, his beak-like mouth calling shrilly.

Suddenly, his neck was strangled by black hair, lifting him off the ground. His legs kicked about out of desperation, and his face turned purple as the blood vessels dispersed.

“What is this?”

Chapter 245 - No. 10's Identity

Chapter 245: No. 10's Identity

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge did not answer the birdman's question. When the black hair wrapped around the birdman's neck, his ending had been written. Zhang Ya had never left a living person behind once she acted.

In the Third Sick Hall, she had dashed into the door just to chase after the thin monster. In the process, she had even injured the old director, who was a Red Specter. Zhang Ya after death was the complete opposite of who she had been in life. Thankfully, she seemed to have a soft spot for Chen Ge.

...

Chen Ge stood at the door obediently and pretended like he did not see anything. He picked up the weird tools that the birdman had left and started studying them.

There was a horrible scream coming from inside the room. The blood vessels on the man's face congregated to form a sharp-beaked raven. It attempted to fly out of the room. Its speed was fast, and it reached the door in the blink of an eye, but something else awaited it.

When the birdman was speaking earlier, the black hair had already spread through the room and sealed the entire corridor. The wave of black hair swallowed the blood raven and the birdman whole. Moments later, the blood raven disappeared, and only a crippled man was left on the floor. His eyes were unfocused, like his consciousness had been completely shattered.

After swallowing the blood raven, Zhang Ya still did not feel satisfied. The black hair crawled into all the rooms. She seemed to find something at the end because she started to pull back her hair.

"Did you find something?" They were at the base for the ghost stories society, so there were probably some important items there.

Zhang Ya tilted her head to study Chen Ge for a long time. Without saying anything, she hid back inside his shadow. Chen Ge was frozen solid while being studied by Zhang Ya. He only dared to breathe when the blood completely disappeared from his shadow.

The affection level is rising so fast that Zhang Ya now refuses to return. If this continues, she might accidentally kill me in the future.

Thinking back to Zhang Ya's gaze, Chen Ge's scalp felt numb. The girl seemed to be considering killing him so that he could join her in death.

I didn't think I was so popular with girls before this! I didn't really do anything, but the affection level keeps climbing. I should stop bothering Zhang Ya in the future unless truly necessary.

Chen Ge walked to the birdman and took a look at his face. He had been possessed by the monster behind the door for so long that his face had become twisted.

I won't be able to gather any information if his face is ruined like this.

Chen Ge exited the room and walked to the end of the corridor. He pushed the last door open. The dining table sat in the middle of the room, but no one remained.

How did they leave? Where is the hidden exit?

Holding the cleaver, Chen Ge walked around the table. It was a normal table, and the chairs had numbers on them—1 to 10.

The chairperson is one of them, and using the power of the monsters behind the door, they created this society. This person mustn't be underestimated.

At that moment, Chen Ge stopped beside the chair for No. 10. When he first entered the room, No. 10 had said something. At the time, Chen Ge's focus had been directed at summoning Zhang Ya, so he had not paid it any heed. Now thinking back, No. 10 was suspicious.

The first sentence he told me was that he liked my mask. Why would he specifically talk about my mask?

Chen Ge was wearing Doctor Skull-cracker's mask, and those who had visited the Haunted House before would have seen it.

Could No. 10 be one of my former visitors? When the other nine voted to give up on me, No. 10 forfeited. His forfeit, in a way, was a vote of support, and he would not save a stranger for no reason.

There were many anomalies beyond that. For example, when the dinner was supposed to be served, No. 10 suddenly told the three new members that they could leave if they wanted to. Combined with what had happened earlier, that was probably meant for Chen Ge. The meal for new members has its problem as well?

Chen Ge looked at the chair for No. 10 as he thought back to No. 10's every move. Everyone's hands were hidden inside the black robe, but No. 10 placed his hands underneath the table.

Squatting down, Chen Ge looked under the table. Where No. 10 was sitting, there were several small words that had been carved out using fingernails. Chen Ge took out his phone and looked at them for a long time before he could recognize what they were.

Linjiang New Schistosomiasis Control Station?

The name sounded familiar. He thought about it, and his eyes widened with shock. There were four letters inside the Third Sick Hall's director office, and the only addressed letter was to Linjiang New Schistosomiasis Control Station!

The letter was addressed to Doctor Chen, so No. 10 is this Doctor Chen?

All the clues seemed to be connected, but none of them could be proved. A key piece was missing from the puzzle.

This is the first time I've worn the mask outside of New Century Park. He has seen my mask before, so he should be a visitor or a park worker. However, it hasn't been long since I got the mask, so could it be someone I met recently?

The body had been covered by the black robe, and No. 10's voice was weird. He had probably been faking his voice so that Chen Ge would not be able to identify him. The only thing that Chen Ge was certain about was No. 10 was a man. Could it be a patient from Third Sick Hall and this is just a method to trick me?

The members of ghost stories society were definitely not normal; Wu Fei and the devil would likely be the most difficult to deal with.

Captain Yan has shown me the picture. The patients from Third Sick Hall were following me. They have seen me enter New Century Park from the pictures on the phones of Xu Tong and the patient with Phantom Limb Syndrome.

This bunch of crazies know I'm at New Century Park, so they have perhaps masqueraded as visitors before to enter my Haunted House, so it is normal for him to have seen my mask before.

It was the old director who wrote the letter to Linjiang New Schistosomiasis Control Station. The director chose to cooperate with the patients to extend his life, so it is to be expected that the patients know about this address.

He might seem to be helping me on the surface, but that might be because he sensed danger and was actually helping the society!

The most crucial clue was given by the birdman. He said that someone received a message from the chairperson and decided to leave in a hurry. I left, and the next minute, they escaped through the hidden exit? That cannot be a coincidence!

Chen Ge's gaze darkened as he looked at the carving under the table. He suspected that this was a trap. He had to be careful because all the patients who had escaped from the Third Sick Hall were mad. They could not be understood using normal logic.

He managed to react instantly once he realized that something was wrong. He controlled the situation from the dark. If No. 10 isn't someone whom I know, he's most likely the chairperson.

Two different speculations, two different results. One heaven and one hell.

Chapter 246 - Cigarette Wounds

Chapter 246: Cigarette Wounds

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

No. 10 could have been Chen Ge's acquaintance who was trying to help him, or he could have been a mental patient trying to make Chen Ge drop his guard. To find out the real answer, he had to go to Linjiang New Schistosomiasis Control Station.

After making sure he did not miss anything, Chen Ge walked out of the room and returned to the elevator.

...

There have to be other secrets behind these closed doors. Perhaps the hidden exit that the members used is behind one of them. Chen Ge regretted that he did not bring the hammer or else he could have broken down all the doors. I'll need to pay attention next time.

Back in the elevator, Chen Ge looked at the number dropping, and he finally sighed in relief. He tied the cleaver back on his calf and removed the mask. He took a deep breath. The elevator stopped at the first floor. Before he walked out, Chen Ge could hear someone talking, and the tone was stern.

"How did he get in here? I'm asking you, how did he get in here?"

"Supervisor Huang, I really don't know how he managed to sneak in here."

"We have a murderer in our building, and you're telling me you don't know anything?"

"I'm sorry."

"I paid you to protect the tenants, not for you to apologize to me! How many troubles have happened recently? You can count for yourself!"

Chen Ge looked outside the elevator. Zhu Xiu, who he had hidden in the corner, had disappeared.

Where is the man?

Chen Ge glanced outwards. Gu Feiyu, in the security uniform, was holding his phone, his head lowered. Standing across from him was a middle-aged man who looked refined but had a huge temper.

“Xiao Gu? What’s going on?” Chen Ge walked over.

“Who are you?” The middle-aged man turned to Chen Ge. “You don’t look familiar. You’re not one of our tenants, are you?”

Then, he turned to glare at Gu Feiyu. “He’s your friend?”

They were not supposed to allow strangers to enter the premises after midnight; this was a written rule. Gu Feiyu knew that he had made another mistake. He removed his cap and nodded.

“Supervisor Huang.” There was a police siren coming from outside, and a middle-aged man in a causal outfit walked in. “That is my friend.”

Chen Ge was shocked when he saw the man. “Inspector Lee?”

“I knew that something was wrong when you left the police station, but I didn’t think you’d be able to flush this man out.” Inspector Lee pointed at the door, where the unconscious Zhu Xiu was lying.

“You’ve been following me from the police station?” Chen Ge had not noticed that at all. Thinking back, he was scared.

“I’ve been a cop for twenty years already. If you managed to discover me, then it’s time for me to retire.” Inspector Lee turned to Supervisor Huang. “Don’t blame the kid, he did well this time. The culprit is very cunning and has been avoiding the police. Even our plainclothes are unable to notice him, so it’s normal for him not to notice.”

“Even the police failed to capture him?” Supervisor Huang turned to Chen Ge and apologized immediately, a complete change in attitude. “So, this is another policeman? Thank you so much for your service.”

Chen Ge ignored him and looked at Inspector Lee with embarrassment. “You’ve been waiting outside the building?”

“What do you think? I observed you for one and a half hour at New Century Park and then followed you to Fang Hwa Apartments. Been waiting for you to show up since then.” Inspector Lee moved his shoulders. "When you came down with the suspect, I was ready to come in, but then you went back into the elevator."

"Uncle Lee, do you know how dangerous that was?"

"If I'm not worried about you doing something stupid; do you think I'd care?" Inspector Lee lowered his voice and pulled Chen Ge aside. "Zhu Xiu seems to have suffered some kind of trauma; was he like when you found him?"

Inspector Lee's tone was weird. Chen Ge looked at the inspector's expression, and it dawned on him. He explained, "Yes, he was already like this when I found him. I returned upstairs to find out why."

"Yes." Inspector Lee nodded. "That does sound logical."

Not long after Zhu Xiu was taken away in the police car, an ambulance arrived. It also stopped in front of the third building. The people looked at one another. "Who called the ambulance?"

No one admitted to it. After a while, the number on the elevator moved before it stopped at the thirteenth floor.

"The tenants here rarely use the elevator at night. Something must have happened." Supervisor Huang and Gu Feiyu rushed to the elevator at the same time. Not long after that, the elevator opened, and a middle-aged man ran out carrying an old lady.

"Doctor! Doctor!" The man's mother seemed to have fainted from her illness. Chen Ge did not pay much attention initially, but when he saw the old man's face, shock registered in his eyes. The old lady was the elder who had planned to leave on the 13th floor earlier. When she saw the elevator, she had grumbled, "Why are there so many people taking the elevator so late at night? There's not even enough space for me."

The old lady's outfit was different from what Chen Ge had seen. He was unsure whether the elder he had seen was the old lady or her soul.

"Since she didn't take the elevator, the senior should be able to live."

After the ambulance left, it was time for Chen Ge to go, but before that, he had something to do.

"Xiao Gu, how much are they paying you monthly to act as the night guard?"

“3,000.”

“I see you’re quite brave and have a good personality. If you ever feeling like quitting or have nowhere else to go, come find me at Western Jiujiang’s New Century Park.” Chen Ge pointed at his phone. “Give me a call then.”

Gu Feiyu looked rather interested. “Okay.”

After saying goodbye to Inspector Lee, Chen Ge rushed back to New Century Park. He felt safer when he was at home.

I feel more comfortable here.

He jotted down everything that he needed to pay attention to. He memorized it all before burning the paper.

Tomorrow will be a new day. After work, if there’s time, I should pay Linjiang New Schistosomiasis Control Station a visit.

It was getting late. Chen Ge fed the white cat and lay down to sleep, but as he did so, his phone rang.

Is this Inspector Lee? Chen Ge assumed something had happened to Zhu Xiu, but he realized that it was a call from Captain Yan.

“Sorry for disturbing, Chen Ge, but I have something to confirm with you.”

Captain Yan sounded so polite that it would have been rude for Chen Ge to reject. “Okay, but please make it quick.”

“I’ve sent you the picture. Take a look at it. We saw this when we were looking over the surveillance around Hai Ming Apartments.”

Chen Ge clicked the picture open. It was a picture taken from the surveillance video but had been made clearer.

There was a man in a jacket, and he seemed to be talking with someone through the phone in his right hand. He was holding the flyer for Chen Ge’s Haunted House in his left hand. There were cigarette wounds and small injuries on the back of his hand.

“Do you recognize the person in the picture?”

Chapter 247 - Second Expansion

Chapter 247: Second Expansion

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Cigarette wound?” Chen Ge was reminded of the man who had sat in the first chair on the right at the ghost stories society. His finger that was exposed had a cigarette burn on it.

“We’ve gone through the tapes for the time frame of twelve hours and the surveillance for nearby five hundred meters. There was no one particularly suspicious, but this did catch our attention.” Captain Yan’s voice had suspicion in it. “He used the jacket’s hood to hide his face, and the screen on his phone was black. He looked like he was talking on the phone, but he was actually observing the surroundings. However, there is one thing I don’t understand, why would he have the flyer to your Haunted House?”

...

“My Haunted House does not have that many workers, and I have not gone out of the park to give out flyers, so either he or a friend of his has been to the park and my Haunted House.”

“Do you have any recollection of this man?”

“There are many scenarios inside the Haunted House, and I’m only responsible for one of them, so I cannot give you an accurate answer.” Chen Ge had started to plot against this man. “Captain Yan, I’m sure you did plenty of investigation when you pinpointed this suspicious guy. What did you come up with?”

Captain Yan’s voice was hoarse, probably due to a lack of rest. “We’ve discovered that he’s the producer for a private radio station. He has no criminal files and is considered a successful man who loves his family and has a good career. He’s not what we would normally call a suspect.”

“A radio station’s producer? That sounds impressive.”

“It’s a station specializing in late night shows. Its influence has grown over the past two years. Most of the listeners are young people who are curious and people who have nothing to do at night.”

Captain Yan’s revelation demolished Chen Ge’s drowsiness. There was only one radio station that specialized in late night show in Jiujiang. The same station that No. 12, Lychee, worked at—Ghost Talk. Before their change in format, they focused on relationship issues, but their popularity kept falling. They were forced to change, and incidentally, the first show they did with Ghost Talk broke records.

“Captain Yan, the radio station you’re talking about is Ghost Talk?”

“Yes, that’s the one. You’ve heard of it before?”

“Yes, a few times. They have a DJ by the name of Lychee who has a wonderful voice.” Chen Ge’s mind moved. If No. 5 was the producer at this station and Lychee worked for him, then was it possible that he was the one who sent the ghost stories society’s flyer to Lychee?

If that was the case, it meant that Chen Ge had uncovered the identities for two of the members.

“I don’t understand why he would appear at Hai Ming Apartments, but to not spook him, we didn’t stop him for an interview.” Captain Yan’s voice sounded tired. “There are so many things that have happened lately. Take care of yourself. If you come across anything, call us.”

Captain Yan hung up soon after. Chen Ge sat on his bedside and used his phone to search for the radio station. The DJ on duty that night was indeed not Lychee but someone else.

Should I strike first? Take them down one by one?

...

At around 7 am, when the sun rose, Chen Ge was woken up by the vibration of his phone. He searched his clothes for a long time before he realized that it was an alert on the black phone.

“Two-star scenario Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy failed to unlock! Lack of space inside the Haunted House. Please conduct a second expansion.”

Not enough space? But there is so much empty space in the underground parking lot.

Chen Ge had thought he would have a new scenario to use when he woke up, but he ran into this trouble instead. He put on his clothes and ran out of the Haunted House and the park. It had been one or two years since a visitor came to this place. To prevent visitors from wandering close, the park even used large rubbish to block the two entrances.

Climbing over the trash, Chen Ge entered the underground parking lot. New Century Park had used quite a pretty penny to build this place. That was when the park had been in its prime. Chen Ge walked for quite a distance before he saw an old cement wall that blocked the parking lot off from the scenarios. The wall went up into the ceiling, cutting the two spaces off from each other completely.

About two thirds of the place is empty, so why would it say there's not enough space? Or one expansion can only fit three scenarios?

Before the first expansion, Chen Ge's Haunted House had three scenarios, and then after the first expansion, the underground added Third Sick Hall, A Room of Three, and Mu Yang High School. Therefore, he came up with this speculation.

I didn't even realize I already have six scenarios, but it's still not enough!

The sun continued to rise, and its rays filtered into the parking lot. Chen Ge discovered something interesting. The scenarios were all built at the place where the sun would not reach. It was unclear whether this was done on purpose or the black phone might lose part of its power once it touched the sunlight.

It's better if I seal up the place completely. Today, I'll get someone to block the two entrances. That way I'll feel much better.

Chen Ge took out his phone to look for the expansion option. The condition for second expansion was more than a thousand monthly visitors and over seventy positive reputation.

He had reached this goal several days ago, but he did not consider it because he had assumed that he still had enough space in the parking lot.

“Do you wish to expand for the second time? There's a chance of obtaining a unique construct.”

“Yes!”

After he pressed yes, there was no change in the underground parking lot. Perhaps I'll need to wait until midnight.

Chen Ge pocketed the black phone and retraced his steps. He was anticipating the unique construct, but he would need to wait until the following day for the expansion to finish.

The park opened at 9 am, and it was worth noting that Gu Feiyu did come. It was perfect because Chen Ge was lacking in manpower. Xiao Gu was brave, and Chen Ge wanted him to take over Murder by Midnight, but before that, he had to get familiar with the Haunted House.

Therefore, Chen Ge had Gu Feiyu experience the place with other visitors. After finishing three scenarios, a weak-legged Gu Feiyu said that he wanted to leave no matter what. Chen Ge used a lot of effort to finally convince him that being scared and scaring others were two different experiences.

Gu Feiyu, who had been scared witless, refused to enter the Haunted House again. After some more negotiation, Xiao Gu decided to come back again tomorrow. After sending Gu Feiyu away, Chen Ge felt that the young man was quite interesting.

He valued Gu Feiyu not only because of his courage but also his personality. He had saved Gu Feiyu's life once, and with his personality, he would help keep Chen Ge's secrets no matter what he saw inside the Haunted House in the future.

The number of people that I can use is still too small.

Chapter 248 - A Game That Can't be Cleared

Chapter 248: A Game That Can't be Cleared

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

During his lunch break, Director Luo personally came to pay Chen Ge a visit. Seeing how full the resting tent was, he was satisfied. “You have so many visitors waiting during lunch—that’s not easy.”

Director Luo sighed. Several weeks ago, the Haunted House had been the most deserted place at the park, but now it was the park’s main feature and saving grace.

...

“Director Luo? Why are you here?” Chen Ge held the box of rice that Xu Wan had bought for him in one hand, and his other hand used a pen to make his accounts.

“I’m here to tell you two pieces of good news.” Director Luo inspected the rough-looking tents and handed the document he was holding to Chen Ge.

“I’ve not received good news in a long time already.” Chen Ge opened the file. Inside was the resting hall proposal that he had drafted, but underneath the amateur drawing was a detailed blueprint, filled with notes and explanations.

“This is?”

“Even though the park is not as big as it once was, we can still provide this much monetary support.” Director Luo seemed like he was in a good mood. “Take a look at the edited proposal, and if anything needs amending, come to me.”

Chen Ge dropped what he was doing and looked through the blueprint closely. He was very satisfied with the updated blueprint; it was much more detailed and thought-out than the one he had drafted.

“Director Luo, what is the other good news?” Chen Ge raised his head. He was intrigued.

“Starting from tomorrow, the ticket price for park entry will be lowered to 60 RMB, and we’ll start pushing promotions and discounts for those who buy in bulk or groups.” Director Luo had finally made the decision. The futuristic park was giving him too much pressure. Lowering the ticket price was a marketing strategy and, at the same time, taking a step back.

“Lowering so much?” Ever since it opened its door, New Century Park’s ticket price had been rising; this was the first time it would fall.

“Actively lowering it now will be better than being forced to do so later.” Director Luo had an open mind about this. “If the ticket price for the park is falling, then the admission for your Haunted House has to rise. I’ve discussed this with other managers, and we believe 50 per admission sounds about right.”

“50? Won’t that be too expensive?” Chen Ge had inherited the Haunted House from his parents, and he had not changed the pricing.

“As long as your quality matches it, 50 is the most reasonable pricing. Now that the park’s ticket price is dropping, those who are unwilling to spend the extra money will be interested, so be prepared for a large crowd in the next few days.” Director Luo was confident.

“But the doubling of the price might cause some of the visitors to leave. There is never going to be enough money to earn, so why not take it slow?” Chen Ge treated the Haunted House as his own home. He had finally seen life return to it, so if the bounce up in ticket price chased people away, he would be greatly saddened.

“I’ve come up with the solution for that as well.” Director Luo took the document from Chen Ge and flipped it to the last few pages. It was not a blueprint but a proposal to promote the amusement park. “The futuristic park will be starting a large promotional period soon, so we must be ahead of them and make use of this opening to invest in a large promotion! The main selling point will be the lower ticket price and your Haunted House!”

“We’re tying the park with my Haunted House for the promotion?”

“Currently, New Century Park’s only selling point is your Haunted House.” Director Luo said something that made him grimace. “If the effect is less than desirable, this will most likely be our last promotion.”

Chen Ge suddenly felt an increase in responsibility; he was bearing the survival of the entire park on his shoulders.

“Don’t feel too much pressure. To increase the attraction of the Haunted House and to make sure the visitors are willing to take the first step, I’ll be there to aid you.” This was also the last stand for Director Luo; they could not hold anything back.

“But none of you know how to design or operate a Haunted House.” The Haunted House was Chen Ge’s territory. It was hiding too many secrets for other people to intervene.

“That might be true, but I do not how to manipulate the visitors.” Director Luo seemed to already have a plan. “I hear from Ol’ Xu that when you decided to separate your scenarios into levels, you offered 20,000 as a cash prize?”

“That is true.” At the time, Chen Ge had been left with no other option. The separation was a safety net for the visitors as well. Pushing unprepared visitors into a three-star scenario directly might have led to some unforeseeable problems.

“That was a great idea, but 20,000 is too little to call it a prize.” Director Luo pointed at the empty space before the Haunted House. “Tomorrow, I’ll have the men build a banner here, saying the first one to clear all of the scenarios in your Haunted House will get a reward of 200,000 cash!”

“200,000?” Boss Chen did not even have 50,000 in his bank account. “Isn’t that too much? What if someone really succeeds in doing so?”

Director Luo walked forward and lowered his voice. It was different from his normal generous and kind image. “That’s why I need you to design a game that cannot be cleared. I’m telling you, if someone manages to win the 200,000 within this coming week, I’m only paying for half of it; you’re handling the rest.”

“So, you’re telling me to cheat?” Chen Ge felt troubled by the dishonesty.

“Why would you think that? We’re an amusement park; the reason of our existence is to entertain our visitors. When they find out that the first to clear the Haunted House will get 200,000, will they be happy or not?” Director Luo explained it patiently to Chen Ge.

“They definitely will. They get to visit the Haunted House and have a chance at winning the reward.”

“Then, when they find out that the cash prize has been taken by others, will they still be happy?”

“They will probably be disappointed.”

“Therefore, to ensure that all the visitors are happy, you have to help me design a game that cannot be won.” Director Luo was satisfied with Chen Ge’s attitude. “Xiao Chen, you’re a smart kid, don’t disappoint me!”

If this was several years ago, 200,000 would have been nothing for Director Luo, but things were different. Chen Ge had heard from Uncle Xu that to keep the park running, Director Luo had remortgaged his own house to the bank.

“Don’t worry, Director Luo. Other than myself, no one will be able to clear my Haunted House. It itself is an impossible game.”

“Then I’ll leave this to you. The promotion will officially start tomorrow.” Director Luo looked at the crowd outside of the Haunted House and walked away. He seemed several years younger.

That was indeed good news. It seems like after I help the lingering spirits or specters resolve their issues or after I’ve killed the monster behind the door, my luck will improve.

Chen Ge stood at the steps of the Haunted House. He had felt something similar after he killed with mirror monster.

Chapter 249 - Late-Night Taxi Driver

Chapter 249: Late-Night Taxi Driver

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Tomorrow, the park would help promote his Haunted House, and Chen Ge could not afford to waste this chance. Director Luo had placed all his hope on him, so naturally Chen Ge did not want to let the man down.

After the expansion tonight, Western Jiujiang's Private Academy should be unlocked. Having a new two-star scenario will be beneficial for the plan tomorrow.

...

The second expansion might even get him a new unique construct, and Chen Ge was anticipating it.

The Midnight Ticket Counter can help me attract special visitors. I wonder, what will the use of the new construct be?

He continued to work after lunch break. At around 3 pm, the recorder Chen Ge ordered online finally arrived. This meant that he could call Xu Yin for help whenever he wanted.

It still feels weird bringing a recorder on my missions, but that is more natural than bringing a large tape recorder.

The Haunted House closed at 6:30 pm. With the increase in visitors, the closing time for Chen Ge's Haunted House slowly got pushed later and later. Looking at the darkening sky, Chen Ge removed the idea of visiting Linjiang New Schistosomiasis Control Station. The place was far from New Century Park, and he did not want to rush into things, especially since he had not confirmed No. 10's identity.

After cleaning, Chen Ge entered the underground scenarios.

Tian Teng Medical School has strong playability and interactivity; that is one area where my Haunted House can improve. If I add more exploration and mystery, it should be able to draw the visitors deeper into the scenarios.

Chen Ge busied himself inside the Haunted House until 10 pm.

Xu Wan is responsible for Minghun, and I look after the underground Mu Yang High School and Third Sick Hall. This means that Murder by Midnight still needs someone to act as the murderer. Chen Ge did not have that many people he could trust. Uncle Xu was too old to run around the Haunted House, and his personality was too kind to be a murderer. In comparison, Gu Feiyu was a much better fit.

The kid is not experienced, but Murder by Midnight has Xiaoxiao's family watching over him, so he should be fine.

Now, Chen Ge's worry was that Gu Feiyu might be scared by Xiaoxiao's family. It's hard to find useable workers; my ghost employees are more trustworthy.

He returned to the staff breakroom to look over the information in his phone. The pictures that Captain Yan had sent him unsettled Chen Ge.

I'm now in the ghost stories society's crosshairs. If they mix into the visitors and make trouble at key moments, it'll ruin Director Luo's plan. I need to deal with them as soon as possible.

The patients from the Third Sick Hall would do anything. Unfortunately, Chen Ge would have a hard time identifying them if they mix into the sea of visitors. The only method to prevent that from happening was to capture them beforehand.

No. 12 is the DJ for Ghost Talk, and No. 5 is the show's producer. Should I start with them?

Chen Ge searched for Ghost Talk using his phone. One of the promotional pieces caught his attention. Normally, Ghost Talk started at midnight, but today, the show had been moved ahead an hour. The reason given was since Lychee had been on holiday yesterday, today she was going to accompany the listeners for an extra hour.

That does sound like a valid reason.

However, when Chen Ge saw the show listing, he was alerted. All five stories in the first hour were related to taxi drivers.

Is it a taxi driver special today?

Then again, why would they arrange all the stories to be before midnight? This looked like a set-up. Chen Ge tuned into the station and lay down in bed to listen.

At 10:55 pm, the woman's mellifluous voice appeared.

"We meet in the night but part before morning. However, our parting is to prepare for a later reunion. Good evening, I'm your late night DJ, Lychee."

The woman's voice was nice on the ears. She did not make use of any technique; her voice alone was comforting enough.

Such a waste of a beautiful voice. Chen Ge continued to listen.

"Jiujiang is a historical city, and there are many old buildings left in the old part of the city. The most famous among them is a street called Huai Hua Street. However, the reason for its fame is not its history but several incidents that have happened there. The street is called Huai Hua street even though there is not a single Huai Hua tree. Even the older generation at Jiujiang have no idea why the street has that name."

The woman continued her story. Her style was hard for others to mimic. She started off gentle, like she was knitting a net to pull in her listeners. When they were dragged in, she would yank on the net all of a sudden to make all the scare points explode.

Lychee's first story happened at Huai Hua Street. A taxi driver picked up a customer at Huai Hua Street at midnight. The customer said that she had left something behind and wished for him to help her retrieve it.

After giving a rough address, the driver started to move. However, the customer was weird. The driver drove her to the destination that she listed, but each time, she said that he had gotten the place wrong. Just as the driver's patience was running thin, the customer gave her last address—The bus stop next to the crematorium.

The ending was rather shocking. The customer did find what she had lost. It entered the driver's body and left while the driver's soul got replaced in the ceremonial urn that she had lost.

The story is passable, mainly because it was Lychee who told the story. She told it like it was a real story.

Then Chen Ge thought about something. Could Lychee's story have been real?

After all, Huai Hua Street really did exist.

Could she have heard her story from other members of the ghost stories society?

Lychee started her second story. It also happened at Huai Hua Street, and the main character was still a late-night taxi driver.

“Something’s off,” Captain Yan had told Chen Ge on the phone that the cases related to the ghost stories society all fell on a Wednesday. The day seemed to have a special meaning for them.

“Ghost Talk has been moved earlier by one hour today, so before midnight, today is still Wednesday. Are they planning to do something tonight?”

After hearing Lychee’s second story, Chen Ge’s suspicion grew. Her second story also had the same ending—the ghost was reborn by sacrificing innocent humans.

“Huai Hua Street, taxi driver...” Chen Ge thought about it and grabbed his jacket. “Human lives are on the line. I should go take a look.”

He put the recorder, tape, and ballpoint pen in his bag and dashed out of the staff breakroom. After his previous experience, when he passed the Props Room, he also shoved Doctor Skull-cracker’s hammer into his bag.

Chapter 250 - He Was Going on a Date

Chapter 250: He Was Going on a Date

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

It does feel safer with the hammer.

Chen Ge put on his backpack and left the Haunted House, carrying his phone. Lychee's show was continuing; she had moved onto the third story. This story was particularly detailed, like she had been through it herself.

...

To scariest part was that it seemed to be a sequel of the first story. In other words, in the third story, the taxi driver was actually the ghost from the first story.

A ghost taxi driver, that does sound like their style.

Chen Ge waited for a long time at the entrance of New Century Park before they finally found a taxi. It was already 11:30 pm.

Should be enough time.

Chen Ge opened the car door, and before he got in, he heard the rather old-fashioned song coming from the radio. The air-con was not on, and the driver was a middle-aged man. He leaned his arm on the car window, and he moved his head following the rhythm.

This man looks so familiar.

After looking at the man's face for a long time, he finally remembered it was this driver who had driven him to Western Jiujiang's Private Academy to complete Zhang Ya's Bloody Heart Mission. When the knife accidentally fell from his pocket as he reached for his phone, the driver had thought that he was trying to rob him. He had used the banner at the top of his car to ask for help. This was such a coincidence.

"Where are you going?"

Chen Ge was afraid that the man might reject him if he recognized him, so he blocked half of his face with his hands and climbed into the car quickly. He closed the door and said, "Huai Hua Street at the old part of town. I'm in a rush, so please be quick."

"Huai Hua Street?" The driver lowered the volume on his radio. It seemed like he was conflicted.

"Is there a problem? Do you need extra money?"

"The place is not far, but I hear the place is cursed. Many of my fellow drivers won't go there."

"You still believe in stuff like that in this day and age?" Chen Ge said without batting an eye. "Do you mind hurrying? I'm in a rush."

"But sometimes you have to believe it. A few weeks ago, I ran into something weird." The driver started the engine and continued.

"There was this man who wanted me to drive him to an abandoned school in the middle of the night. I didn't think too much of it and drove him there, but guess what happened."

"What?"

"The guy said that he was going on a date, do you know how I felt then? I had a mad man in the car with me in the middle of the night. I was fearing for my life!" The more he talked about it, the more distressed he became. "I suffered from a fever the next day. It was really a curse. I quickly asked my wife to acquire a talisman from the nearby temple. After I took a weeklong rest, I finally found the courage to drive again."

"Was it that scary?" Chen Ge felt embarrassed. He did not realize that his adventures would cause trouble for others.

"You have to believe me, I'm not lying to you. The man was actually about your size. He looked so normal, but who knows..." The driver glanced at Chen Ge through the rearview mirror, and a chill slowly climbed up from his feet. Why is there a sense of familiarity?

The color on his face faded, and he asked as a test, "Brother, have we met somewhere before?"

Chen Ge believed that the man had recognized him already. "Thank you for driving me to Western Jiujiang's Private Academy last time. I didn't expect it would give you so much trouble, I'm sorry."

The driver's face froze. He took out the talisman from inside his clothes and tore it up. "Actually, I recognized you when you got in the car. I was just kidding, I hope you don't mind."

"Of course not. How shall I refer to you? I'm a worker at the amusement park, perhaps we can be friends." Chen Ge had run into this uncle twice already. He did not know what the uncle thought about him, but he admired the uncle's optimistic attitude.

The driver looked at the completely empty and dark amusement park, and he said in a quivering voice, "My name is Zhang."

The two chatted for a while. The driver was still guarded around Chen Ge, just like a rabbit trapped inside a cage with a lion. His hands that gripped the steering wheel were bursting with veins.

Chen Ge was rather helpless when he saw this. It looked like he had left too big a trauma in the driver's heart that night. Since the driver did not feel like making friends, Chen Ge did not disturb him. He continued to listen to Lychee's story, hoping to find some information on the ghost stories society.

The eerie music filled up the car, and Lychee's stories were based on Huai Hua Street. The victims were all taxi drivers, and this made the uncle who drove the taxi start to sweat. He forced himself not to listen, to focus on driving.

When it was nineteen minutes away from midnight, the taxi arrived at the old part of town. The car stopped fifty or so meters away from Huai Hua Street. No matter what Chen Ge said, he would not move forward anymore. Chen Ge felt sorry for the uncle, so he left in a hurry.

The moment he closed the door, the taxi drove away without hesitation.

Am I that scary? The uncle sure is a coward.

Chen Ge looked at the leaving taxi, but it stopped after moving about fifty meters. There was someone waving at him from another alleyway.

A shadow exited the alley and got into the car. The driver did not want to stay there any longer, so after the door closed, he left like his life depended on it.

Wait, someone was calling for a taxi?

Chen Ge thought back to the man's every action. The distance was far, and the day was dark, so he did not get a good look.

Wait, the person who exited the alley...

Chen Ge narrowed his eyes.

They were running backwards!

Chen Ge put away his phone. Lychee had started her fifth ghost story that was also related to taxi drivers. He ran to the alley, but the taxi had already left.

I need to find him! Chen Ge rushed to stand in the middle of the street. He did not care whether the next taxi had passengers in it or not; he halted it.

"There should be a chat group among all the taxi drivers, right? Help me find someone, quick! He's in mortal danger!"

The driver was spooked by Chen Ge. Using Chen Ge's description, the driver managed to contact that Zhang driver.

"Ol' Zhang, where are you now?"

"Tonight's customers are all so weird. I just dropped someone at Huai Hua Street, and this new customer wants me to drive him to the bus stop near Jiujiang Crematorium, saying he has left something there."

Chapter 251 - Black Package

Chapter 251: Black Package

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

While waiting for the traffic light to turn green, the taxi driver took out his phone to look at the message in the chatgroup. He had just dropped Chen Ge at Huai Hua Street and listened to a series of ghost stories along the way, so his heart was quivering with fear.

“The car is fitted with a driving record, triangulation system, and security rails, so everything should be fine,” the driver said loud enough for the passenger at the back to hear when he replied in the chatgroup.

...

“Things are rather chaotic at night for the past few days, so you be careful.”

“Okay.”

The light turned green, and the driver put his phone aside to continue driving the car. The scenery on the side flashed by, and the number of cars on the road dwindled. The driver snuck a look at the passenger in the back. The person could not be considered tall, and he was wearing a black jacket on top of a faded red t-shirt.

The person had jumped into his car in a hurry and had not said anything after giving the address. The weirdest thing was that he did not remove his jacket or his hood even when he was inside the taxi. Due to the angle, the driver could only see half of his face.

“Brother, we have some unspoken rules among us late night taxi drivers—we normally wouldn’t go to those kinds of places.” Out of fear, the driver started to ramble. “But since you’re already in my car, of course, I won’t kick you out. However, I can only drop you close to the address, and you’ll need to walk the remaining hundred or two hundred meters, is that okay with you?”

He had acted similarly when he drove Chen Ge for the first time. He had a small heart. Before they arrived at the destination, he had started planning his retreat route. He was going to turn and leave once the passenger left his car.

“No, I just want to go and grab something. My house is back at the city.” The man raised his head, and his voice did sound normal. “If you leave, it means that I’ll be stranded at the crematorium. How do you expect me to get back to the city? Will taxis come to the crematorium at night?”

Driver Zhang thought about it, and he had to concede to his passenger’s point.

“If you drive me there and then drive me back, that’ll earn you two rounds of payment; won’t you earn more compared to driving back with an empty car?”

Ol’ Zhang was slowly convinced by the passenger. Indeed, why should he give up on the extra money?

If this was before driving Chen Ge, he would have agreed readily, but now, he was a lot more cautious. “That sounds doable, but I’ll wait for you at the end of the road, and you come to find me after you retrieve your stuff.”

“Sure, as long as you don’t mind the wait.” The male passenger placed his hands into his pockets, and he looked like a permissible man.

Other than his insistence to keep his hood on, this man sounds perfectly normal... at least much more normal than the dude who went for a date at an abandoned school, Ol’ Zhang grumbled internally. There were so many late-night taxis at Jiujiang; how come he kept running into these weird passengers?

He had run into the same mental patient twice already, which was already rare enough, so it should have been time for his luck to turn already. Ol’ Zhang tried his best to console himself, but his hands that gripped the steering wheel still sweated.

He drove fast and reached the vicinity of the crematorium that was situated at the outskirts in ten minutes. The people started to disappear, and the neon lights of shop signs could not be seen anymore. Only Ol’ Zhang’s taxi sped down the lonely road.

“We’re about there.”

Ol’ Zhang kept glancing at the passenger in the back. The man sat patiently and had not moved throughout the journey.

“Please move slightly forward. Don’t need to drop me at the door, just a little bit forward,” the passenger in the back said. His voice sounded weirdly raspy, like he was taking in his breaths while speaking.

There was no light in the surrounding hundred meters, and the place was eerily quiet. The taxi moved slowly on the road like a moving black coffin.

“You can stop here.” The night breeze slipped in to the slightly ajar window, and Ol’ Zhang’s hands that held the steering wheel were shaking.

“Okay, give me two minutes.”

“Wait, the fare!”

“I’ll come back to pay you,” the passenger said lightly. There was something different about his voice.

“You...” Ol’ Zhang thought about getting out of the car to reason with the man; he was afraid that the passenger might escape from his payment. However, the thought of leaving the car was too much for him. Jesus, who would come to the crematorium at midnight? Does he work here or something?

Ol’ Zhang looked at the time—it was 11.56 pm.

Keep running into these weird customers who want to come to these places. The only good thing is that I don’t need to worry about traffic.

He looked at the man who ran away. He thought that the man’s movement was rather awkward, like he was not used to walking. The passenger entered the crematorium through the side door. Ol’ Zhang sat alone in the taxi. He closed the windows, and the enclosed space gave him the security that he needed.

He’s taking too long. Ol’ Zhang was unsettled after ten seconds. Is he cheating me? Will he not come out again?

He thought about it, and his expression slowly changed. He realized something horrible. The passenger who went to Huai Hua Street didn’t pay his fare either!

When Chen Ge was fifty meters away from Huai Hua Street, Ol’ Zhang had already urged him to get out and refused to move forward anymore. When Chen Ge got out and wanted to pay him, Ol' Zhang's taxi had already left.

He tapped himself lightly on his face. Ol' Zhang grumbled internally, Started work an hour ago but earned nothing, even got to pay for the fuel. Oh well, as long as I do not run into him again, those few notes are nothing.

Ol' Zhang was flustered. He turned on the radio to distract himself, but it only made him more nervous. Outside the car was the crematorium. It was completely dark and silent. The sound inside the car only made him feel like he was being watched. Before the song finished, he switched it off and gripped the steering wheel as he looked around.

Why isn't he back yet?

It was one minute to midnight. Ol' Zhang had a bad feeling; he felt like something bad would happen. He picked up the torn talisman, mumbled a few prayers, and shoved it back into his shirt.

In a pure coincidence, when he lowered his head to pick up the talisman, his eyes swept the backseat. To ensure comfort, Ol' Zhang had placed a cushion on the back, and there was an inconspicuous blood stain on the white cushion.

Was this there before? I was sure this wasn't there when I started the trip tonight.

Ol' Zhang turned to look behind him, and he was suddenly reminded of his passenger's weird outfit. There was a faded red t-shirt under his jacket.

The red on that shirt wasn't even, could that be...

Bang! Bang bang!

Someone knocked on his car window. The passenger had returned from the crematorium and was holding a package wrapped in black cloth in his hands. Ol' Zhang was scared and quickly pulled his gaze back.

"Found the thing, let's go back to the city." The passenger's tone was completely different from before. Something had changed.

Ol' Zhang glanced at the black package that the passenger was holding via the rear-view window. His rubbed his palms on his shirt—they were completely drenched with sweat.

Chapter 252 - Not Human

Chapter 252: Not Human

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

When the passenger got back into the car, it was exactly midnight. He hugged the black package and kept his head hidden under the hood of his jacket. The color of his shirt seemed to have become deeper. Ol' Zhang forced himself to not look at the mirror, but his gaze kept wandering toward it.

"How come it feels like a different person has returned," Ol' Zhang muttered softly to himself as he clicked the warning page on his phone open.

...

"Going back to Huai Hua Street?"

"Yes."

"Do you live there? There are normally elders who live at Jiujiang's old streets, so it's rare for someone your age to reside there."

"No, I'm not staying there." The passenger's tone was weird. He answered with short phrases, and they sounded dark.

"Listening to your accent, are you a Jiujiang local? Lately, it has been rather unpeaceful at night, so I'd suggest you go home instead of running about." Ol' Zhang did not want to return to that damn street; he was afraid of running into yet another weird customer. "Where is your home? How about I just drive you home?"

"My home?" The passenger lowered his head even more to focus on the black package on his lap and did not add anything else. Since the man did not elaborate, Ol' Zhang was too embarrassed to press. He turned the taxi around, back toward the city.

The atmosphere got even more depressed after the car started moving. Sitting inside the same space with the passenger, Ol' Zhang felt weirdly congested. He opened the car windows. As the night breeze entered the taxi, Ol' Zhang felt more refreshed. He turned to look at the passenger.

No matter how the car bounced about, the passenger kept his upper body in the same fixed position. The man had probably been in a hurry earlier because the t-shirt looked wrinkled, like he did not have time to change it. The uppermost buttons were undone, and there was an inconspicuous strangulation mark.

Was he assaulted inside the crematorium? Wait, those looks like marks left behind from a hanging!

Ol' Zhang was even more nervous. Half of his attention was focused on the passenger; he was afraid that something might happen once he pulled his gaze away.

His pupils shook, and Ol' Zhang's heart was racing. He was worried that his action would be discovered, but he was even more worried that the passenger might do something insane. He stepped on the gas because that was the best solution. As long as he got back to the city with crowds around, he should be safe.

The car windows were open. The wind blew into the car, and Ol' Zhang kept his gaze on the backseat. The passenger seemed to be frozen, but the black cloth around the item on his lap lifted up at a corner. The cloth slid away to reveal the package's real identity.

His blood rushed to the brain, and Ol' Zhang's heart raced. It was a ceremonial urn! The thing that the man had taken from the crematorium was an urn!

His arms started to shake, and his fingers curled inward like he was suffering from an involuntary spasm. A chill climbed his spine.

The passenger did not seem to notice that the urn had been revealed. The taxi continued to fly down the road. With the wind doing its work, the other half of the cloth had been lifted off as well.

Now, Ol' Zhang had a closer look. The black cloth was holding a black urn, and there was a picture on top of the urn. The driver slowed down as he turned his focus on the picture. He could not get a good look, but the chin and lips of the man in the picture had similarities to those of the passenger inside the car.

He went to the crematorium to retrieve his own urn in the middle of the night?

Ol' Zhang did not dare to finish his thought. His body was shaking. He kept one hand on the steering wheel while his other sought out his phone to call the police. However, when his hand touched the phone, he glanced behind out of habit, and a pair of bloodshot eyes were looking back at him!

The passenger, who had kept his head lowered, had raised his face—a face that was similar to the picture on the urn, just a little bit whiter. Ol' Zhang's skin crawled. Thanks to his years of driving experience, he managed to keep hold of the car or else they would have been in an accident already.

The taxi continued to move. They would enter the city in the next few minutes, but Ol' Zhang's situation was getting worse. The passenger kept his eyes on the rear-view mirror, so whenever Ol' Zhang tried to look in the mirror, a pair of eyes would be staring at him.

The breeze had blown the black cloth away, so the passenger sat in the back, completely unmoving, holding his own urn in his lap.

“What is he thinking?”

There were no other cars on the road, and Ol' Zhang's heart was burning. He had an illusion that he was driving the wrong way. This was not the road heading to the city but deeper into the countryside.

“What should I do?” He had called the police and sent out a SOS message in the chatgroup, but there was no one around to help him. Whenever he raised his eyes to the mirror, Ol' Zhang felt as if the eyes had gotten closer to him.

He gripped the steering wheel tightly as the temperature in the car dropped. He was leaning against the chair, but it did not feel soft at all.

His phone that he had dropped to the side started to vibrate. Someone was calling him, but Ol' Zhang did not dare answer.

“Hey.” The passenger suddenly spoke, and it caused Ol' Zhang to shiver.

Two seconds later, he said, “Y... Yes?”

“Someone is calling you.”

Ol' Zhang looked at his phone. The app to call the police with one touch had disappeared, and in its place was an unknown number calling in. The call was hung up soon enough, like the person on the other end of the phone also realized that something was wrong.

“Just ignore it. We can’t talk on the phone while driving anyway.” Ol’ Zhang laughed drily.

Then he glanced at the phone again—a message had come in.

“Quickly stop your car! Run down the road as fast as you can! It’s not a human being sitting at the back of your car!”

The message showed on the screen for several seconds. Ol’ Zhang saw it, and the passenger at the back also saw it. “My friend, always a joker.”

Ol’ Zhang picked up the phone to place it beside the steering wheel. He was about to say something, but when he raised his head to the rear-view mirror, he was shocked to realize the passenger had his face stuck to the partition between them!

There was an inexplicable smile on the passenger’s face.

“There’s no need to deny it. I’m sure you’ve noticed it already.” The hood of the jacket fell off. The passenger’s neck slowly moved, and there was another face growing on the back of his head.

“Technically, he is still human, but I’m not.” This sentence was said by the face on the back.

Ol’ Zhang had forgotten what he should do. His mind was blank. He remembered stepping on the brake. The taxi stopped several meters later. He ran out of the taxi, screaming.

The passenger also got out. He turned away from Ol’ Zhang, and an ugly smile appeared on the face behind his head.

“There’s nowhere to run. This body has been targeted by a madman, so I need a new partner.”

The passenger faced away from Ol’ Zhang, and like a puppet pulled along by a string, he chased after Ol’ Zhang, running backwards.

Chapter 253 - A Hammer to the Face

Chapter 253: A Hammer to the Face

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Help!”

It was the middle of the night, and they were in the countryside, so there were no cars on the road. Ol’ Zhang remembered the last message that he had seen before he jumped out of the car. He did not run into the forest by the road but ran down the middle of the road. The wind gathered in his ears, and after several meters, Ol’ Zhang realized that there were no running footsteps coming from behind him, so he turned to look.

...

“You won’t be able to run!” The face that grew on the back of the head had become severely twisted like it was trying to crawl out of the passenger’s head. The passenger was only half a meter away from Ol’ Zhang.

It wants to drill into my head.

Ol’ Zhang didn’t know why he would have that thought, but he knew that he needed to focus on escaping. He did not dare turn back to look again. However, certain things would not just disappear simply because one did not look at them.

There was a needling pain coming from the back of his head, like a sharp knife was slowly poking into it.

“Help!” he screamed, but the only reply was silence. His neck turned cold, and he did not even have the energy to turn back to look. His speed slowed down, and the oxygen in his lungs ran dry. He could not run anymore.

“You’ll get used to it.” An eerie smile came from the back of his head. Ol’ Zhang forced himself to move forward. The road was lined on both sides by woods, and since there was nothing but a crematorium in front, people would not normally use this road at night.

His head felt like it was being peeled open. The pain was insufferable. Ol' Zhang's eyes rolled upwards as he started to faint.

"So painful!"

That was the only thought in his mind. That and... Will I become a monster with a face on the back of my head when I wake up?

A chilliness entered his brain, and his memory was muddled. Ol' Zhang reached his limits and collapsed to the floor. There was a chill on his back like a venomous snake was slithering on it. There was nothing he could do to stop it. The pain on the back of his head grew intense. Ol' Zhang wanted to scream, but he had lost his voice. He shook his head, trying to shake the thing off, but it was pointless.

"So painful..."

He did not make any noise, but there was a sound that entered his ear. "Was that me who was talking?"

Ol' Zhang's consciousness was fraying as he turned toward the noise. The only source of light in the dark was car headlights. The trees on the side rustled. Something was coming down the road.

"So painful, so painful!"

The sound continued to speak. Ol' Zhang's face was white as ash when he realized the sound did not come from his lips.

Another monster is coming?

Ol' Zhang tried to keep his eyes open. All he wanted to do was earn a living for his family; he did not expect something like this to happen to him.

Will someone operate on my body to investigate after I die?

Weird thoughts appeared in his mind. The chilliness on his back started to dissipate, but the pain on the back of his head did not decrease. Hearing that voice, the passenger also sensed danger, and he started to increase in pace.

How come the monster feels like it is afraid?

Before his eyes closed, Ol' Zhang saw a taxi coming his way. He wanted to warn the man about the danger, but his lips would not move. The car door flew open, and the mental patient he had seen several times exited with his backpack.

Why is he here?

The mental patient dropped the backpack on the ground and he pulled out a creepy looking hammer from it before dashing at Ol' Zhang.

Looks like I'm definitely going to die this time.

Despair swallowed up Ol' Zhang, and the precious memories of his life started to play. When the man was about two meters away from him, he raised the hammer and aimed at the back of Ol' Zhang's head!

BANG!

The pain disappeared instantly. Something that looked like a person tumbled backwards and rolled on the road. The sound of skull cracking resounded in his ears, and his sight was covered by a screen of red. Ol' Zhang turned his head with difficulty. When he saw the mangled body of his passenger, he could no longer hold the fear within his heart. The terror gripped his mind, and he fainted fully.

"Don't be afraid!" Chen Ge gasped for air. He arrived just in time. Ol' Zhang had fainted, so he naturally did not hear him. The other driver also got out from the car then. When he saw the fainted Ol' Zhang, he screamed.

"Ol' Zhang! Ol' Zhang, wake up!" The peace of the night was shattering. When the passenger saw Chen Ge, he quickly climbed up from the floor and ran into the woods.

"Call the police immediately! Tell them the culprit is an escaped patient from the Third Sick Hall!"

After giving that order, Chen Ge followed the man into the forest. The passenger ran, and Chen Ge chased. Both of their speeds were affected by the woody terrain.

They continued this for several minutes before the passenger's physique started to weaken. His body tumbled left and right. Half of his shoulder had been shattered from the hit earlier, and his step seemed to be going to break his body.

"You're not going to run away!"

Chen Ge would never let this man go. Be it for the hidden mission or another reason, he had to make the ghost stories society a part of history. Listening the taunt from Chen Ge, the passenger gritted his teeth. A few minutes ago, he had said the same thing.

The passenger accidentally tripped, and his already imbalanced body crumbled to the ground.

“Not going to run anymore?” Chen Ge, of course, would not let go of such a good opportunity. He closed the distance, and the scary hammer expanded in the passenger’s eyes.

There was a weird panicky feeling in his heart. The passenger crawled on the floor, trying to hide deeper in the forest. Chen Ge found him several seconds later. The hammer went flying at the passenger’s leg, and at the last minute, the passenger used his elbow to forcibly move his body away.

BANG!

The hammer fell on a tree trunk, causing the entire tree to shake violently. The passenger’s face was white; he looked paler than a dead person.

“Don’t force me!” The face on the back of his head started to move, and blood vessels began to seep out from underneath its skin. They started to reknit themselves. Several seconds later, the face on the back changed into a face that looked suspiciously like Chen Ge.

“You’re definitely from behind the door if you can control these blood vessels.”

Before the monster could finish his transformation, Chen Ge rushed forward. He would never hold back against these monsters.

“I’ve been waiting for you!”

When Chen Ge got close, the passenger suddenly jumped up to grapple him. He used every ounce of his energy to grab Chen Ge. The face that looked like Chen Ge revealed a sick smile as it leaned toward Chen Ge’s face.

He had planned this when he saw Chen Ge, but he had forgotten something important. In the small space between the two Chen Ge’s faces, a blood-curdling scream erupted.

” Painful, so painful! ”

Chapter 254 - Scary Xu Yin

Chapter 254: Scary Xu Yin

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The blood-knitted face seemed to knock into something and halted thirty centimeters away from Chen Ge.

“This is?”

...

The face was stunned. The blood vessels on the face started to pull back. There was now a young man standing between it and Chen Ge.

“They peeled my skin back, and as the blood fell, I saw how they planned to share me.”

The young man did not look old, and there were tears in his eyes. He slowly raised his head, and his emotions started to run wild as blood started to flow from every orifice of his body. “It was painful, so painful!”

His face twisted, and the facial features moved. Maddened, he dug his hands into the face on the back of the passenger’s head before gnawing and chewing on the blood vessels that formed the face like a crazed dog!

The passenger and the face screamed at the same time, and Chen Ge staggered one large step back. This was the first time he had seen Xu Yin in the flesh. Probably due to the pain and torment he had suffered before death, Xu Yin had turned into an extremely violent specter, like aggression was the only way to vent the pain and resentment he had suffered in his life.

This is mad.

The scene turned increasingly bloody, and Chen Ge nudged another step back.

He won’t hold back once he is summoned; that is quite scary.

Chen Ge gripped the hammer tightly.

But it won't be good for him to hold onto his rage. I should try to counsel him somehow.

Xu Yin was not a Red Specter, so his ability was weaker than Zhang Ya. However, in terms of ruthlessness and tendency for violence, this young man was much more intense than Zhang Ya.

Every single specter in the Wheel of Misfortune is unique. Looks like I need to be careful in the future.

With the title of Specter's Favored, Chen Ge had a feeling that he would only get Baleful Specters or items to increase the specters' affection from the spinning wheel. In the end, he would only end up with more specters around him.

I might have a greater courage than most, but ultimately, I'm just a human being. Some things should not be pushed too far.

The passenger crawled on the ground. The face behind his head was much stronger than Chen Ge had thought. Xu Yin also suffered some injuries in the battle; his body started to flicker. However, the face did not have a good time, either. It was almost yanked out of the passenger's head by Xu Yin.

"What kind of monster is this?" The face continued to wail in pain, but no one answered it. The blood vessels continued to crumble, and Xu Yin's attacks looked more like he was yearning for death. Chen Ge felt pity, looking at him.

Looks like I shouldn't summon Xu Yin unless it's a moment of life and death.

Chen Ge now missed the Pen Spirit. Of all his employees, she was the gentlest. Despite her cunning nature, she had never once gone against Chen Ge's orders.

Xu Yin started to lose himself in his angered aggression. Chen Ge came out from his hiding place in a hurry. He could not bear to witness this bloodshed anymore and decided to end it as soon as possible.

The monsters from behind the door needed to possess a human being if they want to survive for long outside the door. The Doctor Skull-cracker's effect on the blood face is limited, so I'll need to target the passenger.

Chen Ge charged at the passenger with the hammer raised. He locked onto his target and swung the hammer. Couldn't whack the head, so where should I aim to knock him out without endangering his life?

The passenger seemed to have heard Chen Ge coming. The hairs rose on his back, and he turned to look at Chen Ge. His eyes were almost falling out of his face. "I..."

He seemed to want to say something, but Chen Ge did not give him the chance. The hammer fell, and the bone cracked.

The member from ghost stories society collapsed onto the floor with a broken leg. The blood face seemed to know it needed a host, so it peeled itself off to transform into a malicious human head and escaped toward the crematorium. The instant it left the passenger, the soul of the passenger seemed to be sucked out, and he crumbled to the floor. There was no life in his eyes.

"Chase after it!" Even before the reminder from Chen Ge, Xu Yin had already started to move. This young man, who looked quite melancholic and artistic when he first appeared, now had a twisted expression on his face. Wounds dripped blood all over his body as he chased after the human head.

"Don't kill it! I still have questions to ask it!" Chen Ge warned, but he was still too late. Xu Yin was completely out of control. He grabbed the human head and started to feast on it. Ear-splitting screams caused the leaves to fall, and the human head slowly disappeared from Xu Yin's hands.

After consuming the monster, Xu Yin stood where he was for a long time. The wounds on his body started to heal, but the blood stains on his shirt did not recede. When the blood stains covered his whole clothes, he would become the second Red Specter at Chen Ge's Haunted House.

His arms hanging by his side, Xu Yin slowly turned, and a pair of hollow eyes looked at Chen Ge. Like a man trapped in a house on a rainy day, he wished to leave but was afraid of getting wet. Seeing Xu Yin like this, Chen Ge did not know what to say. He could sense the pain and loneliness in Xu Yin.

"I know about your past and your pain, but you can select another method to vent them in the future. Perhaps you can come talk to me." Chen Ge did not berate Xu Yin but walked toward him and reached out his hand. "Perhaps we can be friends."

He had told Zhang Ya the same thing some time ago but slightly edited. Chen Ge noticed the change in Xu Yin's expression and realized that he could use this speech in the future again.

Xu Yin stared at Chen Ge's face for a long time. However, he did not reach out to take Chen Ge's hand but slowly dissipated into the darkness.

"So painful..."

The tape in the recorder stopped turning, and the woods returned to silence like everything that happened was a dream. Chen Ge picked up the unconscious passenger and pulled the sleeves back to inspect his arms.

After comparing the location of the cigarette wounds, Chen Ge could confirm this was the man who had appeared at Hai Ming Apartments and was No. 5 of the ghost stories society!

After the death of Xu Tong and the patient with Phantom Limb Syndrome, the black phone gave an alert about increasing mission completion rate. The monster from No. 5 has been dealt with, and the person is unconscious, but the black phone has not responded in any way. Looks like the chance of him being a patient from the Third Sick Hall is very low.

Chen Ge dragged No. 5 out, and he only took few steps when he was reminded of something.

This is weird! With the power of the thin monster on Wang Shenglong, it shouldn't have needed to run from the blood face. But according to Wang Shenglong, the thin monster felt threatened, so it chose to leave.

No. 5 wouldn't be able to create such threat, which means that...

There was a glow in Chen Ge's eyes.

There must have been others who accompanied No. 5 to Hai Ming Apartments!

The surveillance had probably caught the face of other members as well, but they hid themselves well, so they had not been discovered.

There could only have been a Red Specter who made the thin monster feel threatened!

Chapter 255 - Thank You for Tuning In

Chapter 255: Thank You for Tuning In

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After exiting the woods, Chen Ge dropped the passenger by the side of the road. When Ol' Zhang saw Chen Ge, he involuntarily crawled backwards.

“Ol' Zhang, you should really give the young man a sincere thank you. If not for him stopping my car to come save you, the robber would have taken your life already.”

...

The other taxi driver accompanied Ol' Zhang. He did not know what had happened, but he did see Ol' Zhang being pressed to the ground when he arrived. The first thought that had come into his mind was robbery gone wrong since that was what they were taught in safety classes.

“You have no idea what I've been through,” Ol' Zhang rambled as he pointed at Chen Ge and the ‘body’ on the ground. Then again, he would not know how to explain it. Ol' Zhang had been through a lot that night, and Chen Ge suspected that the man would need to stay at home to rest for a long time after this.

“Are you okay?” Chen Ge held the scary-looking hammer, found his backpack, and shoved it back into it.

“Y-Yes.” Ol' Zhang looked at Chen Ge. He could not understand why a normal person would come out late at night with such a large hammer. Technically, it was Chen Ge who had saved him and he should have been thankful, but for some reason, he felt scared looking at Chen Ge.

“Good, be careful in the future,” Chen Ge said to make the two drivers calm down. He called Captain Yan on his phone to explain the situation before the two of them. Listening to the conversation between Chen Ge and Captain Yan, Ol' Zhang's impression of Chen Ge slowly improved. He was a normal person who had gotten involved in something supernatural. In his mind, police were there to protect the normal people, and since Chen Ge knew the police and did save his life, he had to be a good man.

After putting his guard down, Ol' Zhang gave it some thought. Chen Ge did not hurt him once when he took his car. Looks like I've misunderstood him. He's probably a plains cloth on some special duty. This is horrible! Did he have to give up his original mission to save me? That is very common in television series.

Even though Ol' Zhang was a normal person, he had a big heart. He had decided to try his best to say good things about Chen Ge when the police arrived. Chen Ge did not know what Ol' Zhang was going through. He talked to them for a while and asked the taxi who had come later to drive him to the office of Ghost Talk's radio station.

No. 5 is the radio station's producer, and No. 12, Lychee, is the DJ tonight. The two of them have probably communicated before this.

After Lychee received the news that No. 5 had fallen, she might choose to escape and go into hiding. To prevent that from happening, Chen Ge decided to help Lychee seek 'salvation' instantly.

No matter the reason, if you've done the crime then you have to do the time.

Chen Ge messaged Captain Yan to explain his location. He used less than twenty minutes to reach his destination.

Brother, thank you for your help tonight. Go back to look after Ol' Zhang. I'll handle the rest.

After paying his fare, Chen Ge entered the building alone. A radio station had a high standard for its interior. If the standard did not meet the requirements, then the broadcast might be influenced. Therefore, a large radio station like Ghost Talk normally had their own recording studio, situated at the deepest part of the station. Chen Ge evaded the cameras. He stopped at the front door for a while before taking out his phone to tune into Ghost Talk.

Lychee was still telling a story. She used herself as a model and employed a curious method to explain the various changes happening around her. It was not particularly scary, but the extreme details gave the listeners chills. Looking at the list for the future shows, Chen Ge realized that Lychee planned to turn the ghost stories into a whole series until next Tuesday.

She's planning to personally make her own ghost story? Those who listen to her broadcast might have accidents happen to them?

Chen Ge did not understand what the madwoman was thinking. He snuck into the office. The studio was soundproof, and since Lychee was inside the studio, Chen Ge was not worried about her hearing him.

There's not even one security guard at this office. Looks like No. 5 has great confidence in his company and believed no one would come to create trouble here.

Chen Ge understood that reasoning because he too was never worried a thief might come into his Haunted House.

He still locked the door at night. However, that was not because he was afraid of thieves breaking and entering but because he was afraid of scaring innocent people, and that might draw him into unnecessary trouble.

Following the map provided on the second floor, Chen Ge took the elevator to find the studio. Then, the rest would be simple. He took out Doctor Skull-cracker's hammer and started to wait outside the door. Lychee was still inside, recording, not knowing that danger was already so imminent.

You're telling other people's ghost story, not knowing you're going to be a part of one soon.

In the dark corridor, Chen Ge held the hammer, listening to Lychee's broadcast on his phone. There were barely several meters between them.

...

Lychee described the weird things that had happened to her inside the recording studio. In the story, she appeared as the weak victim, looking for the culprit who had ruined her life, but in reality, she was the real killer.

"The show will end here tonight. Thank you for tuning in. Wish you a wonderful dream, good night." Lychee finished all the ghost stories at 2 am. She turned off all the equipment and sat in the chair. There was a creepy expression on her face that was different from normal.

She seemed to have gotten too attached to the ghost stories and had a hard time coming out. The recording studio was very quiet, and after a long time, a voice said, "What should I try tonight?"

She bit on her own fingers and rambled to herself. This was the real her. When she had just arrived at the station, she had been very afraid. A girl had to tell ghost stories in the middle of the night and then leave the silent building to go back home.

For the high pay, she had forced herself to continue, but after some time, perhaps because she had gotten used to the terror or she had reached the threshold for fear, she no longer felt as scared. However, as she lost the sensation for fear, her mind and heart started to morph into something abnormal.

She liked to see herself as the monsters inside the story. She liked to hide herself in the darkness and would not be afraid of anything.

"There's still some meat inside the fridge, but today, I can change up the cooking method."

Lychee's voice was as beautiful as before. She moved her ruined hand away, and there was fresh blood left on her lips.

Chapter 256 - Chairperson's Voice

Chapter 256: Chairperson's Voice

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Lychee licked her lips excitedly like she had just remembered something wonderful. She went into the restroom anxiously and took out a lipstick from her purse to redo her make-up when her phone rang.

“An unregistered number?” Lychee tossed her make-up kit back into her purse. She was rather annoyed that the caller had ruined the mood that she was in. She tried to arrange her emotions to make her tone and voice sound as normal as she could. “Such a joykill.”

...

Lychee picked up the phone and walked to the door of the recording studio. “Hello, how can I help you?”

Her sweet voice was like a fruit champagne, fresh and bubbly. Hear it too much and one might get drunk.

“No. 5 is dead. I need you to come to Fang Hwa Apartments’ 24th floor now.” The person on the other end of the phone was not seduced by her voice and got straight to the point.

“Dead?” Lychee’s bleeding fingers slowly pulled taut, and the blood fell on her phone’s pink casing.

“I don’t care what No. 5 told you or what your relationship is; I need you to come over now.”

“Now?” Lychee hesitated. She held the phone in one hand and opened the door with another. The corridor outside was incredibly quiet. The room door opened a sliver, and Lychee pressed, “How is his death related to me? Why should I go to the 24th floor?”

“If you don’t want to die, come immediately!” The voice on the phone filtered out the door through the open gap.

“Fine.” Lychee opened the door fully. She just took half a step outside when she saw the head of a scary hammer flying at her. She did not even have the chance to scream before she was knocked back into the studio.

The pain registered several seconds later, and a shrill scream exited the recording studio. Chen Ge picked up the phone that fell to the floor and put it beside his ear.

“No. 12?” There was a chilling and raspy sound coming from the other end. The person was using a fake voice, but even so, Chen Ge felt that the voice was rather familiar. Chen Ge wanted to continue to listen in, but the person seemed to realize something was wrong and hung up immediately.

Even though I only heard a little, that is a huge reward already.

Standing in the darkened corridor, Chen Ge flashed a smile, holding Lychee’s phone. All the members were not supposed to know each other’s identity, but the person who called Lychee was the obvious exception. He even knew the connection between Lychee and No. 5, so he had called to warn Lychee to leave.

The owner of this voice is probably the chairperson who is controlling everything from the shadows.

Chen Ge compared the voices that he had heard at the ghost stories society, and he could be certain that the voice did not belong to the first man on the left, No. 5, or No. 10.

The range is slowly closing in. Detaining him will collapse the entire society.

Placing Lychee’s phone on the table, Chen Ge stood guard at the door as he called Captain Yan. Captain Yan’s team mobilized faster than Western Jiujiang’s police team. They arrived in less than ten minutes. Chen Ge put away his hammer, suggested that the police examine Lychee’s home, and then told them about how she had killed her ex-husband.

The few people had been taken away from investigation. At the station, Chen Ge ran into Captain Yan again. The slightly rotund police officer looked worse for wear.

“Captain Yan, long time no see.”

“How come I feel like I see you daily?” Captain Yan looked at Chen Ge and was reminded of the things that Inspector Lee had told him in private about Chen Ge. He felt a headache coming. However, he could not blame Chen Ge. He was the one who had awarded the medal to Chen Ge, and he was the one who had encouraged him. He had made his bed, and now he had to sleep in it.

“Xiao Chen, well done!” Captain Yan’s smile looked forceful. “But you were acting too rash.”

“I understand, but I couldn’t control myself when I saw they were trying to harm the innocent.” Chen Ge did not deny he had acted rashly. However, he would never admit to things that he did not do either. “Captain Yan, the fainting of the kidnapper that ran into the woods had nothing to do with me. I made sure to avoid hitting his vitals, and it was me who dragged him out of the woods after he inexplicably lost his consciousness.”

Captain Yan nodded. “I’ve heard the explanation from the two taxi drivers. If you did not appear in time, things would have been worse.”

The appreciation that the driver had for Chen Ge was sincere—Captain Yan could see that.

“So, can I leave now?” Chen Ge’s Haunted House was going to have a huge promotion tomorrow, and he had to make sure he was present.

“Not yet, we still have plenty of questions to ask you. You need to finish giving your statement before you can go. That’s the rules.” Captain Yan and two other officers asked Chen Ge for the details of the cases, and Chen Ge, who had prepared the answers beforehand, dealt with them easily.

He described what he could in detail, and he made up certain things that he could not explain did not happen. Other than that, Chen Ge provided Captain Yan with another important piece of information. The surveillance camera at Hai Ming Apartments might have captured the image of No. 5’s accomplices.

At 3:30 am, Captain Yan saw how tired Chen Ge was, so they allowed him to return to New Century Park. After stepping into the Haunted House, the tired-looking Chen Ge had a rebirth. After eating Zhang Ya’s candy, Chen Ge realized that he did not need too much sleep to maintain a healthy spirit. This was his secret that he would not share with others.

I should keep a low profile for a while. I might be able to survive it, but Captain Yan and his team might not.

Chen Ge entered the staff breakroom, removed the white cat from his bed, lay down, and slept without changing his clothes. At 8 am, Chen Ge was woken up by a phone call. He was surprised to see it was from Gu Feiyu.

After experiencing the Haunted House with a bunch of visitors yesterday, he had refused Chen Ge's offer to work there. Money was important, but his life was more important. However, he could not deny Chen Ge's persuasion and promised to give it another try.

I'm lacking an actor for Murder by Midnight. Xiao Gu will be the perfect fit.

Chen Ge changed his clothes and ran to the park entrance to greet Xiao Gu after washing his face.

"Brother Chen, I don't think I have the talent to scare people. I've thought about it the whole night. While I appreciate you giving me this job offer, I cannot allow myself to ruin your Haunted House's reputation." Xiao Gu was an honest young man.

"It's okay. I can teach you how to scare people." Chen Ge inspected Xiao Gu. "Come with me. We'll get you into your work clothes first."

He brought Xiao Gu into the dressing room. When Xiao Gu saw the bloodied doctor's outfit and the skin mask sewn from different faces, he felt like leaving.

"Hold this and this hammer. Now, swing it several times for me."

Chapter 257 - The Ghost's Changing Room

Chapter 257: The Ghost's Changing Room

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Holding the heavy Doctor Skull-cracker's hammer, Gu Feiyu's eyes naturally wandered to fall on the blood stain left on the hammer's head. A strong smell of blood reached his nose.

"Are your Haunted House's props all so realistic?"

...

"It's our Haunted House. Now, quickly put it on." The park was opening at 9 am, so Chen Ge did not have much time left. After putting on the outfit, Gu Feiyu turned to look at the mirror, and he could not believe that the monster that he saw was himself.

"Not bad, it feels right." Chen Ge nodded with satisfaction. Gu Feiyu was as tall as he was, but he was not familiar with it, so he appeared rather sluggish. "The mask sticks onto your skin, so if you want to change the expression on the mask, you need to rely on your facial muscles."

Gu Feiyu tried to make a smile. However, it did not look scary but rather annoyed.

"You're playing the character of a crazed murderer, a madman, let me see that craziness in you!" Chen Ge gave him several examples. He had seen plenty of madmen in his life. In less than few seconds, he switched through multiple styles. "Find your own niche first—after all, there are many different types of madmen.

"The one with the lowest difficulty is the silent, cold-hearted type. It's the easiest to mimic, I would say, so you just need to keep calm in all situations. Think of yourself as a killing machine that has no feeling.

"A level higher than that is the bestial type. You need to make the visitors feel like you're constantly just one corner behind them. They're your prey; they could struggle but never escape your grasp.

"Harder than that is the maddened type. This kind will be able to give the visitors the most fear but correspondingly requires a greater acting skill to embody the madness both in your eyes and your body language. You're a wildfire; without sense and reason, you just want to consume everything."

Chen Ge had seen many types of madmen, which lent the sense of authenticity to his Haunted House. Gu Feiyu was already confused, so he could only nod continuously.

"You're new here, so I won't ask too much of you." Chen Ge found Xiaoxiao and led Gu Feiyu to the Murder by Midnight scenario. "You went through the whole scenario yesterday. Have you memorized the routes?"

Reminded of the nightmarish experience he had yesterday, tears were rolling in Gu Feiyu's eyes. "Not yet, I was too scared to remember anything from yesterday."

"A qualified Haunted House worker must be familiar with the layout of the place. You have to create this impression that you're not a living human but a stubborn lingering spirit, a crazed murderer who might appear at any time!" Chen Ge walked into the scenario openly while Gu Feiyu followed him cautiously, holding the hammer.

"I'll bring you to go take a look at all the hidden passageways again. You'll need to remember them this time," Chen Ge said seriously. "Actually, there's another reason to knowing these paths. If something happens to the visitors, you have to go and assist them at the first notice. Here, we're both demons and angels."

"I'm afraid I won't be able to do it. Honestly, I was already feeling rather unsettled after walking in. I'm afraid, thinking about the need to stay in such a large place alone for a long time." Gu Feiyu was wearing the scary skin mask, but there were tears in his voice. "I still think I'm not suitable for this job."

"Snap out of it! How can you admit defeat without even trying?" Chen Ge looked into Gu Feiyu's eyes. "There's a process to everything. It's normal for you to be afraid now, but after you get used to the fear inside your heart, it'll be fine."

Then Chen Ge passed Xiaoxiao inside his pocket to Gu Feiyu. "Don't panic no matter what happens to you inside the scenario; this little fella will protect you."

Gu Feiyu held Yin Xiaoxiao in one hand. No matter what Chen Ge said then, he would choose to believe. Chen Ge led Gu Feiyu to familiarize himself with all the hidden paths and traps inside Murder by Midnight and taught him some simple methods to scare people. Like the distance needed to be maintained to create pressure for visitors and how to make use of the visitors' blind spots. At 8:40 am, Chen Ge left Gu Feiyu inside the scenario to wait and he left.

Gu Feiyu was left alone inside the scenario, hugging the hammer and Xiaoxiao. He leaned against the corner, and as he looked down the eerie corridor, his body slowly slid to the floor. "Several months ago, I was planting paddy in the fields. The big city is too complicated. Sigh, I miss Grandma's cooking..."

After closing the door to Murder by Midnight, Chen Ge heard a commotion coming from outside the Haunted House. He walked over to realize that there were several people working on the banner.

"Chen Ge!" Uncle Xu was talking with a large middle-aged man under the resting tent. When he saw Chen Ge walk out the Haunted House, Uncle Xu waved at him.

"Uncle, you're early today."

"Today is the day our park will bounce back, so I have to be early." Uncle Xu was full of smiles and seemed to be in great mood. "This is Foreman Yang. He'll be responsible for building your resting hall. You can come to him if you have any questions or comments."

"Just call me Ol' Yang." The middle-aged man looked like a friendly person.

Meeting Foreman Yang, Chen Ge was reminded of something. "Foreman Yang, actually, I do have a favor to ask."

"Director Luo has given me the order, so what do you need?"

"I need you to help me seal up the two entrances to the park's underground parking lot as soon as possible. Don't need to completely close it, but make it so that it won't be easy for people to walk in and walk out."

Currently, the park only used large objects to block the way, so people could still squeeze through the gaps.

"Okay, no problem." Director Luo had rented the underground parking lot to Chen Ge for free—Uncle Xu knew that, so he did not stop him.

“Then, thank you in advanced. I’ll need to go back into the Haunted House to inspect all the scenarios.” Chen Ge returned to the Haunted House and took out the black phone.

A night has passed; the expansion should be ready by now.

He clicked on the screen and there were indeed two unread messages on it.

“Second expansion successful! Obtained unique construct—The Ghost’s Changing Room.

“Another expansion, and the Haunted House will upgrade to Maze of Terror!

“The Ghost’s Changing Room: The police who wandered into a haunted tower, students abandoned at school, reporters that visited the hospital at night, patients who lost their memories, here, visitors can relive the experience of the characters themselves. The Ghost’s Changing Room provides costumes to the visitors, and changing into the costumes will greatly increase immersion!

“Warning: The Ghost’s Changing Room has a one percent chance of triggering the extreme experience! It can make the visitor enter a memory that doesn’t belong to them to experience terror that cannot be replicated!”

Chapter 258 - Unwanted Guests

Chapter 258: Unwanted Guests

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Changing room? Costumes?

Chen Ge reread the information on his phone. The new feature surprised him.

...

The visitors can pick the identity that they want to increase immersion—that, I understand, but what is this one percent chance of triggering the extreme experience?

Chen Ge would have to see it in action to know what it did. After all, it was only after Fan Yu's appearance that Chen Ge truly understood the effect of the Midnight Ticket Counter.

Based on previous experience, the reward provided by the black phone should be safe, but just to be extra sure, I'd better be careful about it. Chen Ge thought about it and soon came to a decision. I'll limit the number of people using it. To use the changing room, the visitors have to pay an extra 20. I'll just call it a costume renting fee.

Those with a small heart naturally would not spend money to find more trouble for themselves. The Ghost's Changing Room's main audience were those veteran Haunted House visitors. The more authentic the experience, the greater the fun they would have. Using the black phone as a guide, Chen Ge headed under the first floor staircase. There was a small partitioned cubicle outside of the Night of the Living Dead scenario.

Murder by Midnight has already taken up a part of the Night of the Living Night, and now the changing room has made it even smaller. Looks like I'll need to move things around soon.

Chen Ge entered the cubicle, and two doors greeted him. They were marked with the male and female symbols. He pushed open one of them, and Chen Ge saw plenty of costumes hanging on the wall. However, different from reality, all of the costumes had blood stains on them, and some were torn or wrinkled. It was not that hard to imagine what the original owners of these costumes had been through.

I guess I understand why this place is called the Ghost's Changing Room.

The costumes on the wall had probably been left behind by the ghosts and monsters' actual victims. Putting them on would put the visitors in the despair once felt by the victims.

Pick their identity and then challenge the increasingly difficult scenario. The first to clear every scenario will get the 200,000 reward. This system will probably last for quite a while.

Chen Ge exited the changing room and clicked on the black phone to read the second message.

“A new two-star scenario, Western Jiujiang's Private Academy, has been unlocked. You can manipulate the props inside the set freely, using the interface available on the phone!”

Looks like the failure to unlock before was due to a lack of expansion. This means that each expansion only allows me to add three new scenarios.

Chen Ge opened the wooden boards that led to the parking lot. With instructions from the black phone, he entered deep into Mu Yang High School. The new Western Jiujiang's Private Academy was adjacent to Mu Yang High School. Its size was slightly smaller than Mu Yang High School, but it added more junctions and corners. The place could already be called a small maze.

The combination of a couple of two-star scenarios and a one-star scenario takes up almost half of the parking lot, so how big will the completed four-star School of the Afterlife be?

Shaking his head, Chen Ge realized that it was not yet time to think about that. I should take it slow.

To ensure there were no security threats, he entered the Western Jiujiang's Private Academy scenario alone. There were two individual mini scenarios, one was the Hanging One, and the other was The Stink.

With the aid of the recorder and the ballpoint pen, Chen Ge used five minutes to clear the scenario with a bunch of highly interested mannequins watching. When he exited the scenario, his expression was weird. There were two real spirits inside the scenario, but it was unclear what had happened to them. Their spirits were weak, almost disappearing.

The weirdest thing was, when they sensed Chen Ge's entry, they started to run and hide as if knowing that something very scary was approaching them. Chen Ge basically used four of the five minutes to look for them. After he found them, Chen Ge realized that these two could not be considered baleful specters, and they had been tamed.

As long as they're not dangerous.

Chen Ge returned to the first floor and waited until 8:55 am before opening the Haunted House's gates. The sun filtered its ray down on him, and several meters away from the Haunted House's front door was the large banner. There were park workers waiting under the resting tent. Everything was ready.

The day was not a holiday but there was already a long line waiting outside the park. The park officially opened at 9 am. The moment it did, the visitors all surged toward the Haunted House. The amount was several times bigger than normal. The reward of 200,000 combined with the heavy promotion by the park, the popularity that Chen Ge had earned through his livestreams and videos, and the verbal promotion among the visitors had finally led to this.

"Boss, they're all here to visit our Haunted House?" Xu Wan stood beside Chen Ge, unable to believe her eyes.

"Of course, but this is just the beginning. More people will come visit us in the future." Chen Ge's hands were shaking, he was actually more excited than Xu Wan. "Quick, go and put on your make-up. It's time for work!"

Xu Wan was responsible for Minghun, and Gu Feiyu was running Murder by Midnight. Uncle Xu, who came to help, stood outside to sell tickets, and Chen Ge monitored everything.

"All the visitors who have visited Murder by Midnight and Minghun, please gather over here! We have scarier and more exciting scenarios waiting for you!"

Some of the visitors gave up directly after visiting the one-star scenario, but some of the braver ones chose to continue to challenge the two-star scenario. Among them were visitors who had visited the Haunted House several days ago. They had formed a chat group to discuss the guide to clearing the Haunted House.

“Don’t rush. Please wait at the resting tent. We’ll open the scenario when we have ten people in a team!”

Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy and Mu Yang High School were linked together, so the place was big enough to let a team of ten enter at the same time. Uncle Xu cut through the crowd to find Chen Ge. He had received a call from Director Luo, who said that there would be reporters coming to help the promotion and wished for Chen Ge to pay attention to that.

Chen Ge did not think that Director Luo had such influence, but since this was a good thing, he naturally did not reject it. There were visitors running out from the Haunted House. Some had given up halfway through the scenario, and some forced themselves to finish the whole tour and came out with their legs shaking. Others even planted themselves under the sun and refused to budge.

About one of every four visitors managed to survive the one-star scenario and continue to challenge the two-stars scenarios.

Twenty minutes passed, and only seven people wanted to challenge the two-star scenarios. Chen Ge decided to make an exception for them and send them underground.

His gaze swept over these seven visitors, and when he saw the seventh one, Chen Ge paused. The visitor looked very normal, but Chen Ge felt like he had seen him before. Then he remembered—it was in the surveillance picture at Hai Ming Apartments that also caught No. 5.

Chapter 259 - Three Taboos Inside the Haunted House [2 in 1]

Chapter 259: Three Taboos Inside the Haunted House [2 in 1]

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Boss, your Haunted House is not bad.” The man realized Chen Ge had been watching him, so he smiled politely and added, “I was a very cowardly child and thus the target of bullying for neighborhood kids. It was my big brother who brought me here to train my bravery, but I ended up falling in love with the exciting experience.”

“Then you will definitely enjoy the upcoming scenario.” Chen Ge thought that this man was acting weird. He did not ask him anything, but the man had already volunteered all of his experience. Is this because he is worried?

...

Chen Ge did not expose the man. He maintained a smile before the visitors, so he left a friendly and kind impression in front of them.

“Alright, it’s time for us to go in.” Chen Ge led the way by walking in front and pulled back the curtains that blocked the sunlight. When they were inside the Haunted House, Chen Ge took out the disclaimer contracts and showed them to the seven visitors. “Two-star scenarios are different from one-star scenarios, so before you enter the two-star scenario to start your visitation, you’ll need to sign these disclaimers.”

He placed the printed paper on the table, and of the seven visitors, three of them signed it without hesitation. Two of them picked the contract up to read over it carefully.

“Do we need to sign this?” The seventh visitor, the one who Chen Ge had noticed earlier, started to show obvious hesitation when he found out about this. His gaze silently went over to meet the eyes of another visitor.

He has a partner?

Chen Ge also did not point that out. He continued as if nothing had happened. “Of course. Actually, entering our one-star scenario also requires the visitors to sign the disclaimer, but due to the high influx of visitors, we changed the rules at the last minute.”

“Okay then.”

Chen Ge watched these few people closely, not letting the smallest action escape his eyes. Today was the first day the park had begun the heavy promotion, and it could be considered a new beginning for the Haunted House. Chen Ge would not allow any mistakes or accidents to happen.

The visitors started to sign their names. The man with normal looks was called Wei Wu, and the other visitor whom he surreptitiously shared a look with was called Kong Xiangming. These two people, compared to other visitors, were lacking in excitement and nervousness, and they kept a very low profile.

The other five visitors were a lot more normal. Three of them looked quite young, like university students, and the last two were a couple in a bit of an argument. Chen Ge placed his attention on Wei Wu and Kong Xiangming, but to his surprise, when he walked over to take the disclaimers, one of the female students called out his name.

“You’re Chen Ge, the Haunted House boss that He San mentioned on the forum, right?”

Once Chen Ge’s name was mentioned, all the other visitors also turned to look at him.

“You know He San? Wait, are the three of you students from Western Jiujiang’s Medical University? The forensic science department?” Chen Ge pulled his gaze back without a trace. The two visitors whom Chen Ge suspected were members of the ghost stories society did not know they had been exposed.

“Now, He San can be considered a celebrity at our school.” The girl had one pigtail. She had a little extra weight on her body and very fair skin. She could not be considered a traditional beauty, but there was something endearing about her. “There are many students from our university who have visited your Haunted House. There is even an ongoing bet on the forum guessing which of the departments will clear your Haunted House first.”

“Clearing my Haunted House won’t be easy. You should find He San to ask for some pointers.” Chen Ge piled on the smiles. He looked as friendly as he could possibly.

"It is indeed not easy. Six of us came to visit, but half have already given up." A rather weak looking young man stood next to the girl. He seemed to have a crush on her. His face was drained of blood, and his legs were weak, but for the sake of winning the girl's heart, he insisted on accompanying her.

"Why are we wasting time? If we fail this time, we'll try again. If we repeat the same scenario many times, it won't be so scary anymore." This time it was the last student who spoke. He stood on the other side of the girl, and he looked like the type to rush headfirst into things.

Chen Ge glanced at their names on the disclaimer and memorized them.

"Since everyone has waited for so long, I'm not going to waste any more time explaining. Your goal is to find the nametags. Since there are only seven of you, you only need to find 17 nametags to clear the scenario." Chen Ge looked at the group of visitors. "Other than that, the Haunted House is coming out with a new feature. For just 20, you can rent the costumes that we provide. There are choices of police, doctor, reporter, and so on for you to choose."

"We can change costume?" The girl was rather interested but was stopped by the weak-looking man.

"It's okay. The three of us won't be trying it."

"How about the rest of you?"

The pair of couple was still arguing, so they ignored Chen Ge. The two who might have been members from ghost stories society were not interested in dressing up. Chen Ge felt rather sad; he had been hoping that they would help him try out the new construct.

Pulling the wooden boards back, Chen Ge sent the group of visitors into the scenario. "The scenario you're visiting is called Mu Yang High School. It's on the left, make sure to not take the wrong turn. The one on the right is called Third Sick Hall, and it's our only three-star scenario. It's very dangerous. Our previous visitor was scared until he was sent to the hospital."

Chen Ge purposely mentioned the Third Sick Hall not because he wanted to remind the visitors out of kindness but because he wanted to test the reaction of the two suspicious visitors. If they were the patients who had escaped the Third Sick Hall, when they heard the name, they would definitely react in some manner. The few visitors all nodded and promised would not wander off on their own. There was no change in the expressions of the two suspicious visitors. They did not seem to know about the presence of the Third Sick Hall.

Am I mistaken? Chen Ge gave a few more pieces of advice before closing the wooden boards and running to the main control room. Even though those two don't look like they're the patients from the Third Sick Hall, chances are high that they're members of the ghost stories society.

Chen Ge's eyes were calm, but the smile on his face had already disappeared. Captain Yan found pictures of me entering New Century Park on Xu Tong's phone, so this means that members of the ghost stories society already know what I look like.

Last night, the monster possessing No. 5 had been consumed by Xu Yin, and No. 12 had been taken away by the police. Most crucially, Chen Ge had managed to hear the voice of the chairperson on No. 12's phone. Even though the person did not say much, it was the biggest reward for Chen Ge that night. I've heard the chairperson's voice somewhere before. He is probably someone I know or can recognize!

There should have been a monster possessing each member of the ghost stories society. This meant that they were the most powerful at night, but they had chosen to enter Chen Ge's Haunted House during the day. From this unusual behavior, Chen Ge could surmise two things.

One, the exposure of the chairperson's voice was more significant than Chen Ge believed. The person was worried that Chen Ge might suddenly remember who he was, and so he needed to make sure Chen Ge shut up forever before that.

Two, perhaps they were cautious of Zhang Ya. As the monsters' powers were strongest after midnight, they would be weakened in the day. That was no different for Zhang Ya.

But why would they pick this particular time to come? They arrive just as the promotion period is beginning. Looks like they have been planning this for a long time already. They're trying to mix themselves among the visitors, hoping to escape my detection.

The ghost stories society's plan was good, but they were simply unlucky. They did not expect Chen Ge to happen to catch Wei Wu's face on the surveillance picture that also captured No. 5. This meant that their plan had already been exposed before they even started.

I need to play along at least for now. There are too many visitors, and I cannot disturb the everyday running of the Haunted House.

When the ghost stories society tracked down the thin monster at Hai Ming Apartments, they had sent out at least two people. Based on how much they valued Chen Ge, he believed they would not send out fewer people than that.

Not including myself, there are twelve members at the ghost stories society. Zhu Xiu, No. 5, and No. 12 have been taken care of, so only nine of them remain.

Chen Ge entered the main control room and planted himself before the computer screens.

After today, there will only be seven left.

Chen Ge called Xiao Gu on his phone. Chen Ge asked him to remove the Doctor Skull-cracker's outfit and enter the hidden passage reserved for the workers to head to the main control room.

"Have the visitors left?"

"They have found the exit. I have a feeling they're not that afraid of me." Xiao Gu sounded depressed on the phone. "I've tried my best. Perhaps I simply don't have the talent to do this."

"Don't give up so soon." Chen Ge changed into the costume that Gu Feiyu had removed. His lips twitched, and a scary smile appeared on the skin mask. "Are you interested in learning how to master this character?"

"I have zero interest." Gu Feiyu shook his head determinedly. After Chen Ge put on Doctor Skull-cracker's uniform, the whole aura about him changed. It was as if the outfit was specially made for him.

"In that case, we're going to help you cultivate that interest. Come with me." Chen Ge grabbed Gu Feiyu by his shoulders and dragged him underground.

...

The wooden boards closed to block the last ray of light. The underground scenario was very dark, and the group of visitors needed time to get used to it.

“Everyone, don’t panic. Even though the difficulty for this scenario is high, there is a fair chance of clearing it.”

The student who looked weak and flimsy before Chen Ge suddenly changed into a different person when he was underground. His voice sounded stable and calm. He took out a notebook from his pocket and said, “Please lend me thirty seconds of your time. I wish to go through some things that we need to be careful about.”

“We need notes to visit a Haunted House? Also, what era are you from? Don’t you know how to use a phone? Why are you still using a notebook?” the woman from the couple grumbled with annoyance. She was quite angry.

“That is the first point I want to bring up.” The young man pointed at the first thing in his notebook. “You mustn’t use your phone inside Boss Chen’s Haunted House! It’s best if you don’t even touch it!”

He waved the notebook in his hand. “You might not believe it or think I’m exaggerating, but every detail in this notebook was learned from sweat and tears of our seniors. You can consider it a tradition at our school.”

“I consider you have lost your mind from too much studying,” the woman said snidely. The man behind him pulled on her sleeve. “Na Na, please. Stop making trouble.”

“Don’t touch me!” The woman was in a very foul mood. She swiped the man’s hand off her. “Chen Zining, the first time we met was two years ago inside this Haunted House, so today, we will break up here as well! It is time for us to part ways! Goodbye!”

“Will you stop being so unreasonable? I don’t have time to accompany you because I’m at a crucial point of my career; I cannot afford to be distracted!”

“So now I’m being unreasonable? I’m the distraction? Do you think I want your money that much?” The woman was wearing a pair of high heels and had on some make-up. Even though the clothes on her back were not expensive brands, she wore them stylishly. “Chen Ziming, I stayed by your side when you were at the lowest point of your side, and I’ve accompanied you for two long years!”

“I know, Na Na...”

“Don’t waste your breath. I know things are different now. Just like this Haunted House, in these two years, too many things have changed.” As she said what she wanted to, the woman strode deeper into Mu Yang High School scenario. The man immediately gave chase after her.

“Hey, please wait!” The weak-looking young man held the notebook in his hand, and he appeared rather uneasy. “The second point that I want to say is to never split up!”

He shouted loudly, but the pair of couple was too deep in their argument to pay him any attention.

“Yang Chen, let’s just ignore them. We can definitely do this on our own.” The other two students from Western Jiujiang’s Medical University came to give him support.

“But clearing this scenario requires collaboration from many people, and we already started with a disadvantage of having so few people with us.” The young man by the name of Yang Chen sighed with regret. “Now that only five of us are left, we must be careful not to split up anymore.”

He turned to look at Wei Wu and Kong Xiangming. “Gentlemen, would you be interested in a cooperation? After all, only by finding 17 nametags will we be able to clear this scenario.”

“Cooperation?” Wu Wei shared a look with Kong Xiangming, but neither of them said anything beyond that.

“You have no idea how mad the boss of this Haunted House is. If we do not work together, the chance of clearing this scenario is zero.” Yang Chen took out a hand-drawn picture from the notebook. There were 41 red cross marks on it.

“This is something to show our sincerity. Since Mu Yang High School was opened to the public, many seniors from our school have come to challenge it. They have found the nametags at these 41 places.” Yang Chen showed the two the hand-drawn map. “The nametag’s location does change, but there are a few constant locales where we can be sure to find them. So, the first thing is for us to search these 41 places as soon as possible.”

Wei Wu and Kong Xiangming were interested in the map in Yang Chen’s hands, but clearing the scenario was the last thing on their mind.

“Sure, we’ll be glad for a chance to cooperate. After all, it benefits all of us.”

The two visitors who acted suspiciously like the members of the ghost stories society showed their willingness to collaborate with Yang Chen.

“We’re on a time limit, so I’ll assign the jobs for each of us.”

“Two gentlemen, if you don’t mind, will you please focus on the classrooms on the left, and Wang Dan, Li Xue, the three of us will focus on the ones on the right. Please be careful! Make sure that your friends are always in your sight, and if you need to separate, make sure to go in a group of two.”

Yang Chen then pocketed the map. He looked at the rest with severity. “There are several taboos inside Boss Chen’s Haunted House. Do not play with your phone, don’t wander off alone, and do not ask about marriage or relationships. These few warnings are the conclusion of our seniors. Some of them I don’t quite understand, but I’m sure they have their reason to exist. Please remember them in your heart, and don’t attempt them simply because you’re curious.”

Yang Chen’s expression was serious, and his words confused Wei Wu and Kong Xiangming.

The team parted down the middle as they inspected the classrooms on both sides of the corridor. When the distance was drawn adequately apart, Wei Wu silently walked to stand beside Kong Xiangming. “This Haunted House is making me uncomfortable. Those taboos feel weirdly cursed.”

“Stay far away from me. Remember, we’re not supposed to know each other. There are cameras inside the Haunted House. Be careful not to be seen.” Kong Xiangming was very cautious as he pretended to look for the nametags.

“For some reason, I feel uneasy.” Wei Wu also helped look for the nametags, but his soul was not in it.

“Stop talking and start working. Don’t forget the real reason we’re here.” Kong Xiangming kept his head lowered, and blood vessels flashed across his eyes. He turned to look at the entrance. “That Boss Chen should be coming soon.”

Chapter 260 - Performance

Chapter 260: Performance

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

A cold draft blew down the corridor, and empty test papers fluttered in the wind. There was no one in the classrooms on either side, but weird noises kept coming out from them. Kong Xiangming and Yang Chen's teams searched the rooms on the left and right. They only took three minutes to reach the end of the corridor, where they met up again. They were standing at the door to the Sealed Classroom.

"The boss has changed the locations again." Yang Chen's face did not look so good. "How many have you found?"

...

"None," Wei Wu said readily. After all, his purpose there was not to look for any nametags.

"You sound so happy even though you haven't found anything?" Wang Dan was a straight shooter. "Ol' Yang, I think we should just move on our own; bringing them will only increase our burden."

"There's a familiarization process since we've just entered the place. The place is complicated, and the boss understands psychology. The hiding spots are masterfully designed, so it's normal to not find anything." Yang Chen thought that these two were weird, but he could not pinpoint exactly what was weird about them. "There will be at least three nametags inside this classroom. We'll all go in together and finish this as soon as we can!"

After pushing the door to the Sealed Classroom open, Yang Chen was the first one to rush into it. "Don't dawdle. Our seniors explicitly ordered us to move as fast as we can! The longer we stay, the higher the chance of something scary happening!"

The three medical students each took responsibility for their own section. They kept their heads lower so that they would not meet the eyes of the mannequins. They did not reach out to touch the mannequins and grabbed the nametags when they saw it. Their action was accurate and fast; it appeared like they had been training for this.

Wei Wu and Kong Xiangming did not enter the classroom. They stood outside the door, looking at the mannequins in different poses.

“I seem to see living spirits in these mannequins.” Kong Xiangming forced this observation out from his lips. His voice was soft enough that only Wei Wu could hear him.

“Making living humans into toys so that they won’t have their peace after death. This is a cruel fella.” Fear flashed through Wei Wu’s eyes. “Do you think the mannequins represent the people who were once his enemies?”

“It’s probably not that simple. There are too many mannequins. I suspect a large part of them are innocent victims, perhaps even unfortunate Haunted House visitors.” Kong Xiangming took in a soft breath. “There are so many people who go missing in the city annually. Perhaps some of them have become mannequins inside this Haunted House. Our target this time is crueler than we thought. We have to be extra careful.”

After hearing Kong Xiangming, Wei Wu took a cautious step back. His eyes that landed on the few students were filled with pity. How would these visitors know that the mannequins that scared them so were probably the visitors that once disappeared?

“Come in to help! What are you standing there for?” Wang Dan finished searching his area and saw Wei Wu and Kong Xiangming still standing outside. A fire surged through him, and his tone turned heavier.

“Calm down.” Yang Chen tried to calm Wang Dan. The three of them searched the classroom for a long time but could only find two nametags.

“Things have changed; we need to speed up.” Yang Chen left the classroom with the nametags. When he passed Wei Wu and Kong Xiangming, the curious feeling heightened. “Gentlemen, if you plan to cooperate with us, please show us some sincerity.”

“It’s a waste of time placing our hope on them; we should rely on ourselves.” Wang Dan lost his patience. He and Lee Xue followed behind Yang Chen as they entered the bathroom next to the classroom. Wei Wu and Kong Xiangming did not follow but instead shared a look.

“These three students are quite interesting. Shall we turn them into mannequins as well?” Blood vessels surfaced on Wei Wu’s neck. Kong Xiangming shook his head. “Be careful not to draw unwanted attention.”

Yang Chen pushed the partitions open one by one. He found another nametag inside the fifth cubicle. Looking at the painted eyes, Yang Chen shivered. “This Haunted House sure is insane.”

“Ol’ Yang, those two visitors are very weird.” Lee Xue was the only female. Even though she was young, she had all the good points of a female forensic doctor. Courageous but cautious with extremely good observational skills.

“I’ve noticed that as well.” Ol’ Yang signaled for Lee Xue to keep her voice low. “Those two are too calm, and they don’t seem nervous even though they’re in an unknown space. In fact, they seem comfortable with this area.”

“Especially the one that looks ugly. He appears like he’s in deep thought often like he’s planning something.” Lee Xue nodded. “I suspect they’re not really visitors. Do you think they’re the Haunted House’s actors?”

Yang Chen and Wang Dan was shocked by this sentence, and a chill climbed up their spines. “That’s a real possibility!”

“According to He San, the boss is someone who would do anything. One time, he mixed himself among the visitors. Seven people entered the Haunted House, but in the picture, there were eight people...”

“No wonder they don’t look scared and couldn’t find a single nametag.” The more they discussed it, the more convinced they were. “Thankfully, we found this out sooner rather than later. If we were tripped at the most crucial moment, we might really have been scared until we peed our pants.”

“This Haunted House has reached the stage of being crazy to scare people! Where’s the humanity?” Yang Chen took out the notebook and added a new rule to the three taboos—Don’t trust any strangers!

“Even the most cunning fox cannot beat a good hunter. Since we’ve guessed their identity, we’re one step closer to victory!” Yang Chen was good at raising morale. “We’ll continue to pretend we haven’t discovered anything. When they expose their true identities, we’ll prove that we’ve known all along. I believe their expressions then will be very interesting!”

“Indeed, we just need to focus on searching for the nametags. One, this can help make them lower their guard, and two, even if we’re mistaken, it won’t be awkward.”

“You need to be careful of others when you visit a Haunted House. Before this, I thought the 200,000 was just a promotional trick, but now that I’ve experienced it myself, I think the prize money is too little.”

“Hurry up, we’re on a tight schedule. If we stay here too long, it’ll arouse their suspicion.” Yang Chen waved at the two of them. “We’ll try to catch up to that couple as well. They’re still in the middle of argument, so they will be perfect to distract the attention of these two actors.”

The three students finished their discussion and exited the bathroom. They paused for a while at the first junction inside Mu Yang High School before turning down the corridor to head to the Deep Well.

...

Chen Ge took the recorder and led Gu Feiyu into the underground scenario. Unable to resist Gu Feiyu’s endless begging, he did not force the young man to follow him.

“Xiao Gu, after I go down, go into the scenario on the side to pick out several larger props to block the entrance.” Chen Ge checked the items he had and entered the parking lot after making sure that he had everything. “Stay guard over the entrance. I won’t call you, and don’t move the props no matter what happens down there.”

Gu Feiyu looked at Chen Ge in the Doctor Skull-cracker’s outfit and failed to see him as a Haunted House actor. From his perspective, his boss did not look like he was going to scare people but commit murder.

Chapter 261 - The Map Is Wrong?

Chapter 261: The Map Is Wrong?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Okay, don’t worry.” Gu Feiyu did not understand why Chen Ge wanted to block off the exit if he was just going to scare people. He grumbled internally, Is this to give the visitors a sense of despair?

After sending Chen Ge off, the honest Xiao Gu closed the wooden boards and hauled the props to cover it up.

...

...

The group of visitors chose the left path, and they walked for some time until they reached another junction. “This is the second junction. The road on the left leads to a deep well, and the end of the right corridor is three empty rooms.”

Yang Chen looked at his notebook. It had a detailed explanation of all the scenarios. To be able to record everything so clearly, it showed how deep the despair his seniors had experienced was, such that they could still remember everything so clearly after they returned to school.

“The three rooms have their own number, and in the ceiling of the one of the rooms’ bathroom is a female body. According to the record, there’s a nametag inside her pocket.”

Listening to Yang Chen’s description, Lee Xue and Wang Dan frowned. Just the sound of it made them refuse to go forward.

“Leave this nametag to us.” Kong Xiangming, who had been silent, suddenly spoke. Wei Wu wanted to say something but was stopped by Kong Xiangming with a look.

“Okay, shall we wait outside the room for you? According to the notebook, when the visitors are inside the room, there might be mannequin dolls that come to interrupt.”

“There’s no need. Didn’t you say we’re running low on time? You can go on to the other path. We’ll meet up later.” Kong Xiangming left right away. Wei Wu followed behind him, and the two did not share a word as they walked away.

“Ol’ Yang, let us go.” Wang Dan pointed down the other corridor. He whispered, “It’s good that we’re splitting up; this means we don’t need to worry about them.”

Even though the notebook said not to split up, this was a unique situation. The two visitors were most likely actors. Yang Chen nodded. The three of them jogged to the deep well. As recorded in the notebook, there were two nametags inside the well.

“Two nametags. The seniors are right; this well is very dangerous.” Lee Xue took out a ball of string from her purse and then removed the hair clip she was wearing to tie to the end of the string. “Thankfully, we came prepared.”

“The boss wouldn’t expect this as well.” This was the first time the students had felt happy inside the Haunted House; it was as if they had just scored a psychological victory. Lee Xue dropped the makeshift fishing line into the well and very easily hooked one of the nametags. She pulled it up slowly, and when the nametag left the well, the three sighed in relief like they had just won the Super Bowl.

“Well done!” When Lee Xue dropped the fishing line into the well again, she realized that the well seemed to have gotten deeper. She tried several times before finally hooking the other nametag, but when she tried to pull it up, something scary happened.

The sand parted to reveal a dead person’s face. Half of the nametag was exposed out of the sand while the other half was in the dead person’s mouth.

“F*ck me!”

“What the hell?”

The three students gasped. For the first time, they felt how malicious the adult world could be.

“Xiao Xue, try to yank harder. See if you can pull the nametag out.”

The girl pulled on the string. The sand moved, and the dead body started to surface.

She tried this several times until the string snapped. The nametag was still at the bottom of the well, and the girl's hair clip now rested next to the mannequin's lips.

"No, this won't work. The boss is not even giving us a chance!" Lee Xue looked at her hair clip, and she felt the sting of regret.

"You two stay here, I'll go grab the hair clip and the nametag." Wang Dan put his hands on the wall of the well. "It's just a mannequin that looks like a dead body, right? We've seen real dead bodies."

"But have you seen one that can move?" Chen Yang stopped Wang Dan. "This well has been marked by the seniors as extremely dangerous. It's just one nametag. Without this, we can still clear the scenario by searching for other nametags. Don't be blinded by the small benefit before us."

"You're right." Wang Dan was a rash person, but he was not dumb. "Should we ask the two actors to go down the well for us?"

"If they're real actors, they won't go down the well; if they're normal visitors, that's not a moral thing to do," Lee Xue argued.

"We still have time. We haven't seen the couple on our way here, so they probably went to the other side; we should go meet up with them first." Yang Chen looked at the map. "There's a connecting passageway next to the deep well. The scenario on the other side will be the female dorm."

Yang Chen followed the map, but the female dorm did not appear. Instead, there was another junction.

"The map is wrong?"

Yang Chen turned the map around to look. "How can there be a new route here? Have we triggered a hidden scenario? Is this some new trick by Boss Chen?"

The three students looked at one another. The map that they had been relying on now lost its purpose.

"No wonder there are so few nametags in the previous scenarios, looks like part of the nametags have been moved into this hidden scenario." Yang Chen tore out a page from the notebook and drew some lines on it. "Come on, let's go take a look. Even if we cannot clear it today, at least we can complete the map for our friends."

The three students thus became the first batch of visitors who entered Western Jiujiang's Private Academy. After turning the corner, the architectural style of the building changed. There were no longer charred marks on the walls, but the place looked more realistic.

"Ol' Yang, do you smell something bad?" Wang Dan stopped at the entrance with his hands over his nose. "It's a very weird smell like something gone bad."

...

Kong Xiangming stood outside the Room of Three scenario silently.

"Why did we purposely avoid the three students to come here?" Wei Wu was confused.

"Look at this place, doesn't it look like Hai Ming Apartments?" Kong Xiangming pulled the door open. The place reminded him a lot of Hai Ming Apartments.

"You're right, how can things be so coincidental?" Wei Wu was surprised. "We just went to Hai Ming Apartments several days ago to capture that runner, and today we see the building replicated here."

"He would have needed time to build something this scale. Looks like the boss discovered the secret at Hai Ming Apartments a long time ago," Kong Xiangming speculated. "I believe he might have seen the person that escaped from behind the door."

Chapter 262 - The Hanging Man

[2 in 1]

Chapter 262: The Hanging Man [2 in 1]

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“I can understand why the chairperson is targeting him. The man has probably gone into the door before and might even have a ‘door’ of his own.” Kong Xiangming kept his voice very low, afraid that a third person might overhear him.

“It does not matter—so what if he has gone behind the door? Ultimately, there is only one of him.” Wei Wu did not sound that confident when he said so; it sounded more like he was trying to convince himself. “Since this mission is so important, the chairperson wouldn’t have sent only the two of us. The other members from the society are probably also here already.”

...

“Don’t put your hopes on others. What if the chairperson’s plan is to sacrifice the two of us to scout out the way for everyone else?” Kong Xiangming closed the door. “The society’s members can change at any moment, but the number will never change. Each number corresponds to a monster behind the door. Owning this number means you have a cohesive relationship with the monster that it corresponds to. Therefore, in the chairperson’s eyes, the real thing of import is the monsters living in us and not ourselves.”

He narrowed his eyes and suddenly brought up something that was not relevant. “The rules of the ghost stories society forbid us from exposing our own identity and investigating others. The two rules are to protect our personal safety since the members of the society either are crazed maniacs or butchers with bloody hands. However, have you considered the opposite implication?”

“What is it? What is the opposite implication?”

“Not interacting with the other members means that we will never find out who the chairperson is.” Kong Xiangming’s thoughts went deep. “Everyone knows that the chairperson is hiding among the ten people at the dining table, but none of us know who the chairperson is. I now have my suspicion that the chairperson might be a monster behind the door, and we are nothing but vessels to contain monsters.”

“Why are you telling me all this?” Wei Wu tried to distance himself from Kong Xiangming. “No one has ever betrayed the ghost stories society, and that is the scariest point. Do you understand what I mean?”

Kong Xiangming shrugged. “You joined the society in the same batch as me, so I can be sure you’re not the chairperson. That is why I actively approached you during our last mission together and revealed my real identity. You’re the only person I can trust inside the society.”

Wei Wu had a feeling there were other things that Kong Xiangming did not tell him. He wanted no part of this, but he had already been roped in.

“All the monsters are escapees from behind the door. Therefore, it is a certainty that the chairperson has a door of his own!” Kong Xiangming’s voice stopped as a thin smile appeared on his face. “Owning the door means owning the right to create the rules. Don’t you want to be the chairperson?”

“You really have lost your mind.”

“I have not. I simply have no other ghost stories left to share. If the rules aren’t changed, the next time we meet, I might be the food served on your plate, turning from diner into dinner.” Kong Xiangming’s words were like cold water hitting Wei Wu’s face. The ghost stories society was not a place for charity. Even the members were afraid of the power of the society.

“Tell me your plan.”

“If this was before, I wouldn’t have done something so risky, but I found a chance recently. The chairperson has been having more constant interaction and communication with us. He is in deep waters, and that is where his weakness is exposed.”

“What weakness?”

“The chairperson communicates with us through the monsters that are possessing our bodies, but the monsters can only communicate when they are within fifty meters of one another. We have tested this out ourselves before.” Kong Xiangming came to the key point of his speech. “In other words, the chairperson was within fifty meters of us when he communicated with us.”

“You’re right.”

“During the meeting, I’ve always sat close to No. 10. Whenever I’m next to him, the monster in my body will reveal a strange emotion. It is akin to a desire. I can sense its desire; it wants to consume No. 10.”

“But that doesn’t mean that No. 10 is the chairperson. The monsters in all ten of us are different from one another.”

“I know, but the point is several seconds before my monster received the message from the chairperson, it also responded with this strange desire.” Kong Xiangming’s voice slowly changed. “When the message was sent, both No. 10 and the chairperson were around the vicinity of my house. Is this not the perfect proof of their relationship?”

“Could this be a coincidence?”

“The society chairperson should be the one who sent us the flyer. He is also the only one who knows the real identity of all the members. For both times when communication was made, No. 10 and the chairperson appeared around my house; I don’t think there is such a coincidence in this world.”

Kong Xiangming finished his speculation, and Wei Wu gone completely silent. The mysterious chairperson was like a sharp sword hanging over all the members’ necks.

“No. 10 is the chairperson? Then how do you plan to cooperate with me?” Wei Wu walked alongside Kong Xiangming. Since they had the same target, they formed a temporarily truce. If there was no shared benefit, the two would be at each other’s throats because they knew the other person’s real identity.

“The chairperson wants us to target the boss of this Haunted House. This means that the boss is not an easy character. We must let them fight it out among themselves, and we’ll find the opportunity.” Kong Xiangming entered the bathroom and removed the female body from the ceiling. He pulled out a nametag from her pocket. “We’re here as visitors, so just be careful not to let the boss think otherwise.”

The two left the room with the nametag. One or two minutes later, there was a sound in the room. It sounded like something rolling on the floor.

A mannequin’s head had rolled out from underneath the bed.

...

The three medical students congregated together. Without the map, they finally understood the 'joy' of visiting a Haunted House.

"Lee Xue, wait for us!" The girl with a babyface walked in front all alone. The two male students followed behind her, leaning so close to each other that it would have been easier if they were holding hands.

"When we were outside, every one of you boasted more than the other, but without the guide from our seniors, how come you are so weak?" Lee Xue turned around to look at her partners and sighed.

"Are you two even men?"

"What does this have to do with gender?" Even though Wang Dan was hiding at the very back, his attitude had not changed. "This is called being careful. Can't you see that we're just trying to watch your back?"

"Ha ha."

Yang Chen was blushing from embarrassment. "I'm not afraid, but this place is too similar to my high school. The set earlier looked fake at first glance, but this place gives me the feeling that I've returned to my high school."

"What is so scary about returning to your high school?" Lee Xue did not quite understand.

"If the set is obviously different from reality, I can convince myself that everything is fake, but this set is so similar to the high school from my memory that no matter how hard I tell myself, I cannot help getting immersed into the atmosphere." Yang Zhen was still holding the notebook and a pen. He was drawing out the map with shaking fingers.

Most of Western Jiujiang's Private Academy had been cut out due to certain reasons, so the space that it occupied was not big. The three students soon reached the end of the corridor, and before them sat a very common glass door.

"Wait a minute!" Yang Chen stopped Lee Xue, who was trying to open the door. He leaned against the door and looked through the dusty mirror. "This looks like one of the floors of a dormitory. There is even a number on the door."

“Could this be the female dorm that was supposed to be on the map?” Lee Xue urged Yang Chen to open the map to do a comparison and realized that the location was much too different.

“Should be a hidden scenario,” Yang Chen said as if that was the answer, “When I first got the map, I was wondering why there was only a female dorm and not a male dorm. Now it looks like the male dorm has been made into a hidden scenario. But I’m curious, how did we manage to trigger the hidden scenario? We didn’t do anything out of the ordinary, did we?”

“The boss probably felt too afraid because we were clearing the map too fast.” Wang Dan laughed cockily as he joined Yang Chen at the door. “This looks similar to our school dorm. Let’s go in and take a look.”

Although he said that, his body did not move. Eventually, it was Lee Xue who pushed the door open. The rusted lock fell to the ground, and as the glass door slipped open, a strange smell permeated from within.

“Why does this smell like body decay?”

“Should we even go in?”

“To be honest, since we’re here and discovered the hidden scenario, we’ve already broken the seniors’ record.” Wang Dan raised his hand. “I suggest we leave while we can.”

“It’s not a guarantee that we’ll be able to trigger the hidden scenario next time. Since we’re already here, why don’t we enter the place? Are you really going to leave just like that?”

Yang Chen and Lee Xue grabbed Wang Dan as they entered the corridor.

There were half open room doors on either side of the dark corridor. It was unclear which room the horrible stench came from.

“This place is so unnecessarily creepy.” Wang Dan’s voice became low as if being too loud might awaken the monsters that were slumbering there.

“We still have time. We mustn’t give up on any of the rooms. This place must be hiding plenty of nametags.” Yang Chen accompanied Lee Xue as they walked in front. Wang Dan followed unwillingly at the back. He was deeply unsettled, but he did not have the courage to leave on his own, so he could only power on with everyone else.

“Don’t be such a scaredy cat. The scary scenes are probably at the back, so the front few rooms should be perfectly safe.” Yang Chen tried to use his own experience to console Wang Dan. “Which Haunted House will put the scariest scenario at the beginning of the scenario?”

As he said so, he pushed open the door to the first bedroom on the left side of the corridor. Dust fell from the wooden door frame like a curtain. It appeared like it had been many months since someone visited the place. As the door creaked open, Yang Chen walked into it. However, he only took one small step before he stopped. His upper body was leaning forward, but his lower body was frozen to the ground.

“Ol’ Yang? What’s wrong with you?” The door fell fully open, and Lee Xue as well as Wang Dan behind him took in a cold breath. There was someone hanging in the middle of the room.

“A mannequin?” Yang Chen was the first one to recover. He rubbed his hands on his clothes to wipe away the cold sweat that had formed in the middle of his palms.

“Don’t go in first.” Wang Dan pointed at the mannequin’s feet. “It doesn’t look like a real hanging. Look at the feet, they’re still standing on the ground. I suspect this is a Haunted House actor.”

“I don’t think so.” Lee Xue was the most courageous of the party. She walked into the room directly. “The rope is pulled taut. Maintaining this pose for a long time, even while standing, will heavily stress one’s neck.”

She walked to the other end of the room carefully. The hanging mannequin was wearing a dark black coat and had its head lowered, so the face could not be seen clearly. Lee Xue reached out slowly until the tip of her finger touched the ‘dead body’s’ skin.

“It’s not human skin. Come in, it’s safe.” There was an audible sigh of relief. All three of them had been given quite a shock.

“What is the meaning of hanging a mannequin in the middle of the room? And even purposely letting it stand on the ground?” Wang Dan touched the dead body’s hand. He was a forensic science student, so he understood the difference between fake skin and real human skin. The fake skin felt colder and harder to the touch.

“Don’t touch anything randomly. This dead body might be the answer to a puzzle that we haven’t discovered yet.” Lee Xue’s hands lightly pulled on the dead body’s chin, slowly raising its head. When they saw the dead body’s face, the three medical students started to get bothered.

It looks too real!

Because they had seen actual dead bodies before, the fear that gripped them at that moment was far greater than if this had happened to a normal individual.

“The rope stressed the front of the neck, causing the tongue to be squeezed upward, blocking the back of the throat and the windpipe. The cause of death is probably asphyxiation.”

After Lee Xue said that, she herself was stunned. She did not expect that the first time she would use her professional knowledge that she had picked up in class would be inside a Haunted House.

“Look closer at the mannequin’s face. There are irregular blood spots. This is different from a normal asphyxiation.” Yang Chen walked around the mannequin. “The neck snapped, causing a lack of blood flow to the brain. The real cause of death should be brain anemia.”

“Guys, does it really matter how the mannequin died? We should focus on leaving this place!” Wang Dan urged. “Don’t you two feel afraid? A dead mannequin in the Haunted House not only has the looks of an actual real body but perfectly mimics its cause of death!”

“The Haunted House’s boss also knows forensic science?” Lee Xue turned to look at Yang Chen standing beside her.

Yang Chen did not look so good. “An amateur wouldn’t be able to replicate the unique properties of a dead body so perfectly... unless he had a real dead body as a model.”

There was an image that appeared in the minds of the three students. None of them said anything, and they very uniformly left the bedroom.

“We have gone deep enough into the Haunted House—how about we leave now?”

“Let’s look at a few more rooms first. By the way, did you spot any nametags in the room earlier?” Yang Chen asked, and both Lee Xue as well as Wang Dan shook their heads.

“Didn’t pay much attention.”

“Oh well, let’s go look in the other room, then we’ll return to this room last.”

The three students discussed their tactics outside of the door. None of them realized that the standing body that was facing their backs inside the bedroom slowly opened its eyes.

There was another junction at the front of the corridor. The deeper they went, the stronger the stench in the air.

Dirty stains started to appear on the floor tiles and walls. The three students reached the end of the corridor at one go. The few rooms at the end of the corridor were all locked.

“The stench seems to flow out from this place.” Lee Xue walked in front, so it was her who pushed open the door to the deepest room.

There were four beds in this room, but only one of the beds had a mattress on it. The other three beds were piled high with various rubbish.

“That’s it? I thought something very scary would be hiding in this room. Hell, the first bedroom is a lot scarier than this.”

“We’re running out of time; focus on locating the nametags. Wang Dan, stop spacing out, come in and help!”

Yang Chen and Lee Xue entered the room, and only Wang Dan was left in the long, dark corridor. Something seemed to be jumping down the corridor!

“Ol’ Yang, come out quickly! I seemed to hear the footsteps of a fourth person.”

Chapter 263 - The Stench

Chapter 263: The Stench

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Yang Chen and Lee Xue ran out in a hurry. The three of them stood in the corridor and looked down. They saw nothing but darkness.

“Where are the footsteps?”

...

“I really did hear them! It sounded like someone was jumping down the corridor!”

“You’re just scaring yourself, come help us.”

Lee Xue dragged Wang Dan into the last room while Yang Chen stood outside for a moment. He repeated the thing that Wang Dan mumbled about earlier. “Jumping?”

The three ransacked the last bedroom. Most of the trash on the bed was made from foam and wooden blocks. It looked dirty and messy, but none of it would produce any weird smell.

“Was this room purposely left open to store trash?” Lee Xue used the sleeve of her shirt to block her nose. “But why does that bed have a mattress on it? Who would sleep in an environment that is as dirty as this?”

“Now our consideration shouldn’t be the occupant of this room.” Yang Chen picked up one piece of trash from the bed and gave it a good sniff. “When we entered this secret scenario, there was a weird stench in the air, and the stench is the most intense in this room. This means that the thing that gives out that stench should be here. We need to find that thing to solve the mystery of this scenario.”

“Ol’ Yang has a point. There is so much trash inside the room, but none of that is radiating this stench. It’s very weird.” Wang Dan walked to the only bed with a mattress. “This relatively clean bed has the strongest smell.”

He put his hand on one of the corners of the mattress before yanking it back. There was nothing scary underneath the torn mattress except a notebook. Wang Dan picked it up and gave it a read.

“I’m sorry, I shouldn’t have gotten too close; I just wanted to help you pick up the ball.

“Teacher, it wasn’t my plan to dirty my shirt. No one bullied me, this is all my fault.

“Father, I will do my best to be a better person. Please don’t hit me anymore.

“I’m sorry, I don’t know why I look so ugly when I smile. I will stop doing that.

“Where did you think I went wrong? I can change, I really can change!

“I just want to be like them, I’m sorry...”

The notebook was thin, but it was filled with apologies.

“Is something wrong with the writer? Why is he only focused on apologizing? He should fight back if someone bullied him!” Wang Dan scoffed. He was very much against what the owner of the notebook did or rather did not do.

“Come take a look at this.” Lee Xue found a torn picture inside the dustbin. She picked up all the pieces, and after joining them together, a picture could roughly be seen. “Looks like a father and son.”

The son was dangerously obese, and his lack of self-esteem could be seen even through the picture. He seemed to be afraid of the camera, so he hid behind his father. His father had a scowl on his face. He was rough with his child. He had one hand around his boy’s neck as he dragged him forward.

“Is this a stepfather?”

Wang Dan flipped open the notebook for the other two to read. The front few pages were fine, but the more they read, the more uncomfortable they felt.

The boy did not have a name; the students all called him Piggy. His father was one of the sponsors of Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy.

He came from a rich family, but his father was extremely strict with him. The notebook did not explain why explicitly, but it could be read from between the lines. The boy's mother had betrayed his father, and the father had moved that resentment onto the son.

The boy desired his father's love, but no matter what he did, no matter how obedient he was, the only reaction he got was violence and lecturing. He led a very careful life, and only when he was ingesting food would he feel a sense of satisfaction. Food thus became the way for him to release stress. This led to the consequence where the boy's weight had gone beyond the accepted standard even when he was a child.

Seeing the boy's ugly exterior, the father did not feel a shred of worry but felt a rush in taking revenge. The boy, who did not know better, forced himself to eat even more to see the smile on his father's face. After he grew up, both his physique and heart were ill.

At school, the boy retreated into himself, which was perfect because no one wanted to sit with him anyway. When he was at home, whenever he was not careful, he would be greeted by his father's punches and kicks. Slowly but surely, the boy's heart started to twist. The things that others saw as beautiful were ugly in his eyes—the things that others could not wait to escape from, he saw as treasure.

The boy would often be caught doing stupid thing like stealing the leftovers from the canteen and grabbing stuff from dumpster. His father would beat him up every time he did so, but the boy could not stop himself anymore. His worldview had completely changed.

After this repeated several times, there was one instance where the father was too heavy on his beatings, and the boy had to be sent to the hospital, which alerted the police. With pressure and advice from law enforcement, the father finally agreed to send the boy to the school dorm.

The father was a sponsor at the school, so the school was willing to specially open a room for the boy to live in. After moving into the dorm, the boy had to interact with other students. The amount of times he apologized to others drastically increased, and his illness turned several.

Not long after that, the boys in the rooms near him started to smell a stench. The school followed the trail and forced open the single room that the boy was assigned to. When the door was open, they were shocked. The originally clean bedroom was filled with assortments of trash. However, the dirty, smelly trash became the best decoration in the boy's eyes.

The school had someone cleaned up the room, punished the boy, and informed his father. The way the father taught his son was the same. It was yet another round of heavy beating. The notebook recorded the punishment that night in close detail. His father left only after midnight.

No matter how hard his life was, life had to go on. After the wounds on his body healed, the wounds on his heart only got deeper. There was again a deep stench in the dorm corridor. The school could not do anything. His father was one of the sponsors, so expelling his son made no sense.

The room was cleaned again and again, but the boy did not change. In the end, the school had to clear away the rooms near to the boy's bedroom and then had someone clean his room every few days.

As days moved into the weeks, the stench seemed to stick to the room, seeping into the floor and walls.

At the time, Western Jiujiang's Private Academy was too busy dealing with the 'accidents' happening at the female dorm, so they did not have time to pay the boy any attention. Even the cleaners stopped coming.

The boy whose heart was twisted kept bring trash to his bedroom, and the stench got thicker.

From this point onwards, the boy's diary started to repeat itself. He kept apologizing to his father, asking him for forgiveness.

Chapter 264 - Plastic Wrap

Chapter 264: Plastic Wrap

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After finishing the diary, the three medical students each had a different take on the story.

“Helping outsiders to bully his own child, he doesn’t deserve to be a father.” Lee Xue looked angry. Even though she knew this was probably just a made-up story by the Haunted House, she still immersed herself in it, feeling sorry for the boy.

...

“The boy is too weak. If it was me, I would have bullied them back twice for what they had done to me!” Wang Dan punched the air.

“I don’t think the boy is weak. If anything, I think he’s scary.” Yang Chen inspected the diary closely. “Did you realize the boy spent the last few months in the diary apologizing to his father?”

“Isn’t that the perfect proof of his weakness? Bowing his head to the real culprit.”

“The boy used to apologize to everyone daily, but starting from a particular point in time, the diary only recorded his apology toward his father.” Lee Xue also saw the anomaly. “Why would he need to do that?”

“Look at the time.” Yang Chen flipped to the front of the diary. The latter half of the diary was mostly about his apology and penance to his father. “The boy started apologizing to his father after the school called his father on him and after the night his father beat him until midnight.”

Yang Chen held the diary and stood in the middle of the dorm to think.

“The diary wrote it very clearly. The father locked the bedroom from inside and barred anyone from coming close. He even used the bedsheet to tie over the boy’s mouth. So cruel.” Lee Xue pitied this boy from her heart.

“You have to be clear about one thing. The diary is written by the boy, so he’ll only let us see what he wants us to see.” Yang Chen closed the diary. “Almost the entire book is about apology, but think about this—a madman whose worldview has completely twisted, seeing beauty as ugly and vice versa. How could someone like that be filled with penance?”

He sat on the smelly bed and immersed himself into the character of the boy. “The other students hated him, stomping his show of kindness; they thought he was disgusting. His only family saw him as his nemesis. The boy’s life was filled with violence and negativity. Therefore, he could only hide his real self in his heart and use the layer of apology as a shield to protect himself.”

“Ol’ Yang, what are you trying to say?” Wang Dan and Lee Xue thought Yang Chen’s emotions were slightly off.

“I was a victim of abuse myself, but luckily, I had a strong and clever big brother to look after me.” Yang Chen sat on the bed. “I understand the pain he went through, so I can guess his actual thoughts.”

There was an indescribable emotion in his eyes. Yang Chen picked up the rubbish model from the floor. “The design of this Haunted House is amazing. It’s as if everything is real.”

“Well, tell us! Why are you sighing to yourself?” Wang Dan mimicked Yang Chen to pick up a model of his own, but he could not see what was so different about it.

“The boss has given us the hint since we stepped through the door.” Yang Chen sniffed at the rubbish model. “The rubbish in the room doesn’t give out any smell, but the stench is still in the air.”

“Didn’t we establish that earlier?”

“Then, have you considered why the boy kept hoarding rubbish in his bedroom?” Yang Chen had guessed the truth, but he did not feel a rush from guessing it correctly. If anything, he felt slightly uncomfortable.

“Because the boy is mentally twisted, isn’t the diary the best proof? He has been suffering from this illness since he was young, and his worldview has collapsed, seeing ugly things as beautiful.”

“Wrong. Actually, the answer is really simple.” Yang Chen toyed with the rubbish. “The rubbish in real life will be smelly.”

“Real life?”

“The boy wanted to use the smell of rubbish to cover the actual thing that is creating the stench! That’s why he kept bringing the rubbish home!” Standing up, Yang Chen looked around the room. “What kind of thing will create a stench? A stench that mustn’t be discovered by others.”

Wang Dan and Lee Xue looked at each other. They were forensic science students, and a phrase appeared in their minds. “The stench of decaying body!”

“Starting from that night onward, the diary turned to a devoted apology to his father. I wondered what he has done to his father that he needed to apologize for endlessly.” Yang Chen already had the answer in his heart. He stood before the only locked dresser in the room and reached out to grab the lock.

The lock was heavily rusted, but it was only a prop inside the Haunted House. He pulled slightly, and it fell away.

The door fell open, and the stench hit them like a wave!

There was a dead body standing in the middle of the dresser wrapped in plastic wrap!

His face was twisted, and his eyes were bulging. The man had a horrible death. The three students stopped before the dresser, looking at the body inside the plastic wrap. None of them spoke. The fear and horror knitted around their hearts, making it difficult for them to even breathe.

“This should be the answer. The day the boy started collecting the rubbish in his room, the plan was already forming.” Ever since that night, the boy kept apologizing in his diary. It lasted for ten full pages before it stopped. It was hard to imagine how he managed to spend so long in a room with a dead body.

“The saddest thing is he wasn’t discovered for so long. Even after shoving the real culprit inside the dresser, the boy’s life didn’t change. No one cared about him; no one realized he was even there.”

Yang Chen closed the door and put the lock back on. “To be able to design such a scenario, I'm truly impressed by Boss Chen. His Haunted House is more than just a simple scare."

"Indeed." Lee Xue's hands slowly loosened. Her emotions were still raging.

"Stop lamenting a prop. Twenty minutes should have passed already. Let's get moving." Wang Dan thought about the dead body inside the dresser and was unsettled. "The dead body mannequins in his Haunted House look scarier than the real deal."

"Let's go." Yang Chen was the first one to turn. When he reached the door, he suddenly stopped. "Did you notice the stench in the air seemed to get thicker?"

"Is it because we've opened the dresser?" Lee Xue followed behind Yang Chen. "Stop reading so much into it. We've failed this time, but we can always try again."

The three of them exited the dorm. When they retraced their steps, they suddenly discovered someone standing in the corridor. The man had his head lowered while facing them. A rope swayed before his neck.

"Isn't that the hanging mannequin from the first room? Why is it here?"

Wang Dan turned back to look at his partners and realized that both Lee Xue and Yang Chen's eyes were filled with fear.

The stench in the air thickened. Just as the three students were hesitating, the lock on the dresser slowly loosened and fell to the ground.

Creak...

The old dresser door was slowly pushed open from within.

Chapter 265 - I Give Up!

Chapter 265: I Give Up!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The three students were squeezed together. Their focus was on the mannequin in the corridor, so none of them heard the weird noise coming from the room behind them.

“Shall we retreat back into the bedroom?” Yang Chen’s suggestion was the most conservative. He had no idea why he was afraid of a mannequin.

...

“Since we’ve given up on the visitation, there’s no need to keep moving forward,” Wang Dan said plainly. “Find a security camera and call for the worker to bring us out.”

Lee Xue looked at the mannequin standing in the middle of the corridor and whispered, “When we entered this place, I noticed that this place isn’t fitted with any security cameras.”

“Xiao Xue, why didn’t you tell us about something that important earlier?” Wang Dan managed to keep his cool because he knew, within his heart, when the visitors called for help at the camera, the Haunted House worker would appear to help them. Since they could escape at any time, he had not been worried.

“Because you didn’t ask.” Lee Xue rolled her eyes. “Don’t worry, I believe a professional like Boss Chen will have equipped his Haunted House with enough security cameras. Perhaps he utilized those hidden cameras in this hidden scenario to not ruin the atmosphere.”

“Now it’s not an issue of atmosphere, okay?” Wang Dan squeezed behind Yang Chen. “The mannequin suddenly appeared in the middle of the corridor; it must have followed us out!”

“It is weird.” Yang Chen frowned. The stench intensified, and his heart quivered. “According to the diary, the boy who was abused by his father was quite fat, but the hanging man in the first room is relatively thin.”

“Will you stop the analysis at a time like this?” Wang Dan rushed them with a series of grumbles. “Shall all three of us rush forward at once? The mannequin only has two hands; he won’t be able to stop all of us.”

“Be quiet for a moment.” Yang Chen pushed Wang Dan’s arm away. “The boy is fat and thus doesn’t match the hanging man. This means that there is another theme inside this hidden scenario! This whole scenario should be made up from two separate stories!”

“Two stories? Meaning there’s another monster that hasn’t shown itself?” Lee Xue understood what Yang Chen meant immediately, and she looked behind Yang Chen with fear. When her gaze fell on the bedroom that they had just exited, her eyes widened as color left her face.

“Xiao Xue? What’s wrong with you?”

Lee Xue seemed to have lost her ability to speak. The words stuck in her throat, and she forced them out two seconds later. “Behind you!”

Yang Chen and Wang Dan looked around at the same time. The dead body in plastic wrap was standing at the bedroom door. Its body was heavily twisted like it was trying to struggle free from the plastic wrap. The scariest thing was that there was a ball of smog radiating a thick stench forming behind the body, and it slowly morphed into a ball-like shadow!

“Is this special ef... What is this?” Wang Dan was at the back of the group, so he was closest to the plastic wrapped body. When he turned around, his face was merely inches away from the dead body’s face. Naturally, he did not expect this. Before his head even turned back, his body already carried him forward. When he was about one meter away, he screamed, “Run!”

Yang Chen and Lee Xue were also shocked out of their daze. They chased after Wang Dan. They ran for their lives, but there was more surprise in store for them. Blocking the corridor was the hanging mannequin. It suddenly raised its head to reveal a face that was bloated with purplish spots. It used a speed that was faster than the three students to jump toward them!

“F*ck me!” Wang Dan, who ran from the back of the group to the front, saw the hanging mannequin that was rushing at them, and his face turned green!

He was stuck between a rock and a hard place. He was afraid, but he did not dare stop. Wang Dan used all the courage he had in his life as he closed his eyes, gritted his teeth, and rammed into the mannequin!

BANG!

The mannequin was knocked into the wall. Wang Dan continued to charge blindly ahead with his hands shielding his face. After he cleared the way, Yang Chen and Lee Xue also successfully ran past the hanging mannequin. However, these two students failed to notice one small detail.

After the mannequin fell, its lips creaked open to form a creepy smile. The rope around its neck slowly slithered toward Lee Xue's ankle. Just as the rope was about to curl around the girl's ankle, the mannequin seemed to remember some scary memory and quickly pulled the rope back.

"They're still chasing after us!"

The three made such a commotion that the other visitors in the scenario could hear them clearly. They finally escaped Western Jiujiang's Private Academy. Fear, terror, shock, and extreme physical activities, the three medical students felt like they had just come back from a tour of hell.

"I can't run anymore." Lee Xue was physically the weakest of the three. Her face was white as she gasped for air, cold sweat trailing down her face.

"Take a break. We... we can afford to take a break." Yang Chen was also running out of air. He leaned against the entrance to Western Jiujiang's Private Academy and turned to check up on Wang Dan. When they running for their lives, Yang Chen had clearly seen Yang Chen knock into the mannequin that blocked their way.

"Wang Dan, are you okay?"

The Wang Dan who would never admit defeat even when he was afraid was squatting on the floor. He had his hands over his head. He gritted his teeth to stop the tears from falling.

"Wang Dan! Don't scare me!"

"Ol' Yang, I don't think I can do it anymore." The feisty young man had tears in his voice. "The mannequin was not hollow. It's so f*cking scared. I give up, let's call the cops."

"Okay, okay. We'll stop now. Let's find the exit." Yang Chen also had quite a shock of his own. He tried to pull Wang Dan up, but all his attempts failed. Wang Dan's energy had completely left him, and his legs were like jelly.

"Find the camera to call for the worker to come save us. I think I've seen through this Haunted House's tactics. The scary stuff is all at the back, and the beginning is easy to make us let our guard down." Lee Xue had given up on the struggle. She did not dare stay outside the scenario alone. With gasping breath, she walked toward the two male students. "With our current condition, walking to the exit normally is impossible."

"I remember there's a camera at every junction. Wait for me here, I'll go get help."

Yang Chen prepared to leave when Wei Wu and Kong Xiangming arrived. The two seemed to have noticed something. Instead of looking at the three students, their attention was focused on the entrance to Western Jiujiang's Private Academy.

Chapter 266 - Stay a Little While Longer

Chapter 266: Stay a Little While Longer

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

